Rules regarding interview with the Governor.

The Awaz protests against the rule requiring persons seeking an interview with the Governor to obtain the permission of the Collector and says that while it adds to the autocratic powers of the Collector it widens the gulf between the public and the Governor.

Foreign affairs.

The Abhyudaya publishes a letter from "Raja" Mahendra Pratap from Pekin in which he says that he, along with others, delivered speeches there urging that Indians should show sympathy with the Chinese agitation. The necessity for co-operation among the Chinese and Indians at the present time has been recognized everywhere. Friends often say that Britain alone is opposing the interests of China and India and, therefore, both of these countries should unite to face her. It is also stated sometimes that China should help India in emancipating herself from slavery. The awakening in China is bringing the British to their wit's end. Indians should learn some lesson from the Chinese agitation. Referring to the recent American attempts to deprive the Japanese settlers of their right of citizenship in California the Vartman urges the necessity for the establishment of a federation of all the Asiatic powers to solve the question of the rights of Asiatics to settle in foreign countries. By closing the doors of immigration the western nations have fully resolved to crush the Indians, the Chinese and the Japanese. The Muslim press continues to take keen and sympathetic interest in the struggle of the Riffs against the French and to suggest that while the former should be given financial and medical aid the latter should be hampered by means of boycott and propaganda to induce the British to intervene against them. The Najat publishes a letter from Sheikh Sennoussi to Maulana Kifayat Ullah, President, Jammiat-ul-Ullema in which he appeals to Indian Muslims to help with funds their co-religionists in Tripoli in their struggle against Italy. In another article the same paper protests against Britain's action in transferring Akabah and Ma'an from the holy land of the Hedjaz in spite of her protestations of religious neutrality and hopes that Indian Muslims will withdraw their sympathy from Emir Ali after this his last flagrant un-Islamic act in agreeing to this transfer. The Medina indignantly writes:—This action has brought us face to face not only with the helplessness of the old Sheriff in being driven out of his last refuge to pay for his deeds but also with the extremely terrible spectacle of the madness and land-hunger of those tricksters of the wizardry of politics and deceivers on the chests board of imperialism who, like the armies of Anti-Christ, have occupied and consolidated the whole of creation, but whose extreme hunger cannot yet be satiated by any diet, territorial or monetary. When we think of the political, historical, military and economic importance of Akabah and Ma'an we are convinced that slaves of greed and avarice can never be prepared to give evidence of right human morality. Their (vows of) services, friendship, loyalty, aid and support and promises, assurances and agreements are only time-serving and selfish manifestations which possess significance only till the needs of the moment and the aims and objects in view are served. After this they all become useless, rejected and unacceptable documents fit only for waste-paper basket and for being crushed under the heels . . . Merely because these two places formed part of Egypt in Lord Cromer's time they have been tacked on as patches to the torn cloak of the Jewish home. We want to say this much only on this occasion that Europeans generally and Britishers specially want to conquer and annex not only the Near East but the whole of Asia and are employing for this purpose the old military and political device of occupying all noted military and trading centres and thus drawing Asia within a circle which would in course of time make her helpless and there would then be no fear of any obstacle or opposition in the path of the encroachments of imperialistic lust. Akabah, standing as it does at the head of the gulf of that name, occupies a very important strategic position in the Red Sea, commanding the whole expanse from the Suez to Aden. Ma'an is an important city on the line of the Hedjaz railway. How then can these be allowed to remain under any Muslim ruler? In the light of these facts there is nothing to justify the annexation of Akabah and Ma'an. But British interests in East Jordan, the mandate for Palestine and the defence of Egypt and the Suez Canal all demand that some trickery of British diplomacy and some deception of land-hunger should come into play and bring under its sway these two important military centres of the Jazirat-ul-Arab. To-day the war between the Sheriff and Ibn Saud has afforded occasion for this and the evil deeds of the Sheriff have led to this result that an important portion of the Hedjaz territory has passed out of possession. British statesmen can produce no historical or economic justification for this action. But there is no remedy against high-handedness. There is, however, no doubt about this that every rise has a fall and every perfection has a decline. To-day British diplomacy has gained power and control over Islamic lands but it will be (eventually) seen that this was a very bitter morsel. Articles continue to appear in condemnation of the Hedjaz deputation. The Muslim papers generally favour the Turkish claim over Mosul in discussing the Mosul Boundary Commission's report. The Oudh Akhbar contends that Iraq has no claim over Mosul and it should go to Turkey even if such a step might ultimately lead to the absorption of Iraq itself into Turkish territory. It says that at the most the League of Nations may exercise a general supervision over Turkish administration of Mosul. The Hamdam wonders why in spite of Turkey's claim to Mosul being established by the law the Commission has decided to annex it to Mesopotamia. The decision cannot satisfy the Turkish Government and is likely to lead to further complications. The Medina regards the decision as a great political blunder which taken together with the events in China and the activities of the Bolsheviks forebodes disaster for Europe in Asia in the near future. Britain's tactics in regard to Palestine and East Jordan had already created an anti-European feeling in those countries and this decision which is sure to result in a strong Turko-Persian alliance will compel the Turks also to harbour similar feelings. In another article the same paper apprehends that now that the term of the Anglo-Afghan treaty is about to expire imperialistic and proud Britain will make an imposing demonstration of force to overawe Afghanistan to concede better terms in the new treaty. Such a procedure would be fraught with serious danger as Afghanistan is now much more sensitive and daring and a counter-demonstration might lead to a clash. War would be disastrous for India and Britain would be well advised not to brood over her past defeat at the hands of Afghanistan or to regard its independence as a grievance; otherwise she might be tempted into some aggressive act.

The Panipat disturbance.

Hindu papers strongly criticise the action of the authorities in connection with the Panipat disturbance and urge an impartial inquiry. The Leader writes: That there is a case for an inquiry is undeniable. The continuance of the hartal and the excitement of feeling among the local Hindus indicate that they feel very much aggrieved. The Government ought to take prompt action to investigate the whole affair and if they find that any officials were to blame they should not hesitate to take suitable disciplinary action. The Patriot writes: "The latitude and licence given by the Government to the Muslim rioters in Kohat last year is bearing evil fruits in other places also. The Muslims seem to be under the impression that the Government is on their side and any aggression or excess that they might commit against the Hindus would be overlooked and lightly treated by the Government. If such an impression has been created in the minds of the Muslims the Government cannot be wholly absolved of it." Proceeding, the paper says: "The non-official version confirms the view that the officials were responsible for the Panipat tragedy. If the Government fails in this case to bring to book the official or officials responsible for it the belief of the Muslims all over India that the Government is on the side of the Muslims would become more deep-rooted. If the Government cares a whit for maintaining its claims of impartiality and even-handed justice, it should not allow matters at Panipat to stand where they are at present." The Arya Mitra says that the action of the local officials was extremely shameful. The Anand remarks that if the authorities hush up the Panipat incident people will think that there is something rotten in the state of Denmark. The Bhavishya writes: The Jats were treated with extreme mercilessness, cruelty and brutality. Inebriated with the wine of power the authorities are enjoying themselves. They have no time to talk to the people who are in distress. It is, however, fortunate that this sad incident has roused the Punjab Hindus and has generated an extraordinary feeling of brotherhood among them. The Abhyudaya urges the transfer of local officials which alone will smooth the path of justice. It welcomes the prosecution of the Jats inasmuch as it will disclose the truth and expose the incapacity of the local officials. The Vartman holds the authorities responsible for the outbreak of communal riots in various parts of the country and referring to the Panipat incident says :—The Hindu naib-tahsildar of Kohat was transferred at the request of the Muslims, but why is not the Muslim Tahsildar of Panipat transferred at the request of the Hindus? This proves that the Government is showing something like partiality to the Muslims. The Hindus and Muslims should bear in mind that their welfare does not lie in mutual ill-will. If they want to remain as slaves for ever they are free to fight to their heart's content, otherwise they should put an end to their hostilities. Referring to the alleged combined attack on Jats by Muslims and the police at Panipat the Hindustani says that the reports received from Hindu leaders tell a very harrowing tale and hopes that the Governor will order an independent inquiry and will adequately punish those who have been responsible for these terrible atrocities on the Jats. We fail to understand why there is such Nadirshahi that though such serious oppressions are perpetrated on the innocent Hindus no one listens to the complaints of these poor people. Last year such untold atrocities were perpetrated on the Hindus at Kohat that their recital makes one's hair stand on end. But in spite of their loud lamentations and complaints no one listened to them. On the other hand, Government held them to be the wrong-doers and mischief-makers. We do not know how all this is going to end. If the Government refuses to listen to the prayers of the Hindus they can only indulge in lamentations and carry their complaints to the court of the Almighty.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Anand criticises the action of Mr. Gwynne in prohibiting the Bhagwat Gita procession at Lucknow and deplores that without paying any regard to the fact that unlike Muslims and others the Hindus look to the British only for their support, officers sometimes pass such orders as lead the Hindus to believe that in matters of administration they are accorded harsh and unjust treatment. The Hamdam observes that this year the Hindu press has taken special advantage of the Janmashtami festival for propaganda work for the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements. Nearly all the special numbers are full of articles inculcating military spirit among the Hindus. Krishna's teachings to Arjun asking him to murder his kinsmen mercilessly have been specially stressed. The Pratap (Lahore) has published a speech alleged to have been made by Guru Govind Singh exhorting Hindus to bear arms and to fight against the Muslim kings. Referring to the speeches at the Hindu Sabha meeting at Cawnpore to protest against the application of section 144 to Swami Satyadeva the Sada-i-Muslim takes exception to the Hindu imputation that Muslims alone are responsible for the abduction of Hindu women. This is only meant to incite the Hindus against the Muslims, otherwise if inquiries were made the Hindu propaganda in this direction would prove to be utterly false. If the Hindus are wise, they should, instead of dreaming of Hindu Raj, seek unity with the Muslims. Islam condemns sexual laxity in no uncertain terms and if any Muslim is suspected of it the Hindus should prosecute him in the law courts instead of carrying on propaganda in the press. We must warn Muslims that the main object of the Hindu Sabha is to oppose them and injure them in every way and they should therefore keep themselves informed of its activities so that they may be able to combat its deceitful propaganda. The Arya Patra publishes a contributed article in which the writer inquires whether self-respecting Hindus are prepared to submit quietly to Khwaja Hasan Nizami's infamous campaign of abduction and forcible conversion of Hindu women and children and to look on helplessly while Hinduism is being effaced. Hinduism is in such a parlous plight because it is hopelessly split up by sects and is not prepared to do justice to the untouchables and reclaimed persons. If Hindus want their salvation they should free themselves from the baneful influence of their unthinking orthodox pandits. The Bir Hindu complains that simply because the Jats are brave and strong enough to ward off the unlawful attacks of Muslim hooligans, there is a conspiracy among Muslims to harass them so that their spirit might be crushed. In Jalalabad (Meerut) the Muslims are helping the chamars in their quarrels with the Jats and in Panipat poor old Jats going with their women and children to bathe in the Jumna were attacked by Muslims with knives and sticks. Hindus should help the Jats so that they may not lose heart. Referring to a couplet in the Krishna insinuating that the arms of Muslims can raise neither sword nor dagger, the Sada-i-Muslim writes :—Can we inquire of the Krishna when it has tested the arms of Muslims? We fear it will again start reciting tales of Rajput women before the charm of whose curly locks and the terrible lifting of whose henna-stained hands every head must bend. If it has tested Muslims through a display of beauty and silver-bodied belles then we must acknowledge its bravery, otherwise we would sincerely advise our contemporary to study history. In another article the paper writes:—An empty-headed Hindu very jocosely objected to a Muslim who was possessed of the gift of repartee: "Why, Sir, why does Syed Salar Ghazi Mian's marriage take place every year?" The Muslim listened to the objection and unhesitatingly retorted forthwith: "Mahashayaji, if Ghazi Mian's marriage had not taken place every year, how would the birth of your Kanhaiya Krishna have taken place." Mahashayaji pondered over the nature of the reply and the philosophy of Krishnaji's birth and helplessly kept silent.

Muslim affairs.

The Medina is grieved to find that as a result of the All Muslim Parties Conference at Amritsar the community is now hopelessly divided by political and religious factions. The Najat refers to the growing unpopularity of the Khilafat Committee and the frequent resignations from it and wonders why the working committee does not adopt such an attitude as might enable it to attract all Muslim parties. The Sarfaraz protests against the action of Sunni papers in condemning Taziadari during Muharram and states that only recently a Sunni Maulvi even preached violence at Ludhiana with a view to stop Shia Taziadari. In the circumstances unity between Shias and Sunnis is impossible.

The Swarajists.

Referring to the proceedings of the Indian National Liberal Federation held at Calcutta the Leader compares the results of the policies of the Liberals and the Swarajists and says: The Liberals while they were in office showed that the reforms were capable of yielding tangible results. This fact will be borne out by a dispassionate study of the proceedings of the various legislatures before the party of would-be wreckers entered them. The record of those councils in which the Swarajists have been able to exercise a dominating influence has been a barren one. The Swarajist policy has not only been barren of results, it has also strengthened the hands of reactionaries and has served the purpose of the opponents of India's national progress. Referring to the statement issued by the Swarajists in the Bombay Legislative Council the same paper writes: The statement is not only a confession of failure, it is worse; it is an admission that instead of promoting the general interest they have been really acting as the cat's-paw of sectional and communal interests. The Sindh Muslims and the non-Brahmans have secured, with the help of the Swarajists, one concession after another, 'either communal or personal.' Is this not a very damaging confession, and yet the Swarajist members have advertised the fact that they have been used as powerful levers for obtaining from Government communal concessions. They have condemned themselves out of their own mouths. We may tell the Bombay Swarajists and others of their party in other provinces that unless they revise their policy they will drive other patriotic sections in the legislatures into the arms of Government. The Oudh Akhbar appeals to Central Provinces Swarajists not to consent to work dyarchy for if they do they would be giving it a fresh lease of life. It is a pity that the Liberals do not realize that the best interests of the country demand that dyarchy should be ended and replaced by a new system.

Political propaganda.

The Bhavishya republishes from the Milap of Lahore an article written by Lala Har Dayal (Sweden) in which he deplores that the non-co-operation programme was abandoned merely because of a few disturbances. The writer places the following programme before the country and suggests that it should be adhered to under all circumstances till the goal is reached. We should organize the Hindus, open schools in every village for cultivators, diffuse Sanskrit education in the Punjab and a knowledge of history among the people at large. We should rouse the nation by delivering lectures on politics and economics and by pointing out the evils of the British Government. Referring to the Alwar affair where "hundreds of innocent persons became victims of bullets for merely deliberating upon an unjust order of the Maharaja" and to reports of several villages being burnt by the Bharatpur Darbar the same paper writes:—In order to be able to continue and at the same time conceal its own repressive policy the bureaucracy wishes that atrocities should remain rampant in Indian states. If the bureaucracy were not in itself tyrannical good administration would have been established in Indian states long ago. It would not be an exaggeration, therefore, to say that the crooked policy of the bureaucracy is at the root of the atrocities perpetrated by Indian Chiefs.

Communal representation in the Lucknow University.

The Indian Daily Telegraph takes strong exception to the introduction of communal representation into the Lucknow University Union and says:—"It was given to a Muslim professor and a European educationist to inject the poison into the very blood of the University students, so that, we suppose, they might accustom themselves to the communal outlook in the larger sphere of activity that awaits them as soon as they leave the University Union. We are shocked at such narrow-visioned men placed over our students."

Development of Indian agriculture.

Referring to Lord Birkenhead's statement regarding the need for the development of Indian agriculture the Pioneer writes:—The most effective measure would seem to be whole-hearted acceptance by the Central and Provincial Governments of the lead given by Lord Birkenhead. The appropriation of more money for disposal by the Agriculture departments and a searching examination of the problems of rent and land tenure in certain provinces would probably do more to help the ryot and zamindar than any Royal Commission.

President, United Provinces Council.

Commenting on the election of Rai Sita Ram Bahadur as President of the United Provinces Council the Leader writes: We regret that Rai Sita Ram Bahadur should be lost for a time as an able advocate of popular causes. But have every confidence that he will be an eminent success in the President's chair as he possesses the requisite qualities in abundant measure and besides, enjoys the confidence of all sections of the house. We congratulate both the Council and the President, with the reservation that another suitable selection might have been made with less loss to the public.

Rates of press messages.

The Leader strongly opposes any increase in the rates of press messages and says that it would be a very short-sighted policy to make the telegraphic service more costly for it would react on the department itself by diminishing the traffic and checking its expansion. Only recently a new charge has been made on newspapers on account of preparing bills for press messages delivered to them and any further increase in the rates will be an intolerable burden to many of them. They will be forced to cut down their service proportionately.

Municipal election rules.

The Oudh Akhbar protests against the action of the Lucknow Municipal Board in excluding from the voters' lists the names of all persons who have not paid up arrears of municipal taxes and points out that the Government order on the subject relates only to income-tax and not at all to municipal taxes. It apprehends that the electorate will be unduly thinned by this procedure and the members elected in these circumstances would not be fully representative of the public and appeals both to the Municipal Board and Government to act with generosity in the matter.

Action against "Swami" Satyadeva.

The Bhavishya protests against the application of section 144 against Swami Satyadeva and says that there was nothing objectionable in his speeches. India is a slave country. Legal restrictions are, therefore, imposed upon Indians even in the observance of their festivals and in their explaining to the masses the measures which they ought to adopt for their protection.

Labour and capital.

The Aj refers to the struggle between labour and capital in Europe and urges that to avoid labour trouble in India for the well-being of the people legislation should be undertaken in time to improve the lot of labourers.

Bombay textile industry.

The Oudh Akhbar has an article in which the writer says: Although it is apprehended that the mills of Bombay may have to stop work and more than one lakh workers may be thrown out of employment, the Government of India, with all their platitudes about trusteeship, will not abolish the excise duties. Is this how Indian interests are being safeguarded? Does not this callous indifference of the Government of India painfully remind us that we are under a foreign administration which can act only according to the behests of Lancashire.

Anglo-Indians.

The Pratap deplores the selfish attitude of Anglo-Indians in alternately identifying themselves with the public and the Government to serve their purpose and states that as their community commands no respect in the European circles they will have to mix with people of other nationalities in India. Their perpetual desire to depend on the favour of the Government is causing their moral degradation and weakening their power of resistance. They will do well to ally their lot with the destiny of India.

Unemployment among educated men.

The Oudh Akhbar suggests that while the curriculum in educational institutions should be so modified as to fit students to follow their hereditary profession, colonies should also be established at the headquarters of every district where educated men without employment may be settled.

Foreign affairs.

The Vartman condemns the action of the Wahabis in damaging the Prophet's tomb at Medina but impresses upon Muslims that they too should not do to others what they want others not to do to them. Their action in destroying the idols of the Jews (sic) and of the Hindus cannot be viewed with approval. The bombardment of Medina should teach the Muslims to respect the religious susceptibilities of other people. Commenting upon the action taken by the Italian Government against Afghanistan the Bharat Dharma says that the Afghanistan Government acted in accordance with the law, but the Italian Government did not care to do so because the European powers deem it their duty to repress the Asiatics and believe that every European possesses extra-territorial rights. In these circumstances it is but natural for the Asiatics to lean towards Bolshevism. The news of the bombardment of Medina has been responsible for a sharp cleavage of opinion in the Muslim press, and while the pronouncedly Khilafatist papers are generally inclined to question the authenticity of the news, feeling against Ibn Saud is gathering in the remainder of the press which is now more outspoken against him than it was during the Haj controversy. The Haqiqat asks Indian Muslims to start a vigorous agitation against the action of the Nejdis in damaging the tomb of the Prophet and not to rely on the Khilafat leaders who are blindly supporting Ibn Saud. The Hindustani observes that in view of the painful impression created among Indian Muslims by the bombardment of Medina Lord Reading should press on the British Government the advisability of taking punitive action against the Nejdis. The Sada-i-Muslim however opines that the bombardment of Medina is being widely advertised only to divert the attention of the Muslim world from the inclusion of Akabah and Ma'an in the mandated territory of Palestine. The Nejdis would have claimed these two places and so diplomacy demands that they should be sufficiently discredited beforehand. How long are Indian Muslims going to be fooled by the fraud and deceit of selfish people? Will they not realize that it is only to strengthen their hold on India that the English are occupying Akabah and Ma'an. Mr. Khaliq-uz-zaman writing in the Hamdam condemns the use of the news to defame Khilafatists and to create a split among Muslims. The writer hopes that this hostile propaganda will rejuvenate the Khilafat committee which will emerge from this campaign of calumny a more vigorous and active body. The Medina advises Indian Muslims to wait for satisfactory confirmation of the news and condemns their hasty action on the basis of the reports in circulation. It suspects Emir Ali's propaganda to be at the bottom of these reports.

The Viceroy's speech.

The Hindi Kesari says that the impression the Viceroy's speech has produced in the country is best illustrated by the election of Mr. Patel as the president of the Legislative Assembly and the recent repeated defeats of Government in the Bengal Provincial Council. These are only minor preludes to the tremendous opposition which Government will henceforth have to face in the country. Referring to the Viceroy's statement regarding the proposed agricultural development of India the Bhavishya remarks:—For fifty or sixty years we have been insistently crying for agricultural progress. If our demands take so long to reach England it will be three or four thousand years before our various other problems will be solved. Along with the agricultural development of India the condition of those British labourers will also be improved who are knocking about in England for want of employment. They will be brought to this country and given the monopoly of agricultural improvement. What still remains of agricultural produce in this country will thus be sent out to England. The Hamdam holds that by his speech the Viceroy has neither eased the political situation in the country nor given any message of hope to India but has made all possible efforts to injure the best interests of India in spite of her professions of loyalty and devotion. Criticizing the Viceroy's call for co-operation, the paper remarks that co-operation is demanded not for the material and moral well-being of the country, but for strengthening the bureaucratic hold over it. It remains to be seen whether even after their last hopes of political concessions being thus crushed under foot Indians come to their senses and whether Hindus, Muslims, Liberals, and Swarajists direct their attention towards a united plan of action after ending their quarrels. The Oudh Akhbar says that Lord Reading had no justification for asserting that Indians wanted to extort liberty from England by threat and force. The non-co-operators never meant to overawe England by a display of force; they only wanted to invite attention to the justice of their claims. It is a grievous wrong to accuse the non-co-operators of any tendency towards violence. The Oudh Punch has a cartoon suggesting that His Excellency is needlessly deluging India with a fresh torrent of eloquence when she had already heard from Lord Birkenhead all that she had to hear. In another article, the paper says that Indians are loyal at heart and would be satisfied even if the powers of certification allowed by the Government of India Act are restricted.

Lord Birkenhead's statement.

Discussing the Secretary of State's statement in the Lords in its usual style of pungent satire, the Oudh Punch says that Indians are determined to remedy their poverty or die in the attempt and can never be expected to co-operate in working the Reforms. Lord Birkenhead had better resume the transferred subjects and then declare in 1929 that the Reforms have been a success. His Lordship has talked of peace in the United Provinces. If His Lordship means that the people here are not agitating against the Government, the whole of India is just now as quiet as if it had been drugged with opium. If the British Government had been wise they would have removed the restrictions about opium and no voice of dissent would have been heard. A decapitated cock never crows. Lord Birkenhead's speech is no doubt very closely reasoned but it is altogether devoid of honesty. Our province is like a senseless invalid lying inert on his bed. If this is what goes by the name of peace and contentment may Your Lordship's nation have it. Say, Amen. His Lordship has referred to the courage and warlike spirit of Indian Muslims. These remarks fall under the head of communal (propaganda). These words are meant to scare away those Englishmen who are sympathetic towards Indian aspirations as well as the Hindu community. They mean that Muslims are turbulent and mischievous and grossly libel them. Communal writings are now-a-days very frequently transgressing the limits of the law, but Government take no notice of them, feeling that they themselves do not stand to lose by them. In short the success of the Reforms means that not only up to 1929 but even up to 2019 the system introduced in India by the forefathers of present day Englishmen will continue. Now the Swarajists can either boycott the councils or adopt the policy of their ancestors.

The Panipat disturbance.

The Jat Vir deeply deplores the disappointing reply given by the Punjab Government to the Jats in connection with the Panipat affair and appeals to Sir Malcolm Hailey to appoint an inquiry committee consisting of impartial official and non-official members and transfer the officials responsible for the wrong. Proceeding it says:—Is our dear Government not prepared to do justice, as against a Muslim Deputy Commissioner, Tahsildar and Sub-Inspector, to the Jat community which underwent great sacrifices for the protection of the Crown? His Excellency the Governor should do something to convince the Jats that the Government are doing their best to redress their grievances. If this is not done it is to be apprehended that a situation may arise which would be beyond control and the loyal Jats may be compelled to take the law into their own hands. Referring to the Panipat trouble the Abhaya writes:—The Hindus made a great mistake in that on being stopped by the Tahsildar they remained standing for three hours awaiting the arrival of the Deputy Commissioner. If they did not want to go back they ought not to have waited even for King George, but shouting Jumna Maiya ki jai they ought to have rushed through the police force and the Muslim crowd . . . We shall not say anything of the articles which Dr. Kitchlew has written eulogising the bravery of Muslims and insulting the Hindu sangathan and Hindu leaders. But we shall certainly say this much that it does not become Dr. Kitchlew to indulge in exultation on the strength of that satanic Government and kafir Englishmen. The Hamdam thinks that the entire agitation of the Hindu press and leaders in respect of the Panipat affair is meant to harass the Muslim officials of that district. The agitation would never have been so furious, had there been in that district some European Deputy Commissioner instead of Mr. Latifi.

The Bombay textile industry.

The Aj says that the Viceroy's reply to the deputation of the Bombay mill-owners leads one to the conclusion that the Government of India has either of itself decided to injure the Indian textile industry and thereby help Manchester or is compelled to dance at its (Manchester's) bidding and urges that mill-owners of Bombay will be well-advised to support the boycott of foreign goods and join the nationalists in their agitation for the early attainment of Swaraj. The Sainik exhorts Indian traders to strive for the attainment of Swaraj, remarking that it is vain for them to expect the present Government to sacrifice the interests of England to the well-being of India. When the British came to India Indian cloth held the market all over the world, but now every child of the soil knows the black tale of the ways in which these outwardly white but inwardly black traders ruined this industry. The Abhyudaya urges Indian leaders to strive hard to get the cotton excise removed, if the Bombay textile industry is to be saved. The Pratap points out that it is clear from the Viceroy's reply to the mill-owners that the Government of India is not going to espouse their cause or that of the labourers. If there is a strike it may well come to fire upon the strikers under the pretext of preventing a breach of peace, but it will never care to save the situation, for the very principles on which the British Government is established in India are opposed to the advancement of the indigenous textile industry. The Bharat Jiwan writes :— Lacs of Bombay labourers may get out of work, the textile industry may be ruined, but the excise duty cannot be removed. Why should it be removed? What does anyone lose if India is ruined? The Government can afford to make an addition of one crore and a half of rupees in the salary of the Civil Servants but it cannot afford to lose two or four crores for protecting an Indian industry or for providing livelihood to lakhs of starving men. The Oudh Akhbar is bitterly disappointed with the Viceroy's refusal, in reply to the Bombay mill-owners' deputation, to abolish the cotton excise duty immediately. The Government cannot forego their excise duty and the mill-owners cannot pay full wages, are then the labourers alone to suffer? If the Government had been responsible to the Assembly the Viceroy could not have put off such an important industrial question in such an off-hand manner. The Lee Commission's recommendations have been accepted and if the excise duty were abolished where would the money for the fat salaries of the European officials come from? This is the trusteeship of which such paeans of praise are sung to fool Indians. Even after this our liberal friends are dying for co-operation. Are not these and similar acts deserving of the severest reprobation and should not Government be told that mere lip-claims of trusteeship would not avail? If they want to rule India they must first have dominion over hearts and should adopt the popular view-point in such matters. Until Government become imbued with this spirit they have no right to call themselves trustees.

Political propaganda.

The Aj urges the All-India Congress Committee to accept at its forthcoming session at Patna the resolution of Babu Shiva Prasad Gupta and others regarding the need for India taking the initiative in inviting the representatives of various Asiatic countries to the Cawnpore Congress with a view to form an Asiatic Federation for the preservation of the culture of Asia and of the political and economic life of its peoples against the aggressions of the western nations. The Bhavishya publishes a letter from Lala Har Dayal (Sweden) in the course of which he exhorts Hindus not to use any other word than "Hindu" to denote their nationality as that word has a magical effect. He deplores the confusion in India caused by the difference of religions, races, and languages, and says that only Nepal gives him real pleasure as it consists of a true and living race. He exhorts Hindus to work through provincial Hindu sabhas and to transact their business in provincial languages. In the course of an article the Aj says that the exercise of world-wide autocratic authority has begun to demoralize the ruling class in Britain itself. In order to mislead the British public the ruling class in India makes free use of generous phrases to conceal repression of the people. When coercion can no longer be hidden charges of sedition, anarchism and Bolshevism are made against the people in order to justify their repression. It is by such methods that the ruling class maintains and protects its power in this country. These ways could not but react on the ruling class in England which has begun to be restive of popular control in its own home. The Vartman publishes a letter from "Raja" Mahendra Pratap (America) in the course of which he says:—Indian brethren, you belong to one and the same country. Banish your feelings of mutual hatred and anger, and find out those who are sowing seeds of evil in the world to-day. In what ways are they rendering our kinsmen miserable? Which communities claim their descent from some particular stock and oppress other nations? Who are they that have forgotten their religion and simply to fulfil their desires are oppressing others in various ways? We ought to establish Dharma again in this world and make it happy and teach a lesson to those who on account of their false notions of racial superiority oppress the blacks. In an editorial headed "The cunning of the ministers of the British Government" the Awaz institutes a comparison between conditions in India and Mesopotamia and contends that the former is in every way more advanced and fit for self-government but cannot be granted freedom even after 150 years as she is rich and productive. The latter, however, whose deserts yield no profit will get autonomy within 5 years.

Indians in Indian Medical Service.

The Leader strongly supports the resolution moved by Dr. Lohokhare in the Legislative Assembly for the recruitment of the Indian Medical Service by simultaneous examination. It says: The arguments urged by its opponents were weak and inconvincing to a degree. The difficulties pointed out are not at all insuperable and we believe that it is thoroughly feasible to hold the suggested simultaneous examination without in the least affecting the standard of the service by recruitment in India. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—If a sufficient number of Indians is not recruited to the Indian Medical Service the Government would be guilty of keeping high-paid European doctors in India for the benefit of Europeans here at the expense of the Indian tax-payer and to the detriment of the growth of Indian talent. Europeans in this country are certainly rich enough to attract private medical men from their fatherland. Indian talent need not be denied opportunities. It is the cruel fate of a subject nation that it cannot attain its full intellectual growth.

Swaraj* party.

Criticising the programme and activities of the Swaraj party the Leader writes: The Swarajits entered the councils with the object of carrying non-co-operation a stage further. They are being gradually overpowered by the constitution they vowed to destroy. They are becoming co-operators and constitutionalists. The fact is that their policy was purely one of bluff and they have found that the Government could not be cowed down by it. The Indian Daily Telegraph warns the Swarajists that they are fast drifting to a corner whence they cannot be easily distinguished from the Liberals. They are "co-operating" instead of obstructing and are rapidly going down the current, violently gesticulating all the time that they are manfully holding on. The Aj contends that despite the specious arguments of the Liberal press to the contrary the Swarajists still maintain their influence over the country, otherwise fresh elections in the Central Provinces and Bengal would surely have been ordered by Government after its repeated defeats in the provincial councils. The election of Mr. Patel as the president of the Legislative Assembly is a further indisputable proof of the supremacy of the Swaraj party over all other political parties in the country.

Indians in the Colonies.

The Abhyudaya says that the new Asiatic Bill in South Africa is not only insulting to India but will also strangle millions of her children. If this Bill is passed the condition of Indian residents there will become worse than that of pariahs. The paper urges that the Government of India should not put up with such an insulting legislation and if it fails to get this Bill withdrawn it should adopt the policy of retaliation. The Hindi Kesari welcomes the report of Kunwar Maharaj Singh on the Indian labour in Mauritius and his suggestion that Indian emigration to that island should be stopped, but apprehends that like other reports this report also will be consigned to the waste-paper basket. It remarks that the ultimate solution of all Indian problems depends upon Swaraj alone towards the attainment of which Indians should direct all their energies.

Britain's contribution towards Indian military expenditure.

Referring to the fact, as revealed by an answer to a question in Parliament, that Britain spends about £10 millions in contributing to the defence of the self-governing dominions but nothing to that of India the Leader writes:—The army in India is maintained for Imperial purposes, and equity and justice require that Britain should contribute a portion of the Indian military expenditure. The gross injustice of saddling India with expenditure which ought to be borne by the Imperial Exchequer has been pointed out for decades, but without any effect. And yet India is asked to admire British justice and fair play.

Abolition of Divisional Commissionerships.

Referring to Sir Alexander Muddiman's announcement in the Assembly regarding the question of the abolition of Divisional Commissionerships, the Leader writes:—"The public would like to know the weighty reasons which led the Government of India to come to the decision they have arrived at. A sort of compromise was arrived at in the United Provinces on the subject. Will the Local Government now make proposals based on the recommendations of the committee appointed to consider the question of the abolition of posts of divisonal Commissioners?"

Royal visit.

Referring to the reply given to Mr. Venkatapathi Raju's question in the Legislative Assembly regarding the King's visit to India, the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—"Because officials took advantage of using the name of the Royal House to boom dyarchy in India, the impression is getting abroad that they would 'send for' the King to inaugurate any kind of reforms in India. Even now with the reply of the Government before us, we are unable to assert distinctly that there is no likelihood at all of the King visiting India in the near future. The reply is vague, we hope not deliberately."

The Bombay Liberal Conference.

Commenting on Mr. C. Y. Chintamani's presidential address at the Bombay Provincial Liberal Conference the Aj contends that his arguments against the policy of the Swaraj party or the Congress cannot hold water, specially when it is realized that the old policy of the Congress produced no substantial results. The experience of the liberals after their separation from the Congress must also convince them of the futility of the old methods of agitation. Mr. Chintamani's arguments against dyarchy, however, deserve serious consideration. His suggestions for reforms in the Provincial Governments and the Central Government will never be carried out unless the bureaucracy is compelled by an unconstitutional, although peaceful method to do so, for disregard of public opinion has become its second nature.

Proscription of the Poem "Vinaya."

The Abhyudaya protests against the proscription by several provincial Governments of the poem "Vinaya" in the book, Bharat Bharti and contends that there is nothing objectionable in it. Surely to pray to God to remove our dependence and to make us self-reliant, happy and prosperous is no sedition or anarchy. Does the Government now want to repress the tongue as well as the heart of the people?

Racial distinction in Indian Courts.

Referring to the judgment of the Madras High Court in the Higginbottom Bookstall assault case acquitting the European accused, the Hamdam says that in spite of Lord Reading's promise of equality and justice, a distinction between a European and an Indian exists in Indian Courts. We draw the special attention of the late Lord Chief Justice of England, who has recently returned from the free atmosphere of England, towards this case.

Indian States.

The Medina wonders why the Government of India have not yet decided the question of succession in the Bhopal State. Both in view of the Islamic Shariat and the laws of the State, Prince Hamid Ullah is the rightful successor and Government should not hesitate in declaring him the heir-apparent. The Mashriq also deplores the attitude of the Government of India and appeals for a settlement of the question by them so as to save the old Begum the serious trouble of a journey to England for that purpose.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the recent refusal of some Moplah women to proceed to the Andamans, the Oudh Akhbar wonders why the Madras Government insist on driving this martial race out of their province. They would prove a valuable asset for the army and it would be better if Government took up some scheme for their enlistment in the army. A writer in the Aziz-i-Hind complains that since the appointment of the Maharaja Saheb of Mahmudabad as Home Member Shias are being flagrantly favoured at the expense of Sunnis in the matter of official patronage.

Akali prisoners.

While not sharing the view of those who regard the condition laid down for the release of Gurdwara prisoners as involving humiliation, the Leader thinks that if the condition is withdrawn it will furnish another evidence of the broad-mindedness and the conciliatory policy of Sir Malcolm Hailey. Urging the release of Akali prisoners the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The best way to conciliate heroes is to trust them, not to humiliate them. The might of British India need not be displayed by forcing martyrs to purchase liberty by promises which they consider humiliating.

Supply of coolies for survey work.

The Indian Daily Telegraph urges that the practice of forcing the zamindars to pay for the coolies employed by the amins for doing survey work, or to supply such coolies at their own expense, should be stopped. The paper supports Rai Bahadur Mashal Singh's resolution on this subject which could not come up for discussion before the local council for want of time.

Appointment of Hon'ble Mian Fazl-i-Husain as Education Member.

The Abhyudaya opines that in view of what Mian Fazl-i-Husain has done in the Punjab it is to be apprehended that his promotion to the Government of India cannot but brew some trouble in the country. It will be no wonder if Hindu rights and interests are jeopardised under him. In case Sir Habibullah does not return the appointment of Dr. Zia-ud-din to succeed him will also not be conducive to the good of the country.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Sada-i-Muslim deplores that thet Bhavishya has been stirring up communal feeling by calumniating Afghans as a race as robbers and murderers in connection with the recent kidnapping scare in Lahore.

Foreign affairs.

Newspapers strongly criticize the British policy with regard to the problems of the Middle East. The Leader writes:—In its own interest and in that of peace in the Middle East the wisest policy for Britain would be to get out of Iraq after the period fixed in the Anglo-Iraq treaty . . . Any conflict in Iraq between the British and the Turks is bound to have its repercussions in India and may set in motion disturbing forces on the frontier. While sympathizing with the Indian Muslims on the bombardment of Medina the Aj urges that this incident should teach them to respect the religious sentiments of the followers of other creeds. If Muslims gave up cow-sacrifice they would make Hindus their brethren. Then the two communities developing the power of the country could remove the obstacles in the path of freedom and protect their holy places against the aggressions of Europeans. The Bharat Jiwan says that if Indian Muslims treat this country as their motherland and combine with the children of the soil to form one nation they will be able to protect their holy places, but if they continue to dream of re-establishing a Muslim Raj with the help of other Muslim powers they will become helpless spectators of the destruction of almost all their holy places one after another under the pressure of various interests. The Pratap exonerates the Wahabis from the responsibility of damaging the Prophet's tomb at Medina and deplores the present growth of religious frenzy among the Muslims. It exhorts the Muslim leaders to curb this frenzy for if they go on trifling with it it would prove detrimental to their own community. The Al Bashir condemns the action of those Indian Muslims who are demanding British interference in regard to the protection of Medina. They seem to be unaware that the British Government are seeking to undermine the influence of the Khilafat Committee and they (Muslims) are unsuspectingly acting as the Government's tools. The opponents of Ibn Saud should not go so far as to disregard the best interests of the country. The Najat says:—Maulana Abdul Bari who has never beeen a friend of Sheriff Husain, whose changes of views are well known, who owes his fame mostly to a daily paper of Lucknow and who regards himself as a religious and political leader of India, demands the repair of the demolished domes in the Hedjaz. The Maulana should first publish a statement about the religious position of domes as many Muslims regard the construction of pucca tombs and domes to be forbidden by Shariat. In another article the paper regrets that influenced by the agents of the Sheriff and of a third power which is jealous of the growing strength of Ibn Saud a certain section of the press has caught upon the Nejdian offensive against Medina as a suitable pretext for a vigorous propaganda. A famous daily of these provinces, influenced by the gold of Budaun and Firingi Mahal, has joined the ranks of the propagandists. This journal has always claimed to be a sincerely nationalistic organ, but its non-descript politics during the eight or nine years of its existence fully justify its present attitude. This paper carried on a vigorous anti-Bolshevik propaganda during the war at the instance of the Publicity Board, it co-operated with the Government to the full during the non-co-operation days, it filled columns after columns with descriptions of the Prince of Wales' visit and its representative motored with His Royal Highness throughout Lucknow and it gave evidence on behalf of the Crown in the cases of the political prisoners in the Lucknow District Jail. In view of all these facts, its views possess no political or religious significance and should carry no weight in such matters. We refuse to believe that any injury has been done to any religious structure in Medina, and even if there has been any injury that it has been at the hands of Ibn Saud's men and not Emir Ali's. It is a pity that Indian Muslims are proving to-day to be so gullible to news specially from so suspicious an agency as Reuter's.

Reforms.

Commenting on the passing of the non-official amendment to Sir Alexander Muddiman's motion regarding the Majority Report of the Reforms Enquiry Committee the Pioneer writes:—"The result will help to clear the air. It is obvious that many legislators, who, in their hearts, are out of sympathy with the Swarajists, have been manœuvred into supporting them, and these will no doubt have serious qualms of conscience when they come to consider the implications of their action. The coarse and preposterous attacks on the British which were made in the course of the debate will excite the contempt they deserve among reputable people in India." Commenting on the amendment the Leader writes:—"It provides sufficient safeguards for the security of the country and for the protection of the interests of Indian states. Its acceptance will not result in immediate establishment of full self-government, but it will go a long way in meeting the wishes of a very large section of the people." In a subsequent issue the paper writes:—"We regard the debate in the Legislative Assembly on the question of constitutional advance as a historic one. It signifies the triumph of sane, sturdy and progressive nationalism over the forces of reaction and obscurantism. We may add that it is a call to unity. It represents a compromise which renders united action on the vital issue, to which almost every other issue is subordinate, much easier. It marks, we hope, the beginning of an era of concerted action and of the termination of a period of political disunion which benefited none but the opponents of Indian progress." Under the heading "Civil Disobedience" the Indian Daily Telegraph asks what the reply of the Liberals will be "if all that the authorities would reward them with for years of faithful co-operation is to bless them with the Muddiman majority recipe" and says that the country will execrate them if they humbly co-operate again. "Their duty is to stand shoulder to shoulder with Pandit Moti Lal Nehru in preparing the country for civil disobedience. . . . It would be a national disgrace if our representatives would be content at this crisis, by yelling out a few loud barks and then wait on the bureaucracy with the tail between the legs. Pandit Moti Lal has sounded the alarm. The country will rally to his side".

Indians in the Colonies.

Commenting on the text of the Anti-Asiatic Bill and the speech of Dr. Malan in introducing it in the Union Parliament, the Leader says: "The Bill raises a fundamental issue which cuts across the whole conception of the Empire and will proclaim, if passed, that the Empire stands for race domination. If the Imperial Government refuses to protect the rights of Indians in South Africa, it will be a party to the gross injustice and the cruel wrong which will result from the passage of the Bill." Proceeding, the paper says:—The white settlers may triumph for a moment, but the 300 millions of India will not acquiesce in the wrong done to their countrymen abroad and will insistently call for the vindication of right. And there will be no peace so long as justice is not done. Referring to the various anti-Asiatic measures adopted in South Africa the Bhavishya advocates the acceptance of a policy of retaliation by the Government of India and says:—The white men who perpetrate inhuman atrocities on Indians in South Africa come to India and rule over Indians in an autocratic manner. This the Indians can no longer tolerate. The Aj observes that the Australian Ministers displayed great ingenuity at a recent dinner in proving that their policy to keep Asiatics out of Australia was not based on racial hatred and wonders whether, when this is so, Indians can be justifiably accused of acting from motives of racial hatred in refusing to help in the maintenance of the domination of the whites over them in their own country. Indians will have to run to the rescue of Australians in case they are attacked by a great power but when they enter Australia to earn a livelihood they are excluded as coloured people. This is the relation betwen the blacks and the whites within the British Empire.

Political propaganda.

Under the heading "The Call of the Jail" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes: There are ominous signs all round that we are on the eve of a great movement that will once again send forth to our brave and true children the cry of the jail . . . Young India, that has no faith in the Government will certainly not have faith in the kind of Swarajist co-operation that we have as yet seen. Such cooperation, we fear, cannot by any stretch of imagination, be called "honourable." In a subsequent article under the heading "The Swarajists on Trial," the paper says: Pandit Moti Lal Nehru has threatened civil disobedience. He has definitely challenged the Government to rule the country by force. Are these to be empty threats or have they any definite programme of work before the country? The country has lost all faith in British justice and fair play. We believe that there is enough spirit in the country for the Swarajists to harness against a Government that would not yield to the persuasions of reason and experience . . . Many of them are battle-scarred veterans. They must give battle once more. The Aj says that the life of an Indian has no value. Indians continue to die of ruptured spleen and can be imprisoned without trial. The Jallianwala tragedy is a striking example of the cheapness of Indian lives. Again the opposition offered by Sir Alexander Muddiman in the select committee to Mr. Rangachariar's Bill to regulate firing on crowds also shows that the bureaucracy attach very little value to the lives of Indians. In another article the paper remarks that the message of sympathy recently sent by the British Independent Labour party has no value in view of the fact that the Labour party when in power supported repression in India and that it also associated itself with the reactionary policy of Lord Birkenhead in regard to the question of constitutional advance in the country. We have to admit, in the words of Lala Lajpat Rai, that no political party in England can do real justice to India.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to the Kohat and Panipat tragedies "Pampadi" writes in the Indian Daily Telegraph:—"The more one comes to think of the plight of the Hindus the more is one faced with almost a sense of despair about its future. And yet the political future of this country depends on Hindu Sangathan. There can be no Swaraj without Hindu-Muslim unity and there can be no Hindu-Muslim unity unless the Hindus are powerful enough to face an organized minority and an alien administration." The Sainik contends that the real cause of the outbreak of Hindu-Muslim disturbances is the religious fanaticism of Muslims and not any particular anti-Hindu feeling among them and says that so long as this fanaticism does not abate there can be no peace. The Bhavishya says that as a result of the abominable methods of Agha Khanis and the reprehensible scheme of Khwaja Hasan Nizami it has become difficult for Hindus to protect their women or children. Similarly owing to the atrocities of some Muslim goondas the lives and properties of the Hindus are in great danger. If a case is brought against these goondas Muslim vakils and officials help them in every way, with the result that either they are let off or escape with light punishment. There is no room for doubt that there is a well-organized Muslim body with its ramifications all over India which wants to devour Hindus uncooked. The paper, therefore, exhorts the Hindus to organize themselves for self-preservation.

The Panipat disturbance.

The Abhyudaya points out that the reasons advanced by the Punjab Government for refusing to appoint an impartial inquiry committee are not at all convincing and compel one to the conclusion that the Government does not want to hold an inquiry into the doings of its officials. It says that if the Government loves truth and is anxious to do justice it should have no objection at all to the appointment of an independent inquiry commission. The Abhaya complains that in communal disturbances justice has never been done to the Hindus and says:—"The Collector of Saharanpur, who was responsible for such a big tragedy there, was promoted and then retired on pension. This wicked man should have been hanged before the public. To-day owing to the short-sightedness of officials Hindus are being robbed and beaten at various places and attempts are made to repress them . . . Considering the atrocities that are being perpetrated on them at various places it has to be said that the Government has now become powerless for it cannot restrain the goondas in any way. If this is not so, then it must be said that it deliberately gets Hindus robbed and beaten. Hindus are under a delusion as they ask for justice at the hands of Government. Those who expect that Government will protect Hindus are terrible enemies of the Hindu community." Proceeding, it says: The remedy lies in Hindu Sangathan which should keep aloof from Rai Bahadurs, Raja Sahibs and the like . . . For Hindu Sangathan there is need of Hindu young men who are ready to sacrifice their lives for protecting the honour of their mothers and sisters and who feel for the cow, the temples and the community.

The Viceroy's speech.

Discussing the Viceroy's speech, the Najat says that it was only an echo of Lord Birkenhead's utterance. No doubt, as asserted by His Excellency, the decline of Indian industries was inevitable, but that was because English industries could prosper only at the expense of Indian industries. In order to enrich England India had to be reduced to a condition of poverty and starvation. The Viceroy has asked us to ponder calmly over the Secretary of State's statement. Well, Indians have submitted to the harsh words of British statesmen, the rigours of jail life, and the shooting of their unarmed brethren, but they are not to blame if they cannot remove the bitterness that has been left in their hearts by these events. We all know that the Reforms will be reconsidered in 1929 and the inquiry will take ten years and in 1939 we shall again be where we are just now. The Viceroy's speech is as completely disappointing as Lord Birkenhead's and if the present Hindu-Muslim struggle and Shuddhi and Sangathan movements continue neither the Government nor their supporters will have to make any effort and India will remain a subject country as before.

Abolition of divisional Commissionerships.

Referring to the Government's refusal to abolish the posts of divisional Commissioners the Sainik says :—Why should the posts of Commissioners be abolished ? The Government surely do not want to increase the number of the unemployed in England. Poor Liberals ! They think that they will be able to make the Government do as they like by means of the recommendations of committees, resolutions of public meetings and articles in newspapers. The attitude which the Government have adopted after the failure of the non-co-operation movement shows that such dreams can be dreamt only under the influence of opium. The Aj writes :—Why should the Commissioners not be retained ? Where else would be found the opportunity to provide so much comfort to so many Europeans at the expense of others ? This is the love of the Government of India for Indians on the strength of which the Liberals dream of swaraj.

Capital of the United Provinces.

Referring to the resolution passed by the Allahabad Municipal Board viewing with the " gravest concern " the action of the Government of the United Provinces and strongly protesting against the policy adopted " which has resulted in the removal from Allahabad to Lucknow of the chief Government offices and incidents which betoken a capital city, " the Leader is glad to note that the board has at last become alive to the danger to its own interests involved in the insidious move of the Government to transfer the incidents of the capital of the province. Proceeding, the paper says :—" In this connexion the policy of non-interference adopted by the Government of India is exceedingly unsatisfactory. It appears from a reply given in the Assembly by Sir Alexander Muddiman that the Government of India called for a report from the local Government and it seems that it was satisfied by the assurance of the latter that there was not and never had been any question of the transfer of the capital from Allahabad. Are the Government of India so unsophisticated as not to know what the essentials of a capital are ? Is not Allahabad being deprived of these one by one ? We would invite their attention to the resolution passed by the Allahabad Municipal Board and would urge them to treat the question more seriously than they have so far done."

Political prisoners.

The Vartman refers to a communiqué issued by the Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee showing that about a dozen and a half Akali prisoners succumbed to cholera in the Rawalpindi jail and urges that arrangements should be made to provide against the untimely death of prisoners and to see that the members of the families of those who have already expired do not suffer for want of food and clothing. The Pratap publishes a letter from Srimati Parvati Devi who urges that an All-India Political Prisoners' Conference should be held at Cawnpore during the Congress week to look after the well-being of the political prisoners who are still rotting in jails and to help their dependents and says that by organizing the ex-prisoners we can exert pressure on Government and prevent them from harassing political prisoners in future.

The Agra Tenancy Act Amendment Bill.

The Sainik deplores the action of the Government in not publishing the Hindi version of the Agra Tenancy Act Amendment Bill in the Government Gazette and thereby ignoring the interests of crores of Hindi-speaking persons of these provinces and says that the Government has thus furnished an example of its innate wisdom. It exhorts the public and the members of the Council to sink their party differences and give serious consideration to the Bill as it affects the interests of 90 per cent. of the population of these provinces. They should not allow political designs and narrow self-interests to cut the throats of tenants, to sacrifice the rights of zamindars and to sow seeds of dissensions between these two parties.

The Bombay textile industry.

The Abhyudaya says that unless strong reasons are advanced to the contrary India can only interpret the Viceroy's reply to the Bombay Millowners to mean that the Government of India do not want to impose any taxation on the Japanese goods, because they have to humour Japan, surely not in the interests of India but of those of England. And they do not want to abolish excise duty, for the Lancashire manufacturers will not allow them to do so. The paper contends that if the Government are really in earnest to do justice to India there cannot be insuperable difficulties in the abolition of the cotton excise duty.

Muslim affairs.

The Hamdam strongly supports Mr. Haroon Jafar's proposal about the utilization of the accumulated interest on the deposits of the non-interest-taking Muslims in the Savings Banks and says that as the amount is spent on the Salvation Army whose chief object is to convert Hindus and Muslims to Christianity, no Muslim will have any objection to its being spent on the education of Muslim children.

Future Viceroy of India.

The Oudh Akhbar opines that the appointment of Lord Ronaldshay as Viceroy would be very welcome as he proved himself a peace-loving, far-sighted and reasonable person as Governor of Bengal.

The depressed classes.

The Jatava publishes a letter in which the writer complains of the sad plight of the communities known as untouchables in this country and appeals to the Government to appoint a commission for inquiring into their grievances and to take steps to redress them.

Foreign affairs.

The papers strongly condemn the joint Franco-Spanish offensive against the Riffs. The Leader writes: A more unrighteous war has perhaps never been waged in history in the cause of imperialism except when Carthage was destroyed by the Roman legions. How is it that the League of Nations views with equanimity the perpetration of a huge tragedy in Morocco? Does it exist only to safeguard European peace and does it think it can succeed in doing so unless it is able to curb the cruel and rampant spirit of imperialism? The Indian Daily Telegraph says:—The menace to the existence of coloured free people amidst the whites, indeed the impossibility for any coloured people to shake off the shackles of the Western powers, is the greatest problem that confronts Asiatics in Africa and America. The struggle in China is to be traced to the same "benevolence" of the west to improve China against her will . . . The same pathetic story comes from Iraq and Mosul—the British in their mission of upliftment of the coloured people, willingly shoulder the ungrateful burdens of Mosul. The Aj remarks that under the stress of King Faisal's anxiety for his throne, Britain's eagerness to do a good turn to the Arabs by "civilizing" them and her desire to possess Mosul oil fields, Mesopotamia will have to bid farewell to its liberty for an indefinite period. Al Barid says that the Mosul Boundary Commission's report has set another seal on the black record of Britain's land-grabbing policy. The matter is now before the League of Nations, but from past experience it may be confidently asserted that the decision will not be unfavourable to Britain. The Medina points out that the Turks are dissatisfied with the delay in the settlement of the Mosul question and regard it as an attempt to give it to the British. The British are very liberal in scattering gold when they want to acquire a territory, but they will show themselves in their worst imperialistic light once they get hold of Mosul. The dissatisfaction of the Turks is ominous and they are determined not to allow the robbers of Europe to deprive them of Mosul with the aid of their make-believe constitutionalism. If the European Powers do not act with wisdom the Near East will witness a war which will lead to the disappearance of the League of Nations and of those who utilize it as a screen behind which to play their games. The Najat also is suspicious of the League and hopes that saner counsels will prevail in it for otherwise war is inevitable. The Hindustani asserts that since the establishment of the British mandate neither Mesopotamia nor any other part of Arabia has known a moment's peace. The Hedjaz after suffering so long from Sheriffian misrule is now a prey to the excesses of Ibn Saud. Such things were never heard of during the Turkish régime and it would be better if Mosul together with Mesopotamia were placed under Turkish control. Referring to the charges of sacrilege against Ibn Saud the Ittihad says that he is another Yezid (the slayer of Hasan and Husain) and his admirers are only self-seekers. There is no doubt about the bombardment of the Prophet's mosque and mausoleum but these admirers are deliberately shutting their eyes to facts and some of them, apprehensive that the truth cannot be concealed for ever, are trying to justify the bombardment as being in consonance with the religious beliefs of the Nejdis. Maulana Abdul Bari, writing in the same paper, says that he does not favour Emir Ali or any other member of the Sheriff's family but he has become disgusted with Ibn Saud also after his acts of sacrilege. Al Barid observes that the question of the bombardment of the Prophet's tomb has assumed a highly controversial aspect owing to personal predilections and for party reasons the Sheriffis and Saudis both are exaggerating things and concealing the true facts from the public. The paper, therefore, suggests that a deputation comprising Maulanas Nasir Husain, Abdul Bari, Zafar Ali, Muhammad Ali and Pir Jamal Ali Shah should proceed to the Hedjaz to see things for itself and inform the Indian Muslims of the real situation. The Medina is sorry that Muslims are so absorbed in internecine quarrels that attention is being diverted from the importance of Akabah and Ma'an to the independence of the Hedjaz. Muslims should not play into the hands of their enemies otherwise Jeddah also will be sold to the British and those (holy) places over which they are getting so excited will pass into the possession of "Firingies" and provide hockey, football and polo grounds. In another article the paper says that King Faisal and the Iraqian Parliament are being made to ask for the continuance of British control after 1928 until the complete subjection of Iraq is accomplished. Britain is canvassing for this constitutional support from Iraq to be able to deceive the world. All devices and strategems converge to the same end and that is the retention of Iraq and the consequent acquisition of Mosul by hemming in Turkey on three sides. The grossly lying news being retailed from Palestine is also meant to send Muslims flying at each other's throats and thus to make them forget Akabah and Ma'an.

Reforms.

Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment to the official motion regarding the Majority Report of the Reforms Enquiry Committee is widely supported by the press although some of the extremist papers hold that it is altogether insufficient to satisfy national aspirations and requirements. The Vartman urges the Government to accept Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment and says that as it was passed in the Assembly by a majority including the Liberals, Independents, Swarajists and Zamindars it is clear that it is the demand of a very large number of Indians. If the Government do not accept it, it is certain that Indian leaders who are at present co-operating with it will organize a vigorous agitation. The Aj says that it is with a view to create divisions among Indian politicians that Sir Alexander Muddiman has raised the question of the conflict of Western and oriental ideals in opposing Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment. The paper warns the Indian leaders to be on their guard against such insidious attacks of the policy of divide and rule and not to allow themselves to be involved in useless controversies calculated to lead them astray. The only ideal which should inspire them all alike should be the attainment of freedom and a constitution will of itself be evolved in course of time in the light of experience. The Bhavishya writes: The passing of Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment has no doubt given us cause for temporary rejoicing but we have to remember that a number of similar resolutions passed by the Assembly are rotting in waste-paper baskets. We are convinced that such resolutions can be of no use to us unless we acquire the necessary strength to compel the Government to give effect to them. And such strength can only come if the vast masses are ranged in an organized manner behind us. The Pratap says:—Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment moved in the name of the country is unjust and improper. India wants full rights. The amendment does not contain even a tithe of her demands. The Swarajist demands are improper inasmuch as the Swarajists have not given the Congress time to consider them. India wants to exercise full control over the foreign and military departments. She has seen many times that her armies have been made to commit the sin of crushing the national spirit of other nations like Turkey, Egypt and China and of safeguarding British interests there. She will not be able to put up with this for any considerable length of time. India ought to arise and sacrifice herself to achieve liberty. Commenting on the defeat of Mr. Sethna's motion in the Council of State the Vartman says that even if this resolution had been passed by the Council it would have hardly received the Viceroy's assent. It is our frank belief that Councils can benefit us only in small matters but it is idle to expect them to effect any material change in the constitution. In view of the rejection of the national demand by the Council of State which had been passed by the Legislative Assembly the Aj urges all political parties to combine and capture all the elective seats in that body on the next election so as to prevent the entry of sycophantic members into it. Criticising Mr. Crerar's speech opposing the "national" demand the paper says that it is against all canons of statesmanship, against humanity and against the divine order of things that the Parliament of a different nation should control the destiny of thirty-two crores of people. It is one thing to owe allegiance to the British Crown and quite another to entrust their future progress into the hands of a Parliament most of the members of which are quite ignorant of the conditions of this country. We want the principle of self-determination to be applied to us. When we have acquired this right we shall heartily welcome British help and co-operation. Until we get it co-operation for us only means slavery. Mr. Crerar is quite wrong in holding that Indian political leaders have accepted Western ideals. India wants self-evolution on her own lines, but will surely adopt what is best in the Western ideals.

Music before mosques.

Hindu papers are strongly protesting against the orders of the District Magistrate of Allahabad regarding the stoppage of music before certain mosques during the Dasehra procession. The Leader writes: The Hindus were on unassailable ground in that there was no precedent for the demand now made upon them so far as the Dasehra procession went and they must have felt justifiable hesitation in acquiescing in the proposition to which they were invited to assent. The Muslims, according to the Unity Conference resolution, ought not to have invoked the assistance of the authorities and the latter would have been well-advised if they had not lent countenance to a novel Muslim demand as they did. Mr. Crosthwaite is both able and considerate and we are certain that he would not have been actuated by any partisan or other unworthy motive. But we think that he acted in haste and was unduly nervous. On the ground of custom and precedent he should in our opinion have dismissed the Muslim claim. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes: If the Allahabad Ramlila should be stopped, as the result of executive high-handedness, or we might be more correct in calling it executive weakness before the aggression of Muslims, then all we can exclaim is "perish Hinduism in Hindustan" . . . All that the Hindu leaders can do with self-respect they have done—to stop the entire religious procession as a protest against Muslim aggression and executive weakness. Mussoorie, Lucknow and Unao witnessed this weakness; now it is the turn of Allahabad. This has only one meaning for the Hindus, that their religious feelings do not count either with the authorities or with the Muslims. The Abhyudaya refers to reports of rows between Hindus and Muslims at various places over the question of music before mosques and says that it is nothing but aggression and turbulence on the part of the latter to take the law into their own hands. They do so with a view to impress upon officials the strength of their religious feeling over the question and to strike terror into the hearts of the Hindus. We urge officials to take severe notice of their conduct in the name of law, peace and order. If this malady of taking the law into one's own hands continues to grow unchecked in this manner all respect for law will be undermined and other communities will find it difficult to live in the country. Referring to the approaching Dasehra festival when processions with music are taken out in public roads the paper remarks: The official who yields to the unjustifiable demand of Muslims to stop music before mosques encourages hooliganism, anarchy and rowdyism and undermines the foundations of administration and should be prosecuted as being its enemy. When music could be played all these years before mosques there is no reason why it should be stopped now. Authorities who cannot ensure respect for custom should resign their posts and go home. Referring to the question of music before mosques at Allahabad the same paper writes: What has happened this year that Muslims insist on music being stopped? Is this insistence due to the appreciation of their conduct by the officials during the Mohurram? If the Muslims want brotherly treatment from Hindus they too should display a brotherly spirit. The official who supports the unjustifiable demand of Muslims is weak and timid and has not the courage to protect law and justice and should resign his post. The Bhavishya points out that the question of stopping music before mosques was never raised before. It has now been raised as Muslims are irritated on account of the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements. This shows that the question is not a religious one but is a mere excuse for creating disturbance. Referring to the decision of the Hindus of Allahabad not to celebrate the Ramlila unless the District Magistrate revokes his order under section 144, the same paper says: The District Magistrate ought to remember the Proclamation of Queen Victoria and to protect the religious sentiments of the Hindus. In order to avoid a breach of the public peace he ought to allay the discontent against the Government which is increasing in the hearts of the Hindus. In another article the same paper remarks: The question of music before mosques being an All-India question, the Magistrate of Allahabad went beyond his competence in deciding it. Now the Muslims have won the day. By referring to this order they will compel the Magistrates of other places to issue similar orders. If Hindus do not quietly put up with this insult to their religion, then in the name of law and order they will be roasted like sheep and goats and will be arrested and tried for loot and for being members of unlawful assemblies. The "ma-bap" Government is deciding in favour of Muslims. What then are the Hindus of Allahabad to do? Our advice is that they should not celebrate Ramlila and should not allow a breach of the peace.

Excise policy of the Government.

Commenting on the official opposition to Mr. N. C. Kelkar's amendment to Haji Wajih-ud-din's resolution in the Legislative Assembly regarding the consumption of liquor the Aj says that it naturally gives rise to the suspicion that the bureaucracy not only wants to allow people perfect freedom to drink liquor but is also eager to place inducements in the way of imprudent people to their ruin and to its own gain. The policy of the Government to encourage drinking for increasing its revenue deserves nothing but wholesale condemnation. The Medina says that the mentors of morality ardently advocated the cause of the drink that is universally condemned. Sir Basil Blackett even prophesied the failure of prohibition measures in America and Mr. Bhagwan Das was quite justified in the angry retort that if they could not remedy this evil they should clear out of India. The powers that be in order to deceive the world often assert that they are ruling over Indians in accordance with their wishes. If their claim is correct, they should act according to the decision of the Assembly; otherwise the world will see that they rather prefer to ruin the morals of India than to injure the trade of certain English wine-vendors. Colonel Crawford was responsible for a remarkable piece of grim humour. He characterised prohibition as an interference with the freedom of Indians. We would like to inquire whether Indians are free just now. The Colonel ought to talk sense, or was he himself drunk when speaking?

Political propaganda.

The Sainik refers to the remarks of the chairman of the Labour Union Congress regarding the success of British coal-miners and says that the organization of European labourers clearly shows what can be really achieved by people by means of organization. If labourers and peasants of Russia can become rulers of their country and if those of England can become the administrators of the British Empire there is no reason why the peasants and labourers of India should not be able to remove their sufferings by organizing themselves. In the course of a leading article under the heading "It is a sin to co-operate with beef-eaters" the Abhaya says: If there is anything in which Hindus can become unanimous it is the question of cow-protection. If any one asks the twenty crores of Hindus why their lips are faded the reply will be: "The demons are killing and eating our revered mother-cow. We are deprived of her nectar-like milk." They are mistaken who think that our rights will be safeguarded by co-operating with beef-eaters. Cow-protection can never be ensured by co-operation with those who eat cows. Even if swaraj is won by friendship with beef-eaters, the question of cow-protection will remain unsolved. It is a mistake to co-operate with beef-eaters whether they are indigenous or foreign.

Indians in the Colonies.

The Sainik says that the extent to which the hearts of the white men who talk so big of their civilization can be black can be judged from the Asiatic Bill before the South African Parliament. The Bill aims at driving out Indians who toiled hard to populate South Africa and to make the selfish white men immensely rich. It is no wonder that those who are treated as strangers in their own homes should be driven out of other countries in this manner. The Aj writes: When a most loyal member of the Council of State like Sir Umar Hayat advises that the Commander-in-Chief of India should be sent with his army to South Africa to avenge the oppression upon Indian colonists contemplated under the Asiatic Bill, it must be recognised that the limit of India's forbearance has been almost reached. We are grieved to note that the Government of India do not even now make a clear declaration on the Union Parliament's attitude towards Indians. This is the worst example of their subordinate position. This is why we urge that the Government of India should be made a national Government. The Bhavishya remarks that the Indian problem in South Africa, like other questions of a similar nature, can be solved only by the attainment of swavaj.

The Rangachariar's Bill.

Referring to the passage in the Legislative Assembly of Mr. Rangachariar's Bill to regulate the use of fireams against unlawful assemblies the Bhavishya says:—It will still depend upon the Government's will whether the provisions of the Bill are given effect to or not. If Indians want that they should not be shot without reason or without a warning they should strive for the establishment of responsible self-government. The Pratap remarks that the passage of the Bill does not mean that now it would become impossible to fire on crowds in India. Such petty restrictions do not change the mentality of officials in any way. This Bill will not have the effect of enhancing the value of the lives of Indians.

Muslims affairs.

The Haqiqat supports the proposal for holding a Muslim Press Conference at Aligarh on the occasion of the University Jubilee and says that such an association for the organization of Indian Muslims is badly needed. The Medina holds that the institution of the Khilafat is the only one which can bring together Muslims all the world over and that similarly the Khilafat committee is the only body which can bind Indian Muslims together. These two institutions should therefore be zealously safeguarded by all true lovers of Islam. Europe realizes that Pan-Islamism alone can fight the world and can make Muslims strong and active by infusing in them a desire for freedom and that the Khilafat is the only foundation on which Pan-Islamism can subsist. In the life and freedom of Muslims lie the death and subjection of Europe and Europe therefore tries every method to annihilate the Khilafat organization. In the days of warfare force was resorted to and when the time for intrigue and diplomacy came these also were utilized to dismember Islamic countries. Now we are face to face with a still more dangerous campaign of propaganda and we must meet it at all costs. The paper has also a contributed article complaining that a Marathi book entitled "Jag Jagriti" written by one Atma Ram Mahipat Jethe of East Khandesh and printed at the Venkatesh Printing Press, contains scurrillous attacks on God, the Prophet and the Quran and urging its withdrawal from circulation as it is bound to inflame the feelings of Muslims.

The next Home Member.

The Haqiqat is extremely dissatisfied with the rumour about the selection of Raja Rampal Singh for appointment as the next Home Member and says that the appointment of the head of the Shuddhi and Hindu Sabha movements would show that Government have got no sympathy with Muslims and want to serve their own purpose by setting the two communities by the ears. The Muslim press wants an unprejudiced and independent man free from communal taint. The Aziz-i-Hind hopes that the Maharaja Sahib of Mahmudabad will not be given an extension but will soon be replaced by some Muslim like Hafiz Hidayat Husain.

The Age of Consent Bill.

The Oudh Akhbar regards the passing of the Age of Consent Bill in the Legislative Assembly as the opening of another avenue for oppression and high-handedness in the name of human sympathy, Alas for those Indians who, dazzled by the glamour of the new civilization, are putting legal fetters on their moral rights. Are these the blessings which democracy is going to bestow on India?

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Criticising the action of the Collector of Mussoorie in stopping the Arya Samaj nagar-kirtan Mr. K. C. Bhalla writes in the Patriot:—The Arya Samaj does not ask for any special favours from the Government, but demands the just right of the Arya Samajes to celebrate their anniversaries according to the custom established for the last forty years or so. If the Government is pleased to put unnecessary obstruction in their way simply to please the Muslims, the evident result will be that the Arya Samaj will have to revise its policy which has so far been purely religious and social. Will it be an advantage to the Government to have unrest in the Samajic circle?

The Bombay textile Industry.

Referring to the crisis in Bombay textile industry the Leader exhorts the Government to help this premier industry of India by the abolition of the excise duty. If they cannot decide to abolish the duty they can at least suspend it for the rest of the year. This industry has helped the Government in times of difficulty and financial stress in a variety of ways. If it is allowed to be ruined the effect will enormously affect the economic position of the country and consequently of the Government.

Honorary magistrates.

Referring to the remarks about honorary magistrates in the latest "Criminal statements of the High Court of Judicature at Allahabad" the Maha-Shakti writes: The evil lies in the selection of unsuitable men, the chief consideration in such selections being, in the majority of cases, anything but the requisite legal training and educational qualifications. Is it not time for this horrible scandal to be done away with for the sake of humanity and the good name of the British Raj as well?

High prices of food-grains.

The Oudh Akhbar appeals to the United Provinces Government either to prohibit the export of food-grains altogether or to restrict it to utmost one-fourth of the produce so that prices may be maintained at a reasonable level.

Foreign affairs.

The Haqiqat remarks that the oppressive policy of the foreign Powers has excited hatred and animosity among the Chinese youths against the Westerners. The Chinese are much more incensed against the British as Englishmen have been meting out worse treatment to them than other foreigners. In Shanghai and Hongkong not only the English military and civil officers but the ordinary English merchants also treat the Chinese as worse than brutes. The Hamdam interprets the co-operation of American air-ships in the French attack against the Riffs as the declaration of a crusade by the Western Powers against Islam. England's offer of help to France against the Jebel Druses in Syria lends colour to this suspicion and Muslims should show by their united front that whenever Christendom will think of launching a crusade there will arise among them more than one Saladin to crush its head. In another article the paper exhorts the Muslims to observe the Riff day with due solemnity so as to show to the world how intense their feelings are against the usurpations and barbarities of the Western Powers. The American and English attitude towards the Riff and Druse struggles respectively clearly shows that the Christian Powers have launched a crusade against Islam and it is the duty of Muslims to oppose this attack of Christians by using all means within their power. From past experience we know that the Western Powers do not proclaim their real aims during a war and deceive the world till the time for the division of the spoils of war arrives. During the Great War the Allies at the time of declaring war against Turkey proclaimed that the war was only political and had nothing to do with religion. But at the conclusion of the war Mr. Lloyd George stated that in reality it was the last crusade in which the Allies had avenged the Muslim victories of yore. Had the Muslims been aware of this, not a single one of them would have consented to be doomed to perdition (by fighting against his co-religionists). If the Muslims can in no other way render help to these brave mujahids (the holy warriors of the Riffs) they should strike terror into the hearts of the enemies of their religion by making the 18th of September a success in every way. The paper also publishes a poem lamenting over Nejd-Hedjaz affairs in which the following couplets are worthy of note :—

(1) Turkey has been rendered helpless and the Hedjaz reduced to a state of disorder and confusion. How calamitous the British policy is !

(2) O, Why have you (Britain) girt up your loins for the ruin of Islam ? Why is your sword of greed and avarice so sharp ?

Discussing the question of protection of sacred places in Arabia a writer in the Dabdabai Sikandari suggests that the best solution is to entrust the task to His Exalted Highness the Nizam as he commands the confidence of Muslims and can spare troops for management and his election will also be approved by the British Government.

Music before mosques.

Hindu feeling against the order of the District Magistrate of Allahabad regarding the stopping of music before certain mosques during the Dasehra procession is gathering strength. The Leader writes :—" In the interests of peace the local authorities have to-day ordered that there should be no music before certain mosques for a brief period. Having thus admitted the justice or the expediency of the Muslim claim in the matter, how can they consistently refuse a further demand that there shall be no music before mosques at any time throughout the year when prayers are being offered ? Are they prepared to order that no social or religious processions of the Hindus should play music before mosques or anywhere in their vicinity so that the congregational prayers of the Muslims may not be disturbed? Is there to be no freedom for each community to exercise its own customary rights? Thus the order of the District Magistrate involves far-reaching issues which even from a purely administrative point of view are likely to raise difficult problems in the future." "A Christian" writing to the paper, says: "If a Christian church were situated in the contiguity of a Muslim mosque, would not Muhammadans have a right to ask for the cessation of all worship in that church on Sundays at the time of their evening prayers? Decidedly, yes, in face of the precedent established by prohibiting Hindu music before certain mosques. To-day the Hindus have been ordered not to play music before certain mosques at the time of the Dasehra celebrations. To-morrow the order will be not to play music before any mosque at any time of the year or day. One precedent leads to another. In attempting to cope with what appears to the officials the present evil, they are only making matters worse for the future when they will be faced with a greater evil and having bound themselves to one thought or opinion they will have to abide by their short-sighted policy then established by precedent and fettered by law." "A Hindu" writing to the same paper says:—"From a child of three who will miss his grand tamasha and little toy presents, to the gray old man who pines for the darshan of his deity in human form, all must sit, mourn and burn for being deprived of their grand annual Dasehra. Have the officials lost all sense that they do not realize what feelings such a state of things will rouse? Will it increase the good-will between the Muslims or themselves and the Hindus? Will it be helpful in maintaining the public peace now or in the future?" Mr. K. C. Bhalla, writing in the Patriot, congratulates the Hindus of Allahabad on the firm attitude displayed by their representatives before the District Magistrate and says:—"I wish the same attitude were adopted by Hindus everywhere. It will be then alone when we shall be able to live peacefully in our own country." The Aj says that the intervention of the District Magistrate has had a contrary effect. In view of the resolution of the Unity Conference which had been accepted by Muslim leaders also the demand of the Muslims of Allahabad is unjustifiable. If Muslims will always raise such controversy it will be impossible even for the warmest advocates of unity to satisfy them. We are unable to support the decision of the Allahabad Hindus not to celebrate Ramlila. This is a suicidal policy. If to-day the Ramlila procession has been stopped, to-morrow marriage processions will also have to be stopped. The Hindus of Allahabad should strive to take out the Ramlila procession somehow or other. The Abhyudaya writes:—We congratulate Mr. Crosthwaite on his Nadirshahi order. He has immortalised himself at least in the history of Allahabad. Now he should also issue an order for the removal of the sacred mark on the forehead of the Hindus and for the demolition of temples; for it is idolatry which must be painful to the hearts of Muslims. It is the duty of the Hindus at present not to celebrate their festival and let the District Magistrate take pleasure in his autocracy. If a hundred Hindus who can remain perfectly non-violent despite any provocation be available they should have recourse to satyagraha and make the District Magistrate's order a dead letter. Commenting on the communiqué of the Collector of Allahabad regarding the Hindu-Muslim conference to discuss the question of music before mosques the same paper writes:—Every line of the communiqué betrays the official attitude and eagerness of the authorities to hold the Hindus blamable. Its contents clearly proclaim how one-sided and untenable it is and from what view-point it has been written. We challenge the Collector to publish the documents which, according to him, prove that the Ramdal was so arranged in previous years as not to be in front of mosques at prayer time. The Vartman says:—It is said that the music disturbs the prayer of Muslims; but the question is why it did not disturb it up to this time. How do the Muslims say their prayer in the mosques located along the roads on which trams and motor-cars pass and near railway stations where there is always noise? The Hamdam justifies the steps taken by the District Magistrate. To the paper the Hindus seem to be acting upon their firm determination to ignore the feelings of their Muslim neighbours and to make demonstrations of their strength. It is very undesirable that the various communities should be made to respect the religious sentiments of one another through the orders of British officers, but the insistence of patriots like Pandits Kapil Deva Malaviya and Rama Kant Malaviya upon playing music before mosques at the time of prayers in disregard of the clear resolution of the Unity Conference at Delhi will only strengthen the hands of the authorities.

Hindu organization.

Appeals for Sangathan are finding more frequent and impassioned expression in the Hindu papers. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—To the Hindus to-day nothing is more important than Sangathan. That alone will once more enable them to live and worship their God in their own way. The sad story of Ramlila at Allahabad and the arti controversy in Lucknow must convince the Hindus that they have not much sympathy, we might call it justice, to expect from the officials who look upon such questions purely from the view-point of law and order. Commending the speech of Swami Shraddhanand at Lucknow, the same paper writes:—"The simple question is, whether Hindus shall be once again the virile race as of old or shall sink into still lower depths than at present when, in spite of their being the inhabitants of Hindustan, they cannot worship their God in their own way. Is it or is it not possible for the Hindus to combine in one mass movement for social reform, purge all the superstitions that have clustered as pestilential growths during the declining period of Hinduism and be restored to a solid community, organized and speaking with one voice from the Himalaya to Cape Comorin? In that way alone lies the path to Swaraj." The Bhavishya deplores that taking advantage of the apathy and indifference of Hindus to their interests selfish people have begun to set fire to their houses. The work of kidnapping boys, attacking women, and converting the untouchables by deceitful means is going on almost in every city. What, then, is our duty in these circumstances? We Hindus number twenty-two crores. There is no other community in the world having such a large population. If we organize ourselves solidly who will dare attack us and interfere with our religious functions?

Reforms.

The Bharat Jivan views with satisfaction the passage of Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment in the Legislative Assembly, not because it has led to a Government defeat but because this time the Government has not been able to succeed in its deadly deceitfulness on the strength of which it has been able to hold its head high in the civilized world in spite of sucking the blood of Indians and behaving despotically towards them in the name of co-operation. Up to this time it has been declaring in loud terms that if Indians of all parties submit a joint demand, it would consider it sympathetically but its hopes were dashed to the ground when Pandit Motilal Nehru produced the joint demand, because it never expected even in dream that the Swarajists and Nationalists would combine in this way. There is not the least doubt that the present policy of Government is humiliating for us and if we cannot change it we must at least expose it fully. The Vartman regards the rejection of Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment by the Council of State as an insult to India's representatives and says that it has shown that those who were opposed to Council entry were right. If any sense of self-respect is left in the members of the Council of State they should hang down their heads in shame and repent of their mistakes. The Medina says that Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment is the country's united reply to the high-handedness of Government and the inflammatory utterances of Lord Birkenhead. The remarkable unity displayed in this connexion by all Indian political parties in the Assembly in spite of the official efforts to create a split constitutes a very happy augury. We simply fail to understand the meaning of the official call for co-operation. It must be borne in mind that Indians will not extend the hand of co-operation so long as the Government does not abandon its tyrannical and irresponsible attitude. The autocratic members of Government should know that the demands of the Assembly constitute the irreducible minimum the acceptance of which will indicate a change of heart on their part. If the Viceroy uses his special powers to reject this democratic decision of the Assembly, they (Government) will be disgraced before the world and their deceitful claim of ruling over India with her consent will be thoroughly exposed. The Oudh Akhbar condemns the opposition of the Council of State to the non-official amendment and says that the members of the Assembly should seek re-election on this very issue so as to expose the unrepresentative character of the upper Chamber. The Haqiqat writing in a similar strain regrets that there was not a single Muslim among the patriots who supported the amendment. By this action the Council of State has further discredited itself in the eyes of the people.

Political propaganda.

The Aj says that imperialism and militarism such as was exhibited in the Jallianwalabagh massacre and in the recent Shanghai firing is crushing Asia. To promote it the British naval base at Singapore is being constructed. Asia cannot be saved without the establishment of an Asiatic Federation. The time has come when all leaders of Asia should give serious consideration to this question. Dealing with the triumph of labour over capital in Europe, the Anand writes: The poverty of India is terrible. The poor in this country should also shake off their lethargy and following the lead of their Western brethren, should fight the rich. Reviewing the last Simla session of the Legislative Assembly, the Pratap cites instances to show how the Government of India has insulted Indians by spurning the resolutions of their elected members and says that the Government will not yield so long as it does not make sure that there is some power behind the resolutions. The Krishna publishes a description given by "Raja" Mahendra Pratap of his visits to Germany, Afghanistan, etc., during the Great War. He says: The Kaiser repeatedly inquired about Indian States, particularly those near the Afghan frontier. I told him that Afghanistan's entry into the War would afford many possibilities of anti-British rebellion in India and that I would willingly go to Afghanistan and exert in every possible way for the attainment of my object. The German Chancellor gave a written pledge that the German Government would recognize Indian independence and would treat the independent Indian Government as its equal. The Kaiser conferred on me the Order of the Red Eagle. I hesitated to accept it, but my Indian friends pressed me to accept it for the sake of India's good and remarked that it was a ratification of the agreement between independent India and Germany. I got necessary papers prepared by the German Government. The most important ones are the letters written by the German Chancellor to twenty-six Indian princes which were printed in Urdu and Hindi. The letter from the German Chancellor to the Amir of Afghanistan read: "Raja Sahib is working for the independence of India. Any help given to him by the Afghan Government will be fully appreciated by the Imperial German Government." Very good treatment was meted out to Indian prisoners of war.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Krishna deplores that both the Hindus and Muslims are so foolish as to allow themselves to be duped by the bureaucracy and become blood-thirsty enemies of each other. We do not realize that the false love of bureaucracy every day strengthens the chain of our slavery. When even small nations have already achieved their freedom or are vigorously trying to achieve it, why should not we Indians who are vastly superior in numbers to Europeans, give up our mutual quarrels and exert ourselves for the attainment of our country's freedom? Sher Singh Shamin writing in the Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar says that the Hindus welcomed British rule because it freed them from Muslim excesses in the shape of forcible conversions and violation of women. Muslims tried peaceful tabligh during British rule but could not make much headway owing to the counter-propaganda of the Arya Samaj. Now they are kidnapping boys for conversion and every Hindu paper should make it its duty to warn its readers against this new phase of tabligh activity. The Vaishya Hitkari complains that some Muslim journals have described the communal disturbances at Panipat as the fourth battle of Panipat in which the Hindus have for the fourth time suffered defeat at the hands of Muslims. The paper asks the Hindus to take a lesson from the boastings of Muslims and to realize that in spite of being slaves in India the Muslims still cherish the idea of being rulers and despise the Hindus as worse than slaves. It is shameful for the Hindus to seek unity with Muslims even in such circumstances. The Muslims are anxious to gain victory over the Hindus and in 95 per cent. of communal riots of past years Muslim officials were in some way or other responsible and were in charge of management.

Indians in the colonies.

The Aj says that if the Asiatic Bill before the Union Parliament in South Africa is passed it will lay an axe at the foundations of the Empire. It is impossible that Indians despite being kicked on all sides should consider it a matter of pride to remain within the Empire and help it in the time of need. It has become imperative that the colonial whites should revise their policy and they should be firmly told to have some regard for the interests of the Empire. "White imperialism" is the root-cause of all the troubles of the world and it should be our sacred duty to uproot it. The white colonists know neither justice nor logic. They only acknowledge force. The Indian should treat the colonials in this country in the same manner as they themselves are treated in the colonies. The Medina complains of the high-handedness and Pharaohism of the South African Union Government towards Indians and says that besides imposing legal disabilities on their trade and social life they are now expelling Indians from their houses and also interfering with their agriculture by reserving the best lands for the proud members of the white race. Since 1922 the Union Government has determined to get every Indian out of South Africa by every means in its power. The Government of India should now pass retaliatory laws and teach a lesson to the South African Government.

Muslim affairs.

The Medina deplores that Muslims attach so much importance to news from Reuter who is an ordinary agent of Christian wickedness that they have fallen out among themselves simply because the Central Khilafat Committee wants the success of Ibn Saud and the freedom of the Jaziratul Arab. This dispute about Hanafis and Wahabis has been spread throughout the country and Muslims are so credulous about the repeatedly contradicted news of a satanic agency (Reuter) that they even assault their leaders on its strength. As a matter of fact Indian Muslims are in a most isolated and helpless state in India. On the one hand the British Government are straining every nerve, with their propagandist, political and economic forces, to gain control over every department of their lives. On the other, their compatriots regard India as their sole property and want to make life intolerable for Muslims. So far the Hindus had taken possession only of the properties of Muslims but now they want to gain control over their world of morality and reputation also. Between these two (hostile) powers Indian Muslims are passing the days of their fruitless life. To make matters worse, Muslim States are so busy with their internal affairs that they cannot extend a helping hand to Muslim India. Encompassed by two powerful enemies and condemned to such a helpless existence, it is a pity that Indian Muslims are now quarrelling among themselves and are frittering away in internecine strife that power of the pen and the tongue which should have been reserved for others.

Mr. Rangachariar's Bill.

The Hindi Kesari remarks that the passage of Mr. Rangachariar's Bill in the Legislative Assembly does not mean that it has become law, for it has yet to pass through the Council of State and then there is the Viceroy's power of veto. The official opposition to the Bill shows that this measure will also be thrown into the waste-paper basket. The debate on the Bill betrays that the bureaucracy attaches very little importance to Indian lives. Referring to the official opposition to the clause in Mr. Rangachariar's Bill regarding the institution of cases against officials, the Bharat Jiwan writes: Does the Government of India want that Indians should not have even so much right of self-respect as to complain even on being fired at without any just cause? What a great injustice! What a terrible insult! The refusal of permission to file cases clearly shows that Government realize that in the majority of cases the officials cannot account for their mean actions. Is this the British sense of justice? This is an unparalleled instance of the abuse of power. The Bharat Dharma says that the official opposition to Mr. Rangachariar's Bill shows that the spirit of humanity is decreasing and that of brutality increasing among the rulers. The Government which punishes men for killing wild animals without permission does not permit men to institute cases against officials for killing human beings. Can there be greater callousness and hard-heartedness than this? The blood-thirstiness of the bureaucracy is a proof of its weakness.

The Council of State.

Newspapers strongly condemn the action of the Council of State in rejecting a number of popular measures and ask that it should be either mended or ended. Commenting on the Viceroy's "self-gratulatory and congratulatory" address to the Council of State, the Leader writes: The Council of State is the favourite child of the bureaucracy in Simla and Delhi. It registers the decrees of the executive with a fidelity which is more pathetic than thoughtful. Naturally the bureaucracy pat it on the back and attribute to it all the wisdom and patriotism of the land. It is no wonder, therefore, that His Excellency the Viceroy as the Head of the bureaucracy should have been very expansive in his farewell address to that Council. Political India's verdict on the Council of State, however, is that it has been a failure and it must be mended or it will have to be ended. In another article the paper says: The Council of State has to its discredit a record of humble obedience to the executive, or reactionary decisions, and of more or less successful attempts to undo the good the Legislative Assembly has done. The franchise on which the members of the Council of State are elected requires to be radically altered, and so does its constitution. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes: If ever there was any doubt in the public mind about the utility of this body in the system of Indian legislature, that doubt stands removed by the studied eulogy of it by the Viceroy and Governor-General who has rendered himself unpopular as the tutor of Lord Birkenhead. If the Viceroy desired to give a certificate of merit to the Council of State, his speech will constitute its severest condemnation. For an Indian to deserve Lord Reading's commendation is to condemn himself as an enemy of India. We must capture the Council of State and endow it with sufficient public spirit to be an effective supplement to popular enterprise instead of, as at present, the poisonous breath that kills all schemes of public utility.

The cotton excise duty.

The Aj says that though the Legislative Assembly has passed the resolution of Sir Purshottamdas Thakurdas recommending the suspension of the cotton excise duty for six months, there is little hope that the bureaucracy will do anything to give effect to it. The indifference of the officials towards this question, specially in view of the closing down of mills in Bombay and the consequent unemployment of labourers, is simply surprising. Such things are possible only in India, as her rulers are alien and are not the least amenable to public opinion. This incident shows clearly that there is no law in this country beyond the will of the bureaucracy. This is why we repeatedly oppose "constitutional" agitation.

The new Law Member.

The Leader disapproves of the appointment of Mr. S. R. Das as Law Member, as he lacks training in public life and is not known to hold very progressive views. "Our anticipation is that Mr. Das, as a member of the Government of India, will be a well-intentioned but weak and unduly compromising man who can give little satisfaction to either of the progressive political parties. We are not surprised that Lord Reading's choice should have fallen upon him; for his lordship's political tendencies and the nature of the recommendations which he has made for high appointments almost excluded the possibility of a robust-minded politician being favoured by him."

Mussoorie Arya Samaj.

The Garhwali deplores the action of the Mussoorie authorities in forbidding the local Arya Samajists from taking out their nagar kirtan procession at the instance of some Muslims and observes that the passing of such orders means an utter disregard of the religious sentiments of Hindus. It asks if the authorities would have stopped the tazia procession if the Hindus had requested them to do so and exhorts the Hindus to take a lesson from such incidents and organize themselves for self-preservation.

Indian States.

The Rozana Akhbar condemns the huge expenditure on dogs and birds and on his trip to England by the Maharajah of Jodhpur and asks Indian princes to banish from their minds the idea that they are the proprietors of States. They should not squander the hard-earned money of their subjects in this manner.

Foreign Affairs.

Referring to a report that the Spaniards are accusing the British of being anti-Spanish and pro-Muslim, the Haqiqat remarks that to hold the British to be pro-Muslim is as untrue as to say that they are hatching a conspiracy against their own nation. The Hamdam accuses Britain of indulging in insidious propaganda against the Turks and remarks that it is the British and not the Turks who have violated the agreement regarding the frontiers of Mosul. Reuter's Agency, being controlled by the British, does not send correct reports. In another article the paper adversely criticises the League of Nations for hesitating to give a final verdict regarding the Mosul controversy and opines that the League dare not displease Britain by upholding the just rights of the Turks. To it the International Tribunal at the Hague is as untrustworthy as the League itself which always exhibits cowardice whenever any important question is referred to it, and which has ever been notorious for keeping silent over the tyrannies and oppressions perpetrated by the imperialistic governments over the eastern nations. The Medina rejoices that Ibn Saud has declared that Akabah and Ma'an are integral parts of Arabia and cannot be possessed by any nation but the Hedjazis. At the time of the Koweit Conference of 1923 the British Foreign Office had tried to gain control over Arabia by having Al Jouf which is the heart and gate of all Arab States. Ibn Saud put an end to all these schemes and then the Foreign Office tried to win over the Imam of Yemen to gain influence in the peninsula. But the Imam proved obdurate and the British move was foiled. Now Akabah and Ma'an, which are the northern gates of the whole of Arabia, are falling victims to the greedy eye in the wake of the Sheriffian rout. To achieve this object, the people of Asir are being incited to make war on Ibn Saud and the bait of the port of Hodeida is being held out to them. But Imam Yehia is a thorn in the side of Asir and can never allow the Asir people to succeed in their objective. The announcement of Ibn Saud about Akabah and Ma'an is therefore full of portent and Indian Muslims should derive further satisfaction from the news that he is summoning a Muslim Conference to decide the question of the administration of the Hedjaz. The Najat also has an article defending the action of Ibn Saud and depicting him as too shrewd to be duped by the British and to hand over any part of the Hedjaz to them. The British are going on with their mischievous activities and in order to weaken the power of the Nejdis they are trying to sow discord between the Imam of Yemen and the Sultan of Nejd so that the latter may not be able to take any action against the British policy regarding Akabah and Ma'an. But Imam Yehia is fully aware of the ways of the British, has discovered their designs and has refused to be enmeshed in their net. Thus the British have disgracefully failed in their design. The malady of Imperialism has developed to a dangerous point in the British who do not shrink from any subterfuge to realize their object. But now even the most ignorant and uncivilized people do not put faith in the promises and pledges of the British in spite of their oaths and high-sounding declarations. They made thousands of promises to the weaker nations during the Great War, but afterwards broke them all. The Sada-i-Muslim welcomes the news of the occupation of Medina by Ibn Saud and hopes that he will be able to wrest Jeddah also from the treacherous Sheriffians and thus purge the Jazirat-ul Arab of non-Muslim influence. The proposed anti-Saud conference at Lucknow should not be held now and India should no longer disgrace herself by anti-Nejdian propaganda. The Shia papers and many Sunni journals also, on the other hand, are denouncing in vituperative language the sacrileges of Ibn Saud in the holy places of the Hedjaz and demand his expulsion from the holy land. The Haqiqat advises Muslims not to tolerate the authority and rule of Ibn Saud over the holy places and insinuates that he is in alliance with the British. It is wrong to say that he declared war against Sheriff Husain for the purpose of maintaining the sanctity of the holy places. He attacked the Hedjaz at the instance of the British who became displeased with Shah Husain when he flatly refused to accept the terms offered by them.

23

Music before mosques.

Hindu papers of all shades of opinion remain preoccupied with the question of the stoppage of music before mosques during Dasehra processions. They accuse Government of open partiality towards Muslims and exhort the Hindu community to carry on the Sangathan movement with redoubled vigour, devoting special attention to the removal of untouchability and the uplift of the depressed classes. A number of papers suggest the adoption of satyagraha against executive orders like that issued by the District Magistrate of Allahabad. The Leader writes:—"The Dasehra is over and Allahabad is fortunate not to have witnessed another riot between Hindus and Muslims. The former had great provocation in that the Ramlila celebration was virtually stopped by an unjust and unprecedented order of the district officer, and next in the arrangements made for preserving the peace less consideration was shown for the feelings of the Hindus than they had a right to expect." In another issue the paper writes:—"The Dasehra week at Allahabad, which used to be an occasion for rejoicing, has been to the Hindus one of bitter mourning. If the Hindus had been strong, organized and united the authorities would have paused several times before passing the order under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, which on the merits of the case was indefensible. It is not sufficient to have a right. One must have the strength to defend it. The Hindus have it not. Governments and officers generally like to follow the path of least resistence. . . What is needed is introspection and a determined effort to make the Hindu community a homogeneous whole." A correspondent writing to the paper strongly criticizes the order of the District Magistrate of Allahabad under section 144 and quotes the judgment of the Privy Council which held that "the worshippers in a mosque or temple which abutted on a high road could not compel the processionists to intermit their worship while passing the mosque or temple on the ground that there was a continuous worship there." Referring to the orders of the District Magistrates of Lucknow and Allahabad with regard to Ramlila processions and the "angry speeches" delivered at a Hindu meeting at the former city the Indian Daily Telegraph asks Government to take note of the feelings that have been roused by what lends itself to be understood by the Hindus as its partisan attitude. "Should law and order always mean the Government succumbing to the aggressive gestures of the Muslims? After all Hindus are not aliens in Hindustan." In another article the paper writes:—"This is a triumph of British rule that the great religious festival of Dasehra was not observed by the Hindus so that the local Muslims might rejoice in their sense of power. The police, in fact, had acted to the instructions of the Muslims . . . Before such concerted action of the authorities with the Muslims the Hindus are helpless . . ." In yet another article the paper writes:—"Unfortunately the growing suspicion is difficult to be shaken off that behind all these heartless innovations, sanctified by custom, there is some official understanding. We have seen in the deliberate attempt at Aminabad to stop the Hindu procession to gratify the Namazis what we can expect from the Government . . . Are the Hindus decided to carry on their Sangathan? Then let them be prepared to face the active hostility of the British Raj . . . We are only making a laughing-stock of ourselves by merely barking. We need not go to the Ramayan for an example but to the Sikhs at Jaito and Gurukabagh . . . The Hindu Sabha, hereafter, ought not to wait on deputation on Mr. Gwynne but on the sweeper and scavanger, breathe the new spirit in their homes, light the darkness there and throw the golden links of Sangathan over the entire community so that in a twelve-month time, before the next Ramlila, the Hindus of Lucknow might be united as one man." The Arya Mitra says that the unjust order of the Collector of Allahabad has created discontent not only among the Hindus of Allahabad but in the Hindu community as a whole. The Hindus did not want any concession. They only wanted that the rights which they have been exercising for years should not unjustly be interfered with at the instance of anybody. It was the duty of the Collector to protect them. The Local Government should take notice of the unjust doings of its magistrates and treat the Hindus and Muslims alike. The Prem urges the Hindus of Allahabad to offer civil disobedience against the order of the District Magistrate and remarks:—It seems as if for some time past Government officials have committed themselves to a policy of crushing the sentiments and just rights of the Hindus. If the Hindus do not open their eyes, it is possible that in future Mr. Crosthwaite or some brother official of his may order that the Hindu temples should be destroyed, that the Hindus should not wear top-knots and sacred threads and that their religious services should be stopped because they are also against Islam and as such hurt the religious feelings of Muslims. The Hindus of Allahabad should now organize some such bands of righteous, principled and forbearing youths as may go on playing music before mosques, and peacefully surrender themselves. The paper warns the Muslims that after some time they too will be spurned as the western nations are making preparations for completely destroying Muslim states. In another article the same paper says:—Cannot the military force which was displayed at Delhi on the occasion of the Bakr Id to fulfil the unjust Muslim demand, calculated to injure the feelings of the Hindus, and the terrible spectacle of which was witnessed by the Jallianwala Bagh, be utilised to protect the just rights of the Hindus? The Abhyudaya writes:—It is the misfortune of Allahabad that at present Mr. Crosthwaite is the Collector here. It is because of his presence that Allahabad is in mourning to-day. Had Mr. Crosthwaite rightly considered the question he would have come to the conclusion that it was the right of the Hindus to take out processions with music and that the Muslims were not justified in their demand for stopping music. If there was any danger of the outbreak of a riot on the part of the Muslims the Collector instead of applying section 144 in the city should have applied section 107 against Muslims. By applying section 144 the Collector has "murdered" law and the rights of the Hindus. If he had any knowledge of law he should have known that in accordance with the decision of the Privy Council in the Aurangabad case (Aligarh district) every community has the right to take out processions in accordance with its customs on public roads. Similar decisions have also been made by the Madras and the Allahabad High Courts. But what has Mr. Crosthwaite to do with them when he knows that his word is law? The Hindus of Allahabad will now do well to have recourse to law courts for the protection of their rights. In another article the same paper urges Mr. Crosthwaite to peruse the papers of 1821, 1848, 1849 and understand how the functions of the Collector are discharged. If he cannot easily get hold of these papers he should peruse the papers of the time of Mr. Porter and find out for himself how Collectors have arranged to get out Dasehra and Muharram processions simultaneously on the same road. In yet a third article the paper writes:—If the Hindus want to live in the world, if they want to live like men, they shall have to make themselves strong. Musalmans too will make friends with them only when they find that quarrelling with Hindus will mean serious trouble to themselves. The authorities too will yield to the Hindus and will not deal unjustly by them when they find that the latter will not put up with injustice. The Abhaya says:—Hindu-Muslim riots are increasing day by day. The chief cause of this is that at present the Government wishes to satisfy Muslims in every way. At Allahabad, Cawnpore, Panipat, Delhi and other places the magistrates abused their authority by siding with Muslims against Hindus. Why is this so? Simply because Hindu leaders continue to accept the proposals of the officials. No one will listen to Hindus so long as they continue to submit like this. The Krishna severely takes the Muslims to task for objecting to music before mosques and asks them to migrate to the hills or jungles or Arabia if they cannot tolerate it. The real cause of communal strife is the well-known fanaticism of Islam. The Hindus of Allahabad have exhibited weakness by stopping the Ramlila in the present manner. Either they ought to have asked the Muslims to recognize their right of having music before mosques and then stopped it out of regard for their feelings or they ought to have adopted civil disobedience like the brave Akalis and in a non-violent manner insisted on playing music before mosques. The Azad regards the Muslim demand as untenable in localities containing mixed populations as its acceptance will lead to daily riots and place the Hindus in a very difficult position. The position of the Muslims regarding music before mosques is as weak as that of the Hindus regarding cow-sacrifice and old established customs must be followed and all new demands of the kind whether made by the Hindus or Muslims should be rejected. The Awaz suggests that instead of stopping music before mosques at prayer time, prayers should not be allowed in mosques lying along the routes of Hindu processions, but should be offered for the time being in mosques situate elsewhere. The Muslim rioters generally belong to the criminal class and can be held in check by the police. If Muslims try to wound the feelings of their neighbours they act not as the servants of God but as the sons of Satan. We hope Government will not earn the title of "maternal aunt" of Satan by refusing to interfere and thus encouraging the belief that they themselves are at the bottom of disturbances. The Hamdam holds the religious bigotry of the Hindus to be responsible for the trouble and thinks that some well-organized agency is inciting them against the Muslims. The Zul Qarnain blames the Sangathan movement and says that it is since its inauguration that the question of music, before mosques has arisen. Previously also there were mosques and there was music but this music never led to the breaking of heads. The insistence of Hindus on music before mosques or of Muslims on disrespect to temples is highly disgraceful and unreasonable. The Haqiqat inquires why Hindus objected to a cow-procession through Pahari Dhiraj when they are not prepared to stop music before mosques. Al Bashir says that when Hindus cannot stop music before mosques for a few minutes even during prayer time the Muslims also should insist on their right of sacrificing cows in their homes and should make it a point to offer cows alone as sacrifice and to take beef only.

Congress politics.

Referring to the meeting of the All-India Congress Committee at Patna the Leader writes:—"What is the meaning and what is the net result of the proceedings at Patna? The meaning is that the 'Indian National Congress' may henceforth be designated correctly as the Swaraj Party Congress and the net result is that the Liberals must definitely make up their minds to stick to their own party organization and to sink or swim with it. . . We would ask the Liberals no more to waste their time and energy in talking of 'unity' that is remote and not within their grasp. We urge them to put more heart into their work for their own party and through it for the country and to make the very best effort which circumstances may permit to win success in the elections." The Aj welcomes the restoration of the four-anna franchise and urges Congress workers to do their best now to increase the membership of the Congress so as to check the tendency of the Swaraj Party to co-operate with the Government or openly to give room to co-operation in their programme. In another article the same paper opines that the new changes introduced into the Congress will impart vigour to its activities, will weaken the bureaucracy which has become powerful owing to the divisions among the political parties and will accelerate the attainment of swaraj at an early date. We should utilize all the forces in the country for the attainment of swaraj; we should become united in such a manner that the bureaucracy may not be able to raise its head. We may have our own quarrels, but should ever present a united front to the bureaucracy. The Vartman publishes an article by Hasrat Mohani who suggests that the Congress should only take up such matters as the improvement of the position of Indians abroad and the reduction of military expenditure, etc., which have nothing to do with communal matters. If it adopts the programme of the swaraj party its success is doubtful. The only power which the country has to make the Government pay heed to the Congress resolutions is that of mass civil disobedience. We shall have to use it. The poor labourers and tenantry should be organized and strikes should always be encouraged among railway, telegraph and postal employees.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an article on Goddess Durga the Abhaya says:—Indians, take refuge in divine power. No other course for your emancipation is visible. The worship of this goddess is the only means by which we can save ourselves from the turbulence of both internal and external enemies. The Prem publishes an article in which the writer exhorts the Hindus to realise the importance of hero-worship on the Dasehra day and to make ready to combat injustice and despotism with the sword of love, the shield of non-co-operation and the armour of truthfulness and says:—The demonical force has for a long time overpowered the divine force. The sun of progress has been eclipsed by oppression. The Aj refers to the success of the Irish and of the coal miners in England in their agitation as exemplifying that British statesmen respect powerful opponents only and says that our agitation will remain unfruitful so long as it is confined to words alone. The defeat of the bureaucracy in the Legislative Assembly by means of a majority of votes will not affect it in the least. What is required is work among the people. They should be taught their duties and rights and should be prepared for satyagraha. The day the British statesmen realise that the Indians as a people can have recourse to satyagraha and will have recourse to it if necessary they will no longer hesitate to grant swaraj to them. The Bhavishya urges that if Indian peasants are organized they will be freed from all troubles for tyrants have to bow before the power of organization.

The Bombay Textile Industry.

The Aj says that the official opposition to Mr. Purshottamdas Thakurdas' resolution regarding the suspension of the cotton excise is the worst example of the abuse of their autocratic powers by the Government of India. This callous indifference towards the ruin of the Indian textile industry and to the sufferings of the labourers thrown out of employment is dictated by the wish to benefit the Manchester manufacturers and to secure the support of Bombay mill-owners, by the abolition of the cotton excise afterwards, to the introduction of preferential tariff within the Empire. We will not support the preferential tariffs even to save the indigenous cotton industry as they are calculated to do greater injury to Indian interests. The Haqiqat advises Government to remit the excise duty in order to end the prevailing strikes.

Muslim Affairs.

Referring to the publication of a caricature of the Prophet in the Star the Medina warns the authorities in England that even the worst Muslim prizes his Prophet above all worldly things. In view of this cartoon we want to inquire of England whether she wants that a band of devotees of Islam should be formed which would purge the world of the existence of such foul-mouthed and unholy beings. The Zul Qarnain urges the Government of India to invite the attention of the Home Secretary to the resentment caused among Muslims by this publication. The Medina regrets that some Hindu papers are so carried away by religious prejudice as to condemn the Khilafat committee which is the only body which is prepared to go the full length with the National Congress in working for the freedom of India. While the freedom of the Muslim states of the Near East is prejudiced by the employment of mercenary troops from India, India also can be free only when the Suez, Persian Gulf and the Gulfs of Aden and Muscat are freed from British control. Hindus should, therefore, refrain from hampering the committee in its efforts to secure the freedom of Islamic countries.

Oudh Chief Court.

Under the heading "Muslim ascendency in United Provinces" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—"The announcement of the personnel of the Oudh Chief Court brings home to the Hindu mind in these provinces the utter helplessness of their position. Coming amidst the scenes of despair that mark the Ramlila celebrations all over, the gift of a Chief Court with two out of three Indian judges being Muslims is a little difficult to appreciate. Why should an injustice have been done to a Hindu by Khan Bahadur Syed Muhammad Raza, a junior to him, being taken above the head of Rai Bahadur Babu Shankar Dayal?. . . We can understand political differences, but when communal partiality or prejudice runs riot so as to undermine the disciplined career of the services, we must protest. Unless the Government shows cause why a Hindu senior judge has been passed over to find room for a Muslim junior, to preside over the judicial destinies of a province predominantly Hindu, we must leave the public to draw their own conclusions."

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to the recent speeches of Dr. Kitchlew in which he is reported to have advised Muslims to boycott Hindus the Indian Daily Telegraph says :—"The threat which he has given to the Hindus has, instead of cowing them down, produced a far-reaching effect. The Hindus have nerved themselves to brave the impending danger and put a united front to the menace. Till now they were bound together with a fragile thread, now with hoops of steel. The Hindus will be chivalrous enough not to 'touch the hem' of the 'heaven born rulers' who have ranged themselves on the side of the Muslims in seeming sympathy, but will rather depend on their own organized efforts. The Muslims are gloating themselves over their transcient success and the injured pride of the Hindus, little thinking that like small children they are playing with sharp-edged tools. If to-day they have caught hold of the handle, to-morrow the sharp blade will make a lasting wound."

The Skeen Committee.

The Medina says that the Government of India were forced against their will to agree to the appointment of the Skeen Committee. They do not relish the idea of the establishment of an Indian Sandhurst and, as is usual with Governments, are using secret means to frustrate the object of the appointment of the Committee. It is said that all the evidence being produced before the Committee has emanated from the brains and pens of the Army Headquarters and the witnesses are tutored to support the view-point of the general staff. If it is so, how can the Committee advance the interests of India? We only trust to the Nationalist and Independent members of the Committee to strain every nerve to checkmate every move of the autocratic administration.

Indian States.

The Awaz complains that as a result of vigorous Muslim propaganda in Kashmir, Hindus are not now being taken into State service as freely as before. They form only five per cent. of the State population and being without capital or land can follow neither trade nor agriculture. Their only refuge was State service, and now that they are deprived of this also, they will have perforce to become Muslims. Is it not sad that Hindus should be in such a plight in a Hindu State? They would have been better off if they had instead been subjects of the Nizam.

The Council of State.

The Medina says that the whole history of the five years' existence of the Council of State has been one long story of flattery, sycophancy and kotowing, yet its swan song has been particularly soul-revolting. The meaning of the wholesale rejection of popular measures is that these landowners, capitalists, colonels and generals of the Council want to win the last pattings of the Viceroy and thus to make sure of the help of their bureaucratic masters in securing votes at the next elections. If the voters possess any conscience they will refuse to re-elect such cowards, sycophants and enemies of the country who sacrifice the country's interests by saying ditto to all that the officials prompt. What was there against India's interests in Pandit Motilal Nehru's amendment to the Reforms resolution or in Pandit Shyam Lal Nehru's resolution regarding the removal of restriction on political ex-convicts in regard to Council entry or in the proposal to regulate firing on political gatherings? But to the slaves of pelf and position in the Council of State truth, justice and country's interests lie in what the Saheb (official) desires. It is, therefore, the duty of the electors to give their votes to the representatives of public opinion and not to the slaves and sycophants of the Government.

The Mussoorie Arya Samaj.

The Awaz characterises Mr. Flowers' order prohibiting nagarkirtan in Mussoorie as a repetition of the gorashahi of the Company days, and says that it does not stand to reason that instead of punishing the Muslim hooligans who were inclined to make trouble, he should have made the innocent Arya Samajists suffer by depriving them of their just rights. The Lee Commission and Inchcape Committee have said that civilians are helpless, but they show by their acts that they can give lessons even to the barbarous rulers of the seventeenth century. It is a shame that such unreasonable, foolish and absurd orders should be passed under an English administrator of the twentieth century and that such irresponsible, unintelligent and incapable officials should be given the responsible post of District Magistrate and Collector. If the Government overlook this black act of Mr. Flowers they will add a very disgraceful blot to their already besmirched skirt. We appeal to His Excellency the Governor to cancel this order which is agitating not only the Aryas but the entire Hindu world.

Indians in Burma.

The Leader is of opinion that the Burma Expulsion of Offenders Bill is directed against Indians and that the strongest protest should be lodged against it. Proceeding it says:—Are the Government of India powerless against the Burma Government and to protect the interests of about a million Indians residing there? Another measure which is directed against Indians is the Sea Passengers Act. The Expulsion of Offenders Bill ought not to be proceeded with. But if it is passed it ought to be disallowed by the Governor General in Council.

Administration of justice.

The Hamdam questions the regularity and legality of the procedure adopted by the trying magistrate in dismissing the complaint of the overseer of the Calcutta Corporation against Mr. Justice Page. Once more a court of law has upheld the right of Englishmen to kick Indians. A Government whose law courts strangle justice and right to such an extent cannot prosper for long.

Indian Economic Inquiry Committee Report.

The Pioneer characterizes the report as a most astonishing document and says :—The recommendations made envisage the collection, at vast expense, of masses of statistics, most of which would be unreliable, while attempts to collect them would in many cases be strongly objected to by the people concerned.

Social Reform.

The Signal takes strong exception to the introduction in the Indian Legislature of private Bills on Hindu social matters. It regards these bills as a new danger to Hindu society and says :—In the first outbreak of social revolution the people's wrath will fall on the head of the Government which alone, they will think, is responsible for all social legislations. A few more enactments of uncalled for social measures may create a conflagration which the Government will find beyond its power to extinguish.

The next Home Member.

A writer in the Haqiqat advises Muslims to migrate to Bengal or the Punjab if Raja Sir Rampal Singh is appointed Home Member.

Foreign affairs.

Criticizing British attitude with regard to the Mosul question, the Leader writes:—The British Government are pursuing a policy which may involve Britain in a costly war with Turkey. The Turks are anxious to come to a friendly understanding with Britain, but the British imperialists are not in the habit of making sacrifices in the interest of peace. The Aj says that if the Riffs carry out the threat to kill their wives and children rather than yield to the victors, they will not only make themselves immortal but will also cause a conflagration in the world which will not subside without destroying the white supremacy root and branch. The same paper writes that the determination of the Iraq Government to usurp Mosul with the help of the British Government has given rise to a serious situation. But it remains to be seen whether the British electorate which overthrew Mr. Lloyd George for his territorial designs in Turkey will like to be engaged in a war with that country in order to obtain Mosul for King Faisal. Referring to the report that the Spanish soldiers paraded through a street with the tongues and ears of the fallen Riffs spiked on their bayonets, the Mansur condemns all the European nations as barbarous. The tyrannical and destructive atrocities perpetrated by British airships upon the tribes on the north-western frontier of India and the northern frontier of Mesopotamia will always remain an ugly blot on the face of civilization and humanity. The airships of France and Spain are indulging in the same tyrannies and bloodshed in Syria and Morocco. Even the American airmen co-operate with the French in such destructive deeds. The West which professes to be civilized is now unsurpassed in ferocity and barbarism and the time has come for Divine wrath to overtake the haughty and Nero-like Europeans in order to free the oppressed nations from their hands. The Hamdam apprehends an Anglo-Turkish war over the Mosul question and says that with France, Spain and America operating against the Riffs, Britain also will take her share in the crusade by declaring war against Turkey. This war will extend from Mosul and Mesopotamia to the Hedjaz, Syria and Palestine and thence through Egypt to Tripoli, Tangier and Morocco. Is the Muslim world prepared for this crusade? In the opinion of the Najat war is inevitable as the International Tribunal, being a mere instrument in the hands of the British, will decide in their favour and the Turks are determined to have their just rights in Mosul respected. The British are trying to appease France by replacing Emir Faisal so that they may have a chance to rob and subjugate others, but the Turks and Russians will prove very terrible foes. A writer in the Haqiqat opines that the present warfare in the Hedjaz is a result of the diplomatic intrigues of Europe and the proposed Indian Hedjaz deputation should therefore proceed viâ Afghanistan, Persia, and Turkey so as to be able to sound public opinion in these countries and thus baulk their enemies in their designs to create further mischief. The Medina contends that both during the Koweit Conference and after Ibn Saud saved Arabia from British designs and hopes that in his cooler moments M. Hasrat Mohani will be able to reconsider his attitude towards him.

Music before mosques.

The discussion of the question of stopping music before mosques continues to be an absorbing occupation for the Press. A number of Hindu papers emphasize the need of resorting to satyagraha in order to assert Hindu religious rights. A writer in the Indian Daily Telegraph commends the action of the Nagpur Hindus in preparing to offer satyagraha on this question and says:—Of one thing there can be no doubt hereafter: the Hindu Sabha leaders must devise some means of safeguarding Hindu rights other than that of waiting on deputations on the Deputy Commissioner. There is enough spirit among the Hindu youths of Lucknow ; only leaders are wanting to lead them to satyagraha. I wish this spirit of satyagraha will be inculcated in our youths. Referring to the Dasehra trouble at Lucknow; the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—A deep wound has been imparted to the Hindu religious sentiment which any conscientious district magistrate, placed in position of trust and responsibility equally above all warring castes and creeds, ought to regret. To the Hindus, any prolonged controversy is of no avail; they must strive to rise in organized form under capable leadership and assert their force and power on the official mind, even as the Muslims have done. The Patriot writes :— The trampling of Hindu rights is not confined to one place. What is the real motive of the Government in throwing the Hindus overboard? Will it be advantageous to the Government to show partiality towards the Muslims and treat Hindu religious rights and sentiments with defiance, simply because the Hindus are by nature peaceful and law-abiding? The Anand contends that when the Musalmans only demand the stopping of Hindu music before mosques at the prayer time and of no other noise, it is clear that their demand is not free from mixed motives. Owing to their aggressive or blatant attitude officials too yield to them. It is impossible for the Hindus to respect the feelings of Muslims at the cost of their own religious sentiments. The Hindus will do well to stop their processions rather than take them out under humiliating restrictions. Referring to the Dasehra troubles at Allahabad, Aligarh and Lucknow, the Bhavishga writes :—The officials of these places were cowed down by the strength of the Muslims. They perhaps thought that the Hindus were weak and peace-loving and would remain quiet, whereas Muslims would become uncontrollable. But how long will Hindus bear such blows? If the United Provinces Government wants to give proof of its love of justice and good administration it should institute full inquiries into the cases of Lucknow, Aligarh and Allahabad and issue proper orders for officers who may be found guilty. The Aj deplores the non-observance of the Dasehra festival at several places and says that it is the Hindu community alone which remains peaceful despite such serious injury to its religious feelings. But higher authorities should take a lesson from this. If such incidents repeatedly occur the popular belief in the impartiality of officials in religious matters will be undermined. The question of music before mosques is entirely a new one and it creates not only ill-feeling between Hindus and Muslims but also deals a blow to the policy of religious neutrality of the bureaucracy. In another article the same paper remarks : —Can imprudence go further than this, that the majority of Indian Muslims should think that the good of Islam lies in isolating themselves from other Indian communities and particularly in fighting with the Hindus even after seeing that some of the independent Muslim countries are being attacked and crushed by European nations? The Hindu Sarvaswa remarks that this year the Dasehra festival did not pass off peacefully, as the demoniacal bureaucracy could not tolerate the sight of a dependent people celebrating the victory of their hero, Lord Ramchandra. Besides, there was the kindness of the Muslims about whom experienced men have said : " No one is meaner than a Muslim." The dereliction of duty displayed by the authorities at Allahabad, Lucknow and other places by resorting to the reprehensible section 144 is more than enough to convey a lesson to the timid Hindus. It was the duty of the Hindus to violate the orders which stood in the way of the observance of their religious obligation. The Garhwali says that it is a sign of weakness that the Hindus yield to unjust orders placing restrictions on their religious processions. Hindus have forgotten the significance of the Vijayadashmi festival and hence they are insulted. They should learn even to sacrifice their life for their religion. If they had not cared for section 144 in the protection of their religion Government would not have misused it. A correspondent writing in the same paper deplores that interference in religious matters on the part of Muslims as evidenced during the last Dasehra at several places has shattered all hopes of unity between Hindus and Muslims and on the contrary has been creating ill-feeling and distrust between them. If the Hindus were strong and united to-day like the Musalmans, the authorities, who are only influenced by organized power, would never have dared to pass orders insulting and humiliating to them. So long as Hindus are not organized their future will remain dark and gloomy. The Sahas contends that in the face of Muslim aggressiveness in religious and political matters no one can maintain that Muslims are anxious for the emancipation of the country. The Hindus will do well to make themselves strong enough to protect their rights and let the Muslims understand that their ignorance and fanaticism far from injuring the Hindu community, will prove harmful to themselves. In the course of an article under the heading "How the interests of Hindus will be served," the Abhaya writes:— To-day Hindus are seen being robbed and beaten from all sides. In Hindustan Hindus are deprived of their political and religious rights. What an injustice it is that in the case of others a right is recognised where none actually exists but in the case of Hindus their rights are ignored. This gives a correct idea of the sense of justice and far-sightedness of the white god. In this world it is seen that the adage "Might is right" generally prevails. . . Those who, guided by self-interest, hope to secure their welfare by making friends with goondas are courting a speedy death. The bureaucracy thinks that by satisfying Muslims in every way at present and setting them against Hindus it will continue to rule over India peacefully for ever. This is a great mistake on its part. We can say confidently that the hooliganism of Muslims will some day or other become the cause of the ruin of Englishmen themselves. Blinded by self-interest the bureaucracy does not see the storm coming over its head. But the day is near when the fire of the sighs of the Hindus will reduce the Lanka (the kingdom of Ravan) of the bureaucracy to ashes and the demon army which has secured its friendship will also be destroyed . . . The time has come for Hindus to come forward with double-edged sword on the field and after fighting with internal and external enemies establish their rule. In this alone lies the welfare of the Hindus. The Tohfa-i-Hind protests against the order of the District Magistrate of Saharanpur forbidding music before mosques during Ramlila processions and says: Such an order is not only against the established custom but is also an unjust interference with the religious rights of the Hindus, amongst whom it has caused great unrest. The Bir Hindu denies that music can disturb Muslims during prayers, as their prayer is more in the nature of a physical drill with its constant genuflections, and concentration of mind is unattainable in it even if it be performed in the silence of a vast desert. It is not known to what length this demand for stoppage of music before mosques may proceed and this new Muslim movement is fraught with dangerous possibilities. So far only the Muslim goondas had put forward this demand, but now that it is being supported by educated Muslims also, the situation is becoming serious enough in all conscience. Only the other day a Muslim objected to Hindu funeral music before a mosque and was silenced only when struck by the sweeper who was beating the drum. Hindus should realize that there is now a triangular contest going on in India between Hindus, Muslims and Britishers and they should develop diplomatic skill so as to be able to negotiate matters to their maximum advantage. The Hindustani says that from the Muslim attacks on Hindu religion and honour during the Dasehra week and the official indifference in the matter it appears that the Government of India are following a settled policy of favouring the Muslims and ignoring the Hindus. The Muslim attacks must be boldly repulsed and if representations fail, satyagraha should be offered to Government. We must also warn Government that it was the Hindus and Sikhs who saved the Empire during the great war and it would not do to ignore the Hindus just now if they want their aid as they must, in a future war. A writer in the Mashriq complains that Hindus are determined to disturb Muslims with processional music while they are offering their prayers in their mosques. The Muslims should now insist on fifty per cent. representation in all elective bodies or ask Government to resume all self-governing powers so far granted to the people. The Medina says that failing in their efforts to get cow-killing stopped, the Hindus now insist on music before mosques in the hope that Muslims may consent to stop cow-killing in return for the Hindus stopping music. But this alone will not mend matters as the Hindus have really decided to expel the Muslims from India. Muslims are beset by two enemies; the designing Hindus on the one side and the Western capitalists on the other. They should strive for India's freedom while safeguarding their special rights. They should, however, be very circumspect and tolerant, as the Hindus want to incite them into riots in order to be able to crush them in the law courts. Referring to Dr. Moonje's Akola speech in which he is reported to have advised the Hindus to take up the rod to secure their rights from Muslims, the paper says that the doctor has exposed the secret Hindu conspiracy to oust Muslims from India and Muslims should reply to him with Mahmudi and Durrani courage. The Aiena holds the Hindus responsible for the Aligarh riot and says that the Hindus cunningly want the Muslims to stop cow-sacrifice in return for their stopping music. Let the Hindus have music before mosques to their heart's content. The Najat sees in the Aligarh riot a Hindu attempt to exterminate Muslims and tauntingly remarks that Hindus threw brickbats from roofs like women. The paper suggests that Mr. Malaviya and his followers should have a pitched fight with the Muslims in the open field. The Hindustani says that the Muslim attack on the Hindu procession at Aligarh was premeditated and the work of an organized committee known as the Tabligh-i-Islam as is shown by the collection of brickbats on the roofs of Muslim houses on the route. Muslims were repeatedly heard saying a few days before the occurrence that as all the local officials were Muslims, they should make the most of this circumstance. The Collector's order fixing the times for the procession was not notified before the riot, otherwise the Hindus would never have disobeyed official orders and there would have been no riot. Even now Muslims disobeying emergency regulations are not punished. It is feared that the Muslim rioters will not be arrested. The Awaz is not satisfied with the transfer of the Muslim Collector from Aligarh and says that he is thoroughly imbued with the virus of anti-Hindu bias. He must be either dismissed or degraded after due inquiry. In another article the paper complains that Hindus have been in a sorry plight during the régime of Sir William Marris. Since his assumption of charge their throats have been cut at Saharanpur, Gonda, Agra, Shahjahanpur, and a number of other places. They were deprived of their life-long earnings in a trice and women were forcibly violated. The lives, property and honour of Hindus are being attacked, but the Governor has taken neither executive nor legislative action to protect them and has thus proved his incapacity. During Sir Harcourt Butler's time both the Ministers were Hindus but now one Minister is a Muslim and the Muslim Home Member has been made Vice-President of the Executive Council. Muslims will have a good time of it during his régime.

Congress politics.

The Aj is not satisfied about the utility and propriety of the changes introduced into the Congress by the Patna meeting of the All-India Congress Committee. It was not proper for a committee of about one hundred persons to entrust the control of an All-India institution like the Congress into the hands of a particular party. The All-India Congress Committee has abused its powers in making such a serious change in the constitution of the Congress. The Congress at Cawnpore will do well to express its dissatisfaction at this change. The policy of giving general power of attorney to the swaraj party to execute all business in the name of the Congress, specially when its members have no right to propose any change in the swarajist policy is altogether reprehensible and deserves to be abandoned immediately. It has closed the doors of the Congress to all other parties. In another article the same paper protests against the decision of the All-India Congress Committee that Congressmen should wear khaddar on the occasion of Congress functions as a fresh bar against the entry of liberals and nationalists into the Congress and as detracting from the national character of that body. The Hindi Kesari remarks that to the swaraj party belongs the credit of re-converting the Congress into a political party. We are not opposed to the establishment of the All-India Spinners' Association. The party which favours the charkha programme must be allowed to have its own way. They are mistaken who hold that the Congress has been sold away into the hands of the swaraj party. The doors of the Congress are not closed against any party which signs its creed. The Medina says that with its surrender to the swaraj party and the secession of Mr. Gandhi the death knell of the Congress has been sounded. The Hamdam and the Sada-i-Muslim welcome Mrs. Sarojini Naidu's election as president of the Congress and hope that she will be able to ease the communal situation.

Viceroy's speech.

Commenting on the speech delivered by the Viceroy at the farewell banquet given in his honour by the Indian community of Simla, the Leader writes: "The Liberals minutely and carefully scrutinized the pompous utterance of the Secretary of State but they were not endowed with enough 'political sagacity' to discover the 'generous gesture' that lurked therein. Who is to be the judge of the generosity of the gesture—the people or the 'trustees'? Was this represented by the extremely vague official resolution which wanted the Assembly to accept the principles underlying the majority report of the Muddiman Committee, in spite of the almost unanimous condemnation of that report by Indian public opinion?"

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—"It would seem that the official in India has exhausted his stock of statesmanship and is left to repeating the meaningless word 'co-operation'. . . To-day, when the ears of the United Provinces ring with the painful sound from the aching chains on tried Congress workers, this Viceregal appeal for good-will and co-operation comes with cruel mockery. There can be no good-will and co-operation between a people pledged to win swaraj as their birth right and a Government that holds it back and flaunts instead the charter of the sword."

Indian Economic Inquiry Committee report.

The Pioneer characterizes the proposals made by the Committee as in the main impracticable and sometimes grotesque. "It is, indeed, almost impossible to comprehend how two gentlemen possessing an acquaintance with Indian conditions could have committed themselves to a number of propositions which are seriously put forward in this report. . . Since the Government was first infected with the craze for inquiries we have had many strange reports. But none has approached that of the Economic Inquiry Committee." The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—If the Government should pigeonhole the Visvesvaraya proposals it will lay itself open to the charge that it shudders to face the dire picture such an inquiry must place before the world—after over hundred years of British rule, the people being in the depths of unemployment and poverty. For the Indian Legislature to turn back from the proposals on the score of cost would be to make the sorry confession that it has not realized the economic backwardness of the country. . . All that the Economic Inquiry Committee have asked is to start kilns that would produce the bricks with which the future Indian nation is to be built. The Oudh Akhbar deplores that instead of doing anything useful, the Committee decided to burden the poor Indian tax-payers further by suggesting the establishment of a permanent economic inquiry department at an enormous cost.

The Bombay textile industry.

The Hindi Kesari says that the Government is wholly responsible for the closing down of the Bombay mills and the consequent unemployment of labourers, for it refused the just demand of the mill-owners to abolish cotton excise, though it willingly granted increase of pay to fat-salaried civilians according to the recommendations of the Lee Commission. The Vartman urges that it is the duty of both the mill-owners and the Government to appoint a commission to inquire into the existing situation and, in the meantime, to make suitable arrangements for the maintenance of the mill-hands. The paper, however, opines that a permanent solution of the problem can only be found in the nationalisation of the industry and asks the Government to take steps in this direction. The Najat denounces the capitalists for their cold indifference towards the sufferings of the mill-hands. The Oudh Akhbar urges Government to remit the excise duty and to arbitrate between the mill-owners and labourers on strike and holds that otherwise it will be responsible for the disorders that will follow as a result of the prolongation of the crisis.

The External Capital Committee's report.

The Aj says that unless external capital is controlled, protective tariff will only benefit foreigners to the loss of India and heartily endorses the suggestion of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya that when the policy of protecting industries by means of protective tariff and direct bounties has been decided upon the Government should see that those who benefit from this policy are Indians. In another article the same paper says:—We are not opposed to the borrowing of capital from foreign countries on a fixed rate of interest, provided it is utilized here in productive work, the profits accruing therefrom, excepting the interest, remains in the country and Indians are afforded opportunities of acquiring training and business experience. The unhampered exploitation of Indian's natural resources by foreigners cannot but result in immense loss to the country. The Oudh Akhbar disagrees with the findings of the Committee in favour of external capital and says that it is not at all needed when sufficient internal capital is available for the development of Indian industries. The Government of India should now discourage external capital and should no longer discriminate in favour of British capitalists.

Political propaganda.

Emphasizing the need for self-government in India the Patriot writes:—Even under Muslim rule India was not in such an impoverished condition as at present; for under British rule the drain on the wealth of India is simply staggering. Once the richest country in the world, India is now the poorest. . . The national self-respect of India demands that she should become self-governing. The Aj says:—

We do not attach the least value to the lip-sympathy expressed by the British Labour Conference in recognizing the aspirations of Indians. The Black Act of Bengal shows what sort of active sympathy can be expected from the Labour party. So long as the well-being of the Empire is regarded as consisting in the autocratic government of India, no British party will side with us. We must realize that our destiny lies in our own hands and we must cease looking up to others for our salvation. The Vartman remarks that the difference between a dependent and an independent country becomes glaring when one compares the salary of Ghazi Mustafa Kamal Pasha with that of a sub-divisional officer in India. The same paper says that if the Secretary of State for India really wants to fulfil his promise made in the House of Lords on July 9, he should accept the small demand of the Assembly which was presented through Pandit Motilal Nehru and which is Dominion home rule on a very small scale only. For our part, we consider it impossible that Indians will get swaraj as a gift. They can however easily attain it if they are unitedly determined to take it and are prepared to make all sorts of sacrifices for it.

The Kakori train dacoity case.

Commenting on the recent arrests in U. P., in connexion with the Kakori train dacoity, the Sainik remarks:—Seeing how respectable and distinguished persons are being arrested at the slightest instance of the police, no one can consider himself safe from the manœuvres of the police. What is it if not a conspiracy of the police? Are we having a taste of the governorship of an ex-policeman? The Sada-i-Muslim objects to the manner in which Mr. Sitla Sahai was openly taken through the Lucknow station and says that if the other accused are taken in the same manner the identification proceedings will become a farce, as the railway officials will have every opportunity of recognizing them. Either they should be brought to Lucknow jail in closed motors or they should be identified in the very jails in which they are confined at present. Anyway the investigating police officials should not be afforded any opportunity of seeing them. The Hindustani finds it hard to believe that such respectable men could be guilty of dacoity and wonders whether this is only a device to crush the Congress. The insulting manner in which respected Congressmen are being treated will rouse great feeling in the country unless Government succeeds in proving that they are really guilty.

Indians in Burma.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—We must express surprise that certain liberal newspapers should still hug fondly to the hope that the Government of India may refuse assent to the recent anti-Indian legislation that was passed by the Burma Legislative Council. We are not at all sure whether the Government of India itself is not behind this wonderful conception to drive a wedge between Burma and India lest the martial races of Burma should be heated to any inconvenient degree in its struggle for swaraj by contact with the live-coal of Indian nationalism....The British in this country are, at present, engaged in consolidating their power. They were startled by the non-co-operation movement and by the wonderful response to it from one end of the country to the other—Burma included. The Government have had to act promptly. They have done it. They have succeeded in driving a wedge between the communities. They are now driving the wedge between countries.

Election to local bodies.

The Sainik remarks that by fixing the dates for the municipal and district board elections in December the provincial Government has deliberately and without any cause done an injustice to Congressmen. By the indiscriminate arrest of Congress workers in connection with the Kakori train dacoity it has caused great injury to both the Congress and the election preparations. We openly challenge the Government that if it has any courage left let it fix the elections in the last week of January, release our brave soldiers and then measure its strength with the Congress in the open with the help of its supporters and see who wins in the elections.

Indians in the Viceroy's Council.

Referring to the Viceroy's "glowing tributes to the worth and work of every retiring Indian member of his Executive Council," the Leader writes:—The Indian members of the Viceroy's Council have, by the satisfactory manner in which they have discharged their difficult responsibilities, made out a strong case for an increase in the number of Indians in the Governor-General's Council. Surely, Lord Reading, after his happy experience of the work of his Indian colleagues, ought to support such a demand.

Foreign affairs.

The Aj writes:—It appears that the Riffs will soon have to surrender. The demon of white civilization will laugh in their country and the demoniacal League of Nations will inwardly feel happy at this spectacle. If there is anything like righteousness in the world and if any just God is its director, the blood of the Riffs will not go in vain. It will further awaken the non-white world and ultimately break the Western fetters. The Vartman refers to the enormous sacrifices made by the Koreans, the Riffs and the Turks to secure their freedom, and remarks that one is mistaken if one thinks that a powerful nation will grant freedom to its subject countries. Rights were never secured by people without risking their lives. The lovers of freedom should realize this truth. The Muslim press is unanimously condemning the British attitude towards the Mosul question. The Medina says that Mr. Amery is proving an apt advocate of British imperialism and is employing every lie, deceit, chicanery and trick necessary to accomplish his purpose. The manner in which facts are being distorted is really painful. Mosul is necessary for the existence, prestige, honour and political progress of Turkey. From the legal and ethnological standpoint also it belongs to Turkey. Under the guise of sympathy for Mesopotamia, but in reality to secure the oil, Mr. Amery wants to tack Mosul to Mesopotamia. It is a pity that this sufferer from land-hunger, this English beast of prey, instead of plainly saying that he wants oil and is, therefore, ready to deprive Turkey of an integral part, talks of the promises and pacts of Britain. Granted that Britain has made a pact with Mesopotamia to cling to her for ever, what canon of justice permits of her depriving Turkey of all her rights? If Turkey has to draw the sword to guard herself against this encroachment the responsibility will lie on England. England wants to take advantage of the schism in the Islamic world owing to the Nejd-Hedjaz controversy and to avenge herself on Turkey for the Greek defeat. Indian Muslims should deeply ponder over this. The Haqiqat accuses Britain of thirst for Mosul oil and says that while the Turks are really prepared for war the British are only bluffing as they have not yet been able to recover from the exhaustion of the last war. The paper hopes for reasonableness on both sides as a war would be ruinous. The Hamdam apprehends that the International Tribunal also will be influenced by the pratings of Mr. Amery, but says that Turkey will not submit to the all-embracing British influence. Turkish might has been proved on the fields of the Dardanelles and the Kutul Amara and this awakened country will not succumb to British diplomacy either. Will Britain hazard a war when all countries from Morocco to China are up in arms against the West and want to get rid of its domination? The Muslim press continues to watch with sympathy the struggle of the Riffs against France and Spain. Commenting in the Hamdam on the speeches at the recent Hedjaz Conference at Lucknow, the Taluqadar of Pariyawan scouts the idea of Britain being in league with Ibn Saud in the desecration of holy places in Arabia, and says:—Britain respected the sanctity of Muslim holy places in India even during the days of non-co-operation, though there is in the country another community hostile to Muslims. How can Britain be so foolish as to countenance desecration in a purely Muslim country? The paper disagrees with the writer on the question of British regard for Muslim sentiments and cites the instance of Mr. Montagu's resignation, alleging that it was demanded by Mr. Lloyd George's Ministry simply because he favoured a more pro-Turkish policy out of deference to Indian Muslim opinion. A writer in the Haqiqat alleges that the foreign policy of Ibn Saud is under the control of Britain and he is therefore bound to be disliked by Muslims. The Sewak holds that the destruction of Muslim shrines in Arabia by Ibn Saud is an instance of divine vengeance for the destruction of the temple of Somnath by the Muslim conquerers of India.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Communal recrimination and impassioned appeals for Sangathan and tanzeem have become the main feature of the vernacular press. The Indian Daily Telegraph strongly criticizes the speech recently made by Sahibzada Aftab Ahmad Khan at Lucknow and says :—The Hindus have now probed the depth of the Muslim mind and their salad days of Khilafat time, when they sacrificed their lives and property for the Muslim cause. They have now realized that all avenues to unity are blocked, and if there can be any passage, it is only by making themselves strong, by uniting their scattered elements and by organizing their efforts to convert heterogeneous Hinduism into a homogeneous one. The Sahibzada's assertion that the Hindus want to trample the Muslims is far from truth. It is the Muslims who want to deprive the Hindus of their legal and just claims, who deny their religious rights and privileges and try to reduce them to a subordinate position to themselves. They wish to assert their dominance over the Hindus. Be it Kohat or Panipat, Lucknow or Allahabad, their aim is to restrict Hindu religious liberty by force, by the "khushamad" of the officials and by every other possible means. The Arya Mitra complains that the printed notices of the Provincial Tabligh Conference to be held at Agra are full of inflammatory matter likely to lead to the breach of public peace and urges Government to take notice of them. The Shankar complains that this year Muslims objected to the manner in which Dasehra processions are taken out, and that Government siding with them imposed restrictions which are an interference with the religion of the Hindus. But it is no use complaining against Government which is interested in widening the gulf between the two communities to strengthen its own foundations. Hindus and Muslims have both to live in this country and they should realize that mutual forbearance should be the motto of their conduct and they should respect the religious customs of each other. The Abhyudaya remarks that nobody has gained by the application of section 144 in the city. The authorities should realize that by such acts of theirs they are not promoting the good-will of the Hindus towards Government and their confidence in its love of justice. If the Muslims and the authorities come to think that it will be courting serious trouble to provoke the Hindus they will begin to behave differently towards them. Hindus should have no fear of death or of suffering in the assertion and protection of their religious rights. If they wish to remain alive under the present conditions they ought to do to Muslims as the Muslims do to them. While Muslims are pre-occupied with the questions of music before mosques and arti the fate of Islam is being decided in Mosul, Iraq, the Hedjaz, Mecca and Medina. In the end nothing will be left for them but to beat their head and breasts. The Arya Mitra regrets that while Muslim leaders went to Aligarh to inquire into the situation created by the riot and to reassure the Muslims, no Hindu leader did so. It urges that the cases arising out of the riot should be tried by a judge belonging neither to the Hindu nor the Muslim community. In the course of an article in the Shankar God is made to say that He Himself created zeal among the Wahabis so that they may abolish idolatry in Islam and destroy those Muslims who do not act up to His teachings and have no respect for the religious sentiments of others. The Krishna accuses the Muslims of being ever ready to pick up quarrels with the Hindus and rebukes the latter for giving up the observance of Ramlila functions because of orders prohibiting music before mosques. Hindus all over India should have suspended their local performance of Ramlila and gone to Allahabad and revived its sanctity as Tirtharaj (king of shrines) by observing Dasehra there and cheerfully undergoing sacrifices demanded by the occasion. The Awaz complains that though Hindus form 88 per cent. of the population in United Provinces which are a great Hindu centre and contain numerous Hindu places of pilgrimage, owing to the pro-Muslim policy of the Government they are in a minority in the gazetted ranks in almost every department. It denounces in strong language the attitude of the six Muslim district magistrates in the province and says that wherever they have been posted there have been disturbances in which Hindus have not only suffered loss of property, but have also been openly deprived of their lives and honour. In this province it is the Hindus who stand most in need of protection of life and property, but Muslim officials predominate. Does this not seriously affect Hindu interests ? The Hamdam regrets that influenced by Hindu propaganda Government transferred the Muslim district magistrate from Aligarh. By such transfers Government will be unable to establish the prestige of its officers in the public eye and cannot prepare Indians for Swaraj. It would mean that the people are justified in distrusting officers of their own nationality on critical occasions, and such situations can be handled only by European officers. A thorough inquiry should be made into the conduct of the military police, and if the allegations against them are found to be true, deterrent punishment should be inflicted on the guilty. The Sada-i-Muslim sees in the resolution in support of music before mosques passed at the Delhi meeting of the Hindu Maha Sabha evidence of the dangerous mentality of the Hindus and the bigotry and animosity of the Sabha. Not only has permission to play music before mosques been demanded as a political and religious right, but the Muslims have been accused of using force and seeking the aid of Government and thus a detestable war has been declared against the Muslims and Government. When Mr. Abul Kalam Azad consented at Nagpur to concede to the Hindus the right of music before mosques it was thought that in return for this exhibition of fellow-feeling and toleration by Muslims the Hindus would waive that right. But true to their traditions they have made the Nagpur award a pretext to press their right for making noise before mosques. Anyway the Nagpur compromise cannot be binding now that Dr. Moonje is urging his followers to take up the rod against the Muslims. The Hindus have no right to insist on anything which disturbs Muslims in their prayers, but if they contend that their processional music is as important as azan or prayer, then the Muslims also should have freedom to sacrifice cows publicly. The Nizam-i-Alam has a poem complaining that the Hindus have resolved to perpetrate excesses on Muslims and to destroy mosques and raise temples in their places in order to please their god Mahadeva. But this will all prove futile and Muslims will never leave India. The Medina complains that Hindus regard themselves as polluted by the touch of Muslims, try to exclude them from the public services and look upon them as foreigners. In order to strengthen the foundations of its rule, the British Government has introduced text-books of history which inflame Hindu feelings against the Muslims and incite them to act towards them (Indian Muslims) just as Queen Isabella of Castile and King Ferdinand of Aragon acted towards the Spanish Muslims. On account of their aloofness from the Muslims the Hindus have never been able to appreciate Muslim culture, and during their short period of supremacy after the decline of the Moghul Power they committed numerous acts of vandalism even towards Muslim works of art. The Hindus are utilizing their powers in Government offices, Government educational institutions and as journalists, publishers, money-lenders and capitalists to crush the social and civic life of Muslims. In reality Hindu mentality is incapable of appreciating the blessings of liberty and political power. The generosity, large-heartedness and breadth of outlook which characterize brave and courageous races have been transmuted among Hindus into conspiracies, intrigues, secret activities, subterranean trickery and the like, and Hindus alone are responsible for the present communal tension.

Kakori train dacoity case.

Newspapers are strongly criticizing the arrests in connexion with the Kakori train dacoity and condemning the treatment accorded to the accused in jail. Most of the papers refuse to believe that the persons arrested could have perpetrated such a dastardly crime and opine that these arrests have been made in order to crush political agitation generally and the forthcoming Cawnpore Congress particularly. The Aj says:—The bureaucracy thinks that it is its birth-right and sacred duty to harass political workers in India by applying criminal laws against them. Hardly anybody would have been prepared to believe that the worst Government in this twentieth century could have the audacity to enforce murder and dacoity sections of the Indian Penal Code against respectable and peaceful Congress workers. The paper also strongly protests against the treatment meted out to the arrested persons such as the imposition of fetters, solitary confinement and prohibition of interview in jail, and says that it is quite clear from this that there is no law in this country and that the wishes of the authorities constitute the law. Such a condition cannot be removed without Swaraj. In another article the same paper remarks that the manner in which these arrests have been made shows that the provincial administration has at present been handed over to an officer of the Criminal Investigation Department and that other officials are mere puppets in his hands. The Bharat Jiwan opines that in view of the position, education and character of the arrested persons it appears impossible that they could have a hand in the dacoity. What is most striking in this connexion is the fact that the persons arrested are zealous Congress workers and the action against them appears to have been taken in order to render the Cawnpore session of the Congress unsuccessful. Everything should be done to defend them so that the tyrannies perpetrated on them after arrest may be fully exposed. The Sainik says that the action of the authorities in placing fetters on the arrested persons and keeping them in solitary cells is extremely inhuman, barbarous and reprehensible, and urges that so long as they are under-trial prisoners they should not be subjected to such restraints, but should be released on bail. The Prem remarks that no one can suspect even in dream that the respectable and distinguished persons arrested would commit such a reprehensible crime as dacoity. It is only possible under the administration of the foreign civilized Government of India which make so high professions of law and order that arrests can be made without giving reasons for them and that clothes of even children, women and other members of the family can be taken away. People suspect that these frightful preparations are being made to crush the Swaraj party and to render the Congress session unsuccessful. We welcome this repression. This indiscriminate action of the police will re-awaken the people and sinking their differences they will move forward to combat it. The Pratap writes: —We strongly condemn the autocratic, irresponsible and cruel manner in which the authorities are making these arrests. The effect of these arrests will be that people will be frightened and will keep away from the Congress. Every Congress worker should try to save his locality from such an effect. The Anand cannot believe that the respectable men arrested had a hand in the dacoity. It appears that the police having failed to capture the real culprits has had recourse to this strategem. The statement that Government wants to suppress political agitation under this pretext lacks justification, for political agitation at the present moment is at its lowest ebb and involves no risks to Government. The Medina says that if the activities of the Cawnpore Congress had to be crushed other weapons in the punitive armoury of Government could have been utilised. It is folly to arrest Congressmen simply because the dacoits were wearing Gandhi caps. In another article the paper inquires how Congressmen who are so closely shadowed by the police on their railway journeys could get an opportunity to take part in such a criminal conspiracy and says: —We protest against the indiscriminate arrests and gross ill-treatment of the accused and warn Government that they should be kept in comfort, as we are sure that unless they are accused of some other political offence they will be released after the Congress.

Political Propaganda.

In the course of an article on the forthcoming Diwali festival the Abhir Samachar writes :—O Diwali of the happy days of Ram rule, this country is now unfit to celebrate thee as all its elements, air, water, etc., have been vitiated by the stigma of slavery. Can that country celebrate the Diwali festival where the blood of crores of cows is shed every day and the best of whose men are taken away forcibly ? Is this the time of Shri Ram Chandra or Ravan, of peace or unrest, of Diwali or bankruptcy ? Under the heading "The police rule" the Sainik writes :—The police is the real ruler of the country. The Government has its own eyes, ears and brain, but it sees, hears and works with the eyes, ears and the brain of the police and sycophants. Government accepts the statements of the police and of sycophants as gospel truth . . . The arrests made in connexion with the Kakori train dacoity are the latest instance of police domination. The way in which these arrests have been made and the treatment which is being accorded to the under-trial prisoners only confirm the fact that there is absolute rule of the police in this country. The Prem says that for delivering India from political subjection it is necessary that the minds of its youths should be freed from the influence of foreign civilization. The greatest injury to India has been done not by foreign Government, but by foreign education. The system of education obtaining in the country at present has rendered its youths not only weak and indolent, but outlandish in spirit. If the minds of our youths could get rid of the influence of foreign civilization and they could begin to look at things from the Indian point of view, no power on earth could keep India in subjection for long. The Tohfa-i-Hind publishes a translation of a letter purporting to have been addressed to Maulana Mahomed Ali by the president of the Central Association of Russian Muslims in which the Bolsheviks are praised for eradicating tyranny from Russia, and it is said that the Russian Muslims enjoy full social and religious liberty. All revolutionary literature harmonises with Quranic teachings and the "Maulana" is asked to establish a literary society to spread the teachings of the Quran.

Indians in the Colonies.

Referring to the "public demonstrations of indignant protest against the monstrous wrong that is being attempted to be done on the top of the many and grievous injuries of which our oppressed countrymen of South Africa are already the victims at the hands of a Government and a community lost to all moral sense," the Leader writes:—We are sure the Government of India have the will to help, but we equally fear that they lack the strength to stand up for India's children overseas with manful courage that will scorn consequences . . . India must have Swaraj as a condition precedent to her ability to defend her honour and the self-respect of her children at home or abroad. The condition of Indians both at home and abroad is India's shame. To win Swaraj in order to get rid of the shame is India's duty. The Aj holds that the Asiatic Bill before the Union Parliament of South Africa aims at the ultimate expulsion of Indians from that country and remarks:—The brutal atrocities that are being prepetrated on our helpless bretbren and sisters in South Africa make our blood boil. We Indians, are known for our endurance, but even endurance has a limit. If we have any manliness in us we should not rest on our oars until we have avenged this injustice. Had India been free to-day there would surely have been a war between her and South Africa. Let us by our agitation warn the British authorities that India will not allow herself to be trampled in this manner.

New Home Member of the United Provinces.

Commenting on the appointment of the Hon'ble Lieut. Nawab Muhammad Ahmad Sa'id Khan of Chhatari as the next Home Member, the Leader writes:—"This is quite in keeping with the reputation of the present head of the United Provinces Government and the general tendency of Government to appoint men of varying degrees of public inutility very far from being either the most qualified persons for their office or the most acceptable to the people. Evidently able publicists, men with a mind and a will of their own, are altogether at a discount and only 'safe' men are wanted for the Executive Councils . . . . Of the Nawab of Chhatari himself, what shall we say? We do not expect that he would do better as a Home Member than he has done as a Minister . . . Nor can we expect that he would do better than his predecessor the Maharaja, whose inability to control his departments effectively the Indian public too well knows and the Legislative Council so often bemoans . . . There was no purpose in Parliament creating Executive Councils at a heavy cost to the tax-payers if such selections are to be the rule." In the course of a leading article under the heading "Muslim Raj in United Provinces," the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The appoinment of the Hon'ble Nawab of Chhatari as the next Home Member does not come to us as a surprise. The surprise would have been if Hindu claims had been accepted. For another five years the Executive Councillorship goes to another Musalman in a province predominantly Hindu. This policy, we believe, is deliberate. If the Hindus had been an organized community, the Government would not have thought even for the first appointment to this job of a Musalman. Now that even the second chance should have been denied to Hindus is certainly a cause for grievance to the community which no philosophy can assuage. The Hindu humiliation will be complete if the new Minister should also be a Musalman.

Central Provinces Executive Councillorship.

The Leader is glad that by the action of Mr. Tambe in accepting an Executive Councillorship in the Central Provinces Government the country will be able to understand the Swaraj party better than it has done so far. "It is so evident that Mr. Tambe has simply used the country, the Swaraj party and the Legislative Council as mere conveniences that silence would become him better than explanations that do not explain anything but the indefensibility of his public conduct." Proceeding the paper says:—"As a piece of political tactics the offer of the appointment to him may redound to the credit of Sir Montagu Butler's head. It cannot be justified on the ground that the best available man or one of the best available men has been appointed. But in principle the appointment must be condemned. Has any one ever heard of the speaker of the House of Commons being lifted out of his chair and appointed a member of the Cabinet? . . . . The appointment of Judges of High Courts and Presidents of Legislative Councils in such offices is very unsound in principle and ought to be strongly deprecated by public opinion." The Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—The Swarajist president of the Central Provinces Legislative Council, one of the heroes who won the first battle of dyarchy against the bureaucracy, has just walked over to the satanic Government as one of its prominent limbs. Swarajist leaders from the north and the south and the east and the west are beating their breasts and tearing their hair in open indignation; they are shocked; they are surprised; they are bewildered. We are not. The action of the Swarajist who has begun to draw his four thousand a month is a logical corollary to the demoralization in which the Swarajists had of late openly begun to gloat and glory. The Bhavishya describes Mr. Tambe's acceptance of an Executive Councillorship as a horrible conversion of a Swarajist and remarks :—Mr. Tambe has committed a horrible breach of faith with the people. He has extinguished the glory of the Central Provinces Swarajists, has cast a blot on the policy of the Indian Swaraj party and wiped off the faith which the people in this country had in that party. To-day the Governor of the Central Provinces has succeeded in his diplomacy and Mr. Tambe has succumbed to his wizardry. The Aj says that Mr. Tambe did not act properly in accepting the office of the Executive Councillor without having resigned the Presidentship of the Central Provinces Council and his membership of the Swaraj party. Pandit Motilal Nehru also acted with indecent haste in openly condemning him. The path followed by Mr. Tambe is the same as was chalked out by Pandit Motilal Nehru, only the former has gone a little further on it.

Congress politics.

The Surya is dissatisfied with the decisions of the All-India Congress Committee meeting at Patna and remarks that far from infusing fresh life into the country the Congress is hastening day by day towards its grave. The Shakti says that while the restoration of the four-anna franchise by the All-India Congress Committee has opened the door of the Congress to those who were opposed to the yarn franchise, it has placed a fresh difficulty in their way by giving to the Swaraj party a general power of attorney to execute all the political work of the Congress. It would have been better if this question had been placed before the Cawnpore Congress instead of being decided by the All-India Congress Committee. The Aj says that the simultaneous arrest of several Congress-workers and the difficulty in the acquisition of land for the Congress pandal are proving to be the two most formidable obstacles in the way of the Cawnpore Congress. This question is not a local one, but affects the whole of the province. The Sitapur conference should give this question its foremost consideration. Referring to the Cawnpore Improvement Trust's refusal of land in the Civil Lines for the Congress pandal on the ground that the over-crowding due to the session of the Congress would adversely affect the sanitation of the adjoining bungalows which are mainly occupied by Europeans, the Pratap remarks that the South African spectacle is being witnessed in Cawnpore also. How can the "black men" dare to hold the Congress in the "white men's" quarters? We wish to warn the Improvement Trust and those persons who are placing obstacles in the way of the Congress Reception Committee that their efforts will go in vain. The Congress flag will be implanted on the land in the Civil Lines ward and the Congress session will be held there. The Hind-i-Jadid appeals to the public to supply a hundred workers for each Congressman arrested by Government to hamper the work of the Cawnpore Congress. Pandit Motilal Nehru's proposed unity conference should also be held immediately at Allahabad so that under the guidance of Mrs. Sarojini Naidu the Cawnpore Congress may be able to ratify its decisions and then the ruin of Government would be sure.

The Viceroy.

The Aj disapproves of the "exaggerated" compliments paid by Sir Muhammad Shafi to Lord Reading on the occasion of the farewell dinner given to him at Simla and says that it is not true to say that India will be grieved at his separation. No Governor-General within the last seventy years has caused so much injury to India as Lord Reading has done. The Vartman remarks that in his reply at the dinner Lord Reading emphasized the need for generous co-operation on the part of the Indian people. But he should know that Mahatma Gandhi has already declared that co-operation is the ultimate aim of non-co-operation. If the Government is really generous let it announce the date when Swaraj will be conferred on India and then behold the generous response of the Indians to the call for co-operation. The Hamdam thinks that Lord Reading's appeal for co-operation will fall flat on the country. The Council of State has rejected the Reforms resolution of the Assembly and Lord Reading spurns public opinion in spite of the fact that Mr. Patel has become the President of the Assembly and the Congress has abandoned non-cooperation. We wonder what kind of co-operation will make the imperialistic British statesmen give up their "miserly attitude." Sir Muhammad Shafi's hope that Lord Reading will display "a liberal attitude" at the time of his departure is vain. How can one who has been persistently trampling nationalist sentiments suddenly change? The Haqiqat acknowledges Lord Reading's services to Islam in connexion with Turkish and Afghan affairs, but doubts that he will be able to persuade the British Government to revise the Reforms Act before 1929.

Administration of justice.

The Leader deprecates the suggestion made by a newspaper and some police administration reports that magistrates should be directed to mete out adequate sentences in criminal cases, and says:—This is a counterblast to the demand of Indians for the separation of executive and judicial functions . . . If the judiciary are incompetent, the Government should improve the methods of recruitment. But any attempt, on their part or on the part of their officials to regulate the exercise of judicial discretion is calculated to produce an impression on the public mind that justice cannot always be got from law courts, or at least the impression that some courts are incompetent. If the Government do not see their way to separate the judicial from the executive functions, at least let them not seek to control or to interfere with the discretion of judicial officers.

Indians in Burma.

The Abhyudaya says that the Foreign Offenders' Expulsion Bill is intended to turn out Indians from Burma and is insulting and humiliating to Indians as a race. The Viceroy should refuse to give his assent to it. If Indians are to be treated so unjustly in a province of their own country, it is no use talking of getting their wrongs redressed in South Africa and other countries.

Foreign affairs.

The Medina is disheartened at the news of Riff reverses and says that though Abdel Krim may just now have to submit to the French terms, the time is close by when France and other European Powers will be involved in another terrible war which, God willing, will end the subjection and helplessness of the Islamic world. In another article the same paper urges at length the case of Turkey for Mosul and appeals to the League of Nations to allow the Turks to administer Mosul under its mandate. Britain has sufficiently wounded Muslim feelings by her high-handed policy in Egypt, Iraq, Hedjaz and Palestine and the fight with Ibn Saud which is inevitable over Akabah and Ma'an is bound to freshen these wounds. Besides, there is the Socialist and Labour opposition to any expensive schemes abroad and Britain would be well advised to think twice before deciding to measure strength with a determined and united Turkey reinforced by Russia. One Baqar Ali Najafi, a Muslim preacher, writing to the Oudh Akhbar from London, says that Britain is afraid that Ibn Saud may hamper her in her struggle with Turkey for Mosul by invading that portion of Iraq over which King Faisal holds only nominal sway and would very much like to take action against him. Indian Muslims should not, therefore, injure Turkey by appealing to Britain to interfere in the matter of Medina. They should rather appeal to the rulers of Afghanistan, Persia and Turkey to deal with this purely Muslim matter. The Medina supports Mr. Shaukat Ali's appeal for funds for the proposed Khilafat deputation to the Hedjaz as it believes that, if successful, it will solve most of the external and internal problems of Indian Muslims. The Sada-i-Muslim, on the other hand, thinks that it is a sheer waste of money to send any deputation to the Hedjaz just now as the true facts cannot be ascertained until peace is restored.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In the course of an article headed "Kidnapping" the Patriot writes:—"The mischievous propaganda started by the notorious Hasan Nizami of Delhi has taken a serious turn. Hardly a day passes without our noticing a case or two of kidnapping of Hindu women and children by not only Muslim badmashes and goondas, but also by men of standing and means, who are supposed to be very highly connected. The worst feature of this evil is that the Hindus do not stir themselves over the daylight robbery of their national stock." The paper then gives some specific instances of kidnapping and remarks:—"We are convinced that a regular propaganda is being carried on by the interested party for kidnapping Hindu women and children at different centres throughout the country. It is an open secret that the Juma Masjids at Delhi and Lahore are being used as headquarters of these propagandists. . . . We must do away with this mischievous Muslim propaganda of kidnapping women and children. There must be no mincing of matters or winking at hard facts in this matter of vital importance to the Hindu community." Referring to the non-celebration of Dasehra at several places owing to the Muslim objection to music before mosques, the Bharat Jiwan remarks that Hindus cannot sacrifice their rights one after another. They should now be ready to undergo sufferings for the protection of their rights. They shall have to bring their Muslim brethren to the right path by having recourse to satyagraha. The Bhavishya cites a number of instances in which, in its opinion, peaceful civil disobedience has been successful and says :--As Mahatma Gandhi has pointed out, satyagraha is the infallible weapon for redressing injustice and tyranny. The history of Gurukabagh is before us and it may repeat itself at Akola. Hindus of Akola, you have begun a hard battle for religion. If you remain unflinching to the last in the path of your duty your success will be assured. Discussing the causes of communal tension the Medina denies that Muslims slaughter cows merely to annoy the Hindus or to assert their communal individuality. The hide trade which is responsible for the slaughter of so many cows is controlled by Hindus themselves and this so-called obstinacy of the Muslims melted away in 1921 before the magic of Mahatmaji's persuasion. The truth of the matter is that the cry of cow-protection is only a blind for discrediting Muslims and inflaming Hindu prejudice against them and ultimately gaining political ascendancy over them. Muslims show obstinacy only in reply to Hindu obstinacy and there is nothing to complain about in this. The charge of factiousness brought against Muslims is absolutely untenable. The atrocities and bloodshed committed by the ill-omened and bigoted Christianity throughout the world are well-known, and it is the broadcast propaganda indulged in by this Christianity against the religion and morals of Muslims that has warped Hindu mentality. Muslims have been warlike because struggle is of the essence of existence. But to call them factious is a sad distortion of facts. Muslims are not to be blamed if they insist on their rights and should not be regarded as turbulent for this. In support of its own rights every community naturally regards the other as mischievous. But Hindus should note that the arbiter is a foreign Government, and if they want to throw off its yoke they should neither become mischievous themselves nor make others mischievous. Hindus being in a majority as well as more rich and educated the responsibility for India's serfdom lies mostly on them. Again, Hindus say that by demanding separate representation Muslims have perpetrated communal tension. Are Hindus altogether innocent in this connexion? Is it not because of their intolerance that the non-Brahmans and the depressed classes are demanding separate representation? Everybody realizes that separate representation must go, but that welcome day can be hastened only if the majority community imbibe the spirit of true toleration and realize what nationalism and patriotism really mean. We would advise Muslims also to see that their tanzeem and tabligh do not conflict with true nationalism. The Khilafat movement should be encouraged because it alone can accomplish the internal and external tanzeem of Muslims. In the fact that serious disturbances have occurred in the districts under the charge of Muslim Collectors the Hamdam finds justification for the assumption that these disturbances are intentionally caused in pursuance of a determined policy of the Hindus simply to discredit the Muslim authorities. The Medina also holds that the disturbances are the result of a regular conspiracy on the part of the sangathanists to punish the Muslims and to make a display of strength before them, and says that ultimately the Muslims will be assigned the same position as the shudras and chandals. Districts containing Muslim officers are specially selected for making trouble as the Muslim authorities, in order to show their impartiality, have to lean to the Hindu side and the Hindus then find it very easy to pursue their mischievous activities. In order to prove the Muslims to be guilty the Hindus resort to the most despicable and dishonest practices to further their propaganda. There is a disturbance. The Muslim officer, in order to show his impartiality and justness and afraid of Hindu clamour, specially trains his guns at Muslims and after the trouble is over arrests them in larger numbers. Propaganda is then started and as the administration is most susceptible to it, the Muslim officers are transferred and replaced either by Europeans or by Hindus. Now cases are started. Hindu lawyers volunteer for service, but Muslim vakils afraid of the Hindu officials do not come forward; the result is that Muslims are sent to jail and their properties fall into the hands of Hindu money-lenders. The Muslim Collector of Aligarh has been transferred. The sangathanist machine has been set in motion. Wait and see what happens. Sher Singh Shamim writing in the Muraqqa-i-Tasawwar complains that Muslims have shown no appreciation of Hindu tolerance on the occasion of Muharram and Bakr Id and have created disturbances on the occasion of the Dasehra by objecting to music before mosques. In reality they regard the Hindus as weak and contemptible and mistake tolerance for cowardice, so Hindus should descend into the arena like lions prepared for a fight. When the Hindus show their strength, oppressions will not be practised on them. Unity will come only when both are evenly matched.

Indians in the colonies.

The observance of the South African day has been the occasion for a fresh outburst of indignation at the treatment accorded to Indians in that country. The burden of all comments is that the only remedy for this is complete swaraj for India and, therefore, Indians should make united efforts to win it. The Leader writes:—That the Asiatic Bill should have been introduced by the South African Government shows that its sense of honour has been dulled and it cares nothing for the past pledges given to Indians. The latter are weak and helpless and cannot effectively retaliate and, therefore, the Government is not restrained by any sense of fear . . . If blinded by self-interest and racial arrogance the South African whites persist in their unrighteous course, they will sow seeds of hatred which will not benefit them. Commenting on the speeches on the South African day the Aj says:—Is it conceivable that the oppression on Indians in Crown and self-governing colonies could increase day by day if the Government of India discharged its duty properly? In the time of Lord Reading we are being crushed in our own country and our brethren in foreign countries are being deprived of all their rights. The problem of Indians abroad will only be solved along with the attainment of swaraj in India. If we continue quarrelling among ourselves and neglect the attainment of swaraj we are certain to receive kicks abroad. The Abhyudaya remarks that throughout the country meetings were held on October 11 to condemn the black laws of South Africa and the Government of India were asked to interfere seriously in the matter. It now remains to be seen whether that Government discharges its duty in accordance with the united voice of the country. Hitherto the policy of the Government of India with regard to South Africa has been extremely unsatisfactory. The attitude of the Union Government towards the Indians cannot be conducive to the good of the Empire. It should be considered to be the weakness of the Empire if one of its parts oppresses another and it does nothing to stop it. So not only in the interest of India but also in that of the Empire Lord Reading's Government should take up this question with greater zeal. It should plainly tell the Union Government that it can no longer put up with the humiliation of Indians. If that Government remains stubborn even then, it will become incumbent on the Government of India to adopt the policy of retaliation. So long as Indians remain slaves in their own home they can only express sympathy with their oppressed countrymen abroad. If they want to render any active assistance to them they should strive to break their own fetters of bondage with the least possible delay. Reviewing briefly the atrocities perpetrated upon Indians domiciled in South Africa and discussing the provisions of the Asiatic Bill the Vartman writes:—When we think of the nature of these provisions a terrible picture is conjured up before our imagination and our heart begins to tremble at the spectacle of drops of innocent Indian blood made to flow by the demoniacal tendencies, ruthlessness and utter selfishness of the whites. This is the limit of injustice and oppression. The thirst for blood has made the tongue of the whites so cruel that they are unmindful of their own national honour and religious obligations. The world may call them anything, their actions may be described as black deeds in future history, but they are determined to suck every drop of blood out of the Indian heart. If our "independent" power had been behind these helpless brethren of ours and if we could give a crushing reply to these wicked demons in human forms they would dare not scoff at our manliness by thus enchaining our brethren. Let us see what measures the British Government and the Government of India adopt to prevent these inhuman atrocities. The Bharat Jiwan exhorts Indians to boycott all British goods with a view to get the wrongs of their countrymen in South Africa righted. This weapon of boycott will prove even more effective than the non-cooperation movement. They will bring the Britishers, shopkeepers as they are, to their wit's end within two months if they touch them in their pockets through the boycott movement. The Medina reproduces Mrs. Sarojini Naidu's "stirring" message for October 11, and says that the orphaned sons of mother India cast far away from her loving lap into the thorny glades of South Africa are being crushed under white oppression. They are deprived of the fertile valleys and smiling uplands of South Africa and exiled. Their homes have been converted into jails and their markets have been turned into mourning houses. Indians are better off in Japan, France, America, China, Russia and in the French and Portuguese colonies than in the dominions controlled by Englishmen who claim to be the upholders of justice, impartiality, right and equality. It is only under the domination of the white-skinned worshippers of Kaiserism reared in the valley of the Thames and under the benign protection of the Emperor (sic) of Britain and India that Indians know no peace or comfort. To-day the helpless Indians of South Africa are being deprived of all civic rights. Licences are required for their shops. Permits are needed for their houses. Localities are fixed for their agriculture. Their trade is confined to certain ports. They do not enjoy rights of representation and cannot voice their claims. Can you, slaves, who live in India and who are ever ready to break one another's heads do nothing for these exiled brethren? Arise and become prepared for retaliatory measures. The united voice of the nation and country is to-day rousing you. Freedom is everyone's birth-right. Strive and make yourselves fit to receive this priceless gift from Government.

New Home Member of the United Provinces.

Comments on the appointment of the Hon'ble Lieutenant Nawab Muhammad Ahmad Sa'id Khan of Chhatari as the next Home Member are mostly communal in character. The Patriot sees no reason why the Hindu claims should have been ignored, except to show that the Hindus are at a discount with the Government. The Pratap remarks that it is no good commenting upon the appointment of the new Home Member from the communal standpoint. The appointment of a Hindu or a Muslim to this office does not make any change in the policy of the Government. We are neither pleased nor dissatisfied with the appointment of the Nawab of Chhatari. If during his term of office the Nawab is able to reduce the excesses of the jail and police authorities and to keep himself aloof from communal favouritism he will feel happy and relieved on the completion of his term. The Abhyudaya writes:—What was apprehended has happened and the laurel of the Home Membership has been placed on the head of the Nawab of Chhatari. We are not the least surprised at this selection. It is quite in keeping with the present policy of the rulers. What interest could the Governor have in asking some capable and independent-minded person of the province to accept this post? It was to his convenience to appoint a man who had no independent will and who considered it to be a matter for glory to be subservient to his wishes. The Sada-i-Muslim remarks that notwithstanding what bigoted Hindu and Sangathanist papers may say to the contrary the choice of the Nawab of Chhatari as Home Member is the best possible. The Haqiqat protests against the article on the subject headed "Muslim Raj", which has appeared in the Indian Daily Telegraph, and says that such mean-mindedness would never have been exhibited had the writer cared to go through the Civil List before penning the article. The paper hopes that the services of Nawab Muhammad Yusuf will not be ignored at the time of appointing the new Minister. The Medina points out that it would have really been a source of trouble both to Government and Muslims if a Hindu had been appointed as Home Member in a province where fifteen per cent. of the population is Muslim, especially when that officer has to control the police. The Nawab Sahib is very peace-loving and obliging and has been very successful as a Minister. He is in every way fitted for the new post, and it is to be hoped that he will follow a nationalist and impartial policy. The Hamdam observes that he has afforded ample evidence of his ability and impartiality during the last two years and can safely be expected to prove a successful Home Member. The Awaz regards the appointment as another favour shown to Muslims by Sir William Marris. It belittles the Nawab Sahib's abilities and status and says that he has been rewarded for accepting a dummy ministership at a time when no self-respecting person would care to look at it. It strongly resents the ignoring of Hindu claims and inquires why Hindu rajas and taluqdars, a thousand times superior to the Nawab in capacity, wealth and service to the State, were overlooked, especially when 88 per cent. of the population of the province is Hindu. Chhatari will accomplish whatever has been left undone by Mahmudabad in the matter of favouring Muslims in State appointments. Hindus are already inadequately represented in all departments and we forecast an anti-Hindu policy on the part of the Nawab of Chhatari.

The Kakori train dacoity arrests.

The Shakti says that an attempt is being made to throw obstacles in the way of the Cawnpore Congress by imparting a political complexion to the Kakori train dacoity. For our part we cannot describe these arrests as anything other than injustice. The Hindu Sarvaswa remarks that the action of the Provincial Government in arresting Congress workers in connexion with the Kakori train dacoity is not only unjust but also ignominious. Probably the dacoity and murder sections of the Indian Penal Code have been enforced against these Indian patriots on the assumption that they are determined to commit dacoity in broad daylight and seize swaraj from the bureaucracy by means of the weapon of non-cooperation. What else do these arrests indicate? The Aj opines that in view of the situation caused by the recent political arrests and the treatment meted out to him every thoughtful person will support the action of Mr. Damodar Das in resigning the visitorship of the local jails. This incident will also expose the farce of the co-operation of non-officials in official matters. The Awaz takes strong exception to the appointment of Qazi Ain-ud-din as Special Magistrate to try the Kakori dacoity case. While the accused are all Hindus this magistrate is an extremely bigoted, biassed and fanatical Muslim. The records of the Judge's Court of Meerut can testify to his dishonesty as a judicial officer. In the Kandhla (Muzaffarnagar) case the Sessions Judge and Mr. Darling had to report to the High Court about his (anti-Hindu) bias. Government should not, therefore, entrust the case to him as he will never do justice and the Hindu accused will suffer greatly. In another article the same paper appeals to the Hindu members of the United Provinces Council to save the Hindu accused from this incarnation of Aurangzeb. In view of his anti-Hindu record in the past it is like entrusting the cow to the butcher and still expecting justice for her. It is our personal experience that Qazi Ain-ud-din practises dishonesty in recording the evidence of witnesses. In yet another article the paper says that the Hon'ble Maharaja Sahib of Mahmudabad has filled the police generally and the Criminal Investigation department specially with Muslims. We strongly suspect the honesty of the Muslim C. I. D. The Muslims have levelled the first attack on the Gandhites who were advocating unity. It is a pity that Hindus alone are the victims of the Muslim C. I. D. The Krishna publishes an article from the pen of Lala Lajpat Rai who strongly criticises the way in which wholesale arrests have been made in connexion with the dacoity and regrets that the Indian Home Member should have allowed such treatment to be meted out to public workers of his province on mere suspicion.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an effusive, verbose and incoherent article addressed to the goddess of Diwali (Lakshmi) the Phakkar writes:—We do not welcome thee, although thou hast the eternal right of coming on this occasion. The possession of a right is not enough in this age which is the age of "Might is right." In this age he alone is entitled to utter the sacred word "right" who amidst the rattling of sword can raise roars of laughter. By ignoring the duty (dharma) pertaining to this age we are being humiliated, branded and trampled under foot for the last few centuries. It is because we have turned our faces away from the duty pertaining to this age that we are witnessing with the stolidity of the dead the spectacle of our women and children being kidnapped (lit. robbed) in broad daylight . . . . We cannot welcome thee in thy beautiful form, but thou art welcome in the grim form, riding a corpse and drinking blood incessantly. The Bharat Dharma ironically remarks:—It was neither the gloomy political condition of the country nor its poverty nor the bad state of its public health, but the prospect of an early separation with so popular a Viceroy as Lord Reading that marred the jollity of the Diwali festival this year. Those who characterise his administration as a failure labour under a delusion. During his régime the foundation of British authority has been strengthened, the feeling of loyalty has been awakened among the people, denominational organizations for the protection of sectional and communal rights have been started, the storm of Gandhian non-cooperation has been suppressed and the swarajists have become veritable co-operators. Long live Lord Reading!

The Indian Communist Conference.

Satya Bhakta, Secretary, Indian Communist party, writing in the Gharib, asks Indian communists to dismiss all fears regarding Government interference in the Indian Communist Conference at Cawnpore and try to make it a success. The Communist party is not a secret or revolutionary party. It aims only at the organization and amelioration of the condition of cultivators and labourers. So there is little chance of our coming into conflict with the Government for the present. If in spite of this Government interferes with this movement it will only strengthen it and cause further awakening among labourers. We do not think that Government will act so foolishly as to turn communists all the world over against it.

Relations between zamindars and kisans.

Replying to a letter of Dr. Vishva Nath Mukerji, President, Kisan Sabha, in the Indian Daily Telegraph laying all the blame for the present strained relations between landholders and cultivators on the rapacity of the former, the Oudh Akhbar remarks that the present tension is due solely to the new kisan movements which are inducing a spirit of rebellion and distrust towards the zamindars. No zamindar can ever like to harass his tenants unless they refuse to pay his dues and adopt a defiant attitude. Dr. Mukerji will be well advised to counsel kisans to trust their zamindars and to be prompt in payment and then the zamindars will naturally resume their old paternal relations towards them. Illegal exactions are fast disappearing and will cease altogether with the resumption of normal relations between the two classes.

The United Provinces Political Conference.

The Pratap says that the success of the conference is assured if it can devise some means of political re-awakening. It is of paramount importance to re-organize such Congress committees as have become dormant and revive those which have ceased to exist. It would contribute much towards the advancement of the province if Maulana Shaukat Ali giving up all other activities devoted himself exclusively and whole-heartedly to the removal of the Hindu-Muslim tension in the province.

The Council of State elections.

The Hindi Kesri welcomes the decision of the Swaraj party to contest the forthcoming Council of State elections and exhorts the voters not to vote for any one except the swarajist candidates who alone are the true advocates of national aspirations and the real well-wishers of the country and to whom has been entrusted the entire political work of the Congress by no less a person than Mahatma Gandhi.

The Bombay Textile Industry.

The Oudh Akhbar says that as matters are now critical Government should not only bring about a settlement between the mill-owners and workers and remit the excise duty, but should also institute a searching inquiry into the working of the mills and initiate internal reforms in them which may place the industry on a sound and permanent footing.

Thc Viceroy.

The Oudh Akhbar observes that the manner in which Lord Reading has flouted Indian public opinion in regard to the salt tax, excise policy, Bengal Ordinance, Muddiman Committee, Lee Commission and other matters will leave an unfavourable impression on the Indian mind regarding his term of office.

Currency notes.

The Oudh Akhbar opines that the abrogation of the system of payment of full price for the halves of notes of rupees five and ten whose counterparts have been lost will seriously affect the popularity of paper money and urges that at least half price should be paid after due inquiry.

Foreign Affairs.

Referring to the proposed Jeddah Conference the Najat remarks:—Though the Muslim world has repeatedly urged Britain that she should not interfere with the affairs of the Jaziratul Arab and should evacuate it as soon as possible, it is to be regretted that owing to her land-hunger she has not yet paid any heed to these demands. On the contrary the fact is that by setting the Arab nobles by the ears she wants to strengthen her hold and extend her power over the Jaziratul Arab. It is now an open secret that British interference is the chief cause of the present trouble in Arabia and these troubles will not be over unless and until British interference ceases. The Medina warns the pro-Sheriffites that the Hedjaz question is not only religious but also political and it would not do to stir up sectarian feeling in India and to create bad blood by abusing the Khilafatists. The dignified example of Hasrat Mohani who also is opposed to Ibn Saud should be more widely followed. Both parties want a democratic Government in the Hedjaz and it is only an accident that while one favours Ibn Saud the other supports Emir Ali. In another article, the same paper refers to Britain's fears that Russian grain might carry Bolshevik contagion into Persia and inquires whether Britain herself has supplied any foodstuffs to Persia or is only anxious to stem the tide of Bolshevism. Islam is sufficiently broad-based on democracy and equality to be shaken by Bolshevism. Still if Russia is able to gain some concessions in Persia we would prefer her influence to Britain's because Britain attacks secretly and Russia attacks openly and while simple-minded Muslims are fully able to deal with a known enemy they are worsted by "blows on the side." If British sympathy is sincere, there are other Muslim countries, for instance, Morocco, where she can prove helpful. We want to tell Europe that Persia understands her interests best and distinguishes between her friends and foes. We are greatly relieved to learn that Russia has declared that she would not interfere in the internal affairs of Persia.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

"Pampadi" writes in the Indian Daily Telegraph:—Swami Shraddhanand seriously and with a full sense of responsibility advised Lucknow Hindus to organize Satyagraha in connexion with the Arti-Namaz question. If that question is ever to be solved, recourse should be had to that unfailing remedy. Break the Gwynne gong to pieces to-morrow at the footsteps of the temple, warn the authorities that from a particular day Hindus would assert their right to offer worship at the temple according to their religious tenets. It is not their concern if the Namaz occurs at the same time. The park is not a mosque. The authorities, of course, would apply their section; it must be disobeyed. Are the Hindus prepared? Take down the names of those who are prepared, make up the list and then start the satyagraha. The Haqiqat complains that Bahraich Hindus are doing their best to discredit the Muslim officials of the district and specially Sheikh Maqbul Husain Sahib, the Deputy Commissioner. The paper attributes this to sangathanist activities and fears that if they continue communal disturbances will become very common all over the country. Referring to the report of the Tanzeem deputation on the Aligarh riot, the Medina says that the turbulent and hard-hearted Hindus of Aligarh had prepared considerably beforehand for this disturbance. The official and Hindu reports have themselves admitted that in spite of the remonstrances of the Secretary of the Ramlila Committee the rioters did not refrain from making trouble and there was a sufficient number of brickbat throwers on the roofs in Madar Darwaza. Besides, the wounds of the injured show that the rioters were armed with swords also and that the cowardly brutality of these unholy sangathanists used these swords only against old men and women. The hands of the sangathanist heroes were raised and they gave evidence of Malaviyan courage but only against women of sixty and men of seventy. We want to know how Hindu mentality has developed this courage which is a disgrace to gentlemanliness and humanity. Is it not an organized conspiracy? Is it not a wicked and unholy act which will always remain as a source of shame and disgrace to the Hindu community? Let Mr. Malaviya come and see the braveries of these cowardly and unmanly worshippers of his and shed tears of blood over the moral lapses of his community. If the Hindus succeed by cowardly attacks on some old Muslims and a few helpless old women then they can continue this barbarous oppression of theirs. But if they lay claim to true bravery and courage they should come into the open field and engage in contest. The Awaz publishes a reply from Satan to a letter from God appearing in the Muslim. Satan informs God that those who claim to be His special devotees are brutes in human shape who show no regard for Him. They regard as forbidden the flesh of animals killed by Him and prefer that of those killed by themselves. They declare the moustaches granted by Him for the beauty of the face as impure and call the beard the light of God. They even interfere with the body granted by him and practise circumcision not only of men but also of women.

Next Home Member of the United Provinces.

The Sainik says:—Those who had the least knowledge of the internal politics of the United Provinces Government were well aware that the Hon'ble Nawab Sahib of Chhatari had the greatest chance of succeeding the Maharaja Sahib of Mahmudabad, not because he was a specially capable or a specially experienced or popular person but because he had the greatest influence in the Governor's darbar and was an expert in hypnotising the members of the Council. We can congratulate nobody except the Nawab Sahib of Chhatari himself on this appointment. The Garhwali remarks that for some time past the Government has been consistently ignoring even persons of first rate ability and independence and giving preference to Rajas and Nawabs over them. Such a policy of the Government is not only illiberal but also extremely short-sighted. The Mukhbir-i-Alam resents the Indian Daily Telegraph's article entitled "Muslim Raj" and says that not a single instance can be cited to show that the Nawab Sahib of Chhatari has ever displayed a biassed attitude during his whole tenure of office as Minister. Anyway the moving spirit of Hindu Sangathan, whose communal activities were looked upon with disfavour not only by Muslims but by sensible Hindus also could not be made Home Member. These prejudiced attacks will only lower the Hindus in the estimation of Government. Reverting to its attack on the appointment, the Awaz says that though Hindus form 88 per cent. of the population in this province they number only half among deputy collectors and tahsildars. This fact can be cited as a strong proof of the pro-Muslim and anti-Hindu policy of the Maharaja Sahib of Mahmudabad. Muslims have been appointed in such large numbers in the Jail department that the pen fails to write on the subject. As regards the Nawab of Chhatari Hindus can hardly be found in some of the departments under his control as Minister. Still the Muslims call him just. It is a gross insult to Hindu rajas to appoint a Muslim zamindar and before him an agitator of the Muslim League as Home Member and we condemn this pro-Muslim policy of both the Governors. Is this in accordance with the Royal Proclamation or is it likely to stimulate Hindu co-operation? Why does Government harass the Hindus for fear of the Afghans who were scared out of their wits by a single Khatri, Hari Singh Nalwa? When there are 2½ crores of Hindus why is Government afraid of a handful of Afghans? It is probably because of fear of the Afghans that the present Government of the United Provinces is so ruthlessly trampling Hindu rights. But Government is not like a fragile thread which can be broken by the Afghans. It can be broken by the Hindus but they can never dream of doing so. Government, however, should maintain co-operation with the Hindus and should not allow its representatives to prejudice it by their unjust acts. The paper also publishes a poem by Khatri in which he says that the Nawab of Chhatari will complete the task of the Maharaja Sahib of Mahmudabad in filling the departments under him with Muslims. Hindus will not be retained in equal numbers even because they are clearly infidels (kafirs) and Yezids (the slayer of Hasan and Husain). Sir Harcourt Butler appointed the Maharaja of Mahmudabad and Sir William Marris appointed the Nawab of Chhatari. Well, Khatri, they may do what they choose, but these moves are not happy.

Political propaganda.

The Leader strongly disapproves of Pandit Motilal Nehru's view that the ultimate necessity to resort to civil disobedience must be thoroughly impressed on the public mind day after day and says: "The country more than the Government has suffered from the preaching of civil disobedience which is only another name for lawlessness, and no far-seeing Indian patriot can subscribe to Mr. Nehru's views. Our faith in constitutional action has been strengthened from all that has happened and we firmly believe that the best interests of the country lie in eschewing disruptive courses of action." The Aj strongly protests against the decision of the Government to purchase in England the entire equipment for the new tram service in the neighbourhood of Bombay and remarks:—This decision has made our blood boil and moved us to tears at our helpless condition. In plain words it is loot. India is being plundered for the benefit of British manufacturers and the employment of the unemployed there. The Government has a hereditary right over Indian money and it can spend it as it likes. What a sign of good administration and justice! The same paper refers to the struggle of Riffs in Morocco and of Arabs in Syria against the French and says that it shows that the spirit of nationalism is growing stronger day by day in independent Muslim countries. When this spirit will become strong in India, when Indian Muslims will cease to dream of converting the whole of India to Islam or of re-establishing Muslim rule here and when regarding India as their motherland they will join other communities on terms of equality in their non-violent national struggle, her emancipation will become assured. The Vartman suggests that on the occasion of the Cawnpore Congress a conference of the representatives, teachers and organizers of national schools all over India should be held for removing the existing slackness and making the national schools profitable to the country. It adds that if the existing national schools are well-organized they are sure to prove more profitable than Government institutions.

The Kakori train dacoity arrests.

The Sainik says that police rule continues to hold its sway and no regard has been paid to public opinion which condemned the unnecessarily harsh treatment accorded to the accused in the Kakori train dacoity case. The Special Magistrate has exercised special severity and has ordered that even counsels should not be allowed to interview the accused without his permission. Remands after remands are being granted in the case and nothing is disclosed against the accused even in the court. What an injustice it is! Such severities have never done any good anywhere. They have always done harm. But the bureaucracy neither learns nor unlearns anything. The Shankar apprehends that the repression inaugurated by the arrests in connexion with the Kakori train dacoity may take the form of the Bengal Ordinance and says that if it does so not only the innocent persons arrested at present will not be released but many other provincial political workers also will be imprisoned. It is surprising that such an injustice should be perpetrated under an Indian Home Member. This repression can be met successfully only by strengthening the Congress organization, by reviving Congress Committees at various places, by returning sturdy and fearless patriots to the local bodies at the forthcoming elections and by vigorous agitation for swadeshi and swaraj. The Aj says:—We have exposed the illegal actions committed by the authorities in connexion with the Kakori train dacoity arrests but as yet there are no signs of these evils being stopped.

Executive Councillorship of the Central Provinces.

The Sainik condemns the acceptance of an executive councillorship in the Central Provinces by Mr. Tambe and says that he has thereby played false to the Swaraj party and has taken undue advantage of its prestige. He has sold away his country, his conscience and the honour of his party for a few rupees and a few powers which he can exercise only through a subservient attitude. It is altogether wrong to seek to discredit the Swaraj party for the fault of one of its members specially when his action has been condemned by the party. The Swaraj party will do well to set its house in order. If it wants to improve its position it should henceforth pay greater attention to work outside the Councils and to the organization of voters. If it continues to be neglectful in this direction its future cannot be promising. The Pratap remarks that by Mr. Tambe's acceptance of executive councillorship the Central Provinces Government has been able to kill two birds with one stone for while, on the one hand, the financial difficulties of Mr. Tambe have been removed, on the other, the Governor has been relieved of the anxiety caused to him by the swarajist tactics. The paper condemns Mr. Tambe's action and takes Messrs. Kelkar and Jayakar to task for their approval of it. It apprehends a split in the ranks of the Swaraj party and warns it that if it wants to maintain its existence it should not abandon its obstructionist policy. The country will support it only when it finds that it does not use any unclean weapon in the political fight.

Congress politics.

The Vartman remarks that non-cooperation is the only path which the country can follow. It was only by following this path that in the year 1921 Indians had overawed the Government. All the leaders feel that if satyagraha had not been suspended at Bardoli it would not have failed to produce good results. If the non-cooperation programme could be followed then there is no reason why it cannot be followed now. What is required is courage and united action. The Cawnpore Congress should consider the matter and revive non-cooperation. The Hindu Sarvaswa draws attention to the excesses committed upon Hindus by Musalmans and takes the Hindu Maha Sabha to task for its inactivity specially when the bureaucracy too is siding with the Muslims. Proceeding, the paper remarks :—When instead of any good accruing to the country from the Hindu Maha Sabha its existence is making the problems of the Hindus more complicated we are compelled to say that the Hindus should go to the Congress and strengthen it. Let them make India free by carrying on once again a vigorous agitation through it and then they may indulge in religious squabbles to their hearts' content. The Aj disapproves of the suggestion of Dr. Moonje that the word "peaceful" should be removed from the Congress creed and says that India will not attain emancipation until her people have grasped the principle of non-violence and have by means of non-cooperation and civil disobedience compelled the bureaucracy to do justice. It is non-cooperation and not co-operation or violence which will bring about India's emancipation. Babu Sampurnanand disagrees with the paper's views and writes that although in the existing situation we shall have to abide by non-violence it is quite possible that an international and internal situation may arise in future when it will be more beneficial for us to adopt a contrary course. For this reason it is undesirable that the word "peaceful" should be retained in the Congress creed. Satya Bhakta writing in the Aj says that both the non-cooperation movement and the swarajist agitation having proved ineffective the only practical programme for the attainment of swaraj is the organization of the kisans and labourers. So long as this class is ignorant of the ideal of swaraj and is weak and unorganized it is impossible for any national movement to produce an effect on the Government. It is, therefore, necessary that the Congress should establish a separate board for the organization of the kisans and labourers and set apart a portion of its funds for the purpose.

Muslim Education.

The Leader publishes a contributed article under the heading "Are Muslims educationally backward?" in which the writer quotes figures to show that the assertion that Muslims are relatively backward in education is not supported by facts. According to the figures quoted by him the percentage of Muslim scholars in all grades of institutions in 1923-24 was higher than the percentage of Muslims to the total population and the percentage of Muslim boys attending primary schools was higher than that of the Hindu community as a whole. It was also in excess of the provincial level. He therefore, states that to say that Muslims are educationally backward "is nothing short of abuse of language." Even the high caste Hindus "are behind the Muslim community as a whole while the position of the backward classes among the Hindus who number, according to the last census, roughly 46 lakhs, is, indeed, deplorable. The Hindus are ·37 per cent. below the Muslims." The writer, therefore, arrives at the conclusion that it is the Hindu community which is in a state of educational backwardness and it is the depressed classes who really stand in the greatest need of the provision of special educational facilities. Referring to the figures quoted by the writer, the Leader says :—"It would thus appear that the Muslims do not stand in need of any special encouragement and assistance in the sphere of education from the Government. The educational progress of one community which calls itself educationally backward but which is not really so in a relative sense, ought not to be subsidized at the expense of the educational needs of other communities and to the neglect of the claims of a more backward section of the population."

The Sitapur Political Conference.

The Vartman says that a perusal of the presidential address of Maulana Shaukat Ali at the Sitapur Political Conference leaves no doubt that he wants gradually to convert the political conferences into arenas of communal warfare. If it were not so he would not have made from a political platform the statement that he was a true Muslim. The Aj remarks that the address is not such as can in any way help in improving the political situation of this province. It was read in a language which cannot be called Hindustani. If we cannot speak in a language intelligible to the ordinarily educated Hindus and Muslims we have no right to waste their time. The Medina eulogises the sincere patriotism of Mr. Shaukat Ali's presidential address and commends it to the attention of the Hindus specially as they regard it as their primary duty to trample the Muslims. Mr. Gandhi's despair about Hindu-Muslim unity shows that no serious efforts have been made in the province to achieve it and for this the Hindus are mostly to blame as by initiating the shuddhi and sangathan movements they have created a feeling of disloyalty (towards the country) in Hindu mind.

Lord Birkenhead's speech.

Referring to Lord Birkenhead's speech at the Constitutional Club in which he expressed satisfaction with the present situation in India the Oudh Akhbar observes that though there is no real progress noticeable in India he must no doubt find satisfaction in the fact that non-cooperation is now altogether dead and Hindus and Muslims are now so divided that they cannot make any united efforts for their rights. What could be better for the British than that Indians should be so engrossed in internecine warfare as to become totally unmindful of their common enemies? Indians should ponder calmly over this pregnant utterance of the Secretary of State.

Indians in the Colonies.

The Naiyar-i-Azam publishes a complaint from Queensland, British Guiana, to the effect that Indians there are being harassed in various ways. Those who wanted to work on sugarcane fields were first required to take permission but later this work of reaping sugarcane was stopped and persons possessing permits were allowed to do other work only on sugarcane farms of not more than 80 acres. Next year, their work was further restricted to farms of 40 acres but now restrictions are being placed on all kinds of work and those who lose their permits are no longer supplied with fresh ones.

Lord Reading.

The Shakti characterises the administration of Lord Reading as a colossal failure and says that history will reckon him among the suppressors of Indian freedom and will condemn him for having imprisoned an apostle of non-violence like Mahatma Gandhi. It is a sin which can never be blotted out. India will never forget Lord Reading's regime.

The "Abhaya" case.

Referring to the conviction of Swami Vicharanand, the editor of the Abhaya, the Hindu Sarvaswa remarks :—Here is an example of the gentlemanliness of the just bureaucracy which instead of taking action against Hasan Nizami and other Muslim leaders for the increasing estrangement between Hindus and Muslims and for the actual outbreaks of riots at different places has thought it fit to honour the Swamiji.

Bombay Textile Industry.

The Swadhin says that the refusal of Government to abolish cotton excise duty is part of its policy of exploitation which is proving so ruinous to Indians. Now that the cotton mills of Bombay have closed down how will Government make up for the loss of its revenue? Not only will it now be deprived of the excise duty but of income-tax and super-tax also.

Prohibition.

The Oudh Akhbar congratulates the Bhawnagar Darbar on the introduction of prohibition within the State and says that this action ought to serve as a warning to those provincial Governments which put off prohibition on the ground that it would encourage smuggling from Indian States. The Sada-i-Muslim wonders at the continued inactivity of the Government of India in the matter and urges all Muslim States to follow the example set by Bhawnagar.

Muslim Affairs.

The Medina complains that though Muslims form 18 per cent. of the population in the province they have got only about 5 per cent. of the seats in the Allahabad University Court and urges the Muslim Educational Conference to take up the matter. A writer in the Haqiqat invites attention to the very low percentage of Muslim patwaris in Oudh and asks for an amendment in the existing rules with a view to raise their percentage.

Indian States.

The Medina appeals to the Mysore Darbar to reconsider its order prohibitting cow slaughter in the State as it constitutes an interference with the religious freedom of its Muslim subjects.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 7, 1925.

Foreign affairs.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The accounts that come of the savagery at Damascus remind us of the worst days of Prussian warfare . . . No Indian can read of the French excesses without revulsion that Indian blood was at all shed in the Great War to safeguard this carnivorous race from annihilation at the hands of the Germans. Beaten by the Riffs, bullied by the Druses, we hope to see the savage France emaciated out of life, clinging fatally to the map of Europe even as it does in India with a few dots of territory like Pondicherry and Mahi. Referring to the deposition of the Kajar dynasty in Persia the Aj remarks:—Revolutions are taking place everywhere, but they are particularly in evidence in Muslim countries. The whole world will be anxious to know what form the new constitution in Persia is going to take. India will congratulate the Persians if they are able to establish a republic. The Vartman contrasts the promptitude with which the League of Nations has intervened in the Greeco-Bulgarian dispute with the indifference displayed by it towards the bombardment of Damascus and concludes that its sympathies are confined to the nations associated with it. Proceeding, the paper remarks:—There is no other organization in this world so selfish as the League of Nations, the sole object of which is to perpetuate its domination over the Asiatics in the name of peace and tranquillity. But this show can last only so long as the Asiatic nations are not powerful and organized. The Medina accuses Britain of following a persistently anti-Turkish policy and suspects her and France to be at the bottom of the present Balkan tangle which may be designed to divert Turkish attention from the Druse country and the Hedjaz. The Hamdam says that it is for the first time in her life that the League of Nations has by her intervention between Greece and Bulgaria succeeded in averting a horrible war. But this is not much creditable to the League of Nations, for the parties being Christians the League has only done her duty as a Christian body, and in order to establish her utility and impartiality further proof is needed which can be furnished only if the League intervenes between the Riffs and Spain and restrains France from her barbarous activities in Damascus and Africa. While noting with satisfaction the suspension of the Franco-Spanish operations against the Riffs owing to the setting in of the rains, the Sada-i-Muslim appeals to the chivalry of Britain to save this valiant and patriotic but helpless race from the greed of these two European Powers. Has the League of Nations, which is so solicitous for the peace of the Balkans, no duty towards the Riffs? Britain is said to be the cradle of liberty and cannot Mr. Chamberlain, whose disinterested and sincere efforts have brought about a pact between two rival European nations at Locarno, also induce France and Spain to conclude an honourable peace with the Riffs? The Riffs clearly want complete independence, and it is Britain's duty to save from extinction a race whose only sin is that it wants to lead a life of freedom in its own land. Otherwise the world will regard Mr. Chamberlain's efforts at Locarno as part of another selfish conspiracy. In another article the same paper makes a stirring appeal for the relief of these Riffs who are bravely struggling for the freedom of their country. In yet a third article the paper, referring to the bombardment of Damascus by the French, inquires why Britain, which joined the Great War in the cause of right and justice and characterized the Germans as Huns and barbarians for their bombardment of some religious buildings in France, is silent now? Why does the League of Nations not protest against France's action? Is it because France is too powerful to be interfered with? Indians made a great mistake in helping such a barbarous nation as the French during the war. France should remember that if she persists in her tyrannies her empire and prestige will disappear.

The Viceroy-designate.

Commenting on the appointment of the Right Hon'ble E. F. L. Wood as Viceroy of India in succession to Lord Reading the Pioneer writes:—The appointment will no doubt be regarded with favour by most of those who combine a knowledge of modern Indian conditions with some acquaintance with the world of politics at Westminster. The appointment is not a spectacular one. But spectacular politics are the last thing that this country requires. The Leader writes:—It can be said with truth that not since Lord Ripon has India had a Governor-General whose rule was the rule of love and justice and righteousness. Lord Reading is to leave India in the ordinary course in April next, and it will be an exaggeration if one said that he would leave behind much regret for his departure. And in the record of the Viceroy-designate there is nothing to inspire the people of India with the confident hope that his viceroyalty will recall the years of Lord Ripon's régime. He does not even belong to a party in whose general policy reformers can have confidence. . . . . Our consolation must be that it is not this or that Viceroy or Secretary of State who can guarantee the future of India, but the people of India themselves. If they reform themselves and unite in the furtherance of a common cause, her future will be secure. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The new Viceroy is meant as an agricultural expert. And we regard it as a pleasing trait in his character that he never bragged about what he expects to do in this country. It is, however, foolish to expect anything from any Viceroy: under the present political conditions, it is wisdom to be prepared for the worst deportations and extraordinary activities of the Criminal Intelligence Department as in the Kakori dacoity case. The Aj says that the Viceroy-designate is a third-rate statesman. He will dance to the tune of the Secretary of State. . . He has imperialistic tendencies. The appointment of the Minister of Agriculture as the Viceroy of India soon after the statement of Lord Birkenhead regarding the agricultural development in India shows that for some time "agriculture" will become the byword in India and crores of rupees will be spent on it, but as usual all this will ultimately end in smoke. The Oudh Akhbar is satisfied with the selection in this much at least that Mr. Wood is expected to be less bold and severe in his policy and more sympathetic in his administration than Lord Reading. The Hamdam, on the other hand, opines that none of his past achievements entitle him to this high office. It is a pity that even such a vast continent as India with its teeming millions is entrusted to the charge of second-rate British statesmen.

The Kakori train dacoity case.

The Aj points out that the granting of repeated remands in the Kakori train dacoity case is illegal and urges politicians of all shades of opinion to protest against the illegalities and irregularities committed in this case. The Pratap also protests against the repetition of remands and identification proceedings and says:—It is sheer injustice to hold the identification proceedings a second time, when there is already a general suspicion that the policemen not in uniform visiting the jails might possibly be accompanied by some of the identification witnesses. Where is the guarantee that during the remands the police will not tutor the witnesses by showing them the photographs of the accused? The behaviour of the authorities is objectionable and we strongly condemn it. The Sainik writes:—Why are remands after remands being granted in the case? Is there no limit to these remands? If the police could not collect evidence within a month, why did it make the arrests so soon? Why has it taken so long to collect evidence? What is most surprising is the fact that identification proceedings will take place again. What does this mean? Is there no limit even to the injustice of the police rule? The Medina condemns the action of the District Magistrate of Meerut in stopping the meeting held to express sympathy with some "innocent" political prisoners who had been arrested in connexion with this case without any inquiry, and in arresting the conveners of that meeting. The truth will come out during the trial and it is impolitic to stop beforehand even the expression of sympathy with the accused as it will lead the public to think that justice will never be done to them and Government will surely convict them in order to maintain its prestige.

Political propaganda.

The Gharib writes:—There is a vast difference between a free and a subject country. In the first instance laws are so absurd and faulty in a subject country that the people cannot have adequate protection through them. And then even those laws for all they are worth are not properly administered. Every subordinate or officer is anxious to please his foreign masters. In a free country all officers, high and low, endeavour to please the people. It is, therefore, the supreme duty of the people to strive to make India free. A correspondent, who styles himself as "A soldier of the swaraj army," writes in the Sainik:—The difference between the invasions of Ghori and Ghaznavi and the policy of exploitation of the British Government is just the same as between high fever and slow fever. In the one the patient recovers very soon, while in the other he is sure to die a lingering death. If it be taken for granted that Muhammad Ghaznavi took away property worth one or two crores of rupees from India during his seventeen invasions, can this amount bear any comparison with the wealth which England has been annually draining away from India all these years? The same paper remarks that this is the good fruit of British rule that though the Kakori train dacoity was committed in broad daylight, the passengers did nothing to prevent it. If the people had not been disarmed and rendered so weak and unmanly through subjection such an incident could never have occurred. Can the Government, which makes its subjects so helpless, lay any claim to be called civilized? Referring to the planting of the national flag in the Tilaknagar at Cawnpore by Pandit Motilal Nehru the Bharat Jiwan says that to-day subject and dependent India cannot fully understand the honour of the national flag. To-day people are not in evidence who could sacrifice their lives over it. To-day there is hardly anybody who can maintain the honour of this national flag. But the day will surely come when this white, red and green flag will be an emblem of the unity and strength of India and no "white-skinned" person will then insult it in any way. The Pratap pays a warm tribute to the services rendered to India and the sacrifices undergone by those Indians who are at present living as exiles in foreign countries. It regrets that Indians have done nothing to improve their straitened circumstances and exhorts them to emulate the example of Swami Satyadeva, who has given a lead in this matter by giving a handsome donation towards the relief of political workers in Germany. The Medina deplores the decision of a meeting of the Central Provinces Swaraj Party in favour of "responsive co-operation" and says that a pleasing contrast is offered by the advocacy of "Sinn Fein" by Mr. Sambamurty as president of the Andhra Provincial conference. It is a pity that the Central Provinces is led by men like Dr. Moonje who instead of raising the standard of freedom are poising the rod to break the heads of Muslims. Men who approve of Mr. Tambe's act can hardly appreciate Mr. Sambamurty's valour.

The durbar address.

The Leader congratulates His Excellency Sir William Marris on his address to the Durbaris of Oudh and says:—To an official of His Excellency's pronounced political predilections it must have been a severe exercise of discipline and restraint to have made so elaborate an address so nearly non-contentious. The problems of rural life upon which Sir William Marris dwelt with ability and lucidity and in an admirable spirit and temper are indeed vital for the life of the nation. We have been struck by one important omission. What is the extent to which Sir William Marris's Government will provide funds for the educational and other developments of which His Excellency has so well spoken? The omission may not be surprising, but it is an important omission and a regrettable omission. His Excellency will pardon us to hold the view that his Government have not been over-liberal in financing beneficial services. To us the immediate value of His Excellency's general observations, thoughtful as they are, will be in the measure in which the next budget will show that substantially larger sums have been provided for expenditure upon the beneficial departments. We may perhaps say a word on the utility of Durbars such as Sir William Marris has just held at Lucknow. We think His Excellency was right and his advisers were wrong in the opinion they held on the utility of the Durbar. We think it is an old-world institution which is out of harmony with the spirit of the times. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—We sincerely hope that the seeds that His Excellency Sir William Marris sought to sow in his durbar address will bring forth fruits a hundred-fold. It is the first responsible pronouncement in India from the head of a province making a definite prescription and offering a definite lead. It is an epoch-making utterance—more important than Lord Birkenhead's speech on the reforms or Lord Reading's laboured paraphrase of the Secretary of State's pronouncement. If out of the hundreds who heard His Excellency at least half a dozen should imbibe the spirit and carry out the high ideals prescribed by a close student of political and economic affairs that His Excellency is, the effect would be remarkable indeed.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to "the agitation against the pro-Muslim attitude of the United Provinces Government," the Indian Daily Telegraph writes: We wish to emphasize that in this agitation no professional politician has any lot or part. The voice is the spontaneous voice of the people, of the man in the street, the working man and the citizen who pauses in his daily work as he hears of the stopping of music or of the appointments to Executive Councillorship and Chief Court (Lucknow) and shakes his head with the significant exclamation : " blows that way the wind !" This is too serious to be ignored. The mass mind has taken it with all its implications. We put it to the Government whether this growing feeling of suspicion in the minds of the majority community will tend to strengthen the bond between the rulers and the ruled. We strongly hold that the Hindus have reasons to protest against the attitude of the Government. We appeal to His Excellency Sir William Marris to seriously grasp the significance of this cloud in Hindu vision and concert measures without delay by which the feeling of insecurity might be smothered at the start.

Disqualification of political prisoners.

The Bharat Jiwan says that political prisoners being quite different from ordinary offenders they should have been allowed to be returned to the Councils. But the Government has decided otherwise in utter disregard of the wishes of the people. Is it not strange that despite such actions Lord Reading expects co-operation from the people ? The Medina says that such an attitude on the part of Government after the Swarajist advance towards co-operation clearly bodes ill for the future. By making the Congress a huge success the public should give an adequate reply to the " co-operation " of Government.

Congress politics.

The Sada-i-Muslim writes that history records no instance in which freedom has been willingly conceded to a subject nation by any ruling race. Subject peoples have never got their just rights by begging. Struggle is the law of existence. Indian Muslims should now boldly reject the political portion of Sir Syed's creed which was purely opportunist in its conception and was designed to secure a transitional concentration on education by a temporary divorce from politics. The educational object aimed at has been achieved and now it is up to Muslims to secure their rights in every other department of life. The Congress is a national body and Muslims will have no claim to benefit from the rights secured by it from Government if they do not participate in it. Muslims should not labour under the delusion that their Muslim League would be able to secure an adequate share for them in any concessions won by the Congress. Once their claims are overlooked, their separate organization would have again to put in the same amount of effort, and then also without equally satisfactory results. We, therefore, urge our co-religionists to try to capture the Congress as in 1919 and to take their share in the country's political struggle in a manly manner. They should join the national demand, while adequately safeguarding their communal interests. They should not allow the Congress to be communalized, but should fight shoulder to shoulder with all the other Indian communities for the country's rights. It is by joining the Congress in large numbers that Muslims can best safeguard their interests. They should try to induce the Congress to accept the Das pact and not prejudice their claims by withdrawing from the Congress. They should first deserve a share in political privileges and then desire it.

Hindu organization.

The Abhyudaya holds the statement of Mr. Gandhi that organization was the only means of self-protection to be a victory of the Hindu Sabha and remarks that when an opponent of Hindu organization like Mr. Gandhi has realized the seriousness of the situation and begun to support Hindu organization, it is time that other leaders who raise the cry of nationalism to oppose Hindu Sabha took a leaf out of his book. The Bharat Dharma says that those who oppose Hindu organization on the ground that it is against the spirit of nationalism do not appear to realize the principle of "live and let live.' When all other communities in the country are organized it is absolutely necessary for their self-preservation that the Hindus too became organized. It is because of their disorganized condition that Muslims have interfered even with their religious observances at various places. When they have become strong through organization, the Muslims will surely seek friendship with them.

Indian Communist Conference.

Through the Sada-i-Muslim Satya Bhakta appeals to all believers in communism, complete independence, republicanism and socialism to join the December Conference and help it with funds as the party aims at organizing peasants and workers with a view to increase their power and prestige in the administration. He is opposed to affiliation to the Communist International as this would only offer Government a pretext to suppress the Indian Communist Party. India cannot adopt a programme of violence, and as a subject country its voice will carry little weight in the International. The most important thing is therefore the freedom of the country without which neither communistic nor other reforms can be introduced. In view of all this the Conference will consider the question of the change of the name of the party. He condemns the acceptance of foreign money as the country can rise only by its own efforts. The party is not opposed to the Congress, but as under the influence of capitalists and landowners that body has been unmindful of the interests of peasants and workers, Communists should join it in large numbers and try to convert it into an instrument for the organization of peasants and workers. The Hamdam opines that the Indian communists are fully alive to the realities of the situation and will draw up a suitable programme quite different from that of the Russian Communists. The party will prove a very useful lever for the organization of the peasantry, provided it comes under the banner of the Congress.

The Home Member-designate.

The Haq regards the agitation of the Sangathanists against the appointment of the Hon'ble the Nawab Saheb of Chhatari as absolutely unjustified and based on communal prejudice. Not a single instance can be quoted to his discredit during his triennial term as Minister. The head and front of his offence is that he is a Muslim. The agitation is also being sustained with a view to prevent the appointment of a Muslim as Minister. The Aziz-i-Hind in welcoming the appointment assures the Leader and the Indian Daily Telegraph that even they will have to revise their opinion about the Nawab of Chhatari within a few months of his term as Home Member. He may not be an erudite scholar, but he is not fickle like the Maharaja Saheb of Mahmudabad who poses as a nationalist among nationalists and as a loyalist among loyalists. He should be careful to maintain a strictly impartial attitude. We pray to God that he may not prove an unsuccessful (Home) Member like the Maharaja Saheb of Mahmudabad.

The Swaraj Party.

Although the Aj approves of disciplinary action against Mr. Tambe as well as Messrs. Kelkar and Jayakar, it thinks that this alone will not set matters right. It says that the question before the Swaraj Party is whether the policy of obstruction is possible and whether, if possible, it is useful. The only means of removing the existing differences among the Swarajists is to delete the words "obstruction" and "opposition" from their creed and openly co-operate with the Government. The Sainik opines that if the Maharastra group raises the standard of revolt at the Nagpur meeting of the Swaraj Party Pandit Motilal Nehru will go back to Mr. Gandhi's fold and will probably advise the Swarajists at the Cawnpore Congress to resign their seats in the Councils and then either to boycott them or stand for re-election with the election-cry that they are wholly for the obstructionist policy. The Bhavishya supports the view of Pandit Motilal Nehru that co-operation is no longer possible and says :—So much time has been spent in co-operation, but what has been the result ? Jallianwala Bagh and the Rowlatt Act. The more we yield the greater will be the repression by Government. No country in the world has ever got Swaraj through co-operation. The Shakti remarks that the enemies of the Swaraj Party are present in its own ranks. It is Mr. Kelkar, the opponent of Mahatma Gandhi, and Mr. Jayakar, the first non-cooperating lawyer to resume practice, who are making the Swaraj Party the laughing-stock of the world.

The Oudh Chief Court.

The Leader does not agree with the view of His Excellency the Governor that the Chief Court of Oudh is a child of the Reforms and says that the establishment of a Chief Court at Lucknow during a period of financial stringency when urgent measures have been put off for want of funds is the triumph not of the Reforms but of the late Governor taluqdar and the present taluqdar Home Member. There are many reforms and beneficial projects which have been hanging fire for lack of funds, and it cannot be said that the establishment of the Chief Court was the most important of them all.

Indians in the colonies.

The Vartman remarks that the order of the Union Government to the Indian residents in Johannesberg, including even those upon whom the rights of citizenship had been conferred under the Smuts-Gandhi agreement, to quit the country within three days of the date of the order is utterly ignominous. It shows that the passage of the Asiatic Bill was not the limit of the meanness of the Union Government, but was only a prelude to still more reprehensible deeds.

Sitapur Political Conference.

The Surya says that though Maulana Shaukat Ali deserves thanks for his fair and courageous advice at the Sitapur Political Conference to the Muslims not to demand more representation than their numbers justify, it is doubtful whether the Muslims will accept it. The characteristic feature of this provincial conference was that it did not discuss any important provincial questions. This provincial conference was an utter failure, whether considered from the standpoint of speeches delivered, the resolutions passed or the work transacted.

Currency notes.

The Oudh Akhbar fails to see why new designs are being proposed for currency notes of rupees five and ten when notes of these denominations of the old design are not being withdrawn from circulation. There should be every sympathy with the Government's object of preventing forgery, but this can be achieved only if the existing notes are withdrawn from circulation. Otherwise there is little justification for the permanent retention of a high paid staff of expert notographers and for undergoing all the other expenses incidental to the manufacture of notes of novel designs.

The Andhra Conference.

The Vartman says that of all provincial conferences held this year the credit for passing useful and opportune resolutions goes to the Andhra Conference. A perusal of the resolutions passed at this conference shows that the object of the Andhra Conference was not simply to observe a customary annual ceremony but to devise new means of removing the depression in the country. Resolutions like those recommending to the Congress the adoption of individual civil disobedience and the fixing of complete independence as the Congress creed do not deserve to be ignored but should be translated into action.

Resolution on the Industries Committee's report.

The Leader congratulates the Governor acting with his Minister on the Resolution on the Industries Committee's report and says that His Excellency and the Hon'ble Minister for Industries have, on the decisions they have taken on the report of Mr. Burn's committee, shown a commendable regard for public opinion and the need for a progressive industrial policy.

Foreign affairs.

REFERRING to the statement of the new French High Commissioner in Syria that he would do his utmost to bring about pacification as rapidly as possible, the Leader writes :—European nations will have to give up the antiquated notion that eastern peoples only understand force and can be kept under control only through fear. An experiment in frightfulness was recently tried in India with the result that the moral foundation of British rule was almost destroyed for a time. The lesson taught to French imperialism by the Syrian revolt should be taken to heart by those who talk of empires being won and maintained by the sharp edge of the sword. The Bharat Jiwan writes :—It cannot be said whether the revolution in Persia will augur well or ill for the world, but surely it bodes ill for crowned heads. Their own autocracy appears to be the cause of their downfall. It is hoped that a republic will be established in Persia and it appears that a great federation of Muslim states is going to come into existence. This federation will be a menace not only to India but also to western civilization. We see the future history of the world being written in the present revolutions in Muslim countries. The Vartman remarks that every lover of freedom will welcome the news of a new era in Persia. The change of Government in Persia was inevitable and at last it has been brought about. Those in authority who think that a particular country will permanently remain in slavery or that a particular nation will ever continue to hold the reins of power should take a lesson from the Persian revolution. The Aj holds that the deposition of the Kajar dynasty in Persia is a suitable punishment for the Shah who, deserting his country at a critical juncture, has been enjoying himself in Europe. Persia will be substantially benefited if under the guidance of an able and powerful ruler like Reza Khan Pehlevi she can be initiated into republicanism. Referring to the bombardment of Damascus the Gopal remarks :—While like fanatics the Muslims fall upon Hindus and do not hesitate even in assaulting women at the sound of music before mosques, the Quranic injuctions seem to lose their force when mosques are razed to the ground and their sanctity is destroyed by foreigners. The gruesome tragedy at Damascus should open the eyes of the Muslims and they should realize that until they become free such incidents will be a matter of everyday occurrence and the safety of Islam will itself be in danger. The Kisan writes :—At the present time unrest overspreads the whole of Asia. Every state wants to break the bonds of slavery and become free. The European nations have not yet recovered from the effects of the great war. If all the states of Asia become federated now they can easily become free. The whole of Asia with the exception of Japan and Afghanistan has become the pleasure ground of the imperialist European nations. Everybody knows how Asiatics are made to lead hellish lives in order to satisfy their reprehensible interests. If the Asiatics are to save themselves from extinction they should organize themselves to meet the western nations. Representatives of all Asiatic countries should be invited at the Cawnpore Congress to consider the question of the formation of an All-Asiatic Federation. The Medina denounces the League of Nations as a tool in the hands of the great powers of Europe to deprive Muslims of their possessions. The subtleties of international law as well as brute force are pressed into service against Muslims, and no method which can suggest itself to a deceitful, selfish and devilish mentality is left unemployed. The League has thus degenerated into an instrument of imperialism and autocracy for the nations victorious during the last war, and this engine of oppression and iniquity has been covered with a veneer of law, peace and justice simply to enslave the weaker races. It is an imperialistic club whence Nadiri rule is devised for Islamic countries under the guise of mandates. To-day Iraq, Palestine, Syria, Hedjaz, Egypt, Tripoli, Tunis, Algeria, Morocco, Sahara, Sudan, Rumelia, Macedonia and Albania which were solely Muslim possessions and where 80 per cent. of the population was Muslim have fallen a prey to mandates, legal chicaneries and imperialistic and militarist oppressions. The question of Mosul has been hanging fire for two years and has now passed into the hands of the International Court where a favourable verdict may be secured through some bribe. Even the Hedjaz question is being influenced by the secret conspiracies and deceitful intrigues of the people of Europe, and that is why Jeddah has not been occupied so far. Europe sees her own death in the unity of the Islamic world and the solution of the difficulties of the Hedjaz would lead to Arab unity. The atrocities which are being perpetrated in Syria are sounding the death-knell of all civilization. The anti-Muslim policy being pursued in Palestine and Iraq and the never-ending influx of Jews are very sinister in their possibilities. The continuance of the mandate in Iraq is dangerous to the freedom and good government of Turkey, Persia and the Hedjaz. The Oudh Akhbar says that the bombardment of Damascus without any warning is an act unbecoming any responsible and civilized Government, and hopes that as a punishment for this breach of the very first canon of international law the consuls of the powers at Damascus will try to deprive France of this territory over which she wants to exercise sway through sheer terrorism. The Medina remarks that the imperialists who were impatient to swallow Mosul being checkmated by the dignified firmness of Turkey have in their chagrin started ridiculous tales about atrocities on deported Christians. How soon has Europe forgotten her shocking atrocities in the Riff country, Damascus, Jallianwala bagh, the villages of Iraq, Sudan, Tripoli and Syria that she can find leisure to invent stories about Turkish oppressions? Would not centuries be needed to make amends for these European tyrannies? We should like to tell Europe that she should wipe the blood off her sleeves before thinking of criticising Turkish actions. The Oudh Akhbar defends the action of the Turks in refusing permission to cross the Brussels line to the committee appointed by the League of Nations to inquire into the question of deportation of Christians, and says that when no Turkish representative was included in the committee the Turks were quite justified in distrusting it. The Turks have rightly decided to retain Mosul and will not hesitate to resort to arms if Britain and the League of Nations do not prove amenable to reason. The Sada-i-Muslim appeals to Muslim leaders to bury the hatchet at least till the return of the deputation from the Hedjaz and not to rekindle the smouldering embers of the controversy between the Sheriffites and Saudites by any statement one way or the other at this juncture.

The Darbar address.

The Pratap writes:—To hold darbar in the meridian of the new era is not indicative of civilization, and to participate in them is to insult our nation. Do the Darbaris of Oudh wearing the badge of slavery feel some pleasure in going before the authorities and thereby proclaiming to the world their serfdom? What shall we say of the mentality which takes an insult to be an honour? The Sainik writes:—His Excellency the Governor's address is full of good things. In view of the times prevailing in the country the broken hearts of the people can derive some consolation from the words that have fallen from his lips. But we are sorry that the contact of the bureaucrat has so deformed these good things that to say nothing of deriving any consolation from them, they are a source of grave concern to those who desire the peace and happiness of humanity. Is it not possible that this Darbar in the name of combating poverty, ignorance and insanitation may be used to incite the notables against national re-awakening? The existing system of government, no doubt, admits the representative principle, but surely this is to throw dust into the eyes of the world. The representatives of the people are cowards and their views are accepted only when it suits the convenience of the Government. His Excellency is mistaken when he states that political principles which the masses cannot assimilate should not be inculcated. Can he stem the tide of national awakening? The views expressed by him regarding agricultural improvement fully convince the reader of his address how the best of ideas degenerate by coming into contact with the bureaucratic brain. He talks of combating poverty, yet is quite satisfied with the existing pace of progress of the agricultural department. The Hamdam says that in his address His Excellency appeared in the rôle of a sympathetic adviser and has done well in warning the landowning classes of the rapid change in the outlook of cultivators. The zamindars should take his words to heart and adapt themselves to altered circumstances.

Political Propaganda.

In a highly sentimental article written in figurative language the Pratap refers to the revolution in Turkey, China, Russia and Persia and says:—Our mind is agitated with the desire that the child which is variously called as change, prosperity, revolution and what not may come and sit quietly like a dew drop in our mother's lap. The desire springs up that the storm which yesterday raged in the neighbourhood may come over this country also. The sowing of the seeds of blood is not necessary. What we long for is that our hearts may be prepared for a white revolution. We long to see the image of the mother deeply impressed on our mind. Then suddenly the mother may assume a fierce form (Chandi Swarupa), her hair may be dishevelled, the force of the storm may deflect the world from its appointed course and for a moment the music of the spheres may change its note and then gentleness and peace, love and affection, and liberty and equality may beam forth from her face. Commenting upon the opening of the Khyber railway the Abhyudaya remarks:—Two hundred and fifty lakhs of rupees of this poor country have been wasted on the Khyber railway. It will not benefit India at all, although it will surely facilitate the transportation of army and ammunitions to the frontier. This is a rejoinder to the Bolshevik and Afridi bogeys. The Vartman says that although Britain and India are under the same Government, there is a world of difference between the systems of jail administration in the two countries. While in England the number of thieves and dacoits is decreasing, in India it is on the increase. In Britain jails act as reformatories, whereas in India they have a demoralising influence. It is essential in the interests of the Government as well as prisoners that the Indian jails should be reformed. The Aj writes:—The annihilation of a great power like Germany has made the other European powers irresponsible and they have begun to devour the non-white world with impunity. If Turkey has been able to protect herself it is due to mutual estrangement between France and Britain and it is because of the power of the Bolshevik Russia that other free and semi-free Asiatic states still continue to exist. The fighting in Morocco, the general massacre at Damascus, the revolution in Persia, and the opening of the Khyber railway all point to the fact that the present is a very critical moment for independent Muslim states. It is the result of the great war which was fought "for the emancipation of the weak nations" and in which non-whites also shed their blood enthusiastically that life has become a burden to the non-whites and in the place of freedom we have been saddled with military rule. If in view of this attitude of the white world the non-white nations do not become united and take steps to protect themselves, then God alone can save the ancient civilization of Asia.

The Viceroy-designate.

The Prabhat is surprised at the appointment of the Right Hon'ble E. F. L. Wood as the next Viceroy of India as his name has never before been heard in connexion with Indian affairs. India requires at present a Viceroy who could unravel political entanglements. Perhaps Mr. Wood would not be a suitable Viceroy for the purpose. The Abhyudaya remarks that never before the announcement of his appointment as the Viceroy of India was the name of Mr. Wood heard in the world. This appointment constitutes a departure from the established practice of appointing men of eminence to the office of the Viceroy. What is most strange is that he is ignorant of India. The Vartman says:—Neither the Indians know Mr. Wood nor does he know Indians. We fail to understand how an official whose responsibilities are very great but whose political experience is so limited will be able to deal rightly with thirty-three crores of people. The Hindi Kesari points out that whosoever be appointed Viceroy, so long as the system of government is not changed and made amenable to the wishes of the people there can be no lasting peace, goodwill and co-operation in the country. In its opinion the cry of agricultural development which was raised in the country even before the selection of the new Viceroy will prove as futile as Lord Reading's professions of justice. The Arya Mitra writes:—We are convinced that no one can brighten the future of India, whether the Viceroy of India is wood or stone. Such a consummation will take place only when at some distant date Indians have secured the right of self-determination by their own efforts. The Bharat Jiwan remarks that whatever knowledge the Right Hon'ble E. F. L. Wood may have of India, she does not know him at all. This shows that the British have come to believe that after Lord Reading's unjust administration Indians have become so quiet and slack that there is no necessity to send any eminent statesman to rule over them. The selection of Mr. Wood as Viceroy cannot reflect any glory on India.

The Kakori train dacoity case.

Commenting on the repeated remands in the Kakori train dacoity case the Abhyudaya remarks:—For the last one month and a half scores of citizens have been locked up in jails and the police has not been able to produce any evidence against them. What greater injustice can there be than this that these persons should unnecessarily suffer in the jails for the fault of the police? The Aj says that the granting of yet a third remand confirms the illegal aspect of the whole case. It will be no wonder if the public begins to have its own misgivings in this connexion. The Pratap writes:—While arresting the accused the police committed great excesses and took away even ordinary household goods. The granting of repeated remands in the case is sheer injustice to the accused. The police has badly failed in the identification proceedings. We apprehend that having suffered humiliation in this matter the police is now going to hatch some other conspiracy. We have come to know that photographs of the accused and their letters are being collected. Would it be strange if by some means documents are fabricated and witnesses tutored against them? It is, therefore, the duty of the Magistrate to refuse further remands and start proceedings in the open court. Whatever the court may think of giving such autocratic powers to the police, it has only one meaning in the public eye, and that is that the police do not possess adequate proof against the accused. The same paper complains that the police did not accord just treatment to the accused of Benares at the time of their arrests. Instead of being escorted in a closed van they were taken in an open ekka. It inquires why this was done when identification proceedings were still pending and who is responsible for this objectionable and illegal action. Referring to the report of its correspondent that Mr. Bishwas, one of the accused, complained to the Sessions Judge of Lucknow that the C. I. D. was putting pressure upon him and was harassing him in every way, the Vartman writes:—If this news is true we can only say that the C. I. D. is doing all this to achieve its object. We must also protest against the accused being confined in three separate jails for as a result of this identification proceedings have to be conducted in three different places and there is waste of public money.

The Home Member-esdignate.

Referring to the appointment of the Hon'ble the Nawab Sahib of Chhatari as the next Home Member of the United Provinces the Abhyudaya says:—No condemnation of the policy of the United Provinces Government in respect of appointments to Government posts can be too strong. This policy of the Government is not only improper and unjust, but also detrimental to national interests. In making these appointments the Government is moved not by considerations of merit but by those of favouritism towards its pets, and those also belonging to a particular community. In the appointment of the Nawab of Chhatari to the office of the Home Member as also in the appointment of the judges of the Oudh Chief Court the Government brushed aside all considerations of merit, justice and propriety. We want to know on what principle these appointments were made. Is it the principle of communal proportion? The policy which the United Provinces Government is at present following has not the sanction of any ethical principle. We want the Hindus throughout these provinces to raise a voice of strong protest against this unjust policy of the Government.

The Swaraj party.

The Leader severely criticizes the Swarajist policy and the recent "fighting speech" of Pandit Motilal Nehru at Bombay and says:—Having won a victory over the party of direct action Mr. Nehru now wants to become a new apostle of a disruptive movement by basing it on council action and by asking the country to send the Swarajists to the councils at the next general elections in larger numbers. He has begun the electioneering stunt in the interest not of the country but of his party, and all his talk of civil disobedience must be treated as mere bluff and party propaganda, the only effect of which is to keep up political differences and thus injure the interests of the country. The Anand remarks that the slogan of civil disobedience represents a clever strategem of Pandit Motilal Nehru to defeat the Maharashtra Swarajists and to brighten the prospects of the Swaraj party in the next elections. The Surya condemns the intention of Pandit Motilal Nehru to ask the Cawnpore Congress for a mandate in favour of civil disobedience. The use of such a fatal weapon to gain a temporary victory over the Maharashtra group of Swarajists is highly deplorable and is likely to encourage the secret party of "red" revolutionists in the country. It will also accentuate the differences among political workers which cannot augur well for the country. We do not know what to call this move of Pandit Motilal Nehru. Is it political shrewdness or short-sightedness? The Aj remarks that as Lord Birkenhead and Lord Reading have announced the decision of the British Government that the British Parliament and not the Legislative Assembly will decide the date, stage and form of the next constitutional advance, Pandit Motilal Nehru should, as indicated by him in his Cawnpore speech, now seek the mandate from the Cawnpore Congress to start civil disobedience.

Development of agriculture.

Referring to the Premier's remark that in Mr. Wood Indians would find a Viceroy who would be alive to the importance of agricultural development, the Leader writes:—The problem is a stupendous one and cannot be satisfactorily dealt with unless the root causes of agricultural backwardness are removed, namely, illiteracy and ill-health due to a number of preventible debilitating tropical diseases, such as malaria and hook-worm. The wider diffusion of education and the adoption of a comprehensive scheme of sanitation and medical relief in the districts will require a much greater outlay on the beneficial services than is the case at present. . . The problem of the bread is certainly an acute one in India, but no policy which ignores the aspirations of the people for greater opportunities of self-expression and self-development can satisfy the country. For man does not live by bread alone.

Medium of instruction.

Referring to the suggestion made by Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru in his convocation address at the Lucknow University that the mother-tongue of the students and not English should be the medium of instruction, the Leader writes:—The arguments for this reform have long since convinced the large majority of educated Indians and it is bound to become an accomplished fact at no distant date. To prepare for that day we suggest that by an Act of the legislature a Board of Translation should be established and, again by statute, a minimum annual grant should be made from the provincial revenues so that in the space of about ten years the requisite number of text-books and other works in Hindi and Urdu may be got ready to facilitate the innovation.

The Reforms.

Commenting on Lord Sinha's statement that Indians should try to make the Reforms a success the Vartman remarks:—The ex-Governor of Bihar and Orissa, who was a strong part of the machine, the sole function of which is to strengthen the bonds of India's slavery, has come forward with the disappointing and retrograde advice that the Reforms which have been described by the National Congress as hollow should be made a success. It is sheer waste of time and energy to work the Reforms. It is the duty of Indians to follow the path chalked out by the Congress and reject the perverse advice of persons like Lord Sinha.

Muslim affairs.

The Agra Akhbar publishes a letter in which the writer, one Maqbul Husain, urges that if the Muslim minority wants to save itself from absorption by the Hindu majority it should insist on equal representation with the Hindus. It is always found that the Hindu majority in municipal boards favours Hindu candidates for employment irrespective of the qualifications and claims of candidates belonging to the Muslim community. The Najat is grieved to learn from its correspondent that notwithstanding all assurances the Moplahs sent to the Andamans are receiving very harsh treatment and asks Government to issue a communiqué about their general condition.

Congress politics.

The Medina exhorts Muslims to join the Congress in large numbers and not to permit it to drift into a Hindu preserve by keeping away from it. The Congress being a national body, the Muslims have as much claim over it as the Hindus. If by the grace of Providence India gains freedom the Congress will become the most powerful body in the land and Muslims will then regret their abstention from it.

Reduction in railway fare.

The Bhavishya says that as the poor travel by railway only short distances the reduction made by the East Indian Railway in the third class fare for distances over three hundred miles will not benefit them. The paper, therefore, urges the Railway Board to remove the condition regarding distance. The Vartman remarks that it is clear that in reducing the rates of fare the advisory committee of the East Indian Railway was moved by selfish motives. If it were not so it would surely have reduced the fare for short distances as well. Some other papers also express similar opinion.

Hindu organization.

The Shankar urges that as Muslims no longer work on the Congress committes and have diverted all their attention to communal interests and extra-territorial problems, Hindus should depend upon their own efforts alone for the emancipation of their motherland. They will do well to organize themselves for swaraj on the lines suggested by Lala Har Dayal.

The Oudh Chief Court.

The Oudh Punch is not sanguine about the Oudh Chief Court proving particularly helpful in the administration of justice seeing that most of the judges will be busy with taluqdari cases and neither the law's delays and anomalies nor the corruptions of the underlings of the court will be removed.

Indian states.

The Medina warns the authorities that Indian Muslim sentiment will be deeply wounded if Prince Hamidullah Khan's claims to the Bhopal Gaddi, which is in accordance with Islamic law, is not accepted.

Honorary magistrates.

The Najat regrets that Government has ignored the press criticism about honorary magistrates. This shows that it is at best indifferent to the degrading practices of these officers.

Foreign affairs.

FRENCH action in Syria has evoked strong feeling in the Press and most of the papers emphasize the need for an Asiatic federation to prevent a repetition of such occurrences. The Bharatiya Lokamat says: It is quite plain from the Damascus massacre that Europeans attach no value to the lives of Asiatics. This massacre should make the Asiatics realize that unless they organize themselves fully, Europeans will continue to perpetrate such acts of frightfulness and keep them in slavery. Referring to the Khilafat Committee's appeal for funds for the relief of Syrians, the Pratap remarks: The attitude of Muslim leaders sometimes causes great pain. Although we have full sympathy with the Syrians and wish that the steel boot of France may somehow or other be set aside from the breast of Syria and also that if possible the Syrians may be afforded relief as a mark of our fellow-feeling, yet how should we describe that feeling of humanity which is not touched by the miserable plight of the famine-stricken people of Orissa but extends its liberality to Syria. It is not humanity but blind folly. The Aj writes:—Everybody whose heart has not become adamantine owing to imperialism, white supremacy and other similar causes will be shocked at the atrocities committed on the Arabs in Damascus. If even a tenth part of the atrocities had been committed upon a Christian nation the whole world would have rung with outcries or missionaries and other Christian agitators. The interests of those who hold the reins of the world to-day lie in the annihilation of non-Europeans and hence inhuman atrocities are concealed under the cover of suppression of rebellion. The imperialism of Europe having assumed the form of the League of Nations is terrorising the world. The non-white world should wake up in time and take steps to counteract its influence. This can be done only by the organization of an Asiatic federation. A separate national institution should be started in India to cultivate sympathy with the free and semi-free states of Asia and to help them in their efforts for self-preservation. This will help Indians to secure the assistance of other Asiatic people in their own national struggle. In another article the same paper approves of the decision of Mr. Gandhi not to represent to the League of Nations on the question of the atrocities in Damascus and says:—We cannot mention the name of this demon, the League of Nations, with equanimity. It was brought into existence to destroy the non-whites and to extend and perpetuate the domination of imperialists. What can be a greater proof of our helpless and deplorable condition than this, that Indian money too is given to support such a body and we cannot even protest against such unjustifiable expenditure of our money. India alone can save the Muslims of Asia but this will be possible only when the spirit of nationalism is awakened among the Indian Muslims. If their eyes are not opened soon the independence of their remaining free countries will also be destroyed and the Hindus will try to affiliate themselves to the Buddhists of other countries. The Shakti writes:—Asia, the victim of the imperialistic European nations, is now progressing rapidly. Although India lags behind Japan, Afghanistan, China, Turkey, Syria, and Persia in the race of progress, yet the general awakening in the East and particularly the proclamation of freedom in her neighbouring country are bound to have a stimulating effect on her. The Medina denounces the Khalifa appointed in Morocco by the Spanish. A Khalifa who is the product of the cunning and deceit of European statesmen and who looks for support towards unholy non-Muslims can never command the respect of Muslims. This manipulation of Khalifas by Europeans should serve as an eye-opener to Indian Muslims whose sajjada nashins fight for domes and Hashimites. Muslims should open their eyes to facts and should not fall a prey to the deceit of enemies. In another article the same paper suggests that the money which could not be sent to the Riffs owing to the obstruction of the western powers should now be sent to Syria for freedom. In yet a third article the paper rejoices at the news of the occupation of Damascus by the Arabs and wonders when Indians will become ashamed of their slavery and serfdom. Proceeding, it says:—Have you been created to remain slaves? Will your hearts not throb for freedom? For God's sake wake up and see that other countries are throwing off the yoke of subjection within a few years. It is India alone which is not ashamed of slavery of centuries. The Sach, referring to the serious complications in Turko-British relations owing to the Mosul dispute, says that it is strongly rumoured that another great war will take place and that Britain has already started recruitment on a very large scale in India and is arranging for arms and ammunition in England. Provision has also been made in the last budget for twenty-six squadrons of aeroplanes. British reluctance, if any, for such a war is due not to any aversion to bloodshed and massacre but to the locking up of a large portion of her capital in foreign loans. The question before Muslims, therefore, is whether it is proper for them to enlist in the British army against the Turks. The paper also publishes an article headed "The Blood of Muslims" by Maulvi Abdul Majid in which the writer quotes a number of Hadises and various passages from the Quran to show that Islam regards as a cardinal sin for one Muslim to aim at the life of another. There is no salvation for a Muslim who kills or assists in killing his brother Muslim and therefore those who merely for the sake of a few coins help others to kill their brethren in faith should beware of the dire consequences. Referring to the breakdown of negotiations between the British and the Sultan of Nejd regarding the East Jordan, the Medina applauds the brave stand made by Ibn Saud to protect the inviolability of the holy soil of Jezirat-ul Arab and warns Indian Muslims against paying any heed to the propaganda of Reuter about the destruction of domes and shrines. It is the concern of Muslims and Muslims alone to get their religious monuments repaired but they will never allow the British to have East Jordan. In another article the same paper regrets that the chamars and pasis (untouchables) of Gadia and the students of Firingi Mahal were called in to disturb the Lucknow meeting of Mr. Muhammad Ali in favour of Ibn Saud. But the postponed meeting was held most successfully the next day and Lucknow became apprised of the hollowness of the arguments of Firingi Mahal. Al Bashir is gratified at the establishment of a progressive regime in Persia and says that if the three Muslim kingdoms of Turkey, Persia, and Afghanistan become strong and the Hedjaz is purged of the family of the traitor Sheriff Hussein, then the Muslim world would advance again. This progress will benefit not only Muslims but also prove the salvation of every race, country, and creed in Asia. The Medina also sees in the establishment of the Persian Republic a happy augury for pan-Asiatic unity but warns Raza Khan against ruining the bright prospects opened out just now by trying to found a dynasty and by forgetting the true principles of democracy. The Najat says that British statesmen are distrustful of the Afghan attitude and are growing nervous about the frontier. Undoubtedly Russian influence is growing in Afghanistan and this is fraught with danger for India, but Britain has herself to blame if by failing to provide commercial and other facilities for Afghanistan she has thrust that country into the lap of Russia. The Medina is incensed at the suggestion of the Milap (Lahore) that Britain should occupy Afghanistan to save the heavy recurring expenditure on the frontier and asserts that it would cost much more to keep the warlike Afghans under control as well as to maintain the frontier which would then become conterminous with that of Russia. Britain is maintaining Afghanistan as a buffer state simply on grounds of economy. In another article the same paper referring to the "panic" in Anglo-Indian and Hindu circles owing to the closer relations at present prevailing between Afghanistan and Russia, sarcastically remarks that the difficulties experienced in running the Khyber railway owing to the raids of frontier tribesmen could be easily surmounted if Mr. Wood could induce these turbulent tribes to betake to the peaceful pursuit of agriculture.

Referring to the financial difficulties of Indian publicists in exile in foreign countries the Gharib appeals for funds for their relief and says:—Some of us may disapprove of their programme of work but there can be no Indian who in his heart of hearts has no respect for these self-sacrificing and self-denying patriots. The Swadhin remarks that it is with a view to strengthen the hold of the bureaucracy and to wean away the masses from the swaraj movement that there is now so much talk of agricultural development in India. There is no doubt that the country will welcome measures for agricultural development but we have serious misgivings regarding the good faith of the Government in this matter. In the proposed agricultural development of the country the Government does not appear to be so much concerned with the well-being of Indian cultivators as with that of the English nation which is sought to be enriched with the improved crops of this country. If the Government had been really anxious for the well-being of India it would have surely taken steps for her industrial development as well. Referring to the revolutionary activities in various countries, the Bhavishya says :—All revolutions are due to discontent among the people. If there is any revolutionary agitation in this country its sole cause is indiscriminate repression. Government made a mistake in completely suppressing the non-cooperation movement and thereby goading patriots to revolution. Although they became mad in their love of the country and swerved from the right path the responsibility lies on the shoulders of the Government. The same paper remarks that the sacrifices made in pursuance of the non-cooperation programme failed to achieve liberty simply because of the ill-timed treachery of the Muslims. Muslims will join us in our fight for liberty when we have made ourselves strong. For this we shall have to act upon the resolutions of the Hindu Mahasabha. We shall have to make ourselves, our sons and daughters physically strong and skilled in the use of lathis, etc., and to sacrifice our lives for the protection of our community, women and children from oppressors. Then alone will Muslims, who call themselves Turkish, feel pride in calling themselves Indians. The Vartman writes :—Our goal is the same as it was at the time of the non-cooperation movement. It is true that we have made a few changes in our programme and it is not unlikely that we may have to make further changes but this can never mean that we should recede from our ideals to such an extent as to adopt the liberals' policy of mendicancy. Like Ireland we are prepared to meet repeated humiliations and are eager to be crushed by repression, but are determined not to give up our goal. Commenting on Mr. Baldwin's recent Guildhall speech the Hamdam inquires how Indians can trust the British Government when they themselves are not trusted by it. If they wish to voice their just demands freely they are dubbed as agitators; if they wish to help any oppressed foreign nation they are accused of conspiracy and if they want to visit any foreign country in order to inquire about or explain any particular matter they are refused passports. Under these circumstances it is absolutely unreasonable for Mr. Baldwin to expect Indians to trust the Government. The only assurance that Indians can give to him is that if the Government changes its present policy and begins to trust Indians they also will not prove ungrateful. The Oudh Akhbar approves of the decisions arrived at by the Swaraj party at Nagpur and agrees that there should be no change in favour of responsive co-operation owing to the defection of Messrs. Jayakar and Kelkar. These gentlemen are sadly mistaken if they believe that they will improve their prospects of election by this manœuvre as the country has now become thoroughly sick of co-operation. By harbouring such selfish designs they have only exposed their unreliability as leaders.

Hindu organization.

The Hindu Sarvasva writes :—In India attempts are being made on all sides to destroy Hindu religion. On the one hand the followers of Jesus Christ are making Hindus swallow poison by means of peaceful propaganda and on the other the followers of Muhammad are determined to convert them to Islam by means of their double-edged sword. The peace-loving authorities turn a deaf ear to the cries of the oppressed Hindus at this wanton destruction of their cherished religion. It is, therefore, up to the Hindus to organize themselves as this alone can lead them to their goal. The Prabhat publishes a message to the Hindus of the United Provinces from Bhai Parmanand who says that the United Provinces are the stronghold of the Hindu nationalism and if the Hindus of these provinces are organized they can save the Hindus of the whole country. The question of music before mosques really means that Muslims want to humiliate Hindus at every place and to keep them down in their own country. It is the United Provinces which will decide whether the Hindus will submit to the Muslims. There is only one way for the Hindus to save themselves. It is that the Hindu sabhas should decide that only such Hindus should be returned to the municipal and district boards and to the councils as take a vow to protect the rights of the Hindu community. Lala Har Dayal (Sweden) writing to the Bhavishya makes an earnest appeal to the Hindu proprietors of Urdu newspapers to publish their papers in Hindi, as this is the best means of the diffusion of Hindi without which sangathan is impossible. No Hindu should teach Urdu to his children and all Hindus should carry on their work in Hindi. When Hindus have become strong they will be in a position to secure a place for Hindi in post offices, law courts, and Government offices also.

The Viceroy-designate.

Commenting upon the appointment of the Right Hon'ble E. F. L. Wood as the next Viceroy of India the Vartman writes :—The unprecedented appointment of a member of the House of Commons as Viceroy of India during the Conservative regime gives rise to the suspicion that Mr. Wood's appointment is not free from mystery. It appears that this appointment is associated with some new prescription of the policy of imperialism. For the last three or four years Government has been experiencing difficulty in realizing revenue, and there is constant danger of Indian kisans resorting to non-cooperation and fomenting trouble against zamindars and imparting a new form to their agitation. These are the elements of this mystery. The system of agriculture in India differs very materially from that in Europe and the adoption of a policy similar to that of Europe will result in the displacement of the zamindars by European capitalists whose object will be to convert Indian kisans into labourers by taking possession of their fields and depriving them of the occupation of agriculture. This is not a mere apprehension but a grim danger which is steadily increasing in this country. Indian leaders should ponder over this matter because the life of India depends upon the freedom of kisans. A number of other papers also express the view that the recent announcements of Government regarding proposed agricultural development in India are intended merely to divert public attention from political agitation.

The Swaraj party.

Referring to Messrs. Jayakar and Kelkar's "campaign against the present shifting and elusive policy" of the Swaraj party, the Leader writes :—The Swaraj party's no-policy has been a gross betrayal of public interests. We wish all strength to the elbows of Messrs. Jayakar and Kelkar in their wise and patriotic fight against a perfectly senseless and highly detrimental policy. The Bharatiya Lokamat says that if the Swaraj party remains steadfast in its policy of obstruction the country is bound to make rapid progress towards swaraj. If it fails to do so it will, like the moderates, lose the confidence of the country. It should be the paramount duty of the swarajists to get rid of their present wavering policy and to reaffirm its old policy at the Cawnpore Congress. The Aj points out that the rules of the Swaraj party will have to be changed. The swarajists will either have to resort to undiluted obstruction and prepare the people for civil disobedience or to abandon obstruction and practise co-operation. We would commend the former but would prefer the latter to the present double-faced policy of the swarajists.

Indianization of Services.

Commenting on the results of the last competitive examinations for the Indian Civil Service held in England and India, the Leader writes :—What is the explanation for recruiting as many as thirty-six candidates in England and only five in India? It is abundantly clear that if only about half a dozen candidates are to be selected in India and six or seven times that number in England, the chances of success for Indians will be greater in the former than in the latter country and that those who come out successful in India have to pass through a keener competition than those in England. Here only the first five or six can be selected, whereas in England the first thirty or thirty-six. The existing arrangement is on the face of it illogical and unfair and ought to be revised. It places British youths at an advantage and cannot be reconciled with the principle of a fair field and no favour and equality of conditions.

Bolshevism.

The Vartman writes :—The future of Europe appears to be very dark. Bolshevism is gradually gaining ground in every country. In spite of the commercial treaties between the Soviet Government and England, France and other countries, the former is assiduously encouraging the socialistic republican movement throughout Europe by means of secret machinations. The socialistic revolutionaries are arrayed against the obdurate capitalists. The unrest in Europe has its roots in the grim determination of the people and if the capitalists constantly follow a repressive policy and do not display generosity in conceding the demands of labourers revolutions will break out in terrible forms.

Indians in the colonies.

Referring to the visit of Mr. Andrews to South Africa the Aj says :—The time has come when we should treat the question of Indians in the colonies as a national one and should tell British authorities by our firm decision that India is not prepared to remain within the Empire in the position of a slave. It is equality which breeds friendship, whereas inequality creates alienation. Indians in the colonies are not slaves and those who ill-treat them are enemies of the Empire.

Reforms of temples and places of pilgrimage.

Referring to the "sin and vice which is rampant in temples and places of pilgrimage," the Bhavishya says :—The task of reforming these sacred places is very difficult, as the mahants and priests will not easily relinquish the property which they have been enjoying for years, but Mr. Das has shown us that success can be achieved through non-violent satyagrah. Satyagrah committees should, therefore, be established at every place of pilgrimage and the money which is at present wasted in vice and corruption should be secured for the regeneration of the country.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Medina appeals to Hindu leaders to see that as laid down by the Unity Conference their followers insist on music only at places where it has been customary for at least five years and thus put an end to the growing estrangement between the two communities. Al Bashir complains that in circumstances clearly contravening section 13 of the Municipal Manual the Etawah municipal board have adopted a resolution which will practically put a stop to cow-slaughter there as cows become too old after the age of twelve and their meat then becomes unfit for human consumption. The paper appeals to Government to intervene in the matter.

The Currency Commission.

Criticizing the personnel of the Currency Commission the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—The commission was appointed after a protracted period of eight months and with neither a non-official Indian majority nor with an Indian Chairman. This is only another striking manifestation of the utter subordination of Indian to English interests and the dictation of Indian economic policy from Whitehall and the helplessness of India to decide for herself, as any other nation, the policy she thinks best for herself. The real need of the country is the establishment of an honest gold standard backed by a gold currency, at any rate for some time to come. Since the gold exchange standard has failed, Indian opinion should incline to a gold standard as the sovereign remedy for all currency manipulations as ensuring both stability and freedom from the machinations of Government which is causing disastrous results to India.

Indian States.

The Najat writes : The presidential address of the Maharaja of Bharatpur at the Jat Mahasabha is a fair index of his anti-Muslim mentality and leaves no doubt about his being the person responsible for the desecration of mosques in that State. This utterance has proved his utter incompetence for rulership and it is to be hoped that the Foreign Department of the Government of India will not overlook this grave misconduct of the Maharaja.

UNITED PROVINCES OF AGRA AND OUDH.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING NOVEMBER 28, 1925.

Foreign affairs.

THE Muslim press is indignant at the news of the repeated bombardment of Damascus. The Medina regards the invitation of the new French High Commissioner for Syria to England as an attempt on the part of Englishmen to devise stratagems and subterfuges to counter the movement for independence in Syria lest the contagion should spread to Palestine. In another article the same paper condemns the semi-official delegation which is said to be proceeding to Geneva to inquire of the League of Nations whether Syria can be entrusted to another mandatory Power and says that if the mandate is given to England, the day will not be far off when the unfortunate Muslim world will have to hear of a calamity even worse than the destruction of Damascus. Syrians, do not get caught in the snare of alluring promises of European nations. Keep freedom alone as your ideal if you do not want to face the worst misfortunes. In yet a third article the paper refers to reports from Rabigh about Emir Ali's atrocities on the people of Medina and hopes that those who were maligning Ibn Saud for the destruction of lifeless tombs by his army will now prefer him to Emir Ali, who has been ill-treating living human beings. The Najat notes with satisfaction that the Frontier tribes are not unaware of the land-grabbing policy of the British Government. They look upon the Khyber Railway with suspicion and regard it as an encroachment on their liberty. It is feared that the railway instead of being advantageous to India from the stand-point of commerce and defence might prove a burden to her. The Hindi Kesari remarks that the appeal of Maulana Shaukat Ali for the intervention of the League of Nations in the affairs of Damascus is only a cry in the wilderness. It is futile to expect justice at the hands of the League over which France holds so much influence and which is only a toy in the hands of a few powerful nations. The Prem says:—The revolution in Persia has put an end to the autocratic government which had been in existence there for the last 150 years in utter disregard of public opinion. At the present time the political horizon of Asia is resounding with the cry of republicanism. This revolution in Persia heralds the dawn of a beautiful, bright and peaceful future. These changes indicate that good days for India too are not far off. Indians wish well to their neighbouring State and invoke this wave of republicanism. The Vartman writes:—The revolution in Turkey, the socialistic policy of Russia, and the narrow-mindedness of England and France have caused quite a stir in Asia which is making rapid progress even in her state of dependence. The development of Afghanistan on republican lines and the deposition of the Kajar dynasty in Persia are signs of the general awakening in Asia. Bolshevism is steadily gaining ground in Russian Turkistan and this synchronizing with the abolition of the monarchy in Persia furnishes a fearful warning to the European monarchies. There is no doubt that so long as capitalism survives in Europe the future of Asia will remain dark because Asiatic nations cannot compete with European nations in science and armaments. But on account of this very science Europe is hastening towards its own degradation and Asia is once again coming into the field as the guide of the world.

Congress politics.

The Sainik condemns the attitude of Messrs. Kelkar and Jayakar towards Pandit Motilal Nehru and says that it is not only injurious to party discipline but is also calculated to affect the interests of the party in the Council of State elections. Our opponents are elated at the split in the Swaraj party and it is to be apprehended that the Cawnpore Congress will become a battle-field of mutual wranglings and recriminations and will not be able to formulate a common programme in a calm and peaceful atmosphere. While thanking the Swaraj party for the Nagpur decision the Prem deplores the split in its ranks. This was the only party in the country before the organization and discipline of which the authorities stood in awe. Now this party has weakened itself through its own mistakes. We would like to tell the swarajists that instead of going backward they should move forward and equip themselves with the forces which may help them in the attainment of victory. Those who have faith in the future of the country and who earnestly desire to see the early dawn of liberty in it should come forward and devote themselves to the work of the organization of villages. The Kisan publishes the substance of a letter from the secretary of the Indian Communist party in which he complains that some persons have captured the Congress and restricted its scope and exhorts the advocates of complete independence to attend the Cawnpore Congress in large numbers and put an end to this restrictive policy. The Medina opines that the only way out of the political stalemate is the establishment of Hindu-Muslim unity and appeals to the Congress to prepare a national pact which would remove all communal grievances and to secure its acceptance by all parties and communities.

Political propaganda.

The Aj refers to the "appalling" consumption of opium in India and says that the foreign authorities, unless they are made responsible to the people, will do nothing to eradicate this evil, as it is to their interest to encourage such evils in order to prevent the people from asserting themselves and setting their house in order. The Hindi Kesari insinuates that the Khyber Railway has been opened not with the object of promoting trade but with that of establishing British supremacy on the Frontier. It says that $2\frac{1}{2}$ crores of rupees of the hard-earned money of India have been wasted in cementing the alliance with Afghanistan. The Vartman writes:—While we are torn by dissensions and mutual estrangement the alien Government is seizing our children and confining them into jails. Those of whom the nation is proud are being taken away from us. Our battle for securing our rights is being suppressed by tyranny and injustice. Our true General, Deshbandhu Das was snatched away from us. The champions of "divide and rule" had their chance and our unity disappeared. How long will the votaries of the nation remain asleep and when will that day come when we shall be able to raise our head before other nations of the world and declare that freedom is our birth-right and home rule is our government? The votaries of the nation should finally decide that either they will sacrifice themselves at the altar of the nation or, if they continue to exist they will live as free men. The need is for all of us to be united and to follow one common path, however tedious and wearisome it may be, so that every child of the nation may be entitled to sacrifice himself. Movements confined to a small scale do not succeed. Success is achieved only when the whole nation marches forward. We shall have to undergo greater sufferings than other countries. In another article the paper remarks:—The British bureaucracy is always ready to crush any political movement which is inaugurated in India. The manœuvres practised by it to destroy the non-co-operation movement and its attacks upon the swarajist leaders are matters of common knowledge. Most of the accused in the Kakori dacoity case are innocent and are merely being made victims of bureaucratic tactics. But the object of the bureaucracy cannot succeed by means of these irresponsible doings. Repression may achieve temporary success but it is bound to fail in the long run. Its natural outcome can only be that a feeling of hatred may spread in the whole of the country and the educated as well as the non-educated population may become staunch opponents of its irresponsible policy. The Prabhat says that the Christian Churches Congress recently held in England has exposed the real form of Christianity in all its nakedness. The Christian missionaries are no longer the apostles of Christ or God but are the agents of Satan. They have now become instruments of promoting the political interests of European nations. Their entry into any country under the guise of religious preachers is only a prelude to the political subjection of that country. What can be more deplorable than this that a religion whose ideal is universal brotherhood should become a handmaid of imperialism? Referring to the agitation in the British press for the abolition of submarines the Aj remarks that the policy of commercial exploitation is the root cause of all the troubles, and it is desirable in the interest of the peace of the world that it should be thrown overboard first of all.

Sivaji, the son-in-law of Alamgir, was a good Hindu ;
He was full of enthusiasm for the Hindu faith ;
He was devoted to cows and Brahmans.
Those who are the enemies of these two are not the sons of India.
The life of the hero of Maharashtra conveys the lesson,
That Jats, Gujars, Rajputs, Vaishyas and Khatris should, according to their means,
Become again the true protectors of these in the country.
Vote for that person who is the supporter of the Hindu faith.

The Viceroy-Designate.

The Bharat Dharma writes :—Although we shall welcome the new Viceroy as the representative of the King-Emperor we have no hopes that we shall get rid of our slavery at his hands. The bureaucratic system of government is so peculiar that even the best of rulers has to adapt himself to it. The new Viceroy will devote his attention to agricultural development which means that the agricultural industry of the country will also pass away into the hands of British capitalists. Lord Birkenhead, Lord Reading and the Governor of the United Provinces are all with one voice talking of rural reform and agricultural development. There can be a political reason for this. Most of our movements, like non-cooperation and the destruction of Councils, have failed. There remains only the work of village organization and of the awakening of the cultivators by means of which the people can be prepared for civil disobedience. The new Viceroy will control this under the plea of agricultural development and will thus take away this weapon also from the hands of Indians. India at present requires a Viceroy who can unravel the existing political entanglements. The Prem thinks that all the current talk about agricultural development in India is a fresh noose to entangle Indians. It fears lest this should be a move to set cultivators and zamindars by the ears and keep them aloof from the influence of the Swaraj party.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Indian Daily Telegraph appeals to Hindus to return only such candidates to local bodies as pledge themselves to support Hindu interests and writes :—"We still hold that the Hindus have reasons, as Hindus, to turn out from the (Lucknow) municipality every swarajist who sat quiet and immovable when Dr. Lakshmi Sahai moved for the closure of the park for the Namaz. If a single Hindu voter gave his vote to a candidate that would not agree to safeguard his religious rights, then there is no use in helpless squeals next time the police stops the procession or the Deputy Commissioner dictates the timings and routes for the Ram Dol or Dassehra processions. A community that will not organize itself under such intense provocation deserves only to be treated with contempt." The Garhwali says that since the Unity Conference at Delhi there have been several Hindu-Muslim riots in the country and the leaders have begun to despair of Hindu-Muslim unity and have adopted an attitude of utter apathy towards the problem. This should be a matter of deep shame and disgrace to India and her children. In the midst of such discouraging atmosphere everybody will welcome Maulana Abul Kalam Azad's appeal to settle once for all the question of cow-sacrifice and of music before mosques and make the field clear for political progress. It is to be hoped that leaders will ponder over the appeal and devise measures to educate public opinion to subordinate religious and communal interests to political and national ones. The Prabhat writes :—The problem of music before mosques is getting complicated and the Government has set a spark to the powder by breaking the established practice and prohibiting music before mosques during the Hindu festivals. The executive council of the Hindu Mahasabha has been compelled to decide at its Delhi meeting that the Hindus should devise means for preventing all interference in the discharge of their religious obligations. If the Government persists in its policy the Hindu Sabha may have to decide upon satyagraha. The Government's attempt to stop music before mosques is so unjustifiable that Maulana Abul Kalam Azad in his recent statement has recognized the right of Hindus to play music before mosques. Muslim leaders should impress upon their misguided followers that they are in the wrong in seeking to stop Hindu music before mosques.

Indians in the Colonies.

The Leader writes:—We are curious to know in some detail what is the nature of the information the Government of India want and which can only be collected on the spot by a deputation in order that they may take up a strong attitude against the atrocious anti-Asiatic legislation now before the Union Parliament. A conference between their accredited representatives and the Union Government may prove useful, or may not. But what Mr. G. F. Paddison, I. C. S., the hon. Mr. Syed Raza Ali, their still unnamed colleague, and Mr. Secretary G. S. Bajpai are expected or will be able to achieve, is not clear to us. We think the deputation unnecessary and the personnel unsatisfactory. The Medina points out that according to the Smuts-Gandhi agreement a limited number of educated Indians who would come to improve the condition of their fellow-countrymen would be admitted into South Africa every year. When the British Empire became free from the dangers, fears and perplexity of the War this agreement was most dishonestly altered to mean that educated Indians would be allowed to stay in South Africa only so long as they worked purely as teachers and religious leaders. This detestable breach of faith has left the educated Indian community at the mercy of officials and now whenever the Government regard the stay of any educated Indian to be opposed to their interests they make use of this agreement to expel him from the country. Only recently when the South African Indians decided to appeal to the Privy Council against the oppressive laws of the country the Union Government expelled all educated Indians except four who were employed as teachers. The result has been that the poor uneducated public is now unable to voice its views. The truth is that the Union Government wants to clear South Africa of non-white races. This is its firm determination and no protests and memorials can avail. Only a free India can devise a solution for this.

The Maharaja of Nabha.

Referring to reports of the "sufferings of Nabha—the brave ruler who is practically interned by the British because he was independent," the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—It would, we think, be a revelation indeed if His Highness should write to the press about his sufferings. We too have heard rumours about His Highness not having received a single pice since he abdicated "voluntarily." We have heard that even his letters are censored and that his movements are shadowed by the C. I. D. Above all, Nabha, the throne of his ancestors, which he loves so well, is mal-administered. We must confess to a deep feeling of humiliation that such vindictiveness should characterize any civilized Government towards a prince. To the pangs of abdication the pangs of privation are added. The people of the State are crying for their ruler. And if to-morrow His Highness should appeal to the people of India, the sympathy of the millions would flow unto him. It is for the princes of India to assert boldly that if the Government intends to use Nabha as an example to terrorize them, the Government is mistaken. We ask the Government of India whether it would be willing to allow two princes, one chosen by Nabha and one by themselves, to inquire into the present administration of the State under the British during the last two years and a half. Commenting on the allegations referred to by the Indian Daily Telegraph the Bhavishya writes:—Indian princes dance to the tune of the British Government and Maharaja Ripudaman Singh furnishes an example of the misery of those among them who are self-respecting. To-day Maharaja Ripudaman Singh is helpless, forlorn and unprotected. It is a pity that bound in the chains of slavery, Indians have not the power to help him.

The Skeen Committee.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The Skeen Committee inquiry is governed by restrictions and limitations which only reveal that the Government is unwilling to throw open careers of the Army to Indians. The questionnaire is also scrappy and even misleading. It would seem that the dearth of Indians in the Army is due to some defective publicity arrangements. The argument of those who deny to Indians offices in the Army on a large scale is a stale one. They say: "Indians have not the martial instinct of the Europeans; they are not so valorous and venturesome." Indians made good officers in the Army before the English came to India. They ceased to make good officers after the establishment of British rule. Something must, indeed, be very rotten with an administration which saps the genius of a race. The truth is, Indians have greater power of endurance. They have capacity to bear the hardships inevitably associated with a military career.

Sir Fazli Hasan's re-appointment as Minister.

The Leader writes: We wonder if there was an understanding that Sir Fazli Hasan should be re-appointed Minister when he was no longer wanted by the Government of India. That the elected President of the Council should be appointed Minister, to vacate the office when the permanent incumbent came back, and possibly to seek election afresh to the quasi-judicial office of President, is suggestive more of the familiar "postings and transfers" of permanent officials than of responsible parliamentary government in which the accountability of both President and Minister is to the Legislature and the head of the Executive Government plays very little part. Yet these persistent practitioners of bureaucratic methods sit in judgement over the conduct of the Legislature and solemnly pronounce a verdict in their own favour and against the people and their accredited representatives. If the present system is an experiment, how can the experiment succeed in such adverse conditions?

The Late Queen Alexandra.

The Leader writes:—A whole Empire is plunged into mourning to-day on the passing away of a gracious and benevolent queen who had endeared herself to the humblest of her subjects by her graciousness, the grace of her womanliness, and the deep sympathy which she brought to bear upon the numerous philanthropic activities through which she demonstrated her great power of doing good.

Muslim affairs.

The Medina publishes an appeal by Mr. Shaukat Ali to Muslims to become members of the Reception Committee of the Cawnpore Khilafat Conference and to help it in every way. The Zulqarnain regrets that the Wetherill Committee has not yet published its questionnaire and urges that its scope of inquiry should be widened. It is a pity that Hindu papers are trying to prove that Muslims are sufficiently advanced educationally and require no special help. The Hamdam attributes the difficulties experienced by Muslim boys in securing admission to Government schools in the United Provinces to the paucity of Muslim headmasters and requests the Hon'ble Minister of Education to appoint Muslim second masters to the five forthcoming vacancies in that cadre.

Foreign affairs.

The Medina warns the League of Nations that the Turks can never forego Mosul and if more importance is attached to British might than to right, a plebiscite might be held. Ample evidence of Turkish determination is afforded by the massing of 25,000 troops on the Iraq frontier and if war ensues it would be a terrible and decisive one for Islam. In another article the same paper appeals to Indian Muslims to sink their differences in regard to the Nejd-Hedjaz question. The re-installation of any member of the Sheriffian dynasty on the throne of the Hedjaz is out of the question, as the family has incurred much public odium on account of its disservices to Islam. Nor can Emir Ali govern the country without foreign aid which is bound to open the door for non-Muslim intrigues. The Khilafatists do not want to place Ibn Saud either on the throne, but they cannot subscribe to the dictum that the Hedjaz is meant only for the Hedjazis. Muslims all the world over are equally interested in their holy land and it would be best to adopt the Khilafatist plan of establishing the rule of an assembly of Muslim Powers over the Hedjaz and thus barring for ever non-Muslim aggression.

Political propaganda.

The Indian Daily Telegraph complains of the partiality of Government for "vested classes" and the sufferings of the tenantry from all kinds of arbitrary exactions by the landlords and says:—Thus driven to despair by our own people and humiliated by our so-called "ma-bap," we turn to labour as the last resource so that, if democracy has any meaning, labour, by its sheer weight of numbers, will triumph where reason and justice have failed. There is, therefore, nothing politically wrong in seeking the co-operation of the poorest of the poor to change the destiny of a country in which labour especially stands to gain rather than lose, as it has already reached a state that cannot possibly be worse under any other régime. The Prem congratulates "Raja" Mahendra Pratap on his birthday anniversary and remarks:—There is great need for a selfless and active man like the Raja Sahib for the regeneration of India. Although we may not agree with the policy and programme of the Raja Sahib, yet even his enemies will respect him for his sacrifices and sufferings in the cause of the country. Even a most confirmed pessimist can have no doubt about the bright future and regeneration of India, so long as such devoted men of action are born in the country. Circumstances may well prevent us to-day from appreciating his actions and sacrifices, but free India will surely sing his praises. Commenting on the acquittal of a tea-planter of Assam who was charged with the murder of a coolie, the Pratap sarcastically observes:—After all, there was nothing serious. Only an Indian had been killed. Well, has anyone ever investigated the cause of the death of insects and mosquitoes? Why should a hue and cry be raised over the death of the coolie? It is only through good fortune that one gets kicks from white feet. The Aj wonders why political offences are found to be rampant when there is on foot some popular political movement or some strong agitation for the grant of political concessions to Indians and says:—The explanation seems to lie in the fact that the Criminal Investigation Department scent sedition where there is none, for otherwise their prospects of promotion, nay, their very occupation, would be gone. In a country where the interests of the rulers and the ruled clash with one another Government is bound to depend more and more on the help of sycophants and the Criminal Investigation Department. How the Criminal Investigation Department have made the lives of many an innocent man miserable and how the law has been so framed as to make its task easy is evident from the fact that the Criminal Investigation Department does not spare even such philanthropic persons as Mr. Andrews and that the accused in the Kakori dacoity case were shut up in prison without the magistrate's permission. How is it that the supposed omniscience of the police which succeeds in tracing revolutionary activities does not help Government in putting a stop to these activities altogether?

The Swaraj party.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The resolution of the Thana conference supporting responsive co-operation must convince the Nehruites that the time has come when facts have to be faced and when the game of bluff must end. The landslide in favour of responsive co-operation is the assertion of practical as against the imaginary truth. The Nehru policy has also been responsive co-operation, but he has not the courage to say so in view of the forthcoming elections. The Aj does not agree with the views of Lala Lajpat Rai on the discipline of the Swaraj party and remarks that Pandit Motilal Nehru's opinion regarding the discipline of the party is quite sound but that the policy of the party is fickle and calculated to mislead the people. It is now absolutely necessary to change it. Referring to the speeches of Mr. Aney on responsive co-operation at Nagpur, the same paper wonders how the followers of such policy can obstruct administration after accepting office and taking the oath of allegiance for good administration. If responsive co-operators are tired of remaining out of office and do not want to prepare the people for civil disobedience either, they may accept office and co-operate with Government but it is idle for them to throw mud on the liberals by attacking their convictions. In yet a third article the same paper surmises that the whole of Maharashtra, Berar and the Maratha C. P. will raise the standard of revolt against the Swaraj party. It remarks that if Pandit Motilal Nehru had exercised moderation and had not openly opposed responsive co-operation the dissensions in the Swaraj party would have been avoided for some time more although their outbreak was inevitable sooner or later. The Bharat Dharma says that though Pandit Motilal Nehru has been following the policy of responsive co-operation off and on yet he curses the Maharashtra leaders for advocating its open adoption. Undiluted co-operation, pure non-co-operation, and pure obstruction having all failed, responsive co-operation should now be given a trial, as it appears to be the only suitable and practical policy in the existing circumstances. The country is bound to support it sooner or later. Pandit Motilal Nehru cannot manage things much longer without giving up his overweening and intolerant attitude. He cannot have peace after provoking the people of Maharashtra. Ths Bhavishya deprecates the propaganda in favour of responsive co-operation and says:—In our opinion the time for co-operation has not yet come, for there has been no change in the heart of Government. By spurning the small demand for reforms put forward by Pandit Motilal Nehru in the Assembly the Government has shown that it does not require our co-operation, but relies on repression alone. We would, therefore, request our Maharashtra brethren to give up the sham of responsive co-operation and come to the right path. No country in the world has ever obtained swaraj by means of co-operation. Our non-violent struggle for independence can be successful only when the whole country from Cape Comorin to the Himalayas and from Karachi to Assam is organized. The Medina observes that Messrs. Kelkar and Jayakar, who regard themselves as the followers of Mr. Tilak and are posing as ardent sponsors of responsive co-operation, are most conservative and reactionary in spite of being men of the new light. Mr. Tilak had adumbrated his plan of responsive co-operation long ago when the deluded people of India had not yet become fully convinced of (the efficacy of) non-cooperation with Britain. But when Indians realised that howsoever they might extend the hand of co-operation the Government would not respond, the principle of non-cooperation alone was regarded as acceptable. With this conviction and after the famous co-operation speeches of Mr. Das one is led to suspect the patriotism of any nationalist who raises the antiquated cry of responsive co-operation at this late hour of the day, and, and even if he is regarded as above suspicion he must surely be thought to be labouring under a delusion. What is the good of ministerships and presidentships when the powers do not exist? Responsive co-operation can only be mutual but the responsive co-operation of Messrs Kelkar and Co. means subjection and serfdom.

Congress politics.

The Prem writes :—The political future of the next year depends upon the success of the Cawnpore Congress. If the people have become tired of subjection and do not want to see the dance of autocracy on the bosom of the country they should strive hard and whole-heartedly for the success of the Congress. They should once more sound the clarion call so that even dead hearts may be electrified, the indolent may be infused with a sense of duty and the "loud laughter" of autocracy may cease for good in the country. Under the heading "The Cawnpore Congress" the Vartman publishes a poem which translated stands as below :—

Let us wipe out oppression, and crush the haughtiness of the enemies.

So long as we live we cannot bear to see the wicked assaulting us.

Let us go to the Cawnpore Congress, let us make full efforts (to make it a success).

Let us uphold the honour of the Motherland and remove misrule.

O Vyathit, (writer's nom-de-plume) our countrymen who are worshippers of love and lovers of liberty,

Should all go there to remove our affliction.

The Shankar says :—Indian leaders of all shades of opinion are committing moral suicide. The co-operators while wishing in their heart of hearts to get rid of British rule loudly proclaim that they want to keep the British connexion intact. The responsive co-operators while preaching obstruction and co-operation alike talk of getting half power, but have set their heart on getting all powers. The obstructionists profess to follow a policy of obstruction but co-operate in practice. The non-cooperators know that non-violence in mind, word and deed is impossible and that the spinning-wheel cannot achieve anything, yet hold that non-cooperation will succeed. The leaders say one thing in private and another on the platform. All this only goes to propagate moral suicide in the country. It is this sin of moral suicide which is ruining the country.

Cotton excise duty.

Referring to the suspension of the collection of the cotton excise duty the Leader writes :—Of course we are thankful for this act of combined benevolence and wisdom, but what the Governor-General has now done should have been done, as it could have been, at the beginning of the financial year in the complete form of repeal of the duty. The next best thing would have been to have done the present act before the mill-workers, numbering a lakh and a half, went on strike. But Lord Reading's Government were obdurate. They elected to stuff their ears with cotton and remain deaf to all appeals of reason and common-sense. If the Government of India had been a responsible national Government they would have been compelled to be a Government of patriots and wise men. In another article the paper writes :—We trust that the repeal of the duty will not be made an excuse to postpone further relief to the provinces. There should be a further reduction, and a substantial reduction, of provincial contributions even if there can be no total remission. We also hope that there will be no reduction of the import duty consequent on the repeal of the countervailing excise duty. In yet another article the paper writes :—A grievance thirty years old has been removed and Lord Reading's viceroyalty will be remembered for the removal of a great fiscal wrong.

Political prisoners' conference.

The Pratap supports the proposal to hold a political prisoners' conference during the Congress session and suggests that this conference should be made a permanent organization instead of a temporary one. It adds :—The need for such an organization is established by the fact that even our educated countrymen are not aware of the difficulties, sufferings and sacrifices undergone by political prisoners. The function of this conference will not be to relate prisoners' stories or dwell upon the brutal treatment meted out to prisoners in Indian jails but to provide material for a connected history of Indian revolution. It is the political prisoners' conference and not the labours of Vincent Smith and the report of Justice Rowlatt which can fill up the omissions in this important portion of Indian history. Another important work which this conference can do is to keep note of Indians in exile in foreign lands and work for their relief. The Sada-i-Muslim appeals to the public to support the political prisoners' association, as many released political prisoners die of destitution and disease after release. If the public shows indifference, no one would dare to make bold sacrifices for his country.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Aj is furious over the news of the attack on a Hindu marriage party at Allahabad while it was passing by a mosque and says that it is the duty not only of Hindus but of every thoughtful citizen including Muslims to oppose this intolerable and altogether new demand which is meant to pick up quarrels with the Hindus. The Abhyudaya says :—As we wrote on the occasion of Dasehra, the problem of music before mosques will give rise to disputes every day. The authorities who support the unjust demand of Muslims should see the result of their partizanship. The support of unjust demands only encourages further unjust demands and strangles truth and justice. So long as Hindus do not stand up for the protection of their rights we must entertain no hopes from the authorities or any other power on earth. If the Hindus of Allahabad want to preserve their right they too will have to make a show of strength like the Muslims. If they think that to play music is their right they will have to risk their life and die for its protection.

Jails of the United Provinces.

The Vartman publishes a series of articles complaining of the ill-treatment of prisoners in jails in the United Provinces. In the course of them it says:—The main reason why Indian prisoners in jails are subjected to brutal tyranny is that we have no means of ascertaining what is happening to them inside the jails, and even if we do occasionally succeed in getting information about them, we cannot procure any proof in support of it. Prisoners often die as a result of getting a severe beating and are reported by the doctor to have died of some disease. The jail officials are ever ready to beat the prisoners on the slightest excuse, although the Jail Manual expressly forbids them to do so. How can those officials who are often found to stoop so low as to accept petty bribes of a rupee and steal loaves of bread from the prisoners' meals claim any superiority over the prisoners? The writer saw with his own eyes that fuel, carpets and other jail property were often taken away for personal use by jailors. He suggests the following means, among others, for the reform of jails :—Regular visits to jails by members of the Legislative Council ; provision for the supply of wholesome food and decent clothing to prisoners ; stopping of begar work ; provision for the treatment of sick prisoners by outside hakims and vaidyas and permission to prisoners to say their prayers without any let or hindrance.

Elections to local bodies.

The Anand says that only those persons should be returned to the municipal boards who pledge themselves to champion the cause of the Hindus in religious matters. The dilapidated temple at Amethi, the Mahabir temple in the Aminabad park involved in the arti-nimaz controversy, and other demolished and desecrated buildings call upon the voters to save their religion from pseudo-Hindus. The Gyan Shakti urges that it is the Hindu Sabha and not the Congress which should participate in the forthcoming elections. The latter will suffer if it involves itself in the elections. The elections are a contest between the Hindu Sabha and the Khilafat League. The Congress should take part in the elections only after the system of communal representation has been abolished and a joint electorate established. The Aj writes :—Even in connexion with the municipal and district boards we should have as our representatives men who do not help the bureaucracy directly or indirectly in hampering the country in the struggle for national liberty. It is wrong to say that national liberty has nothing to do with the administration of a town or a district. The local boards can be utilized in helping forward the programme of provincial and national leaders to compel the bureaucracy to grant swaraj to the people. We have no hopes of swaraj being offered. We want to take it by every peaceful and legitimate means. The voters should therefore vote only for the nominees of the Congress and not for those who have seceded from the national assembly and claim a monopoly of talent for themselves.

The Kakori train dacoity case.

The Sainik wants to know why about thirty respectable citizens were thrown into prison at the nod of the police, when the police could not collect evidence of their complicity in the Kakori train dacoity case even within two months after their arrest. What was the harm if the police had not arrested the men who were subsequently released on bail, when it had no evidence against them? Would the British Empire have been endangered if the police had not harassed them in this way? The Pratap protests against the action of the magistrate in the Kakori train dacoity case in keeping the accused Ram Krishna Khanna in his bungalow and arranging, according to his desire, an interview between him and one Baba Hazara of Lucknow and remarks:—This behaviour of the authorities towards Ram Krishna gives rise to suspicion. What was the need for the magistrate to bother himself to comply with his wishes? It is indeed very mysterious that a particular individual should be allowed to remain outside the jail continuously for eight hours and enjoy himself in the bungalow when objections are made to the release of other accused even on bail.

Third class passengers.

The Medina appeals to Indians all over the country to join the agitation in favour of humane and sympathetic treatment of third class railway passengers. The high-handed and rich railway officials have been ever indifferent to their woes and it is up to every patriotic Indian to create public opinion on the subject. The East Indian Railway was so far the most comfortable but with its passing under State control we cannot have any hope from it either. If the love of comfort of rich passengers demands it the number of passenger trains may be increased. Trains may be started every five hours. The time-tables should be framed with due regard for the convenience of all. There should be more compartments for passengers and a smaller number should be allowed in each compartment and this rule should be strictly enforced. Comforts should be provided in waiting rooms and railway employees should be required to cultivate politeness and sympathy and then all grievances will automatically disappear.

The problem of unemployment.

Referring to the scheme of land colonization in Travancore in which special concessions and facilities will be afforded to those who take large areas for cultivation and one of the objects of which is "to remove from among the educated classes the canker of unemployment," the Leader writes:—The feasibility of starting a similar scheme in the interests of the educated unemployed youths of the United Provinces deserves serious consideration. It is our view that agricultural development on modern lines can be facilitated if some of our educated youths take to agriculture and utilize the information available in the publications issued periodically by the departments of Agriculture in various provinces.

The Commonwealth of India Bill.

Commenting on the Bill the Pratap says:—The history of the attainment of self-government by the British colonies shows that rights cannot be obtained without a show of strength. We, therefore, regard it below our dignity as well as detrimental to the cause of national organization to build our hopes on the favour of Englishmen. Moreover, Dr. Besant's Bill does not represent the aspirations of the new awakened India. We can never get swaraj within the Empire and even if we get it, it would be a fictitious one. We cannot therefore accept the definition of swaraj as given in this Bill. Though we are not able to attain complete freedom at present, we think it necessary to keep it as our goal.

Indians in the Colonies.

The Aj says that though Indians in South Africa and Mrs. Sarojini Naidu are utterly dissatisfied with the personnel of the official deputation to South Africa, yet the Indian bureaucracy is determined to send the same worthless deputation there. Does not this attitude show that in reality the Indian bureaucracy does not sympathize with the grievances of the South African Indians and that what it is doing is only for show? Our condition is deplorable. Still we believe that the bureaucracy is siding with Indians. If we have half as much faith in God and in self-reliance as we have in the bureaucracy, our condition can be improved in a very short time.

Local Self-Government in notified and Town Areas.

In the opinion of the Bhavishya the Notified and Town Area Committees are mere frauds and do not possess any real power. The only duty of the members of these bodies is to obey explicitly the orders of the town magistrates. How can there be local self-government in such circumstances? The Act should be so amended as to make these bodies really self-governing like municipal boards.

Historical Records Commission.

Commenting on the "invaluable work" of the Historical Records Commission, the Leader writes:—We should be grateful to the Punjab Government for the great care that they are devoting to the work of preservation, cataloguing and press-listing of historical records in their possession. We wish all Provincial Governments would take similar interest in the preservation of such records and give all possible help to the Commission in their work.

Muslim affairs.

The Medina thinks that but for the perseverance of Mr. Kitchlew, the All-Indian Tanzeem Committee would have been regarded as a body of self-seeking ji-huzoors and appeals to the powers that be in that organization to dispel the suspicion that the Congress and Khilafat meetings at Cawnpore are sought to be injured by holding the Tanzeem Conference at Aligarh.

Indian States.

The Naiyar-i-Azam publishes a contributed article in which the writer complains that Muslims are being excluded from every department of the Jaipur State and are being deprived of their jagirs in spite of their loyal services in the past.

The Co-operative movement.

Mr. Ram Nath Lal "Suman," writing in the Aj, suggests that in order to increase the utility of the co-operative movement all its publications should be published in the Indian vernaculars, as the mass of the people who have to deal with it are ignorant of the English language.

ALLAHABAD:

CONFIDENTIAL. No. 49 of 1925.

NOTE ON THE PRESS.

UNITED PROVINCES OF AGRA AND OUDH.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 12, 1925.

Foreign affairs.

The Aj condemns the proclamation of martial law in the district of Damascus and Haraun and remarks:—Those who, being unable to tolerate the terrible atrocities and blood-boiling insults of the French, are fighting for freedom are styled as brigands, while the imperialists who in the name of the League of Nations suck the blood of other countries are regarded as virtuous rulers. When Bulgaria and Greece quarrelled the League of Nations at once intervened and won a cheap name, but why does it not prevent the murders which the French are committing in its name. In condemning these murders Mr. Baldwin has referred to his "difficulties." Perhaps he remembered the Jallianwala Bagh and the bombing of unarmed men and women of Mesopotamia. The diabolical dance of European imperialists in Western Asia is sure to bear fruit and even Europe will not be able to save itself from the fire produced by the world-wide discontent against the League and its supporters. The same paper says that the reason for the encomiums which are being showered on the Locarno Treaty and on Sir Austen Chamberlain is simply this that the Conservative Government have done nothing so far to impress their electors. In the opinion of the paper it is Germany and not Britain and Italy which has shown the greatest generosity and love of peace in this case. If France had not been busy with the Moroccan and Syrian affairs she would not have allowed her friend across the sea to take the credit for nothing. As regards the self-praise of Britain we cannot forget that it was because of her opposition that the resolution about the treaty for mutual protection could not be carried in the League of Nations. The Medina disbelieves Sir Austen Chamberlain's statement in Parliament that the British are blockading the Tangier Zone only to check the secret traffic in arms, and says that whatever pretexts British statesmen may devise to conceal their crafty projects, it is plain that the real object is a blockade of the Moroccan army which was announced by France after her defeat and repulse. The Najat remarks that the Mosul, Riffian and Syrian questions have brought about an Anglo-French alliance for the destruction of civilization and the desolation of the world. England will help France in crushing the Syrians and the latter will co-operate with the former if a war breaks out over the Mosul question. But these activities on the part of England and France will cause unity among the Turks, Syrians, Palestinians and the tribes on the frontier of Mesopotamia and Persia, with the result that the "mandate system" which has been imposed upon weak nations will come to an end and the East will be saved for ever from imperialism. The Medina suspects that France is handing over to the Druses Syrian territory adjoining Palestine simply to give Britain a pretext to crush the independence movement in Syria. British imperialistic lust can never tolerate that the East also should breathe the air of liberty. May God save our warriors from the moves of the enemies. In another article the same paper utters a warning that the Syrians will never tolerate in their country Emir Abdullah who is acting as a puppet of the British in Palestine. In yet a third article the same paper denounces as pure propaganda the appeal of English clergymen in favour of the continuance of British rule in Iraq for the protection of Christians there. See what new calamity this fight for gold of the oil-sellers and priests of England brings for the poor East. In still another article the paper urges Indian Muslims to make an open declaration of their policy in regard to Mosul before matters come to a head so that Britain may know what internal and external difficulties she would have to face if she elects for war. Indian Muslims are not now the Muslims of 1914. The class of pirs over which Sir Michael O'Dwyer reposed so much confidence has now become weak and Turkish bullets cannot now be stopped by their incantations. We pray to God that the Turks may get Mosul without war, but we must, at the same time, warn Indian Muslims that they should not sell their souls for a few coins as they will at last have to render account to God. In a fifth article the same paper supports the appeal of the Khilafat committee for funds for the relief of the refugees of Medina, and says that as winter with all its severities is approaching the time is for practical help and not for academic discussions on the responsibility of Ibn Saud or Ibn Sheriff for the sorry plight of these people.

Political propaganda.

Referring to the revolutionary movements and changes in various Asiatic countries after the war the Swadhin writes :—The present wave is much more fierce and terrible than the waves which have been rising from time to time on account of the personal autocratic rule of kings and which disappeared after putting an end to the personalities of these kings. The wave of liberty which is at present passing over the whole world is the result of the despotic domination of some powerful nations over the weaker ones. The rule of Englishmen over India is also like the grinding of one nation by another in the mill of subjection. Englishmen who number only about five crores and a half have put such a noose of their rule round the necks of various countries and nations that they are fattening themselves by depriving the people of those countries of their food and making them dance to their tune. The Aj says :—Among the Asiatic countries the history of India and China is very heart-rending indeed. India became truly dependent from the time she came under the British rule, for it was only under the British rule that Indians were deprived of arms and were excluded from high posts under the Crown and India began to be governed not in her own interests, as had been the case under the Muslim and other rulers who made India their home, but in the interests of foreigners. The difference between the rulers and the ruled is being perpetuated by the foreigners and Indians are being humiliated at each and every step. This system of governing India from outside was called "satanic" by Mahatma Gandhi and the National Congress aims at delivering the country from it. The whole world has become, so to say, a kind of pasture for the whitemen to feed upon. Referring to Sir Joynson-Hicks' remarks in his recent Manchester speech that the British conquered India by the sword and would retain it by the sword, the Shakti welcomes such outspokenness and wishes that such statements of arrogant imperialist British statesmen may open the eyes of Indians for good, and this dose of insult may serve as a bitter medicine to remove slavishness from the heart of the country. The Vartman contends that India's demand for swaraj is old and not the product of the imagination of the new generation as some Englishmen think. It says that if the idea of liberty continues to grow at the present rate, a day may come when India will be of one mind on the question of complete independence just as to-day it is unanimous on that of colonial self-government. The question of complete independence is, therefore, of great importance and should be discussed threadbare in the forthcoming Congress and, if necessary, a resolution should also be passed on the subject. Referring to the Associated Press report about the decision of the British Cabinet to send a Royal Commission to India the Pratap says :—Our rulers are at present following a mild policy. They are trying to destroy our national awakening by coaxing the Muslims, by patting the untouchables, by determining to end the swaraj party with the help of the black laws of Bengal and by cajoling the liberals and are striving to restore our faith in the British sense of justice by offering us small baits. The Government have found a good opportunity in the present split in the Swarajist camp to sow further seeds of discord among Indian politicians by such offers. Indians will do well not to be led away by them. Writing in the Hamdam, M. Azad Subhani eulogises communism as the religion of universal brotherhood and asserts that not Karl Marx and Lenin, but Islam and its Prophet were its true progenitors. It is the most efficacious remedy for bringing about the freedom of subject peoples, removing the weakness of the weak, establishing happy international relations and welding all nations into one. The gist of this religion of brotherhood is contained in the maxim that so long as a single person is starving no one has a right to take delicious food. In an editorial the paper dwells on the indifference of the Government towards the rights of labourers and citing the recent sufferings of the Bombay mill-hands as a case in point urges Indian labour to take a prominent part in the struggle for freedom in order to get their grievances redressed at the hands of "a free Indian Government." In yet another article the same paper refers to the report about the appointment of a Royal Commission on Indian Reforms and says that nothing good can be expected at the hands of the present Conservative Government and Lord Reading has infused so much despotism into the Indian administration that every fresh step in regard to the Reforms only inflicts another cut on India's already lacerated heart. The Muddiman Committee held the Indians to be undeserving of any concession and Lord Reading returned from his conversations in England with a blood-thirsty sword hanging by his side.

The Kakori train dacoity case.

Referring to the release of some of the accused in the Kakori train dacoity case the Swadhin writes:—What an injustice it is that the police kept these innocent persons in jail for about two months without any justification and is still making the rest of the accused rot in jail in order to collect evidence against them. If such a thing had occurred in a country having self-government the police would have fared very badly at its hands. But this country is in the hands of aliens whose whole power lies in the police and military frightfulness. The Sainik remarks:—If there was a cart-load of evidence against the accused why have some of them been released now? We challenge the Marris Government to produce evidence against these men? Why were they arrested and detained in jails for two months? Why were the district and municipal boards elections held on the occasion of the Congress three months previous to their usual time? Why was the session of the Legislative Council not held in November? Does not this chain of events create a suspicion in the public mind that what was done or is being done is intended to place impediments in the way of the Congress? Why are these things being done? Is the maxim, a drowning man catches even at a straw being translated into action? Is it being thought that the growing power of the Congress can be checked by such things? If so, we pity the intellect which can conceive such things. The Pratap writes:—The action of the police in suddenly arresting and then releasing some of the accused in the case shows that at the time of the arrest the police adopted a reprehensible policy and that the men who have now been released have been put to so much worry simply on account of the crooked ways of some C. I. D. officials. We invite the attention of the Local Government to this panicky and hasty policy of the police. The police always tries to prove offences where none exist. If those who hold the reins of the Local Government continue to allow themselves to be duped by the police one day our province too will have to witness the enforcement of the black laws of Bengal. The release of ten men shows that there is not an iota of truth in the talk about the establishment of revolutionary organizations in twenty-three districts and that it was only meant to spread panic in the province and to show to the Government the bug-bear of conspiracy. If there had existed revolutionary organizations in twenty-three districts and the police had received information of them, would only twenty-one men have been implicated in the Kakori affair? Can any one believe that a party of only twenty or twenty-five men had established revolutionary bodies in twenty-three districts? Referring to the discharge of thirteen of the accused, the Medina wants to know why the law is so absurd and foolish that innocent men who rot in dark cells for months and are not even released on bail cannot secure amends for their sufferings. Out of false notions of prestige the authorities will never condemn the blundering police.

Indians in the colonies.

The Leader strongly supports the proposal for the constitution at Allahabad of a non-party organization in furtherance of the interests of Indians abroad. "It has received the support equally of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru. Pandits Gurunadha Sharma and Hari Sankar Dikshit will be the principal workers." The Vartman wonders why a deputation has been sent to South Africa at a time when a deputation of Indians there is coming to India, and says:—It would have been better if the Government of India had postponed its departure till they had listened to the South African deputation. But why should the Government care for the wishes of Indians? They have sent a deputation of their own will and it is possible that its decision may also be one-sided. We have very little hopes from this deputation. It may well wipe off the tears of Indians, but without special efforts it is difficult, if not impossible, for it to secure equal rights for Indians. The Arya

Mitra wonders why the Government of India has deemed it fit to send the deputation to South Africa when neither Indians in this country nor in South Africa have faith in it. The Government should have first listened to the representations of the delegation from South Africa and then decided to send a deputation there if necessary. The deplorable condition of Indians in South Africa is notorious and has been fully ventilated by authorities on the subject. Everybody knows that Indians in South Africa have fallen victim to ill-treatment owing to colour prejudices. What is required is that the Government of India, if it has the power, should take measures to remove their grievances. It is a mere waste of time and money to send a deputation to inquire into what is already known. The Aj heartily supports the two resolutions regarding the education and the protection of the interests of Indians overseas to be moved by Mr. Benarsi Das Chaturvedi in the forthcoming Congress, and says that it is a matter of shame for the Congress to content itself merely with the expression of sympathy in the matter. It is a question of life and death for Indians abroad and of the honour of India. Shocking atrocities are being committed on Indians in the colonies and specially in South Africa. The South African Premier does not hesitate to express his desire to compel Indians to leave the country by starving them out. If the Congress keeps quiet even at such a juncture it will forfeit its claim to be called a national organization. The Bharat Dharma warns the elected members of the Legislative Assembly against being taken in by the scheme for the emigration of Indians to British Guiana, otherwise they will add to the number of Indians already in a miserable plight in that British colony. It says that if the Guiana Government is really a well-wisher of Indians it should help the repatriation of those Indians who are anxious to return to India out of the "emigration fund" which is their own property or it should arrange for their colonization in the colony. The new scheme for Indian colonization in British Guiana is nothing but a euphamism for the indentured labour system which is only another form of slavery. This scheme has been dictated by utter selfishness and is an unjust and cruel manœuvre to exploit Indian labour for self-indulgence. The Sidaqat regards the official deputation to South Africa as a sham devised by Government to postpone a solution of the difficulties of Indians there which are already fully known to it. Writing in the same strain, the Medina says that retaliatory measures alone can avail.

The cotton excise duty.

The Vartman gives the credit for the suspension of the cotton excise duty to the Bombay labour and says that if agitation had not been carried on against it, it would not have been abolished. This instance shows that success can be achieved in every agitation which is prosecuted with vigour and firmness. It is now necessary to see that this duty is not re-imposed in future. The Abhyudaya congratulates all the parties concerned on Lord Reading's decision to suspend the cotton excise duty and says :—The suspension of the duty marks the end of the injustice which was done to Indians and Indian manufacturers for the benefit of British manufacturers. We wish to impress upon the Government that they should not in future venture to restore this utterly unjust duty on the plea of unfavourable financial position. The Aj also congratulates Lord Reading and says that if he had arrived at this decision at least three months earlier a number of the labourers of Bombay would have been saved from tribulations. The Pratap remarks :—This extremely reprehensible policy of developing the mills of Manchester and Lancashire by strangulating India's trade is going to end to-day. But we fail to understand whether we should call this the kindness of our rulers or justice, the show of honesty or a move to proclaim their sincerity and to throw dust into the eyes of the world. The mere recollection of the atrocities which the selfish rulers of England have perpetrated on India in connexion with the textile industry makes our heart tremble. Now that the Indian textile industry has been completely ruined, Lord Reading has abolished the unjust cotton excise duty. Should we congratulate the Government of India on this ? If we possess any sense of self-respect we should not even thank them, because in doing so they have only partially atoned for an old sin and have not done any favour to us. The Swadhin says :—If the Government had suspended this duty on the first resolution of the Legislative Assembly last year it would have, together with the indigenous manufacturers, earned a good name and would not have suffered so much discredit as it did through its obstinacy. The fatal duty was imposed to encourage the consumption of British goods in this country, and this is why the Government hesitated so much to abolish it. The Sada-i-Muslim commends the statesmanship and foresight shown by Lord Reading in suspending the excise duty, but says that this action would have been more graceful if it had been taken earlier when the Assembly had voted against this duty. It is to be hoped that Lord Reading will now abolish it altogether and also reduce postal charges and railway fares. The Hamdam welcomes the suspension of the duty as a relief to the textile industry which deserves the same treatment as the steel industry. Now the mill-owners will have no excuse for reducing the wages of the poor labourers.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—The striking addresses of two powerful thinkers like Mr. Jayakar and Lala Lajpat Rai have invested the sittings of the Bombay Hindu Maha Sabha with deep significance. Both the utterances are characterized by bold thinking and resolute determination to tackle live problems, not slur over them. There is no mistaking the trend of the Hindu mind. There is no desire for communal representation. The bureaucracy has invented this to enslave India. This must go. Talk of an Indian nation is a dream when communal representation has given birth to political ambitions in the favoured minority. Hindus again are not to keep back from Shuddhi to oblige Maulvis and Christian missionaries. A strong Hindu community will not surely be an obstacle in the attainment of swaraj. With this present combination of bureaucracy and Muslims, the only way to swaraj, in our opinion, is a united Hindu community that cannot be ignored. Referring to the Muslim feeling against music before mosques the Brahman Sarvaswa says.—Like plague and influenza a new epidemic is breaking out in the Muslim community. Its symptom is that the patient feels offended at the sound of music and sometimes even resorts to blows. The Government of India far from combating it is assisting in spreading it. Grief and excitement are prevailing among the Hindus. What we have to urge is that this epidemic cannot be combated by observing hartals, petitioning the authorities and stopping processions and lilas. These are only aggravating it. The only way to fight it out is to present an organized front and to resort to satyagrah where Government puts obstacles in the way. A correspondent writing in the Aj deplores the communal tension and discussing its causes writes :—By its conduct on the occasion of the last Dasehra festival at Panipat and Allahabad the Government has shown that it has not the slightest regard for the Hindus. It sides with Indian Muslims because with their help it wants to strengthen the hold of British imperialism. Will Muslims take a lesson from the awakening in Turkey and Egypt that nationalism is the only path of progress and that religious bigotry is foolish? Criticising Lala Lajpat Rai's presidential address at the Bombay session of the Hindu Maha Sabha, the Hamdam denounces the sangathan movement as not only anti-Muslim, but also anti-national and insinuates that Government which stands to gain from Hindu-Muslim estrangement is instigating the movement. It asks sober Hindu leaders to realise that such an alliance between the Hindus and Government would be fatal to the interests of the country and wishes the Muslims to go on struggling for swaraj even if the Hindus under the influence of their traditional reverence for royalty throw obstacles in their path.

The Maharaja of Nabha.

Referring to the rumour regarding non-payment of allowances to the Maharaja of Nabha, the Abhyudaya says that so far as the ex-Maharaja is concerned he has been gagged and rendered altogether helpless. Now it is for the Government to assure the public mind how far this rumour is true. Commenting on Sir Michael O'Dwyer's attack on the Maharaja, the Aj refers to the latter's challenge to the former and says that by attacking the Maharaja Sir Michael O'Dwyer has rendered a great service inasmuch as he has supported the popular view that the Maharaja was forced to abdicate. The injustice which has been done to the Maharaja and to the princely family of Nabha is sure to be rectified some day. Mal-administration was not confined to Nabha alone. It is to be found in British India also. Here too people are confined without trial. The chiefs of various other states also may do whatever injustice they like to their subjects, but as they keep their masters pleased their mal-administration is turned into good government and mutual praises are exchanged at the time they invite the Viceroy to dinners.

The swaraj party.

Discussing the negotiations between the two sections of the swaraj party the Leader writes :—The tendency in favour of responsive co-operation has been increasing in proportion as the futility of the policy of obstruction and the boycott of high offices of responsibility has been dawning upon the non-cooperators as it does not require much political foresight to say that the victory will lie with those among the Swarajists who want to utilize to the best advantage the existing constitution and to press for a further advance. The Maharashtra leaders are to be congratulated on the courageous fight they have put up in the interests of the country, and, we hope, that party considerations will not prevent them from carrying on the fight, if necessary, until the policy which they consider to be right is adopted.

Military training for Indians.

The Indian Daily Telegraph strongly criticizes the action of the military authorities in refusing to permit a demonstration proposed by the Poona municipality to welcome the University training corps and says:—Unless an explanation is forthcoming, there will be only one answer, namely, that the authorities do not like any enthusiasm for military service to spread among the youths of the country.

The Political sufferers' conference.

The Arya Mitra whole-heartedly supports the holding of the Political Sufferers' Conference at Cawnpore and urges Indian leaders to bestow attention to the question of jail reform so as to improve the lot of Indian prisoners. It is altogether unjustifiable that while white prisoners should be treated well even in jails, their black brethren should be subjected to hellish tortures.

Congress activities.

The Hamdam complains that in spite of the sacrifices undergone by them in the national cause and their keen interest in the Congress, Muslims are not being elected in sufficient numbers as delegates.

Foreign affairs.

THE Prem says that France is now enacting the farce of the proclamation of martial law in Damascus and Hauran in order to give an air of justification to her diabolical atrocities there and thereby save herself from condemnation at the bar of public opinion. Imperialistic powers are freely indulging in cruelty in Morocco and Western Asia, but Britain and America, which always swear by peace, order and civilization are utterly indifferent to it. The Prabhat is not sanguine that the Locarno Pact will usher in an era of peace and good-will in the world and opines that the European nations have concluded the pact not with any sincere and altruistic motive, but with the selfish object of maintaining their domination over Asia and Africa which they have made a field for their exploitation. The Shakti says that the Locarno treaty will give the imperialistic powers of Europe an opportunity to extend their domination in Asia and Africa. It is quite possible that now there may be a war in the near future among Russia, China, Japan, Britain and America for supremacy in Asia. Britain has long been preparing for this war, and the proposed establishment of a naval base at Singapore is one of the preparatory measures. Russia too has not been neglectful in increasing her influence in Central Asia and China. Asia should wake up in time so as to save itself from the clutches of the whites. The Oudh Akhbar disbelieves Mr. Chamberlain's statement that the Locarno Pact is meant to restore peace in Europe first and then all over the world, and inquires whether the League of Nations or its important members are really striving for this object. So far as Asia is concerned the answer to this question is in the negative. What has the League done to stop the barbarous atrocities which France has been perpetrating in Syria? Is the League not responsible for them? Is it not the object of the League or Britain to force the Turks to enter into an agreement which may deprive them of their just right to Mosul? The outstanding fact is that Britain and France have entered into an agreement of mutual aid against the Turks and the Druses. The Medina protests against the support given by Britain to France in her ruthless policy in Syria and regrets that even the League of Nations has not a word to say about the destruction of Damascus. General Sarrail has not been punished; and not satisfied even with rendering 75,000 human beings homeless, the French satans have declared martial law in Damascus and Hauran. There is no justice in the west for weaker nations, but the sacrifices of the Syrians in the cause of freedom cannot fail to bear fruit. Britain cannot but support France in view of her own interests in Palestine and the need for French help in the matter of Mosul, but she must bear in mind that it is even more important to retain the goodwill of Indian Muslims. Indian Muslims should make it a point to respond liberally to Hakim Ajmal Khan's appeal for funds for the relief of the people of Damascus. In another article the same paper quotes a Copenhagen telegram about Turkey placing an order for 50 aeroplanes and says that though this number might appear insignificant when compared with the mighty air forces of the great European Powers, yet if, God forbid, there is a war in Mosul these 50 aeroplanes will be enough to encompass the defeat of Britain, especially when the prayers of Muslims all the world over will be for Turkey. The Hind-i-Jadid regards the decision of the Hague Tribunal on the question of Mosul as unjust and says that as the Turks have done their best to bring about a settlement they will be forced to unsheathe their swords for the protection of their fatherland if the Western Powers do not recognise the claims of Turkey to Mosul, and this would surely cause pain and anxiety to Muslims. The Medina dislikes

the idea of Raza Khan founding a dynasty and says that a son does not necessarily inherit the ability and statesmanship of his father. The doctrine of hereditary kingship is not only ridiculous but also repugnant to Islam.

Political propaganda.

Referring to the conviction of some Communists in England the Prem remarks:—As a result of these convictions the irresponsible Indian Government will become all the more free to indulge in arbitrary ways. These convictions also show how speedily the British nation, a worshipper of liberty, is moving to its fall. The Prabhat says that the recent utterances of Sir Joynson-Hicks regarding the aim of British rule in India will disillusion Indians. These words have been uttered by a responsible British statesman and indicate that those persons are hypocrites who allege that the British rule in India is directed to the advancement of the country. Referring to the Kakori train dacoity case the Prem writes:—Repression is the order of the day in spite of the fact that the political life of the country is at its lowest ebb. The object of repression is to give a long lease of life to the subjection of the people by terrifying them. Recently some youths in the United Provinces were arrested in connexion with the Kakori train dacoity simply on the basis of a khaddar cap. Persons accused of even theft, robbery and other grave offences are released on bail, but the offence of these youths has been held to be too serious to allow their release on bail. The Indian Government and their police always see visions of anarchy. Though there is neither any organized anarchical society in the country these days, nor does any political party wield any effective influence, yet the police of the bureaucracy is proving the existence of horrible and organized conspiracies. The Government is afraid lest during the present peaceful atmosphere Indians should demand the release of political prisoners and of those interned under Regulation III, and the Viceroy-designate on landing in the country should become aware of the real situation and adopt a liberal attitude. Therefore, such a situation is being created before his arrival as may prevent him from slackening the repression which Lord Reading, the apostle of justice, has initiated. The Medina twits Britain on her imposing a protective tariff on imports from Germany while preaching the gospel of free trade in India so earnestly. Is this not selfishness and duplicity?

Congress affairs.

The Anand says that responsive co-operation is the best policy for the country and the Cawnpore Congress should adopt it. If it does so the independents and the Liberals will have no objection in joining it. The Prem remarks that in view of the existing political slackness, mutual dissensions and communal tension, the political horizon of the country is altogether gloomy and discouraging. It is up to the Cawnpore Congress to dispel the gloom by adopting an impressive programme which can stimulate the national consciousness of the people. If the Cawnpore Congress devotes its energy to village organization it will in a short time create an atmosphere necessary for the attainment of swaraj. The Bhavishya contends that self-government on colonial lines cannot ensure peace and prosperity and therefore urges that at its next session the Congress should declare complete independence to be the goal of the country. The Aj says that the great need of the moment is the formulation of a practical and comprehensive programme of work calculated to awaken the masses and infuse new life and vigour among them. In its opinion the present agitation of the Swarajists in the Legislatures depends on the bureaucracy for its success, and if in pursuance of the policy of responsive co-operation Swarajists begin to accept offices also, the bureaucracy will make tools of them and have an easy time. The paper sees no difference between this policy and the liberal policy of petitioning the Government. The obstructionist policy was not bad, but it could only have borne fruit if a persistent agitation had been carried on among the masses and they had been trained for civil disobedience. The paper has no doubt that if swaraj is to be obtained civil disobedience will have to be resorted to sooner or later, and if the people are not given the required training for it now, an armed rebellion would be inevitable. If this is considered to be bad, the only means left open for the people is non-violent civil disobedience. The moment they are ready for it Government will be compelled to discuss a scheme of swaraj with their representatives. The Cawnpore Congress will have assembled in vain if it does not fully consider this problem. In another article the same paper remarks that the bureaucracy will not give to Indians even a crumb from its table unless it is involved in a great difficulty like that of the Great War. The only effective programme for Indians is that of non-violent non-cooperation culminating in civil disobedience.

The cotton excise duty.

The papers generally welcome the suspension of the cotton excise duty, but the more extreme among them characterize it as a belated and partial expiation of the "sin committed by Britain in destroying Indian cotton industry in the past." The Prem says that by suspending the duty Lord Reading has made amends for the injustice which was being done to the Indian textile industry for the protection of the British textile industry for the last thirty years. Perhaps this step was taken to prevent the spread of socialism among the starving labourers thrown out of employment. The Gramvasi, while welcoming the suspension of the duty, points out how the Government, acting in the interests of British mill-owners, imposed the duty upon the Indian textile industry and thereby caused its destruction. It says that the credit for the suspension of the duty does not belong to the Viceroy but to the firmness, sacrifices and sufferings of the Bombay mill-hands. This shows that not through excited speeches and mendicancy but through sacrifices and sufferings can the Government be made to do something for us. The Sainik writes:—The readers need not be reminded how the sinful policy of the British Government destroyed the Indian textile industry. It was in pursuance of that policy that in the interests of the mill-owners of Lancashire and Manchester a tax was imposed in 1896 on Indian mill-made cotton cloth. The unanimous demand of Indians for the abolition of the said tax was disregarded by Government. Now, however, the tax has been abolished all of a sudden by Lord Reading as if by way of expiation of the guilt. This furnishes a good illustration of how the obstinacy of the bureaucracy can cause incalculable loss to the people of this country. The Garhwali remarks:—Government has shown no generosity in this matter. It has only removed a stigma on its selfish policy. It is to be hoped that the Government of India will not be led to abolish the import duty on cotton goods from Manchester. The Bharat Jiwan says that the suspension of the cotton excise duty has closed a disgraceful chapter of India's economic history. It criticises the British press for being so keen on the enforcement of factory laws in India, and demands that before the enforcement of these laws the Government should protect India's textile industry from the competition of Japan and other foreign countries by imposing import duty on foreign cloth at the highest possible rates. The Hindi Kesari praises the labourers for having forced the Government to suspend the duty by going on strike. It adds:—Organized and peaceful agitation has achieved what could not be secured through petitions and deputations. The labourers should further strengthen their organization and the mill-owners should utilize the opportunity for the industrial development of the country and not for their own selfish ends.

Indian States.

The Hindi Kesari exhorts the people of Indian states to join the Indian States Subjects' Conference and make it a success and says:—The Indian princes are mere puppets in the hands of the Government and do what the Residents like them to do. This makes the people of their states victims to arbitrary excesses and no one listens to their grievances. The Congress is an All-India organization and hence it should not remain indifferent to any part of the country. The Vartman writes:—The people in Indian states are in a very miserable plight and their rulers are extravagant tyrants, who misuse the taxes collected from their subjects, do not give a single pie towards their relief during famines and perpetrate all sorts of religious and political tyrannies on them. Representatives of the rulers and of the subjects of the states should join the Conference and devise means for the removal of the miseries of the people, the prevention of the misuse of money and the establishment of amicable relations between the rulers and the ruled. The Sainik remarks:—The position of Indian states will be one of the most difficult and intricate problems which a self-governing India will have to face. With the exception of a few states ignorance and poverty reign supreme everywhere. Rulers of states are mere puppets in the hands of their residents. They are spending their days in fun, frolic and sport and are leading a life of ease and indolence without caring a straw for the welfare of their subjects who are being tyrannised over by state officials. The subjects of the states should muster strong and contribute their mite to help the deliberations of the Conference and to devise means for the betterment of the lot of crores of so-called men and for the removal of the sensuality of the few and the hunger of the many. Referring to the reports of extravagance indulged in by the Maharaja of Patiala and other princes in their European tours a writer in the Bhavishya observes:—Even ten per cent. of Indians do not get sufficient food and a number of our patriots who are in exile in foreign countries and many of our students in those lands are facing starvation, but these princes do not even condescend to see them, not to say anything of helping them. When, however, even a European ass wishes to see them these princes are ready to receive him with open arms. While Indians are dying of starvation and disease, princes like the Maharaja of Patiala are squandering money in this way. Indians should organize an agitation to stop this.

Indians in Colonies.

The Leader writes:—An article in the Daily Argosy of Guiana on "immigration from India" should be an eye-opener to those in this country who still believe that what is wanted is free Indian labour for the development of the colony. This paper has made it clear that it is not in favour of a genuine colonization scheme and that it wants Indian labourers to work as "coolies" on the sugar plantations for some time at least. . . . The treatment which is being accorded to Indian labourers in Fiji and the plight of Indians in South Africa furnish a warning against further export of Indian labour to the colonies. If British Guiana cannot afford to have genuine Indian colonists, the question of emigration to that colony should be dropped for good. Referring to Dr. Malan's announcement that the Union Government had decided not to agree to a round table conference on the Asiatic question in South Africa the same paper writes:—In the face of this uncompromising attitude of the Union Government was it not an absolute waste of money to send an Indian deputation to South Africa? The Government of India have met with rebuff after rebuff, but they have refused to take the self-respecting course urged by Indian public opinion of adopting retaliatory measures, however limited their scope might be. In all the circumstances of the case the action of the Government of India in sending their weak and ill-chosen delegation to South Africa at the present juncture can only be regarded as an act of lack of self-respect. The Indian public cannot be comforted by the studied moderation and the sweet-tongued conciliatoriness of Lord Reading. The Abhyudaya welcomes the resolutions to be moved by Pandit Benarsi Das Chaturvedi in the forthcoming Congress regarding Indians overseas, but urges that educative propaganda in foreign countries will not be able to achieve any satisfactory results unless accompanied by a vigorous agitation in the country itself to compel the Government of India to take up its cause. When Indians themselves will show a firm determination not to allow the ill-treatment of their compatriots in other lands, they will be able to achieve some success in this direction. The Naiyar-i-Azam is grateful to Government for sending a deputation of able, experienced and influential men to South Africa in time.

Hindu Maha Sabha and Government servants.

Referring to the report of Chit Aryan (Rajamundri) that the Madras Government have prohibited Government servants from becoming members of the Hindu Sabha and from participating in its meetings the Abhyudaya says:—If this report is true, the action of the Madras Government is wholly autocratic. We wonder what necessity impelled the Madras Government to take such an improper step. Is the Hindu Sabha an institution of bomb-throwers or has it for its object the subversion of the Government? The Hindu Maha Sabha far from being anti-Government does not take part even in politics. Why does it then rankle in the eyes of the Madras Government? Have Christian and Muslim servants also been asked to shun their religious institutions? If not, why then has the Hindu Sabha alone been singled out for such treatment? Is the Madras Government afraid of the Hindu Sabha being able to solve the Brahman-non-Brahman problem of Southern India? If so, there can be no more reprehensible move of the policy of divide and rule. The Hind-i-Jadid asks the Madras Government to withdraw this "unjust" order.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Awaz deplores that though Hindus form 88 per cent. of the population of the United Provinces and are better qualified in every respect Government ignore their claims to enter Government service to a great extent. From the appointment of the Muslim Home Member to that of the peons of Collectorates an opportunity is afforded to raise the Hindu-Muslim question. The Arya Musafir holds that the teaching of Islam in India has only had the effect of making the converts violent and tyrannical, and if Hindus only begin to follow the dictates of their religion in right earnest and are thereby able to produce healthy children, the influence of Islam will soon be found to disappear and Muslims who, thanks to British rule, have already been shorn of their blood-thirsty and blood-shedding nature to a great extent will probably go back to their original home in Arabia. The equality of all men by which Islam lays so much store means in practice nothing more than this that some female relatives are taken as wives on the ground of equality. That thousands of women have turned prostitutes and thousands of vagabonds are leading viscious and immoral lives is the effect of the teachings of the immigrants from Arabia. The Medina publishes a poem by one Syed Jamil Ahmed Tahir of Jodhpur under the caption "What has become of the sharpness of the sword of tabligh." In exhorting Muslims to sink their party differences and to further the cause of tabligh the poet says:—The banner of tabligh will wipe out idol worship . . The liars will not be able to stop the tongue of tabligh . . . The idol-worshippers drive us out of India! What has become of the sharpness of the sword of tabligh? If those wearing top-knots stoop to trickeries the soldiers of tabligh will not leave them unsubdued. Strike, strike the granary of the harvest of paganism and heresy. What delay is there, O lightning of tabligh?

Muslim affairs.

The Sada-i-Muslim says that Dr. Shafa'at Ahmad Khan's Bill regarding the compulsory registration of Muslim marriages and divorces will remove a number of evils prevalent under the present system, if provision is made for the convenience of the parties concerned and the registration officer is trustworthy. The inclusion of khala under divorce is also necessary, inasmuch as it would greatly remove the miseries of the fair sex. The Bhavishya warns the Hindus that Dr. Shafa'at Ahmad's Bill is a trap laid for them as the proposed registration of Muslim marriages which this Bill is intended to secure will prevent the shuddhi of Hindu women who are being kidnapped, converted to Islam and then married by Muslims in pursuance of Hasan Nizami's scheme. The measure is also intended to throw difficulties in the way of the re-conversion of such Hindus as are led, through deceitfulness or allurements, to embrace Islam and to marry Muslim women. Thus the Bill is designed to hamper the shuddhi movement and Hindu members of the Legislative Council should reject it.

Municipal elections.

The Indian Daily Telegraph is disappointed at the election of Rai Bahadur Trilokinath Bhargava as Chairman of the Lucknow Municipal Board as "the antecedents of his public life do not encourage the hope that he can ever lead a popular movement." Proceeding, the paper says: It can never be forgotten that the one issue over which the Swarajists were defeated was Arti-Nimaz. We very much suspect that the new Hindu municipal commissioners, except the few who have gone on the Hindu Sabha ticket, will not face the responsibilities and sacrifices involved in what is known as the Arti question. This would mean that some scheming men, taking advantage of the Hindu upheaval, have crept in to enjoy the powers and privileges of municipal commissioners for three years.

Associated Chamber of Commerce.

The Leader writes:—"The Associated Chamber of Commerce" is a misleading and therefore an unjustified title, for Indian Chambers are excluded from membership. For this reason we do not think it right that the head of the Government of India should so far identify himself with that racial body as to open its annual sessions time after time. This, however, is what Lord Reading has done more than once and again proposes to do. We must lodge a protest against His Excellency's action.

The agricultural development of India.

The Bahraich Akhbar doubts whether much can be done towards the agricultural development of the country without seriously disturbing the existing rural economy. The introduction of machinery in agricultural operations cannot but produce wide-spread unemployment among the villagers. It is also not known whence the Government will get crores of rupees to devote to agricultural development. The paper urges that if the new Viceroy really wants to show that he is a well-wisher of India he should prohibit the export of food-grains or at least reduce it by three-fourths.

The Viceroy.

The Aj takes exception to the recent tribute paid by Lord Inchcape to Lord Reading's regimé in India and asserts that from the Indian point of view his regimé has been an utter failure. In fact during the last fifty years no other Viceroy has injured India to such an extent as Lord Reading has done. The single object of his rule was to enhance the importance of the British civil servants by trampling upon Indian public opinion, and he has succeeded in this object.

Military training for Indians.

The Bharat Dharma lays stress on the need of a regular military training for Indians as a country cannot be saved by mere clubmen. The paper suspects that the appointment of the Skeen Committee was intended merely to while away the time. It opines that inasmuch as Indian Muslims can get military training in independent Muslim countries, it is the Hindus that specially stand in need of such training to enable them to defend themselves in the event of a Muslim invasion of India and appeals to the Hindu members of the Legislatures to take up the question of compulsory military training of Indians in right earnest and have it decided in their favour.

Bengal Ordinance.

The Leader writes :—It is in our opinion a scandal that the men interned under the Ordinance of last year should, after nearly fifteen months have elapsed, continue to be detained under the Act which is no better than an executive law, without trial and without any avowed intention of their being either tried or set free . . . . Such methods of Government do no credit to the most efficient of bureaucracies and do not make it less unacceptable to a people whose national consciousness is no longer dormant and who are increasingly sensitive to national honour.

Indian Civil Services Bill.

Commenting on Earl Winterton's speech on the Civil Services Bill in the House of Commons the Leader writes :—We know there will be many who would say that Earl Winterton, by representing that the further emoluments now being sanctioned had the support of sensible, reasonable and fairminded opinion here, was insulting Indian public opinion.

U. P. District Boards Primary Education Bill.

The Leader writes :—The Bill has been introduced in the Council under very happy auspices. We offer our hearty congratulations to the Hon'ble Minister of Education on the introduction of such a progressive and beneficent measure. Its success after it has passed will, however, depend on the provision of adequate funds by Government and the willingness of district boards to utilize their powers of taxation.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the decision of the Council of the League of Nations on the Mosul dispute, the Leader writes: It is very doubtful if the prolongation of the mandate, which is involved in the acceptance of the decision, will be at all in the interest of the British tax-payer. A new Arab national consciousness is developing which is intolerant of all forms of tutelage. Iraq has not been paying its way and there are possibilities of complications, external and internal, which cannot be made light of. The Abhyudaya writes:—In reality justice demands that Mosul should be placed under the control of the Turks and form part of the Turkish territory. Turkey is not satisfied with the decision. Had it been given six months ago a war between Turkey and England would not have been impossible. But the Locarno treaty has precluded this possibility. Now there will be no war and Turkey will have to bide her time. In the course of a lengthy article inveighing against the injustice of the League of Nations in the matter of Mosul, the Medina says:—The statements of responsible European statesmen in this connexion lay bare the veneer of justice and toleration assumed by the League of Nations established by Great Britain and her allies. The veil of deceit woven over their ugly and odious faces with threads of justice and sincerity by these hungry capitalists and imperialists has been torn asunder to-day. All justice-loving people now know that the vaunted justice, toleration and sincerity of the world of capitalism has been sunk in the smiling valleys of the Tigris and the oil-springs of Mosul. The high-handedness and deceit with which the League of Nations is acting is well known. Britain and France have joined hands because these land-grabbers need each other's aid in Mosul and Syria. Attempts are being made to win over Germany also to help their imperialistic ambitions in the East. A correspondent of the Daily Herald makes it clear that Britain and France are determined to crush Islamic unity and to work hand in hand in Syria. The Italian press gives publicity to the terms of a Russo-Italian agreement, according to which these two Powers will, in conjunction with Rumania, participate in the war and take their share of the spoils in Muslim territory. In short, it is certain that the whole of Europe is determined to act in unison against the Turks and Ibn Saud. But to-day news is received that the Western god, in spite of its human shape, is nothing less than the wolf which was disputing with the kid for the sake of the gratification of its wicked desire. That League of Nations, of which Mr. Amery had sung pæans of praise like a regular court poet, has become the sacrificial altar of justice and equity at which the innocent blood of lakhs of human beings is crying aloud for justice. The League has most cruelly and heartlessly declared that Iraq is to receive Mosul territory up to the Brussels line provided Britain retains her mandate for 25 years. O, clever men of the West, sitting in your safe forts you have decided to take the property of an isolated and helpless and friendless party and have divided the property of another like thieves, but ponder whether the Angora Assembly will accept this decision or the Turkish sword will be drawn. The Brussels line which was established by the right of victory remains, and Turkey has been denied all her just rights to the vilayat of Mosul. All the lofty pretensions of Britain have been proved to be worthless. The grim humour of our friends has exceeded all bounds and while the Turks have been most deceitfully deprived of their rich and fertile province, Mr. Chamberlain declares that he is very solicitous for friendly relations with the Turks. This means that while the barn of Turkish politics has been burnt, its greatness and prestige have been razed to the dust, its wealth has been robbed, and it has been rendered helpless and poor, the peace-seeking friends want to enter into negotiations with it. O Indian Muslims, you are helpless and enslaved; you are distracted and restless; you are poor and penniless; your greatness and glory have been snatched away and you have been deprived of all the bounties of this world; but have you also lost your Islamic feeling of fraternity, your realization of calamity, your perception of oppression and your love for your faith? Remember the commands of your religion, and if you fail in your duties you will call on yourselves the curses of your God and His Prophet. Note that if you willingly kill even a single Muslim you will be doomed to eternal perdition. If Angora draws the sword in defence of Mosul, you will have to show that Muslims are not dead. Indian Muslims should be prepared for every trial. Turkey is peace-loving, but if war becomes inevitable Indian Muslims should refuse to help Britain and should take no part whatsoever in recruiting. Those Muslims who have died from Turkish bullets must be suffering great pangs but there will be no rest whatsoever for those who kill Muslims.

Congress affairs.

Appeals to the people to attend the Congress in large numbers and to make it a success are the main theme of the editorial articles this week. A number of papers emphasize the need of declaring complete independence to be the goal of the Congress. The Shankar urges the delegates to the Congress to decide once for all the definition of swaraj and says: It is impossible that we may get full liberty and still remain within the British Empire. The British statesmen will never allow us to change our constitution on the principle of self-determination. In these circumstances we shall have to fix complete swaraj outside the British Empire as the goal of the Congress. Our leaders in the Congress will have to decide the form of our constitution. The mere replacement of the British agency by the Indian agency in the existing system of government cannot ensure happiness to the people. The Abhyudaya writes: To-day the national life of the country is in a very deplorable condition and if all the people do not combine to improve it, nationalism will survive in this country only in name. The leaders and the people should, therefore, make a mighty effort once more to inundate the whole country with nationalism. The people should disown those leaders who support party feelings and strifes. They should compel the leaders to act in concert with one another for unity is the one need of the country in the existing situation. People should attend the Congress in their largest numbers and compel the leaders to give up party dissensions and adopt a unanimous programme. Ram Narayan Singh, a member of the All-India Congress Committee of Hazaribagh, writing in the Aj, refers to the impossibility of Dominion home rule being ever granted by the British Government to India and urges the Cawnpore Congress to adopt a resolution fixing complete independence as the goal of the Congress. The adoption of such a resolution will remove the existing slackness in the Congress activity. Satya Bhakta, convener of the Indian Communist Conference, writing in the Bhavishya, opposes the election of Mrs. Sarojini Naidu as President of the Congress on the ground that she signed Mrs. Besant's Commonwealth of India Bill, which is a bond of slavery, at the time when India is moving on the road of freedom and every fresh daily occurrence is showing that it is impossible for Indians to remain with Englishmen for any length of time. Moreover, she is an advocate of imperialism and sides with capitalists. The Pratap publishes an article by one Jaichand Vidyalankar who appeals to "responsible Indian politicians" in the name of humanity to sympathize with political sufferers whether they be the followers of the violent or the non-violent creed or the innocent victims of the martial law or the Indian Defence Act and to see that they are not subjected to any unjust hardships in jails. Proceeding, the writer says:—If the Congress establishes a permanent office for keeping itself informed of the condition of political sufferers, for arranging for their ordinary convenience, for publishing all news about them, and for keeping itself in touch with their families considerable relief will be afforded to them. The Oudh Akhbar urges that all Indian political parties striving for Swaraj within the Empire should be taken into the fold of the Congress and allowed to pursue their respective programmes under its ægis. The Congress should not accord any preferential treatment to any particular party and it will thus be able to present a united front to Government. No doubt it will cause a pang to Pandit Motilal Nehru to yield the leading position so far occupied by his party in the Congress but it is not too much to expect this sacrifice from his patriotism. If the Mahatma is thus able to weld together all parties, he will regain his lost popularity and will again be hailed as the regenerator of the country. The Medina appeals to the Congress to declare in favour of complete independence, to define Swaraj in full detail and to conclude a national pact. Neither the khaddar programme nor the swarajist programme can achieve anything. No amendment of the Reforms can break the present spell of slavery or achieve national unity. Muslims believe that not even the maximum self-government or home rule which Britain can grant to India can restrain those militarist and imperialistic forces which are destroying Islamic countries or prevent India's natural resources from being utilized for enslaving Asiatic countries. The mutual jealousies of the warring races and creeds of India can be subdued only when India concludes a national pact and gains complete independence, as solicitude for the defence of India and for the maintenance of the complete independence achieved by them will prevail over all other sectional sentiments among Indians. Reforms, Home Rule or Dominion self-government under British protection cannot solve the Indian problem. They will only introduce fresh complications in the shape of separate representation, sectional legislation, negation of equality and dissipation of forces. Neither Sangathan nor Tanzim can really weld the Hindu and Muslim communities. Would the United States have risen so high if Washington had consented to Dominion status after seven years of war? It is only complete freedom that can bring out all that is best in nations and countries. Favouring a national pact, the Hind-i-Jadid says that it should provide for the protection of minorities, the unrestricted performance of religious rites in public and complete independence for India.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Abhyudaya says that the anti-Hindu propaganda of fanatical Muslims in Sind has resulted in the re-enactment of Kohat tragedy in Amri (Sind). Muslim dacoits, with shouts of Allah-o-Akbar, attacked Hindu homes and shops and plundered them... If these dacoits are not arrested and severely dealt with, Sind will become a prey to a sort of a reign of terror and its inhabitants will never be able to enjoy peace. Besides such incidents cannot be stopped unless action is taken against those people also who incite the hooligans. The Vartman writes:—The attitude of the Muslim dacoits at Amri was a very terrible one. They were out, not merely to plunder the Hindus, but also to convert them to Islam. Their attitude towards women and girls was also extremely reprehensible. This matter should be considered in the Congress and steps should be taken to make the Hindus strong enough to protect themselves from the dacoits and at the same time Muslim leaders should be asked to change the mentality of the dacoits. The Medina protests against the judgment of Mr. Waugh in a case at Panipat in which he has laid down that the Muslims must take legal permission for performing sacrifice. Sacrifice is a religious duty with Muslims and if Government interferes with it it cannot claim that it allows religious freedom. Does this not mean that we shall to-morrow have to take permission even for offering our prayers? The Dutch officials in Java have placed legal restrictions on Juma and congregational prayers. Does the British Government also propose to do the same some day to please our compatriots?

Political propaganda.

In the course of an article the Bhavishya deplores that India has not yet made any sacrifices at all comparable with those made by Ireland, Russia and other countries where rivers of blood were made to flow before liberty was attained. Indians too will have to offer adequate sacrifices to propitiate the goddess of liberty, but in the peculiar circumstances of the country the sacrifice will be of a non-violent character. As a preparatory step, the whole country will have to be organized by the establishment of village associations, the chief object of which will be to win over the sympathies of the people by rendering social service and by creating political awakening among them through newspapers and speeches. For this workers will have to be appointed in villages who can be paid out of an "atta fund," every house in a village being asked to put some flour in an earthen pot every day for this purpose. Advocating a complete boycott of British goods, the same paper remarks:—If a complete boycott of English goods is effected British labourers will be thrown out of employment and they will compel their Government to concede the demands of India. A fresh agitation for the boycott of British goods will create an enthusiasm similar to that witnessed in 1921 and our waning political agitation will thus be imbued with a new life. We are convinced that village organization and boycott of British goods are the two weapons which can ensure victory for us in our battle for freedom.

Europeans and Indians.

Referring to the recent death of two coolies in Assam tea-gardens at the hands of two Europeans and to the decisions of the court in the two cases, the Swadhin remarks :—So cheap the Indian lives for the mad sport of whites ! In connexion with the disputes between whites and blacks, nay, nay, for developing the brutal sport, frolic, and fancy of the whites such sacrifices of Indian lives, such decisions of the court, and such justice ! No one knows this except the down-trodden and subject Indians wanting in self-respect and the whites who love such murderous sports. Yes, there is earth below and the sky above. But they will not break asunder, nor will God re-incarnate Himself unless the lightning of self-consciousness thunders among the Indians. Under the heading " Their boots and our spleen," the Prabhat writes :—Human life is held sacred in all religions and legal codes and no Government can afford to brook any injury to it, but the lives of the individuals of the nation which has lost all and the honour of which is valued by none becomes very cheap. Not one but hundreds of instances have occurred in which a relation has been established between the European boot and the spleen of India. The list of such incidents is getting long and one number has only recently been added to it in the murder of a coolie in Assam by a European. This individual has been fined only Rs. 200. This is the price of the life of an Indian ! We cannot even conceive that if this crime had been committed by an Indian in respect of a European this punishment would have been held to be adequate. Proceeding, the paper criticises the judgment of the judicial officer and says : - Indeed the spleen of the Indian coolie was all to blame, inasmuch as it got ruptured by the slow movement of the European's boot. If the wolf devoured the goat, the latter was to blame for it offered a temptation to the former. The answer to the question why Indians are dissatisfied with the British rule is to be found in such incidents. Such painful disregard of Indian life cannot but produce a deep impression upon the heart of every Indian and no wonder that despite Mahatma Gandhi's insistent advice regarding non-violence, revolutionary conspiracies are heard of in the misguided India. So long as this relation exists between the boot and the spleen India will be the most untouchable and degraded country in the world ; for this disgrace does not affect only a coolie but the whole Indian nation.

The Viceroy's speech.

Commenting on the Viceroy's recent speech at Calcutta the Aj says :—The speech shows that in the time of Lord Reading the condition of the country has improved and the military expenditure and provincial contributions to the central exchequer have been reduced, but what economic gain has the Indian public derived from it ? Has any direct or indirect tax been reduced ? No, taxation has, on the other hand, been enhanced. It was in the régime of Lord Reading that the postal rates and railway fares were increased, duty was levied on salt and court-fee was increased and thus even the poorest Indian was saddled with some direct or indirect tax a number of times. The reduction in military expenditure was counterbalanced by an increase in the expenditure over the services. Lord Reading wants to take credit for framing laws for the convenience of labour, but hardly has the régime of any other Viceroy witnessed such a labour unrest. During his time, not only have there been a large number of strikes but the strikers have also been subjected to firing by the police. He has reduced the number of working hours and increased the age-limit, but has taken no steps to remove the poverty which compelled the labourers to work longer and to make their children also work. He has several times referred to the suspension of the cotton excise duty. This is no doubt commendable, but we cannot be thankful for it because he suspended the duty only when the Bombay mills had been closed for two months, the labourers had gone back to their homes, the mill-owners had suffered loss of crores of rupees and their representatives were running to England. In his régime India had to undergo such political hardships as Indians cannot soon forget.

United Provinces District Boards' Primary Education Bill.

Emphasizing the need of mass education the Indian Daily Telegraph says :—The masses must know where they stand. They must know that they are the real masters of a country. They must know the immense possibilities of their power. Such strength, self-confidence and consciousness of strength will come from education, without which self-government cannot bring happiness, and freedom will only be a sham. The supreme need of the hour is the introduction of free and compulsory education in the cities and the villages. That is the most essential step to the goal for which we are striving. The Education Minister of our own province has done a real service to the cause of national progress by bringing forward his Primary Education Bill for striking at the root of illiteracy in the countryside. Posterity will not forget this boldness and this patriotism. But we must see that the Bill is framed in such a way that it gives the people real education and ultimately brings power into their hands. The education must be of a sort that will enable them to distinguish between right and wrong, that would create in them a passion for fighting wrongs, that would make them soldiers of right and justice. It must be an education that would lay the foundation of nationalism in the minds of the young.

Indians in the Colonies.

Under the heading "War on Indians", the Indian Daily Telegraph publishes an article in which the writer, Mr. Ranga Iyer, M. L. A., referring to the various "anti-Indian" measures in force in South Africa, says :—The climax of this class legislation will be the fulfilment of the Union Government's promise to place on the Statute Book during the forthcoming session of Parliament the Areas Reservation and Immigration Restriction (Further Provisions) Bill. This is the concentrated venom against Indians. Its object is to kill them outright or drive them into the sea or serfdom. If India were a free country, the only answer to this outrage would be the declaration of war. Maulana Hasrat Mohani and other idealists of the Congress, who believe in complete sovereign independence and separation from the English Empire, cannot conceive of a better ally than the Union Government of South Africa. In the course of an editorial article the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—We must confess that the Viceroy's speech in reply to the deputation from South Africa is full of sympathetic words but does not vouchsafe any tangible deeds that will tell should those words fail to bear fruit. We look in vain for one gesture of resolution, one spark of determination that would resound in South Africa as the voice of an administration with three hundred million British subjects behind it. His speech will not deter the South African statesmen from pursuing their anti-Indian policy. On the other hand the laboured tone of sympathy permeating the viceregal utterance must convey a distinct encouragement to Durban.

The Indian Civil Service Bill.

The Swadhin writes :—The speed with which the Indian Civil Service Bill is being passed in Parliament presents before our eyes a heart-rending scene of the mockery with which our country is being treated. Despite our united demand for the amendment of the Government of India Act so as to grant us real powers in administration nothing was done ; on the contrary, the British Government has made a desperate effort to amend the said Act for its beloved white servants. This Bill will result in rendering null and void the decision of the Government laying down equal proportion of Indians and Europeans in higher services.

Indian States.

The Vartman publishes a letter from a correspondent who states that the condition of the Hindus in the Hyderabad State is very miserable and that partiality for Muslims is so great that neither any attention is paid to the religious affairs of the Hindus nor are they allowed opportunity to share in the administration. In the educational department the number of Hindus is so small that it seems that there are orders debarring them from entering it. In addition to this, while the number of Hindu holidays is being reduced that of the Muslim holidays is being increased. Lakhs of rupees are being spent on tabligh and the boys and girls of the Maharashtra and Tailang communities are living as slaves in the houses of Muslim nobles and are made to increase the number of Muslims.

The agricultural development of India.

The Oudh Akhbar says that Government's new policy of agricultural progress will only add to the salaries and numbers of officials of the agricultural department. The real solution of the backwardness of the Indian peasantry lies in making it rich enough to be able to take advantage of the new methods advocated by the department. Besides, land revenue should not be increased simultaneously with the increase in produce, as it would only mean taking away with one hand what was given by the other.

Muslim affairs.

The Rahnuma urges that Dr. Shafa'at Ahmad Khan's proposed Bill for the registration of Muslim marriages and divorces should be published for opinion, especially of the ullema as the shariat does not require any such registration and if unregistered marriages are declared invalid, it would amount to an interference with the religious law.

Railway collisions.

The Bharat Jiwan draws attention to the progressive increase in railway collisions for some time past and urges the Government to appoint a special commission to inquire into their causes and to devise means for protecting passengers.

Foreign affairs.

THE Abhyudaya remarks:—The League of Nations was formed to make the strong nations stronger and the weak nations weaker. This is why it took no steps against the use of poisonous gas in Morocco and the French atrocities in Syria. Now Mosul has been made a part of Iraq and will be under the mandate of Britain. Turkey is not satisfied with this decision. Mosul will prove the future Alsace-Lorraine for Europe and there will be a war between England and Turkey over it sooner or later. All this is quite plain, but the League of Nations pretends to be quite blind to it. Discussing the inadvisibility of India's signature on the Locarno treaty the Prabhat hopes that Sir Sivaswami Iyer will be allowed to move his resolution urging the Government of India not to sign the treaty without the assent of the assembly and that India will be saved from the insult of acting as a tool in the hands of Britain by signing it. Proceeding, the paper says:—The greatest insult to India and the greatest sin of Britain is that India has to work as a tool in the hands of Britain in robbing other nations, in administering opium to the Chinese, and in depriving Mesopotamia of her freedom. She has to send her men and spend her money to commit sins even in matters in which she has no interest. The Medina writes: Owing to the refusal of Ibn Saud to cede Akaba and Ma'an from the Hedjaz the clever men of the West are trying to create discord between him and the Imam of Yemen. Britain's move towards an alliance with Yemen is very dangerous for the Arabs. May God save them. In another article the paper remarks that there is no ground to believe Mr. Baldwin's promise to free Iraq as soon as she becomes fit for self-government. No one acquainted with the past political record of England can put faith in all this tall talk of love and sympathy for Iraq. When even after 150 years of rule the percentage of educated persons could not be raised in India from five to ten and the country could not be fitted for the grant of even ordinary powers, when Egypt remained the dunce she was even after fifty years of administration and the barbarism of the Sudan could not be removed, what fool is there who will believe that Iraq will become fit for self-government in the eyes of Britain within twenty-five years? This imaginary paradise can beguile only idiots and it is only Faisal who can dance with joy over thought of it. We, on the contrary, see only disappointment and enervation in store for Iraq. The Najat agrees with the London Times that if the British Parliament fails to settle the Mosul dispute in accordance with the wishes of the Turks, the next summer would witness a terrible war between Turkey and England, which would put an end to all the disputes between the East and the West. The Medina reminds Indian Muslims of the strict Quranic injunctions against the slaying of fellow Muslims and warns them not to forget the lesson taught them at Karachi by the Khilafat leaders during the last war. The traditional land-lust of Britain will not allow her to waive her territorial sovereignty over Mosul. The complete domination of Ibn Saud over the Hedjaz will shatter all British dreams of power in the Middle East and Britain can never be expected to refrain from pursuing her imperialistic projects in that quarter of the globe. Similarly, the Mosul territory is like her very life for Turkey and she too cannot be expected to forego it. War, therefore, appears inevitable. Britain roused a terrible storm of anger and opposition by making the Indian Muslims fight against the Turks during the Great War. The non-cooperation movement, the struggle for freedom, the demonstrations and the repeated disturbances were all the fruits of this colossal political blunder. If Britain in spite of her protestations of religious neutrality repeats this mistake, the results will be still more disastrous now that India is much more alert and sensitive. A still more sullen agitation will spring up and the public peace of India will be gravely imperilled and it would not be strange if India is lost in the attempt to gain Mosul. British statesmen should ponder over all these possibilities. The freedom of India is our ideal and we would be very glad if through some errors of British statesmen that ideal is attained. But we are still more anxious that Indian Muslims may not be guilty of the grievous sin of "slaying believers" and may not ruin themselves in this world as well as the next. This matter concerns the Government of India, the British Government, the general Muslim public and Muslim leaders, and we wish that every individual amongst these may realise his duties and avoid becoming the enemy of the peace and order of the world. Today Mr. Baldwin secures the passage in the Commons of a vote of confidence in the British representatives at Geneva so as to sustain the efforts of the League of Nations for the preservation of the peace of the world. Well and good, but will it be helping the League in maintaining the peace of the world to go to war on the Mosul question, to ruin Islam and the faith of Muslims and to make them fuel for (the fires of) Hell?

Congress politics.

The papers are unanimous in extolling the literary merits of Mrs. Naidu's presidential address, but widely differ in opinion regarding the practicability of the programme outlined by her. A number of them complain that she has not given a definite lead to the country and has not helped in the solution of any of the vital political and communal problems of the day. The Pioneer writes:—The orgy of speech-making witnessed at Cawnpore will bring neither profit nor hope. The President was consistently vague and rhetorical throughout, for in closing the Congress she informed her presumably astonished audience that in the course of the three days' session they had repeatedly taken an oath that they would chose between liberty and death. Commenting on the presidential address the Leader writes:—It is a piece of literary effort. The poetic fervour is sustained throughout. But an eloquent recital of India's wrongs and grievances, of her internal and external problems cannot make one lose sight of the hard facts of the situation. It should be evident to everyone who does not disdain to look at the practical aspect of things that Mrs. Naidu's idea of problems connected with village reconstruction is of a very ethereal nature. Then she wants the Congress "to form forthwith a national militia by voluntary conscription." She goes further and asks the Congress to consider the question of nautical as well as naval and aerial training. All these suggestions will be a source of amusement and need not be taken seriously. Her constructive suggestions have the outstanding characteristic of impracticability. Commenting on the resolution defining the political programme of the Congress, the paper writes:—The Congress has proclaimed once more that it is not clear in its own mind as to what exactly it wants. The reiteration of the faith of the Congress in civil disobedience coupled with the confession that the country is not now ready for it invests this part of the resolution with the character of a bluff which can serve no other purpose than that of furnishing to our opponents a weapon to fight the cause of progress and of making unity among the political parties more difficult. The door is kept open for attending Council and Assembly meetings even after a formal intimation has been given to Government that the Swarajists would no longer continue to work as usual. The unsophisticated public may be impressed by this deceptive gesture of non-cooperation, but behind this programme of abstention is a not very unselfish motive of finding plenty of time to work for the forthcoming elections. The Swarajists do not want to be hampered by Council work for some months before the elections come off. In another article the paper writes:—Let Mr. Nehru glory as much as he likes in the victory, but he will yet find that honesty is the best policy—yes, even in politics and even in party politics. The people are sick of Swarajist inconsistencies and insincerities which have brought about a revolt in the Swarajist camp itself and which have driven Mr. Gandhi to his announcement of retirement. Political truths are asserting themselves and their victory will mean the rout of those who have been playing ducks and drakes with their pledges and pursuing a policy of bluff and futility and impudence. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Mrs. Sarojini Naidu's address is worthy of her international reputation. If as a poet of world-wide fame she has captured popular imagination, as a politician she has given a lead worthy of the greatest names in history that have ever directed great human upheavals for freedom and justice . . . . The prospect of the new struggle is thrilling. We can only pray to God that He might embolden His struggling children in India to make cheerfully the sacrifices that civil disobedience will involve. Verily the " responsive co-operator " is annihilated, the Swarajist non-cooperator still holds the ground. Let Muddimans and Innes beware and act. Eulogizing the literary merits of Mrs. Naidu's address the Mahashakti writes :—In its practical aspect also the speech is one that cannot be ignored, except, of course, in the wisdom-laden quarters where any political philosophy which is full-blooded is not understood, and where there is already a pronounced tendency to find nothing in it which can be clearly utilized. It is not true that she has thought out no new line of action. The dynamic campaign suggested by her is a bold idea and having in view our national dignity and self-respect as well as the spirit of the times, is obviously more practicable than " moderate " mendicancy however mellifluent. The Advocate writes :—The address is full of high and noble ideals combined with stern realities of life together with practical suggestions for their solution. She has well responded to the call of the nation and has given vent to her inmost feelings. The Dehra Chronicle writes :—Poetry and not politics appear to be the predominant part of the address. The policy and programme advocated by her will only lead to a further disruption in our political forces and to a general disorder and lawlessness in the country. A policy of cooperation and persuasion alone can lead us successfully through gradual constitutional reform to our cherished goal of peace and prosperity. The Abhyudaya holds that although Mrs. Sarojini Naidu's address was a piece of beautiful poetry, it was far removed from the realm of fact and practicability and did not indicate a royal road to bring about political unity in the country. The Anand says that the address did not contain any definite programme and was of little political importance. The Surya regards it as extremely disappointing, impracticable, and unsuited to the times. The Aj remarks that though the address was inspiring, it contained no definite views on any important questions. Neither has Mrs. Sarojini Naidu discussed any future programme for the country. The paper says that if the Congress devotes its whole energy to a particular item of the national programme, such as the organization of labourers and cultivators, it will be able to do substantial work within the year. It expresses the hope that the Congress will take no reactionary step such as the adoption of responsive cooperation. The Hindi Kesari holds the Cawnpore Congress session to be a success. It says that although the presidential address was inspiring it contained nothing to give a lead to the country in future. Neither did the Congress give a practical shape to the question of village organization. It did not act wisely in retaining the condition of compulsory wearing of khaddar. Although the Congress did not adopt responsive cooperation, the day is not far off when it will become the only programme of the whole country. The Abhyudaya remarks that although the Congress was a success so far as the number of delegates and visitors was concerned, it is doubtful whether it provided any stimulus to the political life of the country, solved any of its problems or planned any scheme for the bright future of the country. Neither did it promote chances of unity among the political parties. On the contrary, it made the task of political unity still more difficult by raising the unnecessary question of khaddar and civil disobedience. When the Congress adopted the Swarajist demand made in the Assembly and the Liberals too supported that demand at their Federation it was up to the Congress to unite the whole country on this question but it failed to accomplish this most necessary task on account of its unreasoning love of khaddar and civil disobedience which, however, cannot be practised for a long time to come. The paper urges that a special session of the Congress should be held some time between March and September in which all parties should join to place the unanimous national demand of the country before the Government after the advent of the new Viceroy. Commenting on Pandit Motilal Nehru's resolution in the Congress, the Pratap says :—By providing for constructive work outside the Councils the resolution removes our grievances to a great extent and if the country honestly carries out the scheme enunciated in it, it would greatly further the cause of its emancipation. The Aj remarks that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's amendment to Pandit Motilal Nehru's resolution in the Congress met the fate it deserved. Had it been passed the country's efforts towards the attainment of Swaraj would have come to an end and the grant of Swaraj to it would have been left to the tender mercies of the bureaucracy. In view of their past experience Indians can have no faith in the promises of the British authorities and so cannot stop their national agitation. When the old policy of mendicancy has been tried for over half a century and has failed, it behoves the people to achieve their object through self-reliance. It may be admitted that the country is not yet prepared for civil disobedience, but that is no reason why it cannot be prepared for it within the next ten or twenty years. Commenting upon the future programme of the Congress the same paper in another article protests against the arrangement by which the Swaraj party is to have the power-of-attorney to carry on the political work of the Congress. It says that no such power-of-attorney should be held by any particular party. Whatever party commands a majority in the Congress should carry on its political work. It urges that when the All-India Spinners Association has been separately formed it should propagate the use of khaddar and charkha and no place should be given to them in the Congress programme, otherwise they will interfere with the political work of the Congress. The Medina does not regard Mrs. Sarojini Naidu's proposal for a committee to consider the question of separate representation to be practicable, as it would be impossible either to get suitable members for the committee or to inspire public confidence in their decisions. The organization of villages is highly necessary and Mrs. Naidu's reference to military education was singularly apposite. The question of Indian States and the North-Western Frontier. Province should also be taken up by the Congress. In another article the same paper writes:—Mr. Upson, who is of English race, is wroth with Mrs. Naidu for a reference in her presidential address to the "forces of terrorism and violence" of the British Government and has observed that India would have received a taste of such forces if Italy or France had been ruling her. Mr. Upson had probably the destruction of Damascus and Bargal in mind when naming France and Italy, but if he were to abandon his racial prejudice he would find many Damascuses and Bargals in the history of British innocence. Do Jallianwala Bagh and Malabar lament any royal kindness? Bear in mind that as the inhabitants of India are unarmed it is not surprising that the scenes of Damascus and Bargal have not been re-enacted for their chastisement. The substance of tyranny is the same. Otherwise in dealing with armed populations the god of England is equally "kind." The aerial bombing of Iraq and the air raids on the Mahsuds are sufficient to open one's eyes. The handing over of Egypt to the forces of wrath and oppression for the murder of a single Sardar Lee Stack is not an incident which occurred centuries ago. The Oudh Akhbar deplores the helpless condition to which Indians have been reduced by the supply of even such essentials of life as water and light through machinery and views with alarm the forthcoming intensive campaign in favour of the use of machinery in agriculture. It is, however, relieved to find that by the acceptance of Mahatma Gandhi's khaddar resolution in the Congress subjects committee, the Indian public is freed from the nightmare of Government controlled machinery at least in the matter of supply of cloth.

The Liberal Federation.

The Pioneer writes:—Any expectation that may have existed of a clear lead to public opinion from the Liberal Party has been wholly disappointed by the proceedings at the meetings of the Liberal Federation at Calcutta. What is there in the President's address or the pious aspirations expressed in the vague resolutions adopted by the Federation to attract the support that is needed to convert the Liberal Party into a living entity? The Liberal leader's speech, indeed, offers no rallying points; nor are the resolutions passed by the Federation calculated to elicit support. If the Liberal Party is ever to give a lead to solid opinion, it will have to devise new and more statesmanlike tactics. In the course of a highly eulogistic article on the presidential address of Sir M. Joshi the Leader writes: "He speaks with the authority of a man who saw Government from inside for five years . . . The people ought not to disregard his words of practical wisdom, as the speaker has nearly 40 years of public service to his credit." Supporting the President's remarks about the possibilities of amalgamation between the Independents and the Liberals the paper writes: Our suggestion is that at an early date a conference of selected Independents and authorized spokesmen of the Liberal party should be held at which the position may be seriously reviewed and conclusions reached which will result in the amalgamation which both of them should be desirous of bringing about at as early a date as possible in order thereby to serve the country better. The Aj notes with satisfaction that Sir M. Joshi's address was thoughtful, free from party feeling, and inspired with the desire for unity. Proceeding, it says: Sir Moropant's statements regarding the reforms is very important in view of the fact that he was till recently the Home Member in the Central Provinces. The Congress has again given an opportunity to the bureaucracy to prove its good intentions. It has extended its hand to the bureaucracy. Is the latter also prepared to do so? Sir Moropant has commended Liberal methods, but we have no faith in them. We have faith in civil disobedience. No doubt the country is not prepared for it but it is our duty to prepare the people for it. Sir M. Joshi has advised the Congress to give up civil disobedience, saying that this would lead to the unification of all political parties in the country. If this is the only obstacle to unity why do not all parties join the Congress and get this change effected in it by their majority?

The All-India Muslim League.

The Leader writes:—Sir Abdur Rahim has rendered a great public disservice by the address he has delivered as President of the All-India Muslim League. While leaders on both sides have been deploring the growth of communal feeling and have been trying to find out a remedy for the festering sore, Sir Abdur Rahim has thought fit to express views which can only exasperate the Hindus and feed the forces of communalism. His evidence before the Muddiman Committee had prepared us for a reactionary utterance, but we did not expect from him such an unbalanced and unfair attack on Hindu politicians who are trying to organize their community and to remove the numerous social and religious ills to which it is a prey. Such a provoking and short-sighted interpretation of the awakening among the Hindus to a greater sense of social justice and brotherhood is most unwise and unjust. Sir Abdur Rahim by this most lamentable utterance, which would have been merely childish if it was not so mischievous, has forfeited all title to be taken seriously as a public man who has at heart the welfare of the land of his birth. The Indian Daily Telegraph characterizes Sir Abdur Rahim's address as a hymn of hate against the Hindu community. The Abhyudaya writes:—Sir Abdur Rahim's presidential address easily takes the first place among all the presidential addresses delivered at the League. Never before was the Muslim case put before the public so ably, although, after reading the address, one is irresistibly reminded of the English proverb that it is the man painting himself not the lion. All the blame has been laid at the door of the Hindus and an attempt has also been made to impress the Englishmen that it is the Hindus who are the root cause of all the trouble in the country. Sir Abdur Rahim's allegations are so baseless and one-sided that it is useless to reply to them. The Aj whole-heartedly supports the opposition of the Muslim League to the decision of the League of Nations regarding Mosul and says that though the deposed dynasty of the Sharif may well support the mean attempt to injure Turkey by depriving it of Mosul, independent Muslim public opinion and the well-wishers of Asia will always oppose it. The paper expresses the hope that the whole of India will unanimously endorse the decision of the Muslim League regarding this question. In another article the same paper remarks that the presidential address and the decisions of the Muslim League show that the League is in favour of going backwards. The president plainly stated in his address that the time had not yet come for full self-government in the country. The League has gone against the Congress almost in every matter and wants that all other communities must allow the Muslims representation in excess of their numbers. Surely the Hindus are not prepared to do so, when they are in a majority. If Muslims want special representation they should not insist on separate electorates. This is the only way to harmony and friendship. Muslims are grievously mistaken if they think that by going backwards themselves and by trying to make others also go back they can make the nation give up all its activities in despair.

Indians in the colonies.

The Prem says that it would be a folly for Indians to expect anything from the Government of India in connexion with the Indian problem in South Africa. The only way to remove the miseries of Indians in South Africa is the adoption of the policy of tit for tat. The majority of Indian municipalities which are in the hands of the nationalists should boycott these colonial nabobs. So long as the whites are not brought to their senses they will never cease to think too much of themselves. Under the heading "Preparations to starve out" the Aj refers to the chances of the Asiatic Bill being passed in South Africa and remarks:—This is how the Empire treats India. How the Indian bureaucracy is opposing this becomes clear from the composition of the deputation sent to South Africa and from the Viceroy's reply to the Indian deputation from there. If the Turks had expressed their desire to starve the Armenians the whole Empire would have been beside itself with rage.

But if the slaves of the Empire, the Indians, are oppressed and the oppressors are whites, then, well, they have a right to do so. So long as we have not the power to retaliate, our opposition will continue to prove futile. It will not do to wait upon the bureaucracy with deputations. The power which has framed the reprehensible black law of Bengal cannot have the courage to protest against these atrocities. So long as we do not get Swaraj we cannot be considered to be human beings. Our condition is worse than that of beasts. A man who starves out beasts is punished in civilised countries. But it is no injustice to starve out Indians in South Africa! Commenting on Lord Reading's reply to the Indian deputation from South Africa the Abhyudaya remarks:—His Excellency reiterated his old statement that action would be taken in accordance with the exigencies of the time and situation. We fear that under this policy of evasion remedy may be used at the time when the patient's case is past recovery. Indians in the colonies can be helped to some extent only if pressure is exerted on the colonial Governments and the British Government and it is made plain that Indians will never put up with oppression. The Shakti writes:—We wonder how the question of Indians in South Africa can be an internal affair of that colony. It is a question of the life and death and of the honour of six lakhs of Indians. Would the Government of any other country have given such an unsympathetic reply as has been given by Lord Reading? India is a slave country. She has no independent existence of her own. The Government of India is not the Government of Indians. When it cannot protect the honour of Indians in this country how can it protect it in South Africa? When the whites who kill coolies by kicks and blows in tea-gardens here are let off with a fine of Rs. 200 at the utmost, how can the bureaucracy get justice done to Indians by the South Africans? The slaves must pay the price of slavery. The Aj says:—Lord Reading may well say that South Africa being a dominion Colony the British Government cannot interfere with its internal affairs, but we know that to say nothing of the British Government even small independent states do interfere with the internal affairs of other independent states to uphold the honour of their citizens, to protect their person and property and to save them from oppression. Has Britain not always been interfering in China for this purpose? It is only when Indians are concerned that non-interference is insisted upon. It is alleged that the conflict of the eastern and western cultures in South Africa would result in the extinction of the whites and hence it has become an absolute necessity for the whites to drive out Indians for self-preservation. Cannot this logic be applied against the whites in coloured countries? If any coloured people were to dare to do so, bombs from aeroplanes would be showered on them to convince them of the superiority of the white culture. The cause of the sufferings of Indians in other countries and in their own land is their own weakness. If they cultivate burning patriotism like the whites, become organized in the service of the motherland and adopt the western sciences they can secure their salvation even without the aid of the sword. The whites cannot rule over us without our co-operation. This is their weakness and in it lies our strength. Will Indians never realise this? The same paper supports the expression of sympathy by the Congress towards the oppressed Indians in South Africa and says that if Mahatma Gandhi decides to start satyagraha here regarding this question, it will be wholeheartedly supported. We have been deceived again and again. Promises made to us have repeatedly been broken. Our hearts have been trampled upon again and again. We have not the least faith in Government now. This is why we are compelled to support direct action. It is the only way to success. No doubt direct action is difficult in practice, but it is an inevitable necessity.

Political Propaganda.

The Hindu Sarvaswa urges the Indian National Congress to establish a federation of Asiatic countries to counteract the imperialistic designs of the League of Nations in Asia and says that if China, Japan, Persia, Afghanistan, and India organize Asia by holding a conference of their representatives, no power can face them. Though by reason of her being a subject country India cannot openly take part in this organization, yet if she follows the principles of true politics her success is certain. The Aj urges the Hindu Sabha not to take part in politics, but to entrust the work of safeguarding the political interests of the Hindus to the Congress itself. If the Hindus form a separate political organization, it will lead to the formation of similar organizations by minor communities and will thus result in the weakening of the Indian National Congress to the advantage of the powers that arbitrarily rule over the country with the help of military force. The Vartman publishes an article by Bhai Parmanand, in the course of which he urges the necessity for the attainment of Swaraj with the help of the Muslims, if possible, and without their help if necessary, and says that in any case it is imperative for the Hindus to organize themselves. The Hindu leaders should, therefore, slacken their political activities for some time and devote themselves to the work of sangathan. The Muslims have always been dreaming that if any foreign Muslim power invades India they would rise against the British. The problem which faces the Hindus is different and they have got to decide upon their policy to solve it. It is only in case of dominion home rule that the Muslims want to stand by the Government in order that they may acquire a position in the administration only next to the British. They cannot hope to secure this position from the Hindu majority. The Government knows that for this reason the Muslims do not want democratic government and that it is the Hindus alone who want Swaraj. Their policy, therefore, is to suppress the Hindus and to give the larger share in administration to Muslims. In the course of an article published in the Bhavishya "Raja" Mahendra Pratap calls attention to the sufferings of Indians who are carrying on political propaganda in foreign countries and says:—I have become an Afghan citizen and I get help from the Afghan Ambassador, but I am pained at the sufferings of those who are being helplessly driven from place to place on account of their service of the mother-land. If the Congress appoints representatives in the capitals of big countries they will be able to look after these patriotic men and in return to take their help in propaganda work. The Oudh Akhbar refers to a statement published in London by Mr. Saklatwala and others to the effect that India is bound to be faced with a serious catastrophe as the country is seething with unrest owing to the actions of the British Government. The interference of the British Parliament in Indian affairs even after the passing of the Reforms Act has worked up Indian feeling to white heat and it is only a question of time when the explosion takes place, but it is bound to be terrible whenever it occurs. The only way out is to annul the Bengal Ordinance and call a Round Table Conference before a crisis is reached.

Agricultural development in India.

Referring to the report published in the Times that the Government of India and the Secretary of State have decided in favour of a thorough investigation of rural conditions in India, the Leader writes:—The factors which are responsible for the backwardness of Indian agriculture are well known. Widespread ignorance and illiteracy, minute sub-division of holdings, lack of a system of education suitable for rural areas, insufficient allotment of funds for the development of facilities for imparting agricultural education, insecurity of tenure, difficulties in the way of the cultivator obtaining cheap credit, an undeveloped and very inadequate system of communications, dependence of large tracts on nature for the supply of water for irrigation, and the decay of village industries which supplied to the cultivators a subsidiary means of livelihood—these are some of the important factors responsible for the depressed condition of Indian agriculture. A costly commission is not needed to find this out. The revenue policy of the Government has an intimate bearing on agricultural progress but it appears from the Times forecast that it will not come within the purview of the commission. We yet hope that the proposed commission may not be appointed. It may prove to be a white elephant. The Oudh Akhbar apprehends that the agricultural reforms which are being attempted at present will only bring about the import of costly agricultural experts and implements from abroad and the opening of a few demonstration farms by zamindars. They will neither benefit the general body of cultivators nor encourage the educated classes to take to agriculture. The only feasible course is to finance the peasants to improve their old methods of agriculture and to open modern farms only when they become sufficiently rich to be able to take advantage of new methods. Meanwhile, their children should be given a modicum of education which while fitting them for their hereditary industry may not go so far as to induce in them a hatred for manual labour.

The outgoing Home Memebr.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—We do not attach any importance to the tribute that was paid to the retiring Home Member in the Legislative Council. We protest against the Legislature being made the theatre for such false pictures and mock sentiments. The career of the retiring Home Member has been one blot of failure. The man has falsified the hopes that his speeches and writings on nationalism had evoked in the public mind. He never gave us a glimpse that a nationalist was in power. The United Provinces have pursued a notoriously communal policy and helped the Muslims in a Hindu province. And the Indian associated with the Government responsible for this policy is the retiring Home Member. The Leader writes:—The Maharaja did a public service in pleading for provincial autonomy and for the stoppage of recruitment in England for the civil service. He may have stood up boldly for the Indian cause on a few other occasions. In day to day administration we can affirm that he has not made good even fractionally while it would be unkind to characterize his work in the Legislative Council. On the whole, it can be said with truth that the United Provinces lose nothing by his separation from the Government, The Sarfaraz congratulates the Maharaja of Mahmudabad on his popularity with both officials and non-officials as evidenced by the valedictory speeches in the United Provinces Council on December 23. While there was uniform progress in the departments under his control during his tenure the establishment of the Oudh Chief Court, the building of the Council Chamber and his concessions towards non-cooperation prisoners will be specially remembered. In welcoming the Maharaja back to public life the Haqiqat remarks that he discharged his duties as Home Member admirably and despite the surrounding official atmosphere he always proved to be a true nationalist. It hopes that the Maharaja would not disappoint the public in their expectation that he would further the national cause.

All-India Christian Conference.

The Leader writes:—Mr. Rallia Ram's presidential address at the twelfth session of the All-India Christian Conference was notable for its broad and patriotic outlook and we heartily commend the views and sentiments he expressed to other minority communities whose aggressive communalism has become a source of great internal weakness and has been retarding progress towards democratic self-government. The Christian community will be giving a very desirable lead to other minority communities if it seeks election through mixed electorates in the manner suggested by the President. . . The Liberal policy has much in common with the policy he advocated and we have no hesitation in saying that it was a sound policy which the president advised his community to follow.

Sir Fazli Hasan's appointment.

Under the heading "A sickening game" the Leader strongly criticizes the appointment of Sir Fazli Hasan as a member of the Governor-General's Executive Council, the appointment of the President of the Punjab Legislative Council as Minister in his place, Sir Fazli Hasan's reappointment as Minister and finally his translation to the Executive Council. Proceeding, the paper says:—Sir Fazli Hasan may be a matchless political and administrative genius, but what business has any Governor to drive a coach and four through the constitution for the sake of a personal pet? To Sir Malcolm Hailey the offices of Minister as well as President of the Legislative Council are evidently no more than administrative conveniences to be utilized as he fancies in order to provide for Sir Fazli Hasan.

The United Provinces Council.

The Medina urges Government to act on the two non-official resolutions passed by the United Provinces Council on December 17 in the teeth of official opposition, if the Reforms are not a sham and if all talk of grant of self-government is not a piece of shameless camouflage. Even after 150 years of rule the British mentors of civilization and equality have not been able to remove the restrictions against certain castes in the matter of Government service. What can we say of the mentality of an administration which can go further and even oppose the removal of such restrictions. It is now up to Government to abide by the resolution loyally to do away with all such unfair and foolish restrictions as offend against the spirit of democracy by their exhibition of inequality and ridiculous partiality. The second resolution refers to the degrading and tyrannical procedure of arrest and confinement of zamindars and their agents for failure to pay land revenue. Unfortunately the entire machinery of the Indian Government is devoid of feeling and sentiment and it has no room in its heart for consideration for the difficulties and helplessness of any person. It knows only how to move like the French guillotine, not discriminating between the guilty and the innocent. Such a foolish system leads to many evils, foremost among which are the disgrace and harassment of zamindars and their agents and the consequent offer of bribes by them. The system must go and the Government must respect the opinion of the Council in the matter.

The Currency Commission.

The Af[illegible] writes:—The bureaucracy has insulted India by the appointment of the Currency Commission in which Indians of every shade of opinion have no confidence. It will be no exaggeration to say that the bureaucracy is looting India by means of its currency policy. The Commission started its work also in an objectionable manner. The fact that important evidence is being heard in camera shows that the bureaucracy wants to conceal some things. It would have been much better if India had boycotted this Commission. We expect not the least good from it. On the contrary, we fear that it may injure Indian interests.

Special managers of Court of Wards Estates.

The Awaz bitterly complains that the beneficent object of the Court of Wards Act is generally defeated by the intrigues of the overwhelming majority of rapacious special managers, deputy collectors, and tahsildars who, being unable to take bribes openly owing to fear of collectors and the law, lie in wait for the death of the proprietor of some estate so that they may give some bribe and become its manager on behalf of the Court of Wards. Once they get the job they resort to all sorts of nefarious practices to fill their pockets. They even corrupt the collectors to be able to pursue their evil designs in peace.

Compulsory education in rural areas.

The Najat fears that if the present system of education is not changed the passing of the Primary Education Bill by the local Council will produce a very bad effect on the rural public, because it would divert their attention from agriculture to service and they would prefer to become patwaris and ziladars rather than farmers. Hence, the education should be such as would turn out good agriculturists.

Hindu Maha Sabha.

The Leader writes :—The presidential address of Mr. N. C. Kelkar at the session of the All-India Hindu Maha Sabha held at Cawnpore, offers a strong contrast to Sir Abdur Rahim's offensive utterance at Aligarh. It is characterized by self-restraint and discusses the communal issues in the cold light of reason. It is free from the spirit of militant communalism and it seems to justify the Maha Sabha movement not by declaiming against and denouncing Muslim sectarian activities, but on its own merits.

NOTE ON THE PRESS.

UNITED PROVINCES OF AGRA AND OUDH.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JANUARY 16, 1926.

Foreign Affairs.

THE Aj writes:—In connexion with the dispute regarding the Mosul oil-fields the League of Nations did exactly the thing for which it has come into existence. It has undertaken the holy task of entrusting the property and liberty of the whole world into the hands of European imperialists and capitalists. It is through its kindness that a number of Asiatic nations are to-day enjoying civilized government in the form of aerial bombing. It is certain that the European imperialist power embodied in the League of Nations is determined to usurp Mosul. Turkey will not be able single-handed to oppose this by military force. This disgrace and injustice will have to be tolerated quietly and tamely at the present time. But this should place Asiatics on their guard for the future. If the independent, semi-independent and subject nations of Asia do not combine to form a federation, no Asiatic country will be safe from the attacks of the League of Nations. Turkey has displayed foresight in entering into a treaty with Russia. We think that Turkey can save itself only by this method, otherwise God alone may protect it from the League of Nations. The Medina states that the political serfdom of India is particularly galling to Indian Muslims because they have to submit to a double subjection. The Khilafat conference has not only discharged a religious duty but also considerably advanced the cause of Indian freedom by its resolution on the Mosul question. This question is pregnant with possibilities and may lead to the realisation of the pan-Islamic dreams of Indian Muslims without which they can neither preserve their own existence nor gain independence for India.

Congress Politics.

The majority of the papers express disappointment at the proceedings of the Cawnpore Congress. The Muslim Herald is of opinion that Mrs. Sarojini Naidu's presidential address contains sage and sound advice and is worthy of one who is bound to figure as an Indian heroine of the present century. In another article the paper writes: The future programme of the Swarajist party as defined by the resolution moved by Pandit Motilal Nehru at the National Congress is disappointing. It fails to give the party and country a proper lead, a definite objective and a clear-cut programme. The resolution does not enhance the reputation of the Congress. To avoid inconsistencies and to put vigour in our national life, it is the duty of Pandit Nehru and other Congress leaders to give up this canker of civil disobedience and to adopt a bold clear-cut programme of work outside as well as inside the councils of which the latter can only be responsive co-operation. The Bharat Dharma says:—This Congress has not advanced the country even by a single step. Personal influence was in evidence throughout the Congress and it was beyond the power of the President to curb it. The Congress did not take any decisive action and everything remained doubtful. The Hindi Kesari remarks that all the parties being almost unanimous regarding the political programme, it is necessary that the Congress should relax the condition of khaddar so that political unity may be established in the country. It urges that a joint conference of the representatives of all the political parties should be held in April next to consider the problem of the unification of the political forces of the country so that a special session of the Congress may be convened in August next to present the national demand before the Government on behalf of all the political parties. The Shakti attaches great importance to the passage of Pandit Motilal Nehru's resolution in the Congress and says that if the Swaraj party acting according to the Cawnpore decisions gives up love of legislatures, follows the obstructionist policy and prepares the country for civil disobedience from this day and not only after finding an unyielding attitude on the part of Britain and the bureaucracy, the country's future will certainly be hopeful. In the opinion of the paper the South African question can give more impetus to the present movement than that given by the khilafat question to the non-cooperation agitation. The decisions which have been arrived at in the Congress regarding the demand for swaraj and the oppression of Indians in South Africa contain enough material for the awakening of India and the attainment of swaraj. The Bhavishya deplores that, apart from passing a resolution in condemnation of the Bengal ordinance and of the action taken under it, the Congress has done nothing to devise means for the release of the patriots who have been sent to jails like thieves and dacoits and says that sitting quietly after passing merely a vote of censure and condemnation gives still more encouragement to the Government which has realized that Indians do not possess the courage to do anything beyond this. If the Congress leaders regarded the Bengal ordinance as improper and unjust they ought to have devised some means which would have rectified this wrong, compelled the Government to repeal this legislation and led to the release of all the interned youths. One Kamlapati Tiwari, writing in the Aj, says that the Indian youths have been seriously disappointed at the proceedings of the Cawnpore Congress, inasmuch as they have neither faith in the councils nor in the charkha as a means for the attainment of liberty. For want of an inspiring programme the youths are likely to develop feelings of violence and the leaders will be responsible for any harm that may result from them. It is, therefore, desirable that the leaders should formulate a programme which may enable the youths to go forward for the country's cause enthusiastically. The youths also should organize themselves into one body, raise the cry of liberty from one end of the country to the other, prepare the country for civil disobedience, and invoke Mahatma Gandhi to resume the leadership of the country and lead it to emancipation through civil disobedience. The Medina is deeply disappointed at the attitude of the Cawnpore Congress in regard to the question of Council entry and says that there was no resolution passed by that body which can be said to advance the cause of Indian freedom. The dream of civil disobedience has been abandoned. Non-cooperation has been given a burial. The policy of obstruction has been provisionally suspended and the prestige of the Councils has been appreciably enhanced. The Congress has now become the happy hunting-ground of the swarajists. Other Congressmen will seek retirement in the Spinners' Association. Still others of the stamp of Kelkar and Moonje, who have got the Muslim bogey on their brains, will secede and form another party. We believe that Pandit Motilal's resolution only provides a pretext for wasting time. Its exterior is no doubt very pleasing and attractive and it may possibly assume a revolutionary form, but apparently the fetters of India's subjection have been made stronger.

The All-India Muslim League and other Muslim Conferences.

Hindu papers bitterly criticize Sir Abdur Rahim's presidential address. The Aj writes :—No condemnation can be too strong of the presidential address delivered by Sir Abdur Rahim at the Muslim League. Never before was heard from the lips of any responsible leader such an objectionable address calculated to cause communal hatred. After the perusal of this address one is tempted to think that perhaps the Sangathanists are after all right in holding that there can be no unity between Hindus and Muslims. It is no good sign for national unity that this address called forth no protest even from Muslims of nationalistic views. There is already no patriotism among the Muslims and if leaders like Sir Abdur Rahim excite communal hatred among them this quality will never be developed among them. In another article the same paper say that the fire of communal hatred and ill-feeling which Sir Abdur Rahim has fanned through his address cannot but produce fearful consequences. The task of the advocates of unity will now be rendered all the more difficult and communalists will find in this address a justification for their activities. Nationalists will find it hard to work for their ideal unless Sir Abdur Rahim's views are openly repudiated by recognized Muslim leaders. There is not a single good word for non-Muslims in this address. Sir Abdur Rahim's worst advice to the Muslims is to form their separate parties in all Councils. This will only encourage the Hindu Sabha to have its own candidates returned during the next elections. If this happens and nationalist Hindus are defeated, Muslims can have little hope of getting special rights with the consent of the new Hindu members. Thus the Muslims will be laying the axe at their own interests if they form their separate parties in the councils. The Surya writes:—The address was most regrettable and would promote communal estrangement. Sir Abdur Rahim has forgotten even ordinary canons of etiquette in making idle and baseless attacks on the Hindus. His speech is full of hatred for the Hindus from one end to the other. We never expected that a learned and respectable person like him would make such an abominable utterance. The Medina writes:—The utterance of the Muslim knight of Bengal was most disappointing. Never was such a ridiculous and redundant address delivered during the short span of existence of the Muslim League. It was devoid of political sense, absurd and ill-arranged and even occasionally lapsed into blatant self-praise. It was a regular eulogy of the European allies and presented the existing communal struggle in an objectionable tone of carping criticism and even betrayed pedantry at places. A pleasing contrast was afforded by Mr. Abdullah Yusuf Ali's address which was a sensible pronouncement, giving a lucid outline of the Tanzim programme. It is a pity that the proceedings of the Muslim League and Tanzim conference breathe a spirit of hostility towards the Khilafat committee and it is feared that instead of coalescing the scattered forces of Islam these movements may only create new schisms. Al Adl eulogizes Mr. Yusuf Ali's address as a comprehensive deliverance which can serve as a guide for every discerning person. Tanzim is a self-purification movement which is not at all aimed against Hindus and should be welcomed by every patriotic Indian. Commenting on the proceedings of the Khilafat Conference at Cawnpore, the Medina laments that a sorry spectacle was presented there of the love of ease, disunion, disorganization and selfishness of Indian Muslims. The speeches sounded more like a dirge, a wail, and a lament over these weaknesses which some enthusiastic and sympathetic hearts were uttering. The diminutive size of the pandal, the paucity of volunteers, the prevailing disorganization and the dearth of delegates was surely painful. No doubt Mr. Hasrat Mohani's presence, his combativeness and his unprincipled but pugnacious pronouncement infused some spirit though it might have been only that of Milton's Satan up in arms against God for the kingdom of Heaven. The only illuminating ray was furnished by the President's address, but it was mostly a reply to Hasrat's attacks and failed to provide a programme, which while safeguarding Muslim interests would also serve the nation and the country. The conference confined itself to the question of Mosul and the Hedjaz and did not deal effectively with the internal problems of India. No doubt unless the freedom of Western and Central Asia is guaranteed by the Islamic world, pan-Asiatic unity and Indian independence cannot be secured but the presidential address was expected to deal more fully with Indian problems.

The New Ministers.

Commenting upon the appointment of the Ministers the Leader writes:—It is quite true that in the United Provinces there is work enough for three Ministers. This is, however, subject to two provisos. It is that they can, and do, work. Given men of knowledge, industry, ability, and courage, as well as adequate funds, there is work for more than three. But if money is not to be had for expansion and reform, and if the chosen are not endowed with the aforesaid qualities even two Ministers may be too many by one. The names of two new Ministers have been announced. Let those who know say what they think of the selections. For ourselves we prefer to say nothing as their qualifications are indescribable. Referring to this criticism, the Muslim Herald writes:—The worst enemy of Nawab Muhammad Yusuf cannot deny that recognition of merit in a man who has long been distinguished for liberality of views, uprightness and sincerity of purpose has been made after all. As one of the biggest zamindars of Agra, he has been always remarkable for the consideration that he accords to his tenants, among whom, we can say from personal knowledge, he is highly popular. We are sure that the right man has been selected who will justify the choice. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—By having three shoulders to bear the burden His Excellency Sir William Marris will have considerably added to the efficiency of administration. We shall have, by the way, four Indians as against three to influence any joint consideration of the Government, although, as past experience has shown, Indians, as bureaucrats, are bureaucrats first and patriots next. His Excellency could not have made a better choice from among the landholders than the two striking names published in the Gazette. If now and then they will press the popular outlook on important questions in the Government they will have done much better than we have learnt to associate with professional politicians who adorned the first ministry of the United Provinces Government. The Haqiqat congratulates His Excellency the Governor on his selection of Nawab Muhammad Yusuf as a Minister and says that it will be viewed with entire satisfaction throughout the province both among Hindus and Muslims.

Political propaganda.

The Sainik publishes an article by one Govind Dutt Sharma, in the course of which he contends that the bureaucracy's partiality for the landed classes and their efforts to create class consciousness among them is sure to react and to create a similar consciousness among the tenants also. This class consciousness will thus lead to Bolshevism and produce terrible results. In order to protect India from the terrible spectre of Bolshevism it is necessary to curb the crooked moves which are creating class consciousness among the zamindars and tenants. The Government, who pose as the well-wishers of the zamindars, are not even prepared to extend the period of settlement to sixty years or to abolish the practice of confining them in the lock-up on slightest pretexts and yet the foolish zamindars who have lost their common-sense on account of their folly, fear and desire for luxurious living, regard the Government as their ma-bap. In order to save them and the tenants from this danger it is necessary to carry on a vigorous agitation. Referring to the speeches at the Conference of British Head-masters on December 23, the Oudh Akhbar says that it is now quite clear that the promise of the indianization of the civil and military services was only a hoax, as it has been openly asserted that the presence of the British element is absolutely essential in order to maintain peace in India. How can the Reforms be a success in these circumstances? They have now been unmasked in all their hideous nakedness. Let the Liberals co-operate with Government to their heart's content.

Indians in the Colonies.

Commenting on Mr. Andrews' telegram that the Union Government is soon going to pass a measure for expelling Indians from South Africa by starving them out, the Aj says:—We want to tell our white rulers humbly but firmly that if the Anti-Asiatic Bill is passed into law the Empire must never expect any help from India in any future crisis and the question of governing this country will become still more complicated. If Britain is incapable of protecting India even from such diabolical injustices she should not even presume to call herself the protector of India. Is Britain ruling India by disarming her simply with a view to compel her to put up with such gross insults? If Britain herself does not want to take part in this dispute she may not do so but for God's sake she should unfasten the bonds of India. Britain has given dominion status to South Africa but not to India. Our hands and feet are tied and they have weapons in their hands. They are attacking us and we cannot even defend ourselves. Britain is morally bound to protect us. If she has not the courage to do so she should at least give us the liberty which those who attack us are enjoying. This is humanity and if Britain fails to act according to it she will never be able to protect her honour. In another article the same paper remarks that the whole of India should with one voice request the British Government to make a serious effort to prevent the passage of the Asiatic Bill in South Africa. If this prayer be unacceptable, the duty of the Indians will be plain. They will try to sever their connexion with the British Government and attain swaraj as early as possible with all legitimate and non-violent means so that they may acquire the power to deal properly with brutes like the Boers. The Anand deplores that the cry of South African Indians which has resounded through the whole world has not succeeded in breaking the silence of the British Government and says that now that Indians of all shades of opinion have unanimously urged the Government of India to stop the injustice which is being perpetrated on their compatriots in South Africa, it is the duty of the British Government to prevent the passing of the unjust anti-Asiatic Bill into law.

United Provinces District Boards Primary Education Bill.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—For a rapid advance in education the Bill will prove as successful as the eight-unit scheme has proved for the indianization of the army. In order to ensure satisfactory progress of primary education, it is necessary, as is the case in Madras, for every district in the United Provinces to have an elementary education fund. Without such a fund bankrupt boards will be reluctant to apply to the Government for compulsion. The board should be empowered to appoint a District Educational Council and to delegate to it all the powers of the board in respect of primary education, except that the budget and its alteration should be submitted to the board for confirmation.

Mr. B. G. Horniman's return.

Referring to the return of Mr. B. G. Horniman the Vartman says:—Government should remove the bar on other worthy sons of mother India in foreign lands like Lala Har Dayal and Mr. Sudhindra Bose. The Government thinks that if they are allowed to come to India they will preach anarchy and bring about revolution. God knows why they think so. Will these men bring artillery with them or will they take control of Indian armies as soon as they come here? If these men are dangerous it is not understood why their writings are not considered to be so. These are regularly coming into India and the public does not rise in rebellion after reading them. It remained quiet even on Mr. Horniman's arrival. How then can it be believed that when these men come here there will be a rebellion in India? Moreover, in this era of non-violence a rebellion is impossible owing to the teachings of Mahatma Gandhi and the firmness of the British Government.

Lord Reading.

Th Aj writes:—We cannot say without sullying our soul that we feel sorry at the impending departure of Lord Reading. It was expected that the dignity of law would be raised during his regime but how law has been dragged in the mire in his time by its upholders will ever remain memorable in the history of British India. He has done more harm to India than any other Viceroy during the last fifty years. During his regime Indian aspirations have been trampled upon at every step. Even co-operators were insulted. The privileges of the foreign servants were supported by all means. His policy in respect of Indians abroad was also unsympathetic.

Hindu Maha Sabha.

The Medina complains that in his presidential address at the Hindu Maha Sabha at Cawnpore, Mr. Kelkar tried to justify Suddhi, Sangathan and communal strife with the most misleading and false arguments. It is a pity that while Hindus with their multifarious castes and conflicting creeds can combine in the cause of Sangathan, Indian Muslims cannot unite even though they believe in one God and one Quran.

The outgoing Home Member.

The Muslim Herald writes:—The retirement of the Hon'ble Maharaja Sir Muhammad Ali Muhammad Khan from the office of Home Member would be a sad and severe loss to the State. The absence of his vivid and intellectual face, full of calm energy and resource, the face of one who was at once a profound thinker and active worker, would be felt in the Council Chamber.

Passports.

The Leader is glad that the Times of India has urged the abolition of "passports" and says:—These might have been a necessity of war time but are not wanted any more. In fact, they are almost a nuisance.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JANUARY 23, 1926.

Foreign affairs.

THE Aj strongly condemns the League of Nations as an instrument of hypocrisy and oppression utilized by European imperialists against weak and coloured peoples. Referring to its decision regarding Mosul the paper points out how the League keeps quiet despite injustices and atrocities in Mesopotamia, Syria, Morocco and Egypt and on Indians in South Africa. Proceeding it remarks:—This venomous reptile (the League of Nations) is also nourished by India. We become beside ourselves with rage and shame when we see that this institution despite its black deeds of omission and commission is maintained with the blood of our hearts. By becoming its member we are destroying ourselves and bringing calamities on Asia. We are prolonging the subjection of subject peoples and depriving independent nations of their liberty. We wish India to protest against the contribution made by the Government of India towards the maintenance of the League of Nations and to tell the world that she is not willingly nourishing this cobra. It is only with a view to help in the maintenance of the League of Nations that India has been made one of its members. We do not like to remain its member. We first want to set our own house in order and to form a separate federation in concert with our Asiatic brethren. We have no place in the League of independent nations. We want to be in the company of those who are dependent, who are oppressed and who are struggling for their life. We pray to be saved from institutions like the League of Nations and the Council of the Empire. The Medina hopes that France and Italy will not be taken in by the cunning efforts of Britain to secure their co-operation in the event of a war with Turkey. They are not such fools as to forget her favourite trick in every field of war by which she throws all the burden of bloodshed and devastation on the heads of the allies, while she looks on at the fun and takes the lion's share of the spoils in case of victory. But if France and Italy, owing to their old enmity with the Turks, Arabs and Afghans, fall into the crafty net of Britain the results would be disastrous for both. Russia is sure to help Turkey and the war will extend into a struggle between the East and the West and between Islam and Christianity. Indian Muslims are helpless and subject, yet the spirit of Islam is strong and free and India herself will become a centre of trouble and instead of gaining Mosul Britain will have difficulty in maintaining her position in the East. The entire responsibility for the war will rest on those British statesmen who are determined to deprive the Turks of their just rights.

The Viceroy's speech.

Commenting on the Viceroy's speech at the opening of the winter session of the Legislative Assembly the Leader expresses its doubts about the utility of a Royal Commission on Agriculture, and says:—"The causes which are responsible for the backwardness of Indian agriculture are well-known and a costly Commission was not needed to find them out. The appointment of a Commission may advertise the solicitude of our 'trustees' for the economic well-being of the masses and may thus serve a political purpose, but it is problematical if its labours will result in substantial good. British capitalists are greatly interested in the economic development of the Empire with a view to find profitable investment for British capital and to bring about an increased demand for British manufactures. It is in pursuit of this imperial policy that the Commission has been appointed." Referring to the terms of reference of the Commission the paper suggests that it should also take into consideration the part which village industries played in the past in rural economy and make recommendations for their revival and development. From the observations of His Excellency regarding the deputation sent to South Africa the paper infers that the object of the deputation is not to make any representations to the South African Government on behalf of Indian settlers, but to suggest to the Government of India how far it is possible for them to co-operate with the South African Government in facilitating the voluntary repatriation of Indians and to mitigate economic competition. "Such an object cannot commend itself to Indian public opinion and betokens a spirit of co-operation which is based on weakness and not on strength and to which the South African Government is not entitled in view of Dr. Malan's statement that no solution of the question would be acceptable unless it resulted in a very considerable reduction of the Indian population. We hope that in their anxiety for peace and settlement the Government of India will not indirectly yield what is directly sought to be achieved by the anti-Asiatic Bill." Referring to His Excellency's remarks about the conditions for the grant of further reforms the paper writes:—"Innumerable excuses can be found by those who do not want to make a move and the pleas Lord Reading has urged for standing still are utterly lacking in convincing force. There is enough of good-will abroad to justify a further advance and wise statesmanship should seek to increase its volume and strength by timely concessions." The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Although His Excellency has been heartless enough to hold out the threat of another revolting infliction of an address to the Indian Legislature, Indian politicians will scan in vain his speech to the Legislative Assembly for any favourable sign. We deliberately state that it is a calculated challenge to leaders of political thought. Does the Government desire to drive Indian nationalism underground by such defiance as is contained in a responsible viceregal statement demanding unconditional, abject, dishonourable co-operation from the people without one vestige of a sign of change of heart on their part? There can be only one reply from self-respecting Indians to such an attitude: that is to throw themselves into the unchartered waters of civil disobedience. We do not attach much importance to the Royal Commission on Agriculture enunciated with such pompous precision and ponderous details. All that it might do would be to place in the pigeon-hole another voluminous report which would not be acted upon. The reference to the Indian question in South Africa at this critical juncture when the country is awaiting the axe of the executioner was truly elaborate, but amidst the Niagra of words we look in vain for any ray of hope. In India and to Indians this jumble of words conveys nothing except an irritating feeling of idle fiddling amidst an all-consuming fire. The Oudh Akhbar scouts the idea of a commission to inquire into rural conditions in India and wonders what there is about Indian village life which is not already well known and which this commission will seek to discover. The Indian peasantry is poor, ill-fed. ill-clad and ill-housed. Means of communication and irrigation are lacking. Rents are high. Indebtedness prevails and there is an undesirable division of holdings, and all this is fully known to the officials. What therefore is needed is not a costly commission, but a committee with a majority of non-official Indian public men fully conversant with village life to devise ways and means to remedy these evils.

Indians in the Colonies.

Referring to the "impressive and representative demonstration held in Bombay on January 15 to voice the feeling of indignation and sense of humiliation of the Indian community at the treatment which is being accorded to Indian settlers in South Africa" the Leader writes: The entire country is united on the South African issue and if notwithstanding the protests that have been and are being made the great wrong which is threatened is allowed to be perpetrated owing to the pusillanimity or indifference of the Imperial Government, it will proclaim to the entire world its impotence to uphold the cause of right within the Empire and will weaken the moral bonds which hold it together. The Vartman approves of the resolution of the Calcutta Corporation against the South African "whites" and remarks that the Union Government must understand that now Indians are no more the Indians who could always put up with the kicks of the white men. They will fight and will not rest in peace so long as they do not achieve their object. The Sainik says that the extent to which people having white skins and black hearts can resort to meanness is clear from the legislation known as the Asiatic Bill which is before the South African Parliament for driving out Indian settlers from that country. The Government of India is no doubt evincing impotence in this matter, but has the British Government also lost its "steel frame" and "tiger qualities"? The Surya supports the action of the Calcutta Corporation in resolving to have no trade relations with the South African Europeans and to deny all facilities to them and urges other corporations and municipalities to follow suit. Referring to a recent telegram from Mr. Andrews from South Africa, the Medina says that it reveals the hard-heartedness and obstinacy of the Government there. In reality the white-skinned Chengezes of South Africa do not want to make any concessions to Indians or to do justice to them. They have unequivocally declared that the Asiatic Bill would be supported and they have really been encouraged in this attitude of theirs by the Viceroy's words. They were in the first place extremely guarded and lacking in force and he himself enunciated the principle that the question was an internal one for South Africa. How can any stranger then have any legal or moral right to interfere in it? It is a pity that the physician to whom our compatriots resorted for the treatment of their malady gave them such a poisonous prescription that all lingering hopes of the recovery of the patients are now gone.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an article on the great war the Aj remarks:—It is our conjecture that the alliance of Britain with the Czarist Russia was mostly responsible for the great war. His and Britain's admirers may well laud Sir Edward (now Lord) Grey to the skies, but we, the Asiatics, cannot forget what kind of generosity and benevolence to the world can be expected from those who shared Persia with Russia. Germany no doubt was making preparations for war, but the usurpers of the land of the whole world cannot blame her for it. Under the heading "Distrust of British promises" the same paper writes:—We Indians can give several reasons for distrusting British promises. It has become known to Englishmen also that in India no one believes the word of British authorities. Such grave and widespread distrust cannot be created merely by agitation. There is truth at its bottom . . . Britain had entered into a treaty with Iraq that the latter would get complete independence in 1928. This had led the world and the inhabitants of Iraq to believe that in 1928 British soldiers and officials would leave that country. Through the unbounded kindness of the League of Nations Iraq not only got Mosul and Britain oil, but the Arabs of Iraq had also the good fortune of getting the unbriddled rule of British soldiers and officials for another twenty-five years. It appears that the Arabs are not pleased at their latter good luck. This is their unmannerliness. Are British imperialists uncivilized like the Russian Bolsheviks that they should return to their homes leaving any country, specially non-white peoples, uncultured? Mr. Baldwin says that such a sinful thought never crossed the mind of the British authorities. The granting of independence never meant that British soldiers and officials would be removed from there. This unique meaning of independence is only intended for the non-whites. They should interpret not only British promises but also the phraseology of treaties with the greatest care. We congratulate the Arabs of Iraq. They have got British rule in return for oil. Indeed it is not a bad bargain. Commenting on the judgment in the Dakshineshwar bomb case the Vartman says:—If a bomb, a revolver, a pistol or a few cartridges are found in any house it does not follow that that house is a bomb factory or the seat of a big conspiracy. Even if we take as correct the finding of the special court, the question is, why did the Government create such a situation which has compelled the youths to follow this path? The situation created by the Government has not only agitated the youths but the whole country. The people are in extreme distress. They are crying on all sides. They do not get enough to eat, yet taxes and epidemics are increasing and thefts and drunkenness are rampant and there are famines every year. Can all this happen in any independent country? It is but natural that the youths should be more agitated against the system of government which has destroyed the manhood of the country and increased cowardice and turned the rich country into a poor one. There can be no peace so long as India does not get swaraj. Repression cannot remove unrest. It only leads to anarchy. In order to establish peace in the country it is the duty of the British Government to grant swaraj to India. The Medina observes that clever wizards of Britain are assuring the simpletons of India that they should work the Reforms up to 1929 and then a Royal Commission of white gods will descend from the British sky and will, after touring throughout the country and ascertaining conditions, grant them home rule or self-government or dominion status. Certain credulous gentlemen in India believe these promises and reproach pessimists, but those who know the reality are well aware that the English are not ruling India because their hearts are overflowing with the milk of human kindness and sympathy for the pitiful condition of this ignorant and uncivilized country and they want to convert this hellish place into an earthly paradise. They are ruling over her with the rod and the iron fist because she provides means of subsistence, comfort and luxury for the denizens of the rocky and barren soil of England. Our beloved country is the market for the manufactures of England and she supports the labourers of Britain. India also provides princely appointments for the scapegrace wastrels of England. Every sensible and just person can see that Englishmen cannot willingly abandon a country on which their very existence and national superiority depend. All promises to drop swaraj from the British skies are therefore illusory. Only recently the Daily Telegraph (London) which is the organ of the present Government and a representative of British public opinion, while commenting on Indian affairs, demanded an assurance that British recruitment would continue for India. When such are the intentions, how unfortunate are those who build their hopes of a worldly paradise on British promises?

The Governor of Bombay and the Hindus.

Referring to the reply of the Governor of Bombay to the Hindus of Sindh that they could not be given more high posts as their representatives in the Council always voted against the Government the Bharat Dharma says:—Who can repose faith in the good intentions of the bureaucracy after perusing the reply of a responsible Governor who professes to make the reforms a success? This reply also shows why the liberals and moderates have remained in Councils so long. The Governor is to be thanked for revealing a secret policy. The people are to blame as they do not come to their senses even after receiving repeated kicks. God only knows when they will get tired of them. The Aj remarks:—By offering the bait of Government posts the bureaucracy wants elected members of the Council to act according to its wishes. Establishing its control over Legislative Councils in this manner the bureaucracy would govern India in the name of elected members. How far this administration will be popular and beneficial to the people can be easily conceived. In our opinion to interfere with the liberty of electors by offering the bait of Government posts is more objectionable than to save a murderer or to send an innocent man to jail by offering bribe to the police or the judge. But who can blame the strong? Whatever they do is all proper and right.

The new Ministers.

The Abhyudaya writes:—We congratulate the provincial Governor on his securing two Ministers instead of one. We had been hearing for long that he was much perplexed in his search for even one Minister. It is rumoured that the Muslim members held out a threat to the provincial Council that if no Muslim Minister was appointed they would either wreck the ministry or resign their seats in the Council in a body. Is it for this reason that the Governor increased the number of Ministers from two to three and appointed a Hindu and a Muslim as Ministers or had work increased in the province? If this has been done owing to the increase of work, do the persons appointed possess any special aptitude? The Arya Varta takes exception to the appointment of two Ministers instead of one and says that this was done probably because the Governor wanted to please both the communities. Now the entire ministry consists of taluqdars. The Governor cannot be congratulated on the appointments from the public standpoint as they will be an unnecessary burden on the tax-payer.

Corruption in public offices.

The Awaz complains that bribery in some form or other is rampant in every department of Government in India. Even some High Court judges sweep in money with both hands. Numerous deputy collectors openly make illicit gain in cases and many collectors defray their household expenses from bribes. Raises corrupt some collectors for the sake of titles and such other empty favours. The same is the case in the Railway and Police departments. People run after service simply for the sake of illicit income. Government of course does not tolerate bribery, but some officials, though high-placed, consider it contrary to their interests to check corruption. Englishmen can live most comfortably on their high salaries while in India, but they are always thinking of the difficulties of living in England after retirement and many of them resort to all means to amass money. Following this bad example Indian subordinates also begin to take bribes. Now matters have come to such a pass that people do not even regard it as a crime to take bribes. Even Viceroys empty the pockets of the Rajas and Nawabs in December dalis. The law is today helpless and cannot stop bribery.

The Muslim League.

The Medina points out that while the slave mentality of the Muslim League did not allow it to go beyond making appeals to Britain in regard to the Mosul question, the Khilafat Conference boldly tackled it and declared that if there was war with the Turks over Mosul the scene of the Karachi trial would be re-enacted in India and service would become a sin for every Muslim soldier and policeman, and that if there was war with fire and iron in the fields of Mosul, the battle of non-violence and passive resistance would be waged in India also. Can any one now claim that the moving spirits of the Muslim League are inspired by any devotion to God and His prophet or by any sentiment of self-sacrifice?

The Hindu Sabha and the Madras Government.

Referring to the Madras Government's order prohibiting Hindu Government servants from becoming members of the Hindu Sabha the Bharat Dharma exhorts the Hindus of all shades of opinion to sink their party differences and to agitate from one end of the country to the other and even to resort to civil disobedience, if necessary, to compel the Government to withdraw this order, and says that this order shows that the Government also is opposed to Hindu Sangathan and has violated its pledge not to interfere in any religion, and that it is not only the Muslims but also the bureaucracy who are bent upon ruining the Hindus.

Indians in Burma.

The Leader writes :—We protest most strongly against the unjust action of His Excellency the Viceroy in giving his assent to that outrageous measure—the Expulsion of non-Burman Offenders Bill. That the Viceroy should have made himself a party to a Bill which, with the Sea Passengers Tax Bill, virtually creates for Indians a Kenya in a province under his jurisdiction is an ironic commentary upon His Excellency's assurances and efforts in behalf of the Indians of Kenya and South Africa. Sir Harcourt Butler, the friend of India and lover of Indians, has succeeded after all. How well Burke's " Birds of passage " keep up their well-advertised affection for the land in which they make their " rupees and reputations " is so admirably illustrated in this kick to Indians administered by our late taluqdar Governor whom Allahabad remembers with tearful gratitude.

" King's proposed visit to India."

Referring to a report in some newspapers that the Government of India propose to invite the King-Emperor again to India in November to make some special announcement and that the province of Delhi would be enlarged and given a Governor with an Executive Council the Awaz remarks that Indians do not want any more costly toys, and if the second instalment of the Reforms is not less costly and more substantial than the first, the King should not be troubled in his old age.

Hindu Muslim relations.

The Prem publishes an article by one Brahmachari Bhadrajit who contends that under the present circumstances it is vain to expect the Muslims to co-operate with the Hindus in the struggle for freedom and says that the narrow-mindedness of Muslims and their new demands which are detrimental to the interests of the nation have exhausted the patience of even the most forbearing community in the world. The Hindus should, therefore, organize themselves to promote the work of uplifting their community and to carry out the decisions of the Hindu Maha Sabha.

Lord Reading.

The Hindi Kesari writes :—The Black Act of Bengal, the recommendations of the Lee Commission and the increase in the salt-tax are the monuments of Lord Reading's régime. The aspirations of Indians were trampled upon and Mahatma Gandhi and twenty-five thousand Indian youths were thrown into jails for the service of the country during his time. His memory will long remain fresh in the minds of Indians owing to the black law of Bengal.

The Bengal Ordinance.

Referring to Lord Lytton's speech on the subject of penology at the Rotary Club the Leader writes :—That such liberal and humanitarian views should be expressed by one who is responsible for shutting up for an indefinite period a number of young men without any trial and whose guilt has not been proved by any judicial inquiry only shows the extent to which the Governor of Bengal has strayed from the ideal in which Lord Lytton believes. No offence has been proved against those who have been deprived of their liberty under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, and yet they are being punished on the ground of their supposed criminality.

Lotteries in Indian States.

In the course of an article on the increase of gambling in its various forms in the country the Aj refers to the loss which people in British India suffer through lotteries organized in Indian States, and inquires whether Government does not consider it to be its duty to protect them against such lotteries which are in reality but a system of indirect organized robbery.

Foreign affairs.

In the course of a review of the Mosul question the Muslim Herald writes:—If self-determination has any value in the eyes of the League and Great Britain, they ought to know that Iraq and Mosul are determined to be free. We hope Great Britain will rise above the temptation of grabbing Mosul and her oil wells. Such greediness may cause another conflagration. The Sada-i-Muslim is surprised at the news of the declaration of the sovereignty of Ibn Saud over the Hedjaz and the silence of the Khilafat deputation on this matter and says that it should be asked to explain its conduct on its return to India. Al Adl is grieved at the report and hopes that even now Ibn Saud will try to follow the Islamic shariat and will not imitate European diplomatic tactics. Al Bashir regrets that the report has led to further schisms among Indian Muslims. It is a pity that instead of devising means for averting the catastrophe that is awaiting them in India, Indian Muslims busy themselves with foreign matters over which they can have no control. The result is that their condition is going from bad to worse day by day. Indian Muslims should realise that they cannot survive if they persist in this attitude.

The Viceroy's speech.

Commenting on the Viceroy's speech at the opening of the winter session of the Legislative Assembly, the Muslim Herald writes:—The speech falls short of the expectations that even the most moderate amongst us entertained. The important subject of constitutional reforms was dealt with at some length by His Excellency the Viceroy, but we looked in vain to find something in it that might, by any stretch of imagination, be called remarkable. He again harped on the same old string and played the same old tune. He asked for cooperation which, in plain words, meant unconditional surrender. He has made the task of cooperators more difficult by the stand-offish way in which he has couched his appeal for cooperation. The announcement of the Royal Commission on Agriculture also falls short of our expectations. We are certainly disappointed in the Commission that is going to study the problems of agriculture in India. Its terms of reference are too narrow to render any great help to agricultural development in India. In another article, referring to the Royal Commission the paper says: A costly Royal Commission has been appointed, but can it do any good to the masses when by its very terms of reference it is powerless to touch the problems that vitally affect the rural prosperity? It is simply another of those costly shows that are arranged for the entertainment of the world, but which always leave India more or less in the same old condition, only with the difference that it always has to pay the piper without being, in the least, entertained. The Aj considers the speech to be wholly unsatisfactory. No sensible Indian could expect anything more from the Viceroy. India can get nothing from him beyond verbosity and diplomacy. This time the illusive net of agricultural development has been spread. This will not, and cannot, benefit Indians. Indeed this arrangement has not been made for the good of the Indian cultivators. It is only to deceive the world. It is intended to show to the world that the foreign rulers of India are busily engaged in improving the country and to create hopes in the minds of simple Indians that perhaps this time the bureaucracy is going to do some real good to the country. But the Indians will once again be disappointed in trusting the word of the bureaucracy. The Royal Commission on Agriculture will only mean waste of money and energy and the creation of a few highly paid posts. It is all a snare of illusion and represents an attempt to divert the attention of Indians from the struggle for swaraj. Referring to His Excellency's remarks regarding the South African problem the paper opines that they are wholly void of substance and are more or less formal. Lord Reading has practically yielded entirely, although in an indirect manner, to the Boer Government. Commenting on his remarks regarding the political situation the paper says that His Excellency wants Indians to give up all sense of self-respect and become wholly subservient to the bureaucracy. The country cannot acquiesce in this insulting and heart-rending position. Awakened India is not prepared to lie low at the feet of the bureaucracy which is what Lord Reading demands. The Government has replied to the national demand. The All-India Congress Committee should now hold a session to settle the future programme. The Swarajists too should at once cease to take part in the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly and devote themselves to the task of preparing the people for the future non-violent but firm and ceaseless struggle. The Vartman writes:—So long as economic reforms are not effected and self-government is not granted to Indians, there can be neither co-operation nor peace in the country. The fact that the Royal Commission on Agriculture will leave out important questions and consider only worthless ones is sufficient to prove that it is unnecessary. The Pratap remarks:—Lord Reading's remarks in connexion with the South African question show that the Government of India want to help Indians, but that His Excellency is not prepared to adopt a strong policy. Interference can be made even in the internal affairs of a country if they are of an international character. The Viceroy has in a way said that so long as Indians do not kneel down before the Viceregal throne the British and the Indian Governments will not listen to their clamour for further reforms. The Viceroy and his lieutenants should not even dream that the Indian National Congress will so debase itself. It is an insult to India to ask her to give up political agitation and to kiss the gracious feet of Government. Lord Reading and his successor will see what India does in future. The Abhyudaya says that perhaps His Excellency wants the Indian leaders to repent of their past conduct, to stop agitation altogether, and to bow down cheerfully to the decisions of the Government whatever they may be. His Excellency has undoubtedly complained against Indian leaders, but has not at the same time said when and how many times the Government extended the hand of brotherhood, friendship and cooperation to them. The Aj refers to Lord Reading's statement that owing to the abolition of the cotton excise duty provincial contributions will not be reduced to the desired extent and remarks:—Well, can the bureaucracy of India ever do an unmixed good? There was no complaint of a deficit in the budget when, trampling upon Indian public opinion, increases were granted in the pay of white officials and other facilities were provided to them, but it has become inevitable to strangle the provinces for the abolition of the cotton excise duty. What a fine specimen of financial readjustment and of justice! The Surya contends that the Royal Commission on Agriculture will do no actual good to the country, but will only trumpet all the world over that the custodians of India are striving to effect the economic advancement and agricultural development of the country. It goes on to say that the self-interest of the British people lies hidden in this dense cloud of agricultural reform. A careful perusal of Lord Reading's speech makes it perfectly clear that this Commission has been appointed to give a chance to the capitalists of England to invest their capital in India and find a market for their goods. The Sainik writes:—We see nothing but harm in the proposed Royal Commission on Agriculture. The money of the poor people will be wasted and false hopes will be raised in the hearts of foolish and credulous persons. We are afraid that, in the name of agricultural development, industrial progress will be stopped, the fire of ill-feeling will be kindled between towns and villages, and the minds of the people will be diverted from the battle for swaraj. The Bharat Jiwan says that agricultural development will enable big British firms to drain away the grain of the country. The agricultural development owes its origin to the apprehension that when Indians attain swaraj the Islanders (the British) will not be able to earn their living simply by Indian trade. They, therefore, think that if they take to cultivation in this country no one will be able to drive them out and they will live here comfortably whether India gets swaraj or not, as Indian agriculture will pass into the hands of foreigners after the tenure of the office of the "reformer of agriculture" in the same way as injustice reigns supreme in the country after the régime of the "apostle of justice." The Pratap contends that in the matter of the appointment of a Royal Commission on Agriculture the Government have not been moved by any feeling of sympathy for the afflicted and starving tenantry, but that their real object is to popularize the use of modern implements of agriculture as used in Europe and America. If the Commission had been empowered to report on the existing rent, revenue and settlement systems the condition of the tenants would have greatly improved, but the Government are afraid of doing this. Besides, the Government appear to undertake this scheme with a view to win over the masses from the national cause. It may also be a precautionary measure against the next elections. The Sada-i-Muslim writes :—A Royal Commission on Agriculture would prove of no benefit to Indian peasants, as Indian produce is exported for the advantage of English consumers and the question of import and export is beyond the province of the Commission. As regards cooperation, the Congress has suspended non-cooperation, raised the triple boycott, and included Council entry in its programme. Pray, what more is needed in the way of cooperation? The false issue of cooperation is really raised only to postpone further reforms till 1929. The Oudh Akhbar appeals to Swarajists to grasp the hand extended by His Excellency and thus give him an opportunity to do something towards the close of his régime.

Indians in the Colonies.

Commenting on the Asiatic Bill the Hindi Kesari remarks that so long as Indians do not become free in their own country they will continue to be kicked in foreign countries and congratulates the Calcutta Corporation on its adopting the policy of retaliation against the South African whites. Urging the people and the Government of India to present a united front to the Anti-Asiatic Bill, the Arya Mitra says :—It is the Government of India alone who should and can carry on the most vigorous agitation at the present juncture. In the absence of freedom Indians are being subjected to untold miseries both at home and abroad. They are being treated even worse than dogs and cats. Surely the interests of India would not have been thus trampled upon if there were swaraj in the country. The Shankar says :—The Government of India should realize that if the Union Government does not give up its obstinacy and the Asiatic Bill is passed into law there will be a very terrible agitation all over India and Indians will show to the Government that they will not be able to put up for long with the meanness of the Union Government. The Aj asks Indians to assure their compatriots in South Africa of their full sympathy and all possible monetary support in their struggle. Protest meetings like the one held recently at Bombay should be held throughout the country with a view to create strong public opinion against the Bill which amounts to a complete negation of the very principles of humanity. If we could get this Bill rejected by a widespread and vigorous agitation we would establish that we can get swaraj and have the fitness to attain it. Referring to Lord Reading's reply to the Indian deputation from South Africa, the paper asks whether a similar reply would have been given if Englishmen had been subjected to the same treatment as is being accorded to Indians. The Imperial Government can by all means interfere in this matter and it should certainly get this Bill rejected. In another article the same paper points out that the attempt to drive out Indians from South Africa is one of the examples of the world-wide white domination which seeks to carry things all its own way, in utter disregard of the rights of the coloured peoples. It is this world-wide white domination which is the key to the secret of the perpetration of atrocities on coloured races in the world. It is under the influence of this world-wide domination that pledges made to coloured peoples are not redeemed. This is a universal malady and universal methods should also be employed to combat it. We Indians should try to lay the axe at this white domination in our own country, while the Indians in South Africa should make common cause with the natives and try to deal a blow to the white domination there. If we are to protect our compatriots abroad, if we are to save from extinction our race and culture we should attain swaraj in the country, establish friendly relations with other Asiatic countries, and awaken the coloured peoples in other countries to take measures for self-protection. Referring to Sir Deva Prasad Sarbadhicary's statement about the attitude of the Union Government towards the Indian South African deputation, the Hamdam says that no greater insult could be offered to India than the refusal of the Union Government to give an interview to her representatives. India's money spent on this deputation has been wasted for nothing. The Medina urges that the example set by the Calcutta Corporation by its retaliatory action against South Africans should be widely followed by other municipalities and corporations.

It will make the South Africans realise that Indians look down upon them. The utmost that the South Africans can do in reply is to expel all Indians from their country, but that will at least put an end to their tyrannies.

The All-India Muslim League.

A number of Muslim papers have published Sir Abdur Rahim's address in extenso. The Mashriq congratulates Muslims on their courage in throwing off the yoke of the Congress and rescuing the Muslim League from the position of an appendage of that body by holding its session separately at Aligarh. Educated Muslims will not be able to cast off this attitude of dependence until they realise their own strength more fully and adopt the ideals inculcated by Sir Syed. It is a matter for gratification that all leading members of the Muslim educated community joined the session and it was presided over by a sagacious, liberal-minded, and outspoken gentleman like Sir Abdur Rahim. The speech was closely reasoned and showed deep insight into current affairs. He was nowhere carried away by emotion or prejudice and he has given a very sound lead to his community. Instead of attacking non-Muslims, Sir Abdur Rahim has exhorted all communities to live in peace and unity. In spite of the fact that the Hindu community has gone beyond limits in its anti-Muslim attitude he has only objected to the mischievous Shudddi, Sangathan and Maha Sabha movements and the still more dangerous Hindu movement which aims at depriving Muslims of their political rights and an adequate share in the administration and hus weakening them and destroying their political importance. While admitting that unity is essential for progress, he has emphasized the need for Muslims learning self-dependence and continuing the Muslim League and its communal programme. In reality, the differences between Hindus and Muslims are so fundamental in their nature that they can never become one nation. Sir Abdur Rahim was quite right in resenting the view of the Hindus that India was their country alone. He gave very sound advice to Muslims when he urged them to cooperate with Government. We must however differ from him where he urges that Muslims should accept representation according to their numbers, as this would mean their swamping by the Hindus. Muslims should get equal rights as the conditions in the country and the political importance and interests of Muslims demand it. The attacks of the Hindu papers on Sir Abdur Rahim and particularly Lala Lajpat Rai's comments in his paper, the People, have roused the resentment of the Muslim press. The Surma-i-Rozgar says that these attacks mean nothing but that Muslims should forego all their rights and claims and throw themselves entirely on the mercy of the Hindus. Al Aziz writes:—Sir Abdur Rahim neither abused any Hindu leader nor attacked the Hindu community. He only laid bare what the Muslim heart felt about Hindu oppressions. If the utterances of the Lala of the Panjab and Pandit Malaviya of Allahabad were compared with the presidential address of the League, it would appear that a sober and urbane person was stating his case in dignified language before people who were retorting with foul abuse. Referring to Lala Lajpat Rai's criticism of Sir Abdur Rahim's address which appeared in the People, the Hamdam remarks that Lalaji himself is responsible for this change in the mentality of Muslim leaders. The activities of the Hindu leaders in connexion with Shuddhi and Sangathan have convinced Muslims that the Hindus want to deprive them of all their rights and privileges and are trying to weaken them. Sir Abdur Rahim has only enunciated the grievances of Muslims. He is never opposed to the idea of a united Indian nation, but at the same time he and other Muslims in this country cannot bear to throw themselves on the mercy of the Hindus. In another article the same paper takes exception to the People's comments on Mr. Jinnah's speech at the League and says that not a single word of his can be quoted as being opposed to the interests of a united Indian nation. The only difference between the view of Mr. Jinnah and Lala Lajpat Rai is that the latter wants to crush the Muslims and then attain swaraj without their aid, while the former considers the attainment of swaraj without the help of the Muslims impossible.

The new Ministers.

The Wealth and Welfare writes:—His Excellency has earned the thanks of the public by his having raised the number of Ministers to three and having nominated right persons to discharge the duties of Ministers. With the increase in the number of Ministers there ought to be improvement in the administration of the transferred subjects. The Shankar sarcastically congratulates Sir William Marris on appointing two Ministers in place of one and wonders if it is due to the threat of Muslim councillors to resign in a body if a Muslim Minister was not appointed that he has done so. It goes on to say that in appointing them the Governor has burdened the public exchequer with an additional expenditure of Rs. 1,20,000. Is this justice? If it is so, we doubly congratulate His Excellency. The Aziz-i-Hind eulogises the statesmanship shown by Sir William Marris in settling the question of the appointment of a successor to the Hon'ble Nawab Muhammad Ahmad Sa'id Khan. Nawab Muhammad Yusuf's ability was unquestioned, but a Muslim majority would have invited criticism and therefore a third Hindu Minister has been added. Both the new Ministers are young and capable. Writing in a similar strain, the Mashriq says that the selection has been viewed with satisfaction by both the communities and even the bitterest critic of the Government cannot have any objection to it. Al Adl remarks that Nawab Muhammad Yusuf has fully deserved the appointment by his public services in the past and will fill his new office with credit. Al Aziz says that Nawab Muhammad Yusuf is a very capable and popular person and his appointment as Minister has been welcomed by both Hindus and Muslims. It is to be hoped that he will adequately safeguard Muslim interests. The Azad remarks that though better men could no doubt be found in the Council, yet it is to be hoped that both the Ministers would do the best they can for the good of the province.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an article commenting on Mr. C. Y. Chintamani's speech at Lucknow on "Cawnpore, Aligarh and Calcutta" the Aj writes :—The most serious drawback of Mr. C. Y. Chintamani is that he has no faith in the Indian public . . . He has firm faith in the constitutional methods obtaining in Britain and thinks that success will be achieved in India too through these methods. But a learned man like him has never considered that the constitution which the British possess today is not the outcome of any constitutional agitation. To obtain this constitution or the representative system of government the British too, despite the fact that their king and rulers belonged to their own country, race and religion, were compelled to have recourse to unconstitutional methods. Now a constitution has been established there and the British can get any changes effected in their government with its help, i.e., by the creation of public opinion. In this country we are struggling for a constitution itself and hence our agitation cannot be a constitutional one, and it is a matter for surprise and regret that a keen-witted thinker like Mr. C. Y. Chintamani is unable to grasp this point.

Indian States.

Referring to reports about the forthcoming "voluntary abdication" of the Maharaja of Indore the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—We are prepared for anything against the Indian princes from the viceroyalty of Lord Reading which "arranged" the voluntary abdication of Maharaja Ripudaman Singhji and has withheld from him the annual allowance . . . We have Barodas bleating for original sovereignty and Bikaners protesting for an examination of treaty rights at a time when a policy of terrorization of the princes by the weapon of voluntary abdication is actually pursued. The Aziz-i-Hind asks for a more sympathetic treatment of Indian ruling chiefs by the Government of India. Government can rely on their support alone in case of a revolution and they deserve better of it. It is being widely remarked these days that Government has been showing studied indifference towards some of them and Lord Reading has not made a single concession to them. The Nabha affair is still fresh in people's memories. Lord Reading showed no consideration for the chiefs when amending the Press Act and whatever was done later was insufficient. No special regard was shown for them in the amendment of the Arms Act. His Excellency has got the cases of certain chiefs before him just now and he should do nothing which may create secret unrest. The most important case is that of the Maharaja of Indore. In reality there is not a shred of evidence against him and a number of lives have already been sacrificed in place of one. If the Holkar is vindictively pursued he will only become the object of popular sympathy and a secret resentment will spread among all the Mahrattas against Government. Even if the Maharaja was really guilty of any error owing to his folly or inexperience, he has paid sufficiently for it in disrepute and mental pain. In the same way the question of the succession of the Bhopal, Tikamgarh and other States should be decided in such a manner that the well-wishers of the British Government may not be disappointed.

Muslim affairs.

Mr. Maqbul Husain writing in the Medina complains that the Muslim strength is being further weakened by the nomination of members of the depressed classes to municipal boards in these provinces. Muslims want fifty per cent. representation and their claims should not be overlooked when nominations are made. Writing in a similar strain Al Bashir urges that only non-Hindus should be nominated except in boards in which the Hindus are in minority. If a member of the depressed classes has to be nominated he should be a mehtar or a chamar not under the influence of the Hindu Sabha people. In justice some of the seats at present reserved for Hindus should be set apart for members of the depressed classes. Outsiders should be eligible for election as chairmen only if they are non-Hindus and the boards should not be allowed to raise such all-India questions as those of cow-slaughter and script. The Hon'ble Nawab Muhammad Yusuf would be rendering a public service if he musters up moral courage enough to tackle these questions in spite of Hindu criticism. The Hamdam strongly supports Mr. Yakub's resolution in the Assembly for increasing the Government grants to the communal universities and says that besides the recurring grant, the Aligarh University deserves a non-recurring one also in view of its financial embarrassment. Such a grant of about a lakh and a half has already been given in the past to the Benares University and it will be only fair to make a similar grant to Aligarh also.

Reforms.

Referring to Sir Alexander Muddiman's reply to the questions regarding the national demand the Aj says that a more unsatisfactory reply cannot even be conceived. The Viceroy's evasive speech coupled with this reply leads us to make the suggestion that if the swaraj party has faith in the people it should give up love of the Council and devote itself to the task of preparing the people for non-violent direct action. There is not the least hope of achieving success by indirect methods, and the authorities have completely closed the door in that direction. The Vartman remarks:—On the one hand Lords Reading and Birkenhead want Indians to cooperate, and on the other they do not give even a satisfactory reply to questions of the day. How can then the talk of cooperation be believed? Cooperation is possible only through mutual love. Clever moves and diplomacy only lead to non-cooperation. Are Lords Reading and Birkenhead not aware that the existing system of government has utterly impoverished the country? How long can peace be established by giving evasive replies? The Government of India are responsible for the growing misery of the people caused by the delay in changing the system of government.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In the course of an article on the Arya Samaj Nagar Kirtan at Lucknow the Vartman writes:—The police at first placed some obstacles in the way of the Nagar Kirtan and the Muslims wanted to make mountains of mole-hills, but 4,000 Hindus became ready to die and proclaimed satyagraha. Although Muslims gave evidence of their inborn meanness, real heroism triumphed. The Hindus should learn the lesson that so long as fear of death prevails among them they will continue to be beaten, to incur humiliation and to blacken the face of their community. Their rise will begin the moment they muster up courage to give their lives and have the wisdom to present a united front. Every Hindu should be prepared to sacrifice his life whether it is a question of a brick of a temple or of a piece of wood for Arya Samaj havan.

The Council of State.

The Oudh Akhbar notes with regret that the Government of India have nominated only such persons to the Council of State as will always support it. However, owing to the election of a number of swarajists the Council will no longer be the packed body that it was previously, yet it is a pity that the Government of India has nominated only such members as will always support it.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the visit of Dr. Pillai to India to popularize the League of Nations, the Aj writes:—We wish to warn Indians that it is wholly improper in Indian interests to support the League which is entirely controlled by a few imperialistic powers of Europe. They should keep aloof from the League if they do not want to injure the interests of non-white nations which are struggling for their liberty, for their honour and for their very existence. Surely Indians will not like to tell the world, by supporting the League, that the representatives of the alien Government who speak in the name of India are really her representatives. In the course of an article condemning the League of Nations as a clique of imperialistic powers, altogether indifferent to the wrongs perpetrated by the whites on non-whites, the same paper remarks that, in view of the constitution and the political record of the League, India considers it to be harmful for the non-white world but is prepared to judge it impartially in respect of its activities in other directions. The Sada-i-Muslim suggests that now that Ibn Saud has declared his sovereignty over the Hedjaz all controversy should cease. No doubt his action is indefensible, but his sovereignty should be acknowledged by all representative Muslim bodies of India, as protests would only rekindle the smouldering embers of discord in the country. The Haqiqat says that the victorious soldier (Ibn Saud) will not go abegging for the crown of the Hedjaz before the proposed Islamic Conference. A representative deputation of Indian Muslims may, however, proceed during the Haj season and settle all disputed matters with Ibn Saud personally. The Medina admits the justice of Ibn Saud's act but wonders at his silence about the Islamic Conference in his reply to the letter of the Jamiat-ul-ullema. We hope the Conference has only been postponed till all internal administrative matters are settled and unanimity is arrived at in the Islamic world. The Oudh Akhbar commends the Kandahar speech of His Majesty the Amir of Afghanistan and says that the Government of India should abandon its policy of encouraging separatist tendencies by according preferential treatment to particular communities. It should, on the other hand, help to build an Indian nation. The Medina regrets that Hindus constantly harp on the menace of an Afghan invasion though all great Indian leaders and independent journals have declared it to be an impossibility and Muslims would never prefer Afghan rule to freedom. Swami Satya Deo raves about Afghanistan having an eye on Sindh and the North-West Frontier Province. But do the non-Muslims of these provinces stand to lose by Afghan rule? His Majesty the Amir's speeches show that they would be much better off.

The Viceroy's speech.

Commenting on the Viceroy's speech, the Arya Mitra refers to his expression of sympathy with Indians in South Africa and says:—Mere expression of sympathy will not do. It is the duty of the Viceroy and his Government to carry on a most vigorous agitation and make all possible efforts to mitigate the sufferings of Indians overseas. Referring to the question of the grant of further reforms, the paper says:—His Excellency is right in asking the country to cooperate but this is possible only when the Government also change their angle of vision and pay attention to the grievances of the public. Cooperation presupposes reciprocity and we are of opinion that it is difficult to restore good-will between the rulers and the ruled, so long as the colour-bar stands between them. Referring to the announcement regarding the Royal Commission on Agriculture, the Shakti wonders why the Government, who have burdened the Indian tenantry with so many taxes and who do not give them even arms to protect themselves from wild beasts have all of a sudden been inspired with sympathy for them and says that their object in appointing the Commission is to champion the cause of the British capitalists, to trumpet their sympathy for their subjects before the civilized world and to divert the attention of the Indian public from the swaraj movement. The Viceroy's remarks on the South African question show that his anxiety not to displease the whites is greater than his desire to protect the honour of Indians. His remarks about cooperation are simply meant to quell whatever agitation for swaraj still remains. Non-cooperation was started only about five years ago. Why were the reforms not granted before this when people were cooperating with the Government? By cooperation the bureaucracy means complete self-surrender and Indians should prefer death to this. The Najat says that the speech only seeks to save the prestige of the bureaucracy by trying to make the Indian public bend to its will. The Royal Commission on Agriculture would appear to be good at first sight, but is it not meant to pave the way for official propaganda among the peasants so that the next Viceroy may be able to enlist rural support for Government? In the light of their past experience, Indians cannot attach any value to the Viceroy's advice to them to secure their political rights by negotiation with British politicians. Indians should learn self-help and self-respect if they are to deserve the aid of others. In another article, the same paper remarks that all these moves about agricultural development are meant to secure the loyalty of the peasants and to befool Indians. It is a pity that, knowing all these things, we, Hindus and Muslims, do not stop our mutual strife which is strengthening the enemies of the country. The Medina regards the speech as lacking in sincerity and seriousness and totally disappointing. How can friendly relations with neighbouring countries help the peasants and save these teeming millions from the selfishness of capitalists? There was only a passing reference to trade and as British capitalism and militarism depend for their very life on Indian agricultural industry, much space was devoted to it. But will a Royal Commission help its development? This object can be achieved only by promoting better relations between landlords and tenants, by reducing the responsibility of landlords regarding revenue and cesses, and providing facilities for them for improving their properties, by freeing tenants from ejectments and usury, by encouraging personal holdings, by improving land, by acquainting peasants with modern methods of agriculture, and by providing cheap and simple means of irrigation. The export of grain should also be restricted and only the surplus should be allowed to go out.

Indians in the Colonies.

The question of Indians in South Africa is receiving prominent attention in the Press. A special number of the Chand (a monthly magazine issued from Allahabad) contains thirty-seven articles on the condition of Indians in various colonies, especially in South Africa and Fiji. The edition has been specially edited by Pandit Benarsi Das Chaturvedi. In an article entitled "A Plea for Retaliation," Mr. S. M. Sharma, Bar.-at-Law, writes.—"A year of honest, sincere and thorough retaliation will do more than ages of humility and satyagraha. God has taught even the worm to turn and we are men." In an article on "Indians in South Africa—their Present Position," the editors of the Hindi (Natal) write:—"If England is unable to interfere will she remain neutral when India decides to send her army to South Africa to assert her rights? But will India, the India of to-day ruled by firungees ever contemplate taking such an action which would teach the handful of South Africans the potency of Hindustan? We in South Africa await India's answer but in the meanwhile we are getting ready and are keeping our powder dry. We know when the drum of battle sounds, India will respond, to do or die." The Prem says that if the Government of India had been really opposed to the Anti-Asiatic Bill it would not have been possible for the Union Government to introduce it. But what does the Government of this country care for the welfare of Indians? Its chief object is to uphold the interests of the whites. If our leaders and institutions follow the lead of the Calcutta corporation and stop all dealings with the South African whites, it is possible that the eyes of the latter may be opened. The whites are intoxicated with pride and blinded with power. In order to bring them to the right path Indians will have to follow the policy of "evil to the evil-doer." The Najat deplores the supplicatory attitude of the Government of India in spite of the great humiliation to which the Indian South African Deputation was subjected by the Union Government and wonders whether it is also a party to this conspiracy against Indians. The despotism of the South African whites knows no bounds and now they do not want to budge an inch from the position they have taken up and refuse to receive the deputation officially. Anyway it is clear that the Government of India will put up with this humiliation gladly as it is only a matter between blacks and whites. We hope however that Indians will never brook this insult.

Political propaganda.

Reviewing the proceedings of the last session of the United Provinces Council, the Sainik writes:—During the last two years the swarajists have demonstrated that the Councils are nothing but temples of illusion. In their sittings money collected by snatching away morsels of food from the mouths of the poor is wasted like water. The Councils cannot do anything for the public good. In the wit and humour column of the Vartman "Mansukha" writes: Lord Reading is to go soon, but he is still busy with tours and the nazranas of the States. The Viceroyalty is like the collection of rent of a zamindari. The foundation becomes strong for seven generations. In an article under the heading "Subject India—the World's Blood-smeared Picture," the Prem contends that it is only with the object of keeping India under subjection that the British have waged so many wars in the past and says that so long as India remains in subjection the world will always be confronted with the menace of war and that if ever a war is declared the subjection of India will be at its bottom. The welfare of the world, therefore, lies in making India free in the interest of the peace and happiness of mankind. The Vartman contends that all the grievances of the people can be removed without difficulty if the rulers are dutiful and gives illustrations of the solicitude of ancient rulers for the welfare of the people. Proceeding, it says:—In India thefts are rampant, women and children are kidnapped in broad daylight. There are murders and plunders but the guilty remain untraced. Bribery is rife, but is not being stopped. The reason is that the authorities are unduly remiss; the law is defective and the rulers take only nominal interest in improving the condition of the country. One Indira Raman Shastri, writing in the Aj, deplores that though the leaders know that civil disobedience is the one effective means of the emancipation of the country they are wasting their time and energy in unnecessary activities. The writer urges young men to take up the task of nation-building through the organization of cultivators and workmen. The masses are sure to come under their flag. Under the heading "The Crowding of Sheep" one Professor Chatursen Shastri, writing in the Prem, contends that the Cawnpore Congress was nothing more than the crowding of sheep and that it presented the appearance of a meeting of banias for adjusting their accounts with the object of applying for insolvency. Proceeding, the writer says: Can anyone say how we can remain peaceful while alive even though a burden of millions and trillions of tons is placed on our breast and hundreds of afflictions are tormenting our bodies? If Mahatma Gandhi realises our sufferings, we want to tell him that we cannot remain peaceful. It is impossible for us to continue to remain non-violent. We cannot quietly work at the grinding-mill in jails; we cannot drink urine in place of water. We cannot allow faeces to be thrown at us. We are slaves and are impotent but still we are men. Why does the Mahatma teach us the unreasoning lesson of peace? There is only one way to keep us peaceful and that is that the Mahatma should kill us by administering poison . . . . . It cannot be believed that the country is not prepared for complete independence. Votaries of the charkha and khaddar, you should go on working at the spinning-wheel like widows. We are making our own humble preparations. We have resolved that we will sacrifice our lives but not our honour. This time we will not work at the grinding-mill, will not drink urine, will not submit to shoe-beating, and will not get our moustaches cut in the jail. If such an opportunity occurs now we shall hazard our lives, and if we do not happen to possess any weapon in our hands we shall use our natural weapons, the teeth and the nails, so long as we are alive. Stop your story of peace; let us first read the story of war. The Oudh Akhbar complains that the Hindu-Muslim tension and the Afghan bogey are being exploited to postpone the Indianization of the civil and military services respectively. Hindu-Muslim disturbances persist in spite of the presence of the British element and if the Indianization of the civil services is to be postponed till the Hindus and the Muslims cease quarrelling it may well wait till eternity. It was not the British element which always saved India from foreign foes.

The All-India Muslim League.

Referring to Lala Lajpat Rai's attacks on Mr. Jinnah, the Sada-i-Muslim says that Muslims will never forego separate representation whatever the consequences. If the Hindus establish their own rule without the cooperation and partnership of Muslims, the latter will resort to civil disobedience and non-payment of taxes. Al Barid is glad to note that there were some signs of animation in the last session of the Muslim League, the special feature of which was the presidential address. By means of facts and figures Sir Abdur Rahim ably called attention to the political importance and distinctive nationality of Muslims and laid bare the present mentality of the Hindus. He has given such an apt retort to the utterances of Hindu leaders about communal relations that one cannot help sincerely admiring his depth of knowledge and insight. The Haqiqat points to the continued fury of the Hindu press against Sir Abdur Rahim and says:—It is Pandit Malaviya, Lala Lajpat Rai and Swami Shraddhanand who are responsible for the present tension and the change in Muslim mentality, but not a word is said against them. Sir Abdur Rahim only voiced the feelings of Muslims which have been excited by these leaders. The Nizam-i-Alam writes:—For three years the Hindu leaders have been pursuing their undesirable shuddhi and sangathan propaganda and saying all sorts of false and inflammatory things against Muslims. What is Sir Abdur Rahim's reply to the sangathanists in comparison with the deliverances of the Hindu leaders? Sir Abdur Rahim's plain talk cannot be compared with the vilification of Lala Har Dayal or the inflammatory harangues of Lala Lajpat Rai. But no Hindu paper had a word to say against them and now there is a regular howl from every corner of the country over Sir Abdur Rahim's presidential address. The Mashriq thinks that Sir Abdur Rahim has indicated the best political course for both Hindus and Muslims and has clearly pointed out that the salvation of India is impossible without inter-communal unity. Hindu raj and Muslim raj are idle dreams and the English will not grant self-government until both communities are united. The Medina says that a membership of the Legislative Council cannot possibly be coveted by a man of the position of Sir Abdur Rahim. In spite of our disagreement with his views, we cannot leave him in the lurch when he is being hounded by the Hindu press.

The Hindu Maha Sabha.

In the course of an article exhorting Hindus to join the forthcoming session of the All-India Hindu Maha Sabha and to devise means for their organization and protection, the Bhavishya writes:—The invitation to the Maharaja of Nepal to preside over the session should be accompanied by a moving appeal on behalf of twenty-two crores of Hindus. One of the advantages in having the Maharaja as the President will be that we shall be able to establish closer relations with the Gurkhas. For want of organization big venomous serpents are devouring thousands of Hindus every day. If this state of things continues for some time Hindus will become extinct. The Abhyudaya exhorts the Hindus to join the Maha Sabha and make it a success and remarks:—To-day there are many problems before the Hindu community which urgently require solution specially when it is being attacked on all sides and is confronted with the question of its very existence. Social, religious, and political rights of Hindus are being usurped by others who cannot bear even the idea of their rise and unity. The speech of Sir Abdur Rahim at the Muslim League is enough to serve as an eye-opener to them. The Prem urges the election of the Prime Minister of Nepal for the Presidentship of the forthcoming Hindu Maha Sabha and says that the Maha Sabha will have to consider the serious situation created by the absurd utterance of the President of the Muslim League and devise means for increasing self-confidence among the Hindus in order that they may advance more zealously in their efforts to extricate the country from the bonds of subjection. It is also necessary to accord serious consideration to the question of the abduction of Hindu women and children by Muslims.

Release of political prisoners.

The Muslim Herald writes:—The members of the Legislative Assembly have done immense service by bringing to the fore the question of political prisoners in India and Indian exiles abroad. The operation of the Bengal Ordinance and other repressive laws form some of the most scandalous and disgraceful chapters of British administration in India. These instruments of tyranny that have been specially designed to check the growth and development of patriotic sentiments are a treason to law. The Leader takes exception to "some of the vituperative utterances in which upstarts suddenly sprung into fame indulged" in the Legislative Assembly during the debate on the resolution regarding the release of political prisoners. The paper wonders whether it is not a part of the duties of the President of the Assembly to discourage unparliamentry language by compelling its authors to withdraw objectionable expressions employed by them. Proceeding, the paper strongly criticizes the attitude of Government with regard to the case of those who have been deprived of their liberty without any form of judicial proceedings. The Muslim Herald takes strong exception to the remarks of the Leader regarding Mr. Ranga Iyer and the President of the Assembly and writes:—India needs to-day bold politicians and courageous men who will not count the cost of things but go ahead strong in their faith, bold in their unflinching determination to do and die for their country and their religion. Timid, halting, calculating politicians have been the bane of every country that has fought for its honour and liberty. Liberty has never been won by the help of logic or literature nor yet by logicians and literary luminaries. The price paid for it has ever been in a coin forged on the anvil of martyrs' sufferings and trials and polished and refined by the holy blood of men who knew how to die.

Unemployment.

The Leader writes: The debate in the Legislative Assembly on the unemployment problem in the country, which has assumed grave proportions, elicited from Sir B. N. Mitra a speech which shows that the Government on whose behalf he spoke, are not sufficiently alive to their duty in this matter. The swelling list of educated youths knocking from door-to-door in futile search for employment, is one of the greatest tragedies of modern India. The remedies are those indicated in the amendment of Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer and the speech of Babu Bipinchandra Pal, and they must be applied by provincial governments and by the people themselves. In the opinion of the Muslim Herald it is impossible for a thinking person to congratulate the Government of India on the attitude they adopted in connexion with the resolution regarding unemployment. "It is rather hard to love a Government which is so absolutely unmindful of the public welfare." The paper holds that the communal tension, the religious riots and fanatical pronouncements and deeds are all the results of unemployment. The Indian Daily Telegraph criticizes the official speeches at the debate in the Legislative Assembly on this subject and says:—The debate has been most disappointing because of the surprising evidence that it has afforded of the conscience of the authorities not being touched by this positive scandal of unemployment. It is not realized that middle class unemployment is directly due to the system of education and the Government of this country has closed several careers for our young men.

The release of Akali leaders.

Commenting on the release of certain Sikh leaders, the Pratap says that this is in reality the triumph of Sir Malcolm Hailey and not of the Sikhs, inasmuch as by releasing these men on verbal undertaking to support the Gurdwara Act he has succeeded in creating a split in the Sikh camp and in organizing a party against those who are opposed to the Act. He has also played the trick that while the leaders have been released, the common people are still rotting in jail. The Abhyudaya cannot thank the Government for the release of Akali leaders, as owing to its unjustifiable obduracy and considerations of empty prestige their sufferings were unnecessarily prolonged. The Vartman also writes in a similar strain.

The Maharaja of Nabha.

The Aj refers to the reports of the financial distress of the Maharaja of Nabha and says that the country has a right to know whether the Maharaja has been given his allowance so far or not. It urges that if the Government does not publish a communiqué on the subject, members of the Legislative Assembly should interpellate it regarding this painful affair. Commenting on the Maharaja's appeal to the public to provide books for his son, the Pratap says:—Such is to-day the condition of the man who could spend lakhs of rupees like water! This illustrates the undesirable character of the policy of the British Government. How low it is!

Communism.

The Samyavadi, a new fortnightly organ of the Indian Communists started at Cawnpore by Satyabhakta, publishes a number of articles explaining the aims and objects of communism. In one of them it deplores public apathy towards the movement and says that capitalists and political workers have joined hands to oppose it. But we prophesy that this state of things cannot last long. The time for change is fast approaching. The cultivators and labourers are waking up. The poor have begun to realise the cause of their misery. The oppressed untouchables are becoming alive to the clever practices of the higher classes. What is wanted is that all these forces should organize themselves and then make vigorous efforts to obtain their rights. When these hungry and naked people will unitedly proclaim their rights, the capitalists and their parasites, the politicians, will be found nowhere. That will be the day of the victory of Communism. In another article Radha Mohan Gokulji impresses upon cultivators and labourers the need for mutual sympathy and organization for liberation from their present lot of thraldom and misery and says: Dear cultivators and labourers, to-day we communists have come to you and want to open your eyes. We want that your property which is being looted may be saved. Great and rich men and fashionable leaders cannot secure your emancipation. Your good can be accomplished by communists who, like you, are poor and work with their hands. In the course of an article under the heading "Class-war" the Pratap refers to the anti-Congress activities of the Indian communist party and says that this is not the proper time to start class-war in India. If this war is started at the present juncture when a third power is oppressing us, the result will be that the rich and their relations will play into the hands of the authorities and in the quadrangular conflicts which will thus ensue the poor will be the greatest sufferers. Those who are beating the drum of communism are therefore not doing any service to those whose cause they profess to champion.

Muslim affairs.

Al Bashir appeals to Muslims not to oppose Dr. Shafa'at Ahmad Khan's Bill for the registration of Muslim marriages and divorces. In order to save expense and trouble marriages may be registered by qazis who, unlike sub-registrars, can be found everywhere. The qazis may be required to pass an examination and be appointed by Government and their records should be submitted to judges. The Mansur, on the other hand, protests against the Bill in its present form as opposed to Islamic law and thanks the Raja Sahib of Salimpur for his amendment referring it to the ullema. The Aina also is opposed to the Bill and says that it will prove not only vexatious but also costly to Muslims. In an article in the Hamdam Rao Abdur Rahman Khan criticizes the Primary Education Bill and says that as it would apply to all district board and municipal schools and as these bodies have already begun taking drastic action for the exclusion of Urdu, it will prove detrimental to the interests of the Muslims. It will also divert the attention of the peasants towards service. Abdul Haq, writing in the Medina, inquires of the ullema whether it is permissible for Muslims to use articles made by kafirs, specially sugar refined with the bones of dead animals and soaps made of hog's lard.

New Ministers.

The Muslim Herald writes:—Sir William Marris has made a radical and wholesome change in the system of appointing his colleagues. With knowledge and experience acquired as Minister and with the advantages of tact which is a great asset in a Home Member's character it may be safely asserted that the Hon'ble the Nawab Sahib of Chhatari will be able to do great and useful work and prove worthy of the confidence His Excellency has reposed in him. We are confident that Nawab Muhammad Yusuf will prove equally successful in the experiment of carrying on the administration. The Sada-i-Muslim is sorry that Muslims are flooding Nawab Muhammad Yusuf with congratulations even before he has proved his worth as a Minister. Was he really the most capable and experienced Muslim of these provinces eligible for this post? We should wait until he proves his capacity and fitness. Just now we have to note what he does to amend the United Provinces Municipalities Act to safeguard Muslim interests. If he is not able to do even this much, his lineage would not make much difference.

The Maharaja of Indore.

Referring to the report about the appointment of a commission to inquire into the Maharaja of Indore's connexion with the Bawla murder affair, the Surya urges the appointment of 30 or 40 jurors, elected by the people, and says that if the Maharaja is found guilty the efficient administration of the State should not be replaced by that of the employees of the bureaucracy and the people should not be made to suffer for the personal faults of their ruling chief. The Aj urges that the inquiry should be openly held so that the public and specially the tax-payers of Indore may have an opportunity to discuss the Government decision. The Haqiqat welcomes the appointment of a commission, as it would give an opportunity to the Maharaja to vindicate his position and would also serve as a warning to chiefs who remain steeped in debauchery. The paper, however, insinuates that this action was taken owing to the advanced views of the Maharaja which the Government does not like. The Hamdam urges that public sentiment and the dignity of the Indore State must be respected. If an inquiry is at all necessary, the Maharaja should be judged by a majority of his peers and should be given every facility for his defence.

Indian States.

The Muslim Herald pleads for a speedy settlement of the question of succession to the Bhopal throne and says :—At her age the Begum deserves complete rest and undisturbed peace of mind and yet we find that her cares have made her an exile. Any further delay means unbearable suspense for the aged lady. The Medina appeals for a sympathetic consideration of the Begum of Bhopal's request for the nomination of Prince Hamidullah as her successor. Her bereavements, her age, and her troubles should touch the heart of every feeling human being. If Prince Hamidullah's education and liberal-mindedness cannot be tolerated by the Government of India in the Indian atmosphere and it is feared that he might improve the condition of his State, why not obtain an undertaking from him that he would do no such thing? Why entrust the State to a tender boy who would always depend on his English guardians? The Awaz complains that though Hindus form 96 per cent. of the population of Hyderabad and contribute most of the revenue, they have got only 10 per cent. of the high posts. Though they speak Tamil or Telegu they have to read Urdu. Hindu States are much more liberal in employing Muslims in high offices, but Muslim States do not respond to this generosity.

Honorary magistrates.

The Nizam-i-Alam appeals to Government to change the present system of selection of honorary magistrates and says that many of them are not only ignorant of law but also illiterate. Generally they are not of good moral character and use their public position to further their private ends.

Foreign affairs.

REFERRING to the speeches of Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Baldwin in the House of Commons on the question of Iraq, the Muslim Herald writes:—These European statesmen have not learnt to recognize the fact that the Turk would much sooner die than yield an inch of his land in Asia Minor or Europe to the hungry wolves whose appetite is never satisfied through territorial annexations and dishonourable political expansions. In the course of an article under the heading "Lessons of Damascus" the same paper writes:—"Let us not suppose that the Damascus tragedy is an isolated instance of the policies and activities of the standard-bearers of the capitalistic civilization. Whenever and wherever their vested interests, disguised in one form or another, are menaced, they never for a moment hesitate to take up measures of which even the most barbarous savage will feel ashamed. The Jallianwalla Bagh in India and the opium war against China and various similar activities of other imperialistic powers go to prove our contention." The Sada-i-Muslim suspects that Britain has an eye on the holy land of the Hedjaz also as her agent Mr. Philby has discovered minerals there and is trying to induce Ibn Saud to grant mining concessions to Western capitalists. We hope that Ibn Saud will see that Mr. Philby and Mr. Cleighton leave his country at once.

Viceroy's speech.

Commenting on the Viceroy's speech in opening the session of the reconstituted Council of State, the Leader writes:—In spite of what the Viceroy said about the appointment of the Royal Commission on Agriculture we still think that the costly commission will be a superfluity. The announcement about the creation of an Indian Navy will cause satisfaction, but Indian opinion cannot be satisfied with the reservation of only one appointment out of three to the post of executive officers every year. The navy should be Indian not only in name but also in reality. We wonder if the Swarajists will regard the announcement of the Viceroy as a generous gesture. We welcome it as a step in advance, for it means the acceptance of the policy of the creation for India of a naval service of her own. The beginning is very small and cautious but it marks an important departure. Proceeding, the paper advises the Swarajists to abandon their "futile and injurious obstructive tactics" and to accept Lord Reading's advice regarding co-operation and see if any good result follows. The Indian Daily Telegraph regards the speech as nothing more than an irritating reiteration of what was said in the Assembly. Proceeding, the paper says: It is positively insulting to the intelligence of Indians that we should be asked to show "good-will and co-operation" when every day we feel the naked hand of the bureaucracy on us. The announcement of an Indian navy, in spite of all efforts to capture Indian imagination, will fall flat. We must know whether what is called an Indian navy will be different from the Indian army—Indians being employed only to clean the dust and shove the coal. Referring to the Viceroy's remarks that the Government were not prepared to consider any proposal for further reform so long as Indians did not act upon Lord Birkenhead's advice, the Anand contends that Indians are fully co-operating with the Government at present and it is not possible for them to co-operate to a greater extent. It is now the duty of the Government to come forward and make this co-operation lasting by making suitable reforms in administration. Commenting on the Viceroy's remarks about the South African question, the Prem says:—If Lord Reading's Government had adopted a stern attitude in the matter not only the Union but also the Imperial Government would have been compelled to concede to their wishes. But why should Lord Reading worry about the miseries of Indians? The only object of his Government is to strengthen the British Government by trampling down Indians somehow or other. But he should bear in mind that Indians have now begun to realise their condition well and in safeguarding their interests they are not going to fear the "steel claw." The paper remarks that the reason for the sympathy with the tenantry as evidenced by the appointment of the Royal Commission on Agriculture is to dupe Indian politicians for the next five years and to win over the enormous power represented by tenants because if this power wakes up and plays into the hands of Indian politicians the present despotic Government will end. The Garhwali deplores that the King-Emperor did not make any mention of India in his inaugural speech at Parliament and also expresses dissatisfaction at the Viceroy's speech at Delhi. It says that his remarks about the South African question are evasive. The Indian question in South Africa would have been easily solved if India had been free today. Referring to the question of further reforms, the Viceroy urged the necessity for true co-operation. In our opinion the Government were the first to follow the policy of non-cooperation. Co-operation is possible only when both sides extend their hands sincerely. The Viceroy's remarks regarding the appointment of a Royal Commission on Agriculture sound well, but we beg to ask His Excellency how many tours he has made during the term of his office with the object of learning and improving the condition of the tenantry? If the authorities had desired that India should make progress and should not starve, her condition would not have been so miserable to-day.

Indians in the Colonies.

In the course of two leading articles entitled "A fight for India's Honour" the Muslim Herald writes:—The campaign of persecution that the South African Government is conducting against Indians is absolutely barbarous and unworthy of a nation which claims to possess even an iota of civilization. It is our duty to answer this challenge against our manhood, our national honour, and give all the support we can to help Indians in South Africa. Let us for once forget our quarrels and sink our differences and work unitedly to impress it upon the Imperial Government and the Government of the Union of South Africa that we can stand fresh indignities no more and that we are determined to have our protests heard. Discussing the Indian problem in South Africa the Aj asserts that the Boer Government is seeking to break the Gandhi-Smuts agreement against the universal principle that no agreement can be altered without the consent of both the parties contracting it and remarks that surely Indians are not prepared to submit to this injustice quietly. The Surya wonders why the British Government which declared war on Germany for disregarding the provisions of the Belgian treaty is silent now that the Union Government has thrown the Gandhi-Smuts agreement into the waste-paper basket. Referring to the passing of the Colour Bar Bill by the Union Parliament the Aj writes:—The whites have become intoxicated with pride of power. They want to suppress the non-whites for good. As a result of this measure the natives will not be able to compete with the whites in mines and factories. The non-whites will have to starve while the whites will get arbitrary wages. This is white civilization. It is in this manner that the whites protect the non-whites.

The Maharaja of Indore.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—News from Indore points to the probability of His Highness the Maharaja facing the ordeal of a commission. Not only innocence but courage was necessary to assume such an attitude: to stand before the common man and offer to clear his character that is sought to be assailed. The question is whether the treaties now existing between the Indian States and the Paramount Power confer on the British powers to try a prince. The Princes Protection Act must very soon be amended: as it is, the princes must be protected not against the public in British India but against the bureaucrats in power. The circumstances that have forced the Maharaja of Indore to stand for trial must convince him and his brother princes that their treaty with the British is something very like what Belgium possessed at the hands of Germany. While condemning the deeds of the Maharaja of Indore the Sainik insinuates that a commission is being appointed in order to get rid of the Maharaja, as he is a ruler with an independent spirit. "We sympathise with him in his trouble which has come over him on account of the crooked policy of Britain." The Anand considers the proposed appointment of the commission as unjustified and says that the raking up of the dead question of the Bawla murder affair will bring discredit on the Government of India and make the public think that this show of justice has been got up because the British Government could not bear to see the progress which the Indore State is making under the present ruler. The Pratap says that Lord Reading wants to exhibit a specimen of his justice on the eve of his departure. The real cause of the appointment of the commission is not that the Maharaja has been leading a licentious life. There are dozens of ruling chiefs in this country who do things which the Holkar may not even have dreamt of but so long as they bow to the sweet will of their "masters" they are free to do what they like. But the Holkar is an independent man and he thought he would be able to pull through even by adopting an independent attitude towards the "masters." Here he was mistaken and it is only on account of this blunder that he has to see these evil days and fall a prey to the justice of the apostle of justice. The Abhyudaya considers the appointment of the commission to be wholly improper, unnecessary, and unjustifiable, specially when no evidence could be produced against the Maharaja of Indore before the Bombay High Court and remarks:—We apprehend that such inquiry commissions are an encroachment upon the rights of Indian chiefs and we think that if the system of such commissions obtains in the country the Indian chiefs will lose even the little self-respect and liberty which they still possess. The Maharaja of Nabha has already fallen a victim to such commissions and if they continue to be appointed what Indian chief can consider himself to be safe? If some of the Indian chiefs are bad the Government of India and their Chiefs College are responsible for them. If Indian chiefs are to exist their dignity, honour, and rights should be fully protected. To encroach upon their authority, to prosecute them and by such methods to show that they are unfit is altogether improper. Only the subjects have the right to hold an inquiry into the conduct of their ruler and even to hang him. Why are the Government of India usurping this right of the subjects of the Indore State? We could have appreciated the action of the Government of India if we had seen that they had instituted an inquiry into the conduct of Indian chiefs for maladministration, atrocious oppression, and injustice. Could not the Government of India place the Indore affair before the Narendra Mandal for decision? The Maharaja of Indore should clear himself not before the Government of India but before a tribunal of his compeers before which the Government of India and Mumtaz Begum should also present their case. The Medina is of opinion that the Maharaja of Indore should be punished only if he is involved in the Bawla murder but should not be indirectly victimised for his political leanings. The Haqiqat has confidence in the personnel of the commission appointed to inquire further into the Bawla murder case but says that such a commission against an independent ruling chief is humiliating not only to the Maharaja of Indore but to all other ruling chiefs also. The Sada-i-Muslim appreciates the action of Lord Reading in holding the scales of justice even and not making any discrimination in favour of a ruling chief.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In an appeal published in the Muslim Herald calling upon Muslims to organize themselves the writer, Mujib-ur-Rahman, complains of Hindu atrocities and outrage on Islam in the Monghyr and Arrah districts and says:—"We are giving way before the Hindu Maha Sabha activities not because we are in minority but because we are bereft of our Islamic spirit—a spirit which had been the glory of Islam since time immemorial. By this spirit I mean a spirit of jehad, a holy crusade against the powers of evil which our Prophet, peace be on him, waged against the evil forces of his day. . . We should not be afraid of our lesser number, for it was with a handful of followers that our Prophet got the upper hand. The success of Taloot over Jaloot is a glaring example of the above fact. So my appeal to my co-religionists is to be up in arms against these infidels and to carry on a work of consolidation and organization amongst ourselves." The Bharat Jiwan deplores the present apathy of the Hindus towards the protection of the honour of their women and says that if they want to lead honourable lives and to move about in their den like lions they should learn to die and resolve that whenever they see their sisters being abducted by others they should teach the miscreants a lesson for their doings regardless of consequences. The Hindu Sarvaswa says that the country or the nation which does not act according to the policy of evil for evil and respect for respect falls victims to injustice and hardheartedness. The same is the condition of the Hindu community today. The Government and also others are taking advantage of its indifference, cowardice, and greed and are leaving no stone unturned to destroy it. Somewhere Hindu women are in trouble, somewhere their children are assaulted, somewhere there is no vacancy for them in services and somewhere they are being turned out of them by force. If dacoities are committed the victims are Hindus. They have to undergo all these sufferings because they are cowards. They have not yet been able to shake off their lethargy because they have probably not yet suffered adequately. It seems as if they are desirous of being humiliated still more, because they always put obstacles in the way of their organization.

Communism.

The Samyavadi dwells on the necessity of the adoption of communistic principles for the betterment of the lot of the masses of the world and remarks: At present the condition of India is in many respects different from that of other countries. First of all, she is under the subjection of foreigners who have completely fettered her people in order that they may not try to emancipate themselves. In spite of our sympathy with the communistic parties in other countries it is impossible and harmful for us to establish relations with them. Indian labourers will have to depend upon themselves for their organization and not upon outsiders. Writing in the paper Maulana Azad Subhani says that like other countries India also has a right to make efforts to get rid of the tribulations she is undergoing. Communism is the only remedy to remove them. Communism will cut off and throw away the chain of slavery from India's feet. Mr. Singarvelu, writing in the same paper remarks, that there is a great field for communistic work in India and that its future in the country is bright. He says that Indians cannot get rid of their afflictions so long as the masses or their unions do not secure control over land, mines, factories, houses and ships, railway trains and the like. The condition of the unfortunate labourers and tenantry can greatly improve if the money which goes to zamindars and capitalists in the shape of profit is justly spent for the well-being of the public. The paper contends that the Congress cannot be expected to do any real work so long as it does not take up the work of organising labour and says:—We should form regular committees of labourers, tenants, and other wage-earners in order that they may be able to fight for their rights and to oppose the injustice done to them. In another article the paper refers to the abject economic and political condition of Indians and asserts that if Indians can ever get swaraj it will be only through the organization of labourers and tenants and other wage-earners. We take swaraj to mean that the peasants should be the sole masters of their land and its produce and that no zamindar or jagirdar should have the power to eject them or impose taxes on them. If the political workers of the country take up the work of organizing labour and tenantry and establish their committees, unions and kisan panchayats in every place they will be able to create an irresistible force in the country and then Government will have to concede self-government to Indians, because neither the Government nor the rich can do without labourers and if the labourers stop their work even for a week the Government and the capitalists will have to give way.

Political propaganda.

The Sainik deplores popular indifference towards politics and fatalistic notions regarding the ruling powers and says: The people do not realize that instead of remaining slaves they can become rulers. They have become so stupefied that even the fresh examples of Russia, Turkey, and Persia do not awaken them. They do not know that they can get rid of their miserable plight today if they wish to do so. They should know that from the Government down to the chowkidar all are their servants. But they regard their servants as their masters. If they shake off this delusion they can get swaraj today. The good of the country lies in the removal of this delusion and in the adoption of satyagraha and non-cooperation. Rishi Narayan Sharma, writing in the Aj, urges provincial Congress Committees to undertake the work of organization of villages at once, bearing in mind that the strength of Indians lies in the rural population and that they cannot fulfil any programme unless they enlist the sympathy of the masses. If they are able to knit together the rural population no power on earth will be able to destroy their organization. The youths of the provinces should be asked to accomplish this task, as they alone can put forth the enthusiasm and make the sacrifices required for the purpose. Babu Raghupati Sahai, writing in the Saraswati, adumbrates a scheme for the infusion of spirit into the Indian people. He says that such an organization as has been begun by Mahatma Gandhi by the establishment of the All-India Spinners' Association can be utilized to infuse spirit into the people, so that they may wrest the administration from the British Government and establish swaraj in the country. If under khaddar boards villagers are organized to spin and weave as a corporate body and thereby learn to lead a corporate life for self-preservation, they will also come to learn to sacrifice themselves in a body.

Muslim Affairs.

Most of the Muslim papers reproduce Khwaja Hasan Nizami's appeal for the avoidance of fireworks on the Shab-i-barat day and urge the stoppage of such un-Islamic displays. The Sada-i-Muslim appeals to Muslims not to make themselves the laughing-stock of non-Muslims by a display of fireworks on the Shab-i-barat day. This dangerous amusement involves a colossal waste of money and only serves to fill the pockets of non-Muslims of foreign countries. The Jadu is strongly opposed to the proposed Bill for the registration of Muslim marriages and says that no respectable person would consent to take a newly-wed bride to the registry office. This work should, therefore, be entrusted to qazis, who should be vested with full legal powers in this behalf. The Hindu opposition to the introduction of the reformed system of Government in the North-West Frontier Province has been resented by many Muslim papers. The Medina regards this opposition as most illogical and says that it only shows that Hindus are grossly selfish and inimical to Muslims. The Sada-i-Muslim, ridiculing the opposition, remarks that the Hindus are too much afraid of the Afghans. Is this consistent with the Hindu claims about nationalism? The Hindus really cannot tolerate a Muslim majority in any province. The Zul Qarnain is suspicious of Babu Khem Chand's resolution about special Government aid for the education of the depressed classes and characterises it as an indirect attempt to prejudice the cause of Muslim education. If acted upon, the resolution would involve a recurring annual cost of about 3 lakhs of rupees. Will low-caste Muslims be also included in the special benefits given to the depressed classes? If this is not done it would appear that all this is part of the shuddhi movement and is meant to make Government help shuddhi in an indirect manner. In another article the same paper complains that an attempt is being made to pamper primary education by instituting comparisons between the percentage of literacy among Muslims and the percentage of literacy among the higher class Hindus and the depressed classes taken together. If the figures for Muslims and higher class Hindus only were compared it would become patent that Muslims still stand in need of adequate Government aid in primary education and they should muster strong at the forthcoming provincial Muslim educational conference at Pilibhit to press their claims on the Government.

Unemployment.

Al Adl deplores the indifference of the Government of India towards the problem of unemployment and deprecates its efforts to transfer responsibility to the shoulders of the Local Governments. It urges that every Government should try its best to rid the country of this incubus and thus incidentally also stamp out anarchism. The Medina complains that the Government of India has been showing criminal negligence in the matter of Indian unemployment and appeals to it to appoint a commission of inquiry in regard to this subject as desired by the Assembly. Educated Indian youths should be taken into the army and navy in adequate numbers. Technical education should be widely imparted and posts should be created for trained men. Greater attention should be paid to agriculture and gardening. Young men should be trained in commerce, banking, and economics and should be provided with capital to start in life. The difficulty which Indians have in entering various professions owing to their poverty should be removed.

The Viceroy.

Referring to the tribute paid to Lord Reading by the British press the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—It is undoubtedly the greatest achievement of Lord Reading that he used his diplomatic mind to divide and rule, to tie the raving fanatical Khilafatist to the chariot wheels of the bureaucracy. The British Empire in India may long rest on the Hindu-Muslim differences thus created.

Foreign affairs.

REFERRING to the report that Turkey, with the help of Soviet Russia, has undertaken the fortification of several Turkish ports in the Black Sea, the Muslim Herald writes:—"We are simply sorry that England, the Empire in which the largest number of Muslims live and which is the greatest Asiatic power, should have missed the opportunity of making friends with Turkey and other Asiatic countries and thus help the Soviet Russia to popularize the Bolshevik propaganda in the East. But in its haste to obtain immediate gains and to carry out the orders from its masters, the capitalists, the Conservative Government had been rushing headlong to alienate the feelings and sympathies of the Eastern peoples from the policy, practice, and ideals of the British Empire." The Medina denounces the League of Nations as a society of shroud-snatchers designed to deprive the smaller nationalities of their just rights and regrets that efforts are being made to popularize it in India. It is meant simply to divide the territories of weaker powers by deceitful intrigues and is a tool to maintain and strengthen the capitalism, imperialism, autocracy, and militarism of Britain, France, Italy, Japan, etc., and to settle the internal disputes of these robbers who parade in the guise of guides. What need has India for such a League of Nations when she is helpless and her resources are being controlled by others? The Indian representative on the League will only repeat what he is tutored to say. It is sheer waste of public money to establish branches of the League in various Indian centres. Did this champion of world-peace and international equity ever raise even its little finger when the ancient culture of Damascus was vainly protesting against its destruction by French fire, when hundreds of men were being herded in the jails of India, when the blood of the labourers of Shanghai was being shed, when Indians were being deprived of all civic rights in South Africa? The Najat extols the frankness and love of truth displayed by Mr. Ranga Iyer in characterising the League of Nations as a league of thieves meant to strengthen slavery and remarks that Dr. Pillai's propaganda in favour of the League is simply meant to mislead Indians. The Medina recounts the benefits bestowed by Islam on Europe and regrets that every weapon of political chicanery and economic deceit was employed by Europeans from the very beginning of the nineteenth century to despoil their Muslim benefactors. The histories of Morocco, Tripoli, Sahara, Algiers, Tunis, Egypt, Turkey, Persia, etc., bear ample testimony to this fact. These selfish and ungrateful people consigned treaties to the waste-paper basket to further their imperialistic and capitalistic designs. From the Arctic to the Mediterranean these sons of Christ brought their heads together and formed alliances to destroy Islamic civilization and polity. They pursued inimical designs under the cloak of outward friendship. They took possession of territories under the guise of grants and leases. They returned favours with dark conspiracies and ruined the unwary Muslims under the pretext of protecting Christian minorities. In short, there was no device which the human brain could invent which was not employed to enslave the true believers and but for some parched beds the entire garden of the glory of Islam was devastated by the ruthless foreigners. Even these few blighted beds cannot be tolerated by the white-skinned people of the West and the signs of progress and awakening that are visible in most Islamic countries are giving them sleepless nights. Disturbed by the reforming activities of most Muslim rulers, Europe is concocting fresh schemes to maintain her imperialism and militarism. Internal differences have been sunk and Islam is held forth as the common enemy.

The valiant struggle of the Riffs, the Sennousi movement, the efforts of the Zaghloulites in Egypt, the realization of pan-Arab dreams by Ibn Saud, Sultan Pasha Atrash's fight for the freedom of Syria, Kemal Pasha's reforming activities in Turkey, H. M. Reza Khan's reorganization of Persia and Amir Amanullah's progressive régime in Afghanistan have again raised the bogey of pan-Islamism in their brains and they are busy concerting measures of defence. Continuing the theme in its next issue, the paper says that the entire diplomacy of Europe is converging towards one end—the enslavement of Islam, Asia, and Africa. The Locarno Pact, the agreement between the European Powers, the League of Nations, the Balkan Union, the establishment of aerial and naval bases, are not things to be overlooked and it is a pity that Muslims are unmindful of their consequences and are blindly pursuing a fatal course. The occasion demands that Muslims should combine not only among themselves but also with people professing other Eastern faiths and prepare for a world-wide defence against Western designs. The responsibilities of Indian Muslims will grow with the lapse of time and just as France is to-day using her Senegalese and Algerian troops against the Riffs and her Siamese and Cameroonian troops against the Druses, the Indian Muslims also will again be forced to participate in war. It is no doubt a noble ideal of life to wage war in the cause of right and justice but to fight in support of the unrighteous militarism and enslaving imperialism of any nation means disgrace in this world as well as the next. They should, therefore, decide upon a common course of action which may save their future generations from the unavoidable perils that are to come. In another article the paper agrees with Maulana Azad's view that though Ibn Saud has made no reference to the Islamic conference in his recent message, he will consent to it if pressed by Indian Muslims of all parties. The greatest need of the moment is that there should be absolute unanimity lest foreign intriguers whose mouths are watering for the minerals of Arabia may take advantage of Islamic discord and gain control over the Hedjaz.

Viceroy's speech.

Referring to the Viceroy's announcement regarding the creation of an Indian navy the Muslim Herald writes:—The Viceroy tried to stretch out a hand for friendship but he did not stretch it far enough. The policy outlined may satisfy some people, but to a large majority of Indians it can be nothing else but disappointing. What India wants is a real Indian navy and not a navy Indian only in name, as has been in the case of the Indian army, the Indian civil and police services, and so many other imperial services. The Sainik writes:—The Viceroy is a past-master in the art of throwing dust into the eyes of the world. His reiteration of the appeal for co-operation has become disgusting. What guarantee is there that if the people grasp the hand of co-operation further reforms will be granted? Our experience, on the other hand, shows that whenever we are foolish enough to grasp the hand of Government believing it to be friendly we find our hand bleeding under the grip of a steel claw. The Surya holds that the decision to create an Indian navy is very satisfactory and will meet a crying need of the time. It, however, urges that now India should no longer be required to contribute towards the expenditure of the imperial navy and that the number of Indians in the naval service should be adequate. Referring to the Viceroy's remarks regarding further reforms the paper says that the existing reforms should be fully utilized and deplores that the swaraj party does not realize this and is simply groping in the dark. The Pratap thinks that the Viceroy has furnished an unambiguous answer to the national demand made by the Legislative Assembly and reminds the people of the decision of the Cawnpore Congress that in the event of an unsatisfactory reply the whole country would devote itself to village organization with a view to preparing for satyagraha. "It should be borne in mind that if our demands are to be conceded, they must be backed up by strength." The paper thinks that the real object of the creation of an Indian navy is to strengthen the British navy in the interests of British trade. The Aj says:—India is fighting for the right of self-determination and unless this right is conceded it is idle to expect co-operation between the rulers and the ruled. We are sorry we cannot express gratification at the proposal for the creation of an Indian navy, for we are not sure whether despite the expenditure of Indian money on it, the Indian navy will be exclusively used in the interests of India. We are afraid that, like the Indian army, the Indian navy will also be utilized to keep us in subjection and to deprive other Asiatic countries of their liberty. It is no good news for Asia. As for India, it will only mean further expenditure of her money. The Anand approves of the decision to establish an Indian navy and says that it is now necessary for the Government of India to give proper naval training to Indians so that people may not be led to think that the Indian navy is being created to provide Britishers with livelihood. The Vartman remarks that the scheme of an Indian navy will mean an additional burden on Indians who are already crushed under the weight of the existing taxation and while Indians will be made to pay, the benefit will go to Europeans. The Medina wonders why the Government of India have suddenly developed such enthusiasm for agricultural reform when they had been silent so long in spite of the insistence of Indian politicians. Besides giving some English agricultural experts the benefit of a festive trip to India, securing orders for agricultural implements for British firms, and sustaining dyarchy, does this proposed agricultural commission mean to consider ways for the welfare and prosperity of Indian peasants? After all, how long will you go on befooling Indians and overburdening the exchequer? In another article the paper says that the Royal Indian navy may be needed to overawe Iraq and Persia and to keep Afghanistan from penetrating to the sea-coast but India for one does not require it.

Political propaganda.

The Sainik publishes an article by Chandradhar Jauhri in which the writer gives examples of "twelve great men of the world who were at first regarded as revolutionaries but afterwards were made ministers of big empires." The writer expresses the hope that some of the young men of India who are at present regarded as dangerous and mad will in time occupy high places in the nation. In the course of an article the Bharat Jiwan writes:—Is there still any room for doubt that the sole object of Britain is to suck Indian money and that she will never of her own accord make India free? All the political parties should, therefore, sink their mutual differences and work unitedly to solve the problem of India's freedom. The Aj says that the construction of the naval base at Singapore has for its object not only the defence of the empire but also its expansion. Britain wants to exert pressure on Japan and her preparations for this purpose will be the cause of a terrible war in future. In the course of an article on mandates the same paper writes:—Under the cover of the League of Nations imperialists wanted to exploit the non-whites and this is exactly what is being done. Britain is an adept in this art. No country can compete with Britain in the art of extending her empire at the expense of men and money of others. France is imitating her but her activities have created quite a consternation in Syria. The mandate is meant to free the Arabs in Syria but the French are enslaving them. It is for the non-whites to consider how they can protect themselves. The Bharat Dharma emphasizes the necessity of forcing the hands of Government to grant further reforms. The Bharat Jiwan refers to a number of cases of outrage on women in which they have not been able to secure full justice in British law courts and remarks that the indifference of the Government in such matters leads one to the conclusion that in the Western code of morality the value of chastity is very small. This view is strengthened by the fact that an actress in England occupies a higher position in society than the Vicereine. In India too the hand of Government is seen extending for the protection of fallen women. The Mumtaz affair is the most recent case in point. The British civilization is so anxious for a prostitute that it wants to uproot an ancient Indian State for her sake. The Shanker reproduces an article from the Japan Times showing that India is the root cause of all the wars and as such the Indian problem is not a question between India and Britain alone but affects the peace of the whole world. It says that the British Government is bent upon keeping India under its control by all possible means. But fortunately for her the white nations are quarrelling among themselves for bringing India under their sway. This mutual war of theirs will some day afford India an opportunity of emancipating herself. The one remedy to cure this white malady is that all the yellow states should unite for mutual defence and establish close relations with India. The Haqiqat is sorry that the present policy of the Imperial Government is driving the Indian people towards Bolshevism. The situation cannot be relieved by patting the sycophants and abusing the Swarajists. The poisonous propaganda of the Russian delegation at Kabul is proving successful and who knows when the Bolshevik deluge will overwhelm India. Some even hold that it will prove catching like non-cooperation and even its opponents will be forced to support it under pressure of public opinion. The Najat praises the Morning Post for its frankness in confessing that the real object of British rule in India is trade. This explodes all the camouflage which is resorted to in official utterances to beguile simple-minded Indians. The Medina wonders why the responsive co-operators have cut adrift from the Congress and weakened the Swarajists when they are prepared to follow a policy of persistent obstruction.

The Maharaja of Indore.

While recognizing that there has been a public demand for some action by the Government of India and that the circumstances of the Bawla murder required thorough investigation the Leader does not think that the first thing for the Government to do was to announce a decision to set up a commission. A point of the greatest importance is that before the decision, much more before its publication, the Maharaja ought to have been informed of the charges against him and given an opportunity of explaining them. Was this procedure followed? If it was not, a grave injustice was done to him, and through him to all ruling princes. We shall yet hope for an authoritative official statement in this behalf. We are all anxious that justice should not be cheated of its due. But let not the attempt to do justice be tainted by any injustice, even to an Indian ruling prince. The Aj supports the suggestion of the Abhyudaya that the Indore affair should be investigated by the Narendra Mandal or by a commission composed of five Indian chiefs to be jointly selected by the Maharaja of Indore and the Narendra Mandal. It says that the commission appointed by the Viceroy cannot justifiably try the Maharaja of Indore, as he is an ally of the King-Emperor and his position is equal to that of the Viceroy according to treaties. By appointing the commission the Government of India are interfering with the rights of the Indian chiefs and their subjects alike. The Prem remarks:—The appointment of the commission, after the judgement of the High Court, has removed the remotest suspicion as regards any connexion of the Maharaja of Indore with the Bawla murder affairs, is indeed quite unintelligible. The proper authority to pass a verdict on the Maharaja is not the Government of India but the public of Indore. The paper concludes by insinuating that the patriotism and the independent-mindedness of the Maharaja are at the root of the action that is being taken against him and by exhorting all the self-respecting Indian chiefs to raise a voice of protest against it. A writer in the Haqiqat characterizes the commission as a party affair, as all the members have been appointed by the Viceroy himself. The Maharaja is, however, fortunate in this much that he has, unlike his father and the Maharajas of Bharatpur, Panna, and Jhalawar and the Nawab of Tonk, been allowed to produce his defence. In truth ruling chiefs are independent only in name. Another writer in the same paper is, however, satisfied with the commission and assures the Maharaja that being in the nature of a tribunal it cannot be partial or unjust. The Najat objects to all the members having been appointed by the Viceroy and says that His Excellency could at least have delegated this power to the Chamber of Princes. Failure to do so shows that this investigation is merely a formal one and that the Government of India do not want that the commission should command public confidence.

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province.

The Leader does not approve of the resolution of the executive committee of the North-West Frontier Province Hindu Sabha opposing the introduction of the Reforms in that province and says:—The mentality of the Hindus in the province is evidently obsessed by the terrible Kohat tragedy and influenced by the unfriendly Muslim attitude towards them, but the antagonism shown by them towards the introduction of democratic institutions cannot be justified on principle. The Hindus, who are in a minority, can ask for the provision of safeguards, as Muslim minorities have been doing in other parts of the country, for the protection of their interests, but it is wrong of them to oppose the introduction of Reforms. Their attitude is much more narrow and short-sighted than that of Muslim minorities in the majority of the provinces in British India. In a subsequent issue the paper says:—We do not blame the frontier Hindus for looking at the question mainly through communal spectacles, for they have suffered much and long at the hands of the majority community, but they would have strengthened their case if they had laid greater stress on the general, financial, administrative, and political aspects of the question. The reasons enumerated by Major Akbar Khan in opposing the grant of reforms are weighty and cannot be ignored. Referring to Syed Murtaza's resolution regarding the extension of the Reforms to the North-West Frontier Province the Muslim Herald writes:—The Muslim League has expressed itself in clear and strong terms in favour of extension and we do not hesitate to endorse its views. Sir Abdul Qayum's attitude reflects the attitude of the Muslim world and the Hindu attitude is evidently that of the man who cuts his nose to spite his face. The Abhyudaya says that Congressmen have declared the Reforms to be inadequate and unsatisfactory and the swaraj party has pledged itself to wreck them and yet the Muslim members of the Legislative Assembly, moved by self-interest, want the rule of the Reforms in the Frontier province. The Medina deplores the unjust and unpatriotic opposition of the Hindus to the extension of the Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province simply because they are in a minority. Can narrow-mindedness, bias, selfishness, and jealousy go further? Can they deserve swaraj after this? They are really cutting their nose to spite others. The Najat says that when it is clear that the system of government obtaining in that province is worse than despotic, the opposition of the Hindus only means that they cannot bear to see the Muslim majority obtaining its just rights. The Hamdam appeals to the Swarajists to support Mr. Murtaza and not to be led away by the selfish Hindu minority in the North-West Frontier Province. The Haqiqat deplores that Messrs. Malaviya, Lajpat Rai, and others are opposed to the resolution simply on account of their communal antipathy and urges the Muslims and enlightened Hindus of other provinces to support this just demand.

The Panipat case.

Referring to the judgement in the Panipat case the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The court has supplemented the lathi blows of the Panipat police by sending the Hindu accused to jail. The judgement will be received throughout Hindu India with a feeling that will not add to public confidence in the British courts of law. The Vartman writes:—Such long sentences were awarded to the Hindus but the officials who were guilty of dereliction of duty at the time of the disturbance were not even fined. This is creating an impression on the mind of the public that partiality is shown to officials in the courts. The attitude of the Magistrate towards the Hindus was not good. This is reflected in his judgement also. The Hindu Sarvaswa strongly criticizes the attitude of the Magistrate towards the defence counsel and says: All this clearly shows that the Government is openly siding with the Muslims in the case. We want to tell the Hindus that the time has come when they will be beaten with their own shoes. They have become so worthless and cowardly that taking advantage of their cowardice others are bent upon ruining them.

Muslim affairs.

Rao Abdur Rahman, writing in Al Bashir says, that Sir Abdur Rahim reflected the true sentiments of his community in his presidential address at the Muslim League. The Hindus have never shown any tolerance towards Muslims and it is time that in view of their political importance the latter got equal representation with the former. In another article the same paper complains that Muslim rights are being constantly trampled upon by the Hindu majority in various local bodies and urges that Muslims should not only refuse to join in any demand for further reforms but should also show to the Hindus that they cannot retain even the present Reforms without their co-operation. It is then only that the Hindus will come to their senses and agree to a reasonable compromise. The Sarfaraz complains that Shias are unable to succeed at elections owing to the selfishness and bias of the Sunni majority and urges that Government should show special regard for Shia rights in making nominations. As, however, Government patronage cannot always be depended upon, it is imperative that Shias should be granted separate representation and to carry on an agitation in its favour the Shia League should be revived and deputations sent to the higher officials. Referring to the recent Arya-Muslim disturbance at Agra, the Agra Akhbar urges Government to prohibit foul attacks on other religions by the Aryas, as these lead to disorder resulting in loss of life and property. The Naiyar-i-Azam complains that objectionable plays like Rezia Begum, Shah Jahan, Amar Singh Rathor, etc., which are being staged and screened in Bombay seriously wound the feelings of Muslims by their slanderous attacks on their rulers and appeals to the Government of India to prohibit such films and plays specially in Bombay and Bengal where they are most popular. In another article the same paper welcomes the Bill for the registration of Muslim marriages, as it will prevent the falsification of records and thus put an end to much unnecessary, costly, and prolonged litigation. The Mashriq urges Government to frame rules for the regulation of cow-sacrifice unless it wants to win the unenviable notoriety of being a fomentor of communal disturbances. The Jadu regards the decision to import meat for Indian troops from Australia to be another device to set Hindus and Muslims by the ear. Al Barid suggests the picketing of fireworks shops to prevent their display on Shab-i-barat. The Haqiqat supports Khwaja Hasan Nizami's appeal to the authorities to stop the grant of licenses for the sale of potash.

Indians in the Colonies.

The Leader is not sanguine as to the result of the reference of the Asiatic Bill to a select committee in view of the determined attitude of the Union Government to drive out Indians as quickly as possible. "It seems to us that the 'delicate negotiations' have resulted in a concession which may amount to nothing." As retaliatory measures against the Union Government of South Africa for the ill-treatment of Indians the Vartman suggests the imposition of special taxes on all goods imported from and exported to that colony and also restrictions on the landing of South African ships on Indian ports. The Nejat says that the passing of the second reading of the Colour Bar Bill by the Union Parliament shows that either the Government of India have failed to stop it or they do not care for the welfare of Indians. Indians should, therefore, rectify the wrong by boycotting South African coal and other imports and bring the South Africans to their senses by severing all relations with their compatriots in India. It is vain to expect anything from Government because if it had been alive to its sense of duty it would have of itself taken care of those whom it has sent there on its own responsibility.

The Commonwealth of India Bill.

The Aj says that Mrs. Annie Besant's advice to the provincial councils and to the Legislative Assembly to reject the budgets of the Provincial and Central Governments in case the Commonwealth of India Bill is not allowed the second reading in Parliament amounts to the advocacy of pure and simple non-cooperation. The question of swaraj is the question of unity and organization and speeches in Britain and debates in Indian Legislative Councils will never secure self-government to India. We are of opinion that as yet the country is not prepared for the non-payment of taxes en masse but there is no other means than mass civil disobedience or the no-tax movement for the attainment of swaraj.

The Viceroy.

The Awaz bitterly attacks Lord Reading's régime and says that by his Indemnity Bill and his fatal blows at the Eka and non-cooperation movements and Hindu-Muslim unity and his treatment of Nabha he has earned the execration of the entire civilized world. He murdered justice through every device of cunning and trickery and he would have been hanged in Raja Ram Chandra's days. He was no whit less bad than General Dyer and Sir Michael O'Dwyer. Rather his ravages extended to the whole of India while theirs were confined to the province of the Punjab. He prostituted the name of law, order and justice to smother Indian nationalism and proved much more dangerous than Clive, Warren Hastings, Dalhousie or Curzon, as they acted avowedly in the interests of the empire and never claimed to have done anything in the interests of justice. But all the murder and rapine of Lord Reading was committed in the sacred name of justice. To feed the flames of Indian vengeance and to keep the fire of their nationalism burning a paper effigy of His Excellency should be burnt every year at the close of the national week.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In the course of an article under the heading "Another bomb on Hindus" the Vartman strongly criticizes the speech recently made by Sir Abdur Rahim at a Calcutta dinner and says:—Impartial persons should pay attention to these poisonous effusions. What will this attitude of Muslims lead to? Such are the persons who incite mischievous Muslims and cause disturbances. Mian Rahim cannot stop shuddhi or sangathan but by such speeches he can certainly cause estrangement between the two communities.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the League of Nations' decision regarding the Mosul question the Aj remarks :—Europe must remember that the memory of this fresh injustice will always rankle in the hearts of all sensible Asiatics who have thus been enabled to see the black heart of the League of Nations. It is a matter for regret and shame to us that the hard-earned money of Indians also goes to maintain this dangerous institution. The Vartman strongly criticizes European nations and European civilization and says :—Those who, like organized bands of robbers, are reducing big countries to destitution are called civilized and saviours of the world. We, however, find that the science and knowledge of Europe are ruining the world. The abuse of power makes one's heart tremble. The power which should have been used in removing oppression and immorality is being utilized to crush and rob innocent, peaceful and poor people. The Najat states that a war between Britain and France on one side and Turkey and Russia on the other is inevitable on the question of Mosul and says that a glimpse of British preparations for this war can be had in the Viceregal announcement regarding the establishment of a navy in India. Commenting on Mr. Amery's speech in Parliament on the Anglo-Iraq treaty, the Hamdam writes that it is incorrect to say that the Turks have lost the sympathy of Indian Muslims. So far the Turks have done nothing which might exclude them from the fold of Islam and so long as they are Muslim their relations with the Islamic world will remain unaffected and any injustice done to them will move the entire Muslim world.

The Viceroy's speech.

The Bharat Jiwan views with satisfaction the Viceregal announcement regarding the establishment of an Indian navy but says that the navy can be really useful to the country and worthy of its name provided 50 per cent. of its officers are Indians and this number is increased year by year. One Manohar Pant writing in the Shakti says :—The Viceroy has appealed for co-operation. We do not understand what sort of co-operation he wants. If he is not satisfied even with our co-operation for the last 150 years what are we to do? Recently in the Punjab we walked on our knees, crawled on our bellies and even pulled our ears. Does he want anything more than this? If so we bid him good-bye. He should give up this hope. For God's sake he should let India's skeleton alone and refrain from appointing any parliamentary enquiry committee. He should forget his dreams of co-operation. Co-operation is impossible now and though non-co-operation also is impossible to-day it is not yet dead. Fire is still burning in the hearts of the people. It cannot be extinguished. It would blaze forth in time. The Bharat Dharma says that the real object of the establishment of the Royal Indian navy is to forge new chains for India's subjection and to protect England by enabling her to combat the situation created in the Near East by Russia and Turkey on the Mosul question. The defence of India is only a pretext. India's money will be spent and her men will die but England will be protected. It would also give an opportunity to England to boast that she is following the policy of disarmament and thus to conceal her innate love of bloodshed. By making India bear the cost of this new fleet England will be able to reduce her naval expenditure and to obtain from poor India a large sum of money by making her purchase old British warships. The Azad says that the scope of the agricultural commission is so limited that it can hardly do any good. However only those who command public confidence should be appointed to the commission. The swarajists should co-operate for a year or two to see what lies behind the repeated promises of the Viceroy and the Secretary of State. The Haqiqat is very much satisfied with the proposal about an Indian navy and says that though it would be expensive, without it Indian youths cannot develop enthusiasm for a sea-faring life.

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province.

The Indian Daily Telegraph says that the only condition under which reforms can be extended to the Frontier is that every official drawing above Rs. 500 and entrusted with authority must be a Hindu, who alone can be expected to safeguard the interests of the minority at a crisis. "The Hindus can see the peril confronting their brethren. The only safeguard is not the speech and the vote of a solitary Madan Mohan Malaviya in the Legislative Assembly but the united force of Sangathan." The Muslim Herald says that the resolution regarding the extension of reforms has exposed the hollowness of the sincerity of many a Hindu leader. With a malicious glee did Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya vent his spleen on the Pathans, accusing them of ruthlessness and barbarity. There is, it seems to us, a secret repository in the heart of this man where he stows away racial hatred and bitterness without fear of diminution. The Aj does not support the opposition of Hindus to the Muslim demand for the introduction of reforms in the Frontier Province and advises the members of the Legislative Assembly to settle this question by mutual agreement. While deprecating the consideration of the question merely from the communal standpoint the Abhyudaya wonders if the province will be able to bear the increased expenditure involved in the introduction of reforms. The Pratap contends that the introduction of reforms can never be detrimental to the interests of the country or those of the Hindus. The Medina denies that the grant of reforms to the North-West Frontier Province will endanger the security of India or lead to increased expenditure. The Hindu opposition is really inspired by the fear that any political advance in the province might raise the dormant Muslim majority and thus prejudice the privileged position at present occupied by the Hindu minority. It is up to the Swarajists to demonstrate their freedom from communal bias by either voting for the reforms or by totally abstaining from voting. The Sadaqat condemns the Hindu opposition and says that the minority argument can be used to deprive other Indian provinces also of the Reforms. The opposition is a great misfortune to the country and merely indicates the anti-Muslim mentality of the Hindus. The Sada-i-Muslim warns Mr. Malaviya that he was pursuing a fatal will-o'-the-wisp when he was arguing that the Frontier Province should be denied political reforms because the Muslims were in a majority there and were not on good terms with the Hindus. This change of mentality is really deplorable and Panditji should bear in mind that he would be hoisted with his own petard if Government were to tell him that because of the Hindu excesses at Arrah and Katarpur the Reforms should be withdrawn from the other Indian provinces also. We appeal to Government to give proof of their liberal-mindedness by extending the Reforms forthwith to the Frontier Province.

Indians in the Colonies.

Commenting on Kunwar Maharaj Singh's report on the British Guiana colonization scheme the Leader writes:—The plight of Indians in other Crown colonies where they are denied the rights of free citizenship and are treated as mere coolies, makes it absolutely necessary that before the Government of India accept any scheme of colonization, however favourable and generous on the face of it, it must insist upon the political status of Indian emigrants to British Guiana being clearly defined. India is unwilling to supply labour for the benefit of white capitalists and must oppose all proposals for recruiting Indian labour for the development of the colonies unless guarantees are forthcoming that Indian settlers will be treated not as hewers of wood and drawers of water but as self-respecting citizens and independent farmers. The Pratap regards the message of consolation sent by Mrs. Naidu assuring the South African Indians of India's help as illusive and says:—We should not dupe the afflicted people with hollow assurances. We should tell them frankly that we have no strength. The Government of this country is despotic and not ours. We are a subject people and as such suffer from the evils of self-forgetfulness and self-degradation. We cannot do anything for you. The earth is not meant for white domination. May this idea encourage you and may your soul force lead you to success. The Aj remarks that it is the duty of Indians to protest unanimously against the action of the Government of India in not standing up courageously for the full rights of their compatriots in South Africa and contenting itself with the Asiatic Bill being referred to a select committee before the second reading and with the Paddison Commission being allowed to appear before it. If there had been a national Government in India the problem of Indians in South Africa would have constituted a sufficient cause for declaration of war or for the matter being referred to an international court of arbitration. But as things stand this question should at any rate be referred to an imperial court of arbitration composed of the representatives of all the colonies and presided over by the representative of Britain. India in her present position will surely be willing to accept the decision of this court. The Haqiqat urges an economic boycott of the South Africans as the Government of India will not budge even if the callous Government of South Africa gets all Indians there pelted to death or thrown into the sea. The Hindu Gazette has a cartoon suggesting that the only solution of the South African problem lies in the British leaving India.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Muslim Herald regards the Hindu Maha Sabha's invitation to the Maharaja of Nepal to preside over its forthcoming session as a novel method of attracting the attention of the masses and enlisting their sympathies and says: "Our own suggestion is that the Maha Sabha should first of all come to a conclusion on the point whether or not they finally decide to expel the Musalmans from India." The Abhyudaya says that Sir Abdur Rahim has by his recent Calcutta speech sprinkled salt over the wounds of Hindus caused by his previous speech at the Muslim League. Before condemning the shuddhi, sangathan and Hindu Sabha movements he should have taken notice of the tanzim and tabligh movements and of the activities of the Muslim League itself. Hindus should take a lesson from the black effusions of Sir Abdur Rahim and realize that so long as this is the mentality of Muslims they cannot look for any good at their hands. The Gyan Shakti remarks that the repeated yielding of Hindus to the Muslims has failed to establish the desired unity between the two communities. The petty-minded address of Sir Abdur Rahim shows which way the wind is blowing. It is time that the Hindu Sabha should arrange to return only orthodox Hindus to the Legislative Councils in the next elections as the swarajists cannot safeguard the interests of the Hindus. Referring to the formation of a separate Muslim party in the Bengal Legislative Council by Sir Abdur Rahim the Aj says that that gentleman should bear in mind that he is sowing seeds of poison and that he will have to taste their fruit also. The Hindus will be compelled, despite their nationalistic spirit, to act like Muslims in self-defence. This may well benefit the Muslims of a few provinces but they will suffer badly in most of the provinces. No doubt in these provinces the Muslims will count on the favour of the bureaucracy but the price of this help will mean their enslavement.

Muslim affairs.

The Sada-i-Muslim protests against the resolution regarding the prohibition of the slaughter of certain classes of bullocks and cows carried by the Hindu majority in the Cawnpore Municipal Board in the teeth of the unanimous Muslim opposition. This action is inspired solely by religious motives as the slaughter of buffaloes also would have been forbidden if economic considerations alone had been kept in view. It is up to Muslim members on the Council and the Local Government to interfere in the matter. The Zul Qarnain complains that Muslims do not gain at all from special representation as they still remain in a minority in most district boards and Government have not incorporated in the District Boards Act the other clause of the Lucknow Congress League Compromise laying down that a resolution to which three-fourths of the minority are opposed cannot be moved. Muslims have been further seriously handicapped by the recent nominations of members of the depressed Hindu castes to local bodies and they should try to secure an amendment of the Act so that Muslims may be appointed as chairmen at least once in every three terms, and non-members appointed as chairmen may be non-Hindus. If the Muslim members of the local bodies cannot secure these amendments within their present term of office they should resign in a body as it is useless for them to continue in boards in which they cannot exercise any power. Al Bashir refers to the discussion in the local council about the educational advancement of the depressed classes and urges Muslim M. L. Cs. to find out from Government the number of Muslims and members of the depressed classes in mixed schools with a view to convince it that more is being spent on the education of the higher caste Hindus than either on Muslims or members of the depressed classes. They should also secure figures about the members of the depressed classes employed in various Government departments in order to show to Government that the high caste Hindus have got more than their legitimate share in the public services also. It should also be ascertained whether any provision has been made for the education of the Muslim depressed classes also or all special measures are reserved for the depressed Hindu castes only. Once these statistics become public the clamour of the high caste Hindus about Muslims receiving more in educational facilities and Government employment than their numerical proportion entitles them to will receive its quietus and Government will also be roused to a proper sense of its responsibility in regard to the education of the Muslim depressed classes.

Communism.

In the course of an article under the heading "On the tomb of Lenin" the Varıman writes: Mahatma Lenin took rest when imperialistic England, the possessor of powerful brute force, had received a smart slap on the face and the Labour leader, Mr. Macdonald, had become Prime Minister. But the conservatives bought up the people of England by all sorts of means. Now capitalism is fearlessly extending its scope. The imperialists of Europe are employing the most detestable capitalistic methods. In the illusory calm the goddess of war is silently arraying herself. It should be remembered that in all wars it is the poor who suffer most. Do the imperialists and capitalists go to fight in wars? It is for their money that peasants, labourers, soldiers, clerks, peons and coolies have to sacrifice their lives. If you wish to die die for your own sake. Die for independence. When you learn to die for yourselves capitalism and Imperialism will both come to an end. But that will not be called your victory. The wreath of victory will be laid on the tomb of Lenin who taught you to die. The Press Bandhu publishes an article by Satya Bhakta in the course of which he says: The times are now changing. In spite of being repeatedly suppressed and beaten by capitalists the labourers are steadily gaining power and are becoming strong whereas the capitalists in the glamour of their opulence are becoming indolent and careless. Therefore the time is not distant when the capitalistic injustice and treachery will be destroyed and the labourers will themselves become masters of mills and factories. For the progress of the labourers and the removal of their grievances it is essential that they should be strongly organized and their power augmented in every possible manner.

Political propaganda.

The Aj points out that there is no fundamental difference between responsive co-operators and liberals and advises both of them to form one party under a common name to avoid multiplicity of political parties in the country. The paper suggests that if the Swaraj party wants to retain the support of the country it should make a definite declaration that it aims at attaining swaraj through civil disobedience. The Oudh Akhbar regards the swarajist and independent support to Sir Alexander Muddiman's Criminal Law Amendment Bill as a fresh proof of co-operation and appeals to Government to utilise this swarajist gesture to make some announcement which will satisfy the public and remove unrest.

The Madras Government.

The Pratap wonders why the Madras Government is so tired of the Hindus and the Hindi language that it has forbidden Hindu Government servants to become members of the Hindu Sabha and refused Government aid to schools in which Hindi is taught. The Abhyudaya says that the Madras Government by issuing the circular prohibiting Government servants from becoming members of the Hindu Maha Sabha has not tried to remove communal tension but has played a trick to prevent the Hindus from becoming stronger and to render impossible the solution of the Brahman and non-Brahman problem. The same paper condemns the order of the Madras Government against the teaching of Hindi in schools in the presidency as unjust and short-sighted and remarks that it constitutes an attack not only on the national language of the country but also on the spirit of nationalism. The Aj writes: Is it any crime to learn Hindi? Is this the Madras Government's reply to the Congress resolution advising every Indian to learn Hindi? As Hindi is the only language which can become the lingua franca of the country and thereby help in the welding of Indians into one nation they should unanimously protest against this action of the Madras Government. The Bharat Dharma says that the reason why the Madras Government is opposed to the teaching of Hindi in schools is that the propagation of a common national language will encourage the spirit of nationalism in the country and lead to fraternization between Northern and Southern India. This will hamper the Government in its policy of divide and rule. The paper remarks that the Madras

Government has evinced the same sort of madness in forbidding Hindu Government servants to become members of the Hindu Sabha. Such orders of the Madras Government will only lead to the increase of communal friction but the Government does not know that this friction will one day end even the peaceful Government. If the Government does not get rid of this madness by withdrawing these orders the public should take the work of removing it (madness) in its own hands.

Indians in Burma.

The Matri Bhoomi contends that the non-Burman Offenders Explusion Bill is simply meant to drive Indians out of Burma. Just as South Africa has made colour an excuse for expelling Indians the Government has made "badmashi" a pretext for turning them out of Burma. In doing so it has only followed the English saying "give the dog a bad name and then hang it." The Surya says that the Bill is based on the policy of divide and rule and is meant to cut off India completely from Burma. The Government of India will therefore be well advised to reject it. The Aj argues that there can be no other object of the Bill than the expulsion of Indians from Burma because of their predominant participation in the liberty movement in that province. It is utter selfishness on the part of Britishers to seek the expulsion of Indians from Burma when they themselves encouraged their migration thereto formerly to serve their own ends. It is against all principles of government that one province of a country should legislate against another but the existing Government has no principles and is guided only by the policy of divide and rule. In view of the character of the Indian bureaucracy, of the Indian police and of the administration of justice this measure cannot but prove fatal to Indians.

The United Provinces Tibbi Committee.

The Zul Qarnain regrets that the Tibbi Committee has decided in favour of unqualified vaids and hakims being allowed to practise and says that as quacks constitute a serious menace to public life and health unqualified physicians must submit to an examination before being granted permission to practise. Agra would prove more suitable than Allahabad for the Tibbi school as most of the students for that institution would come from the western districts. A writer in the Oudh Akhbar however approves of the committee's decision about the registration of vaids and hakims.

"Nationalist Party."

The Muslim Herald bitterly criticizes Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya for forming a nationalist party and says: "Divide and Rule India" is the policy pursued by our benevolent masters, the British. "Divide and Destroy India" is our wise Pandit's unalterable policy. His success is greater than that of the Government. His achievements are more brilliant as they are likely to lengthen the term of our bondage more than the high policy of the benign Government that safeguards our interests here on our behalf.

Back Bay Reclamation Scheme.

In the course of an editorial note the Muslim Herald writes:—The Back Bay scandal brings into relief the helplessness of a slave nation. By revealing the autocratic tendencies of its masters, the English, one can have a full gaze at it and satisfy himself as to the actual dangers of the imposition of a foreign unsympathetic rule over an alien people, alien in culture, civilization, traditions and general outlook on life. A number of other papers including the Leader have also strongly criticized the scheme.

Foreign affairs.

In the course of an editorial note the Muslim Herald writes:—"It is high time the English and other European powers changed their attitude towards Turkey. The patience of the Musalmans of India is well-nigh exhausted . . . It is against all canons of political morality to set up a secret combination of ambitious and scheming Christian powers against a tired nation that has defied their collective strength for centuries without being allowed a moment's respite. But European or the so-called Christian diplomacy is divorced from all moral considerations of right and wrong. Their own selfish interests constitute their best moral and spiritual tenets and these are scrupulously respected and command their whole-hearted reverence." The Najat infers from the debate in Parliament on the Anglo-Iraq Treaty that the British Government has decided to deprive the Turks of Mosul which they regard as an inseparable part of their country and says that now Turkey cannot but resort to direct action.

District Boards Primary Education Bill.

Referring to the walking out of Muslim members during the debate on the United Provinces District Boards Primary Education Bill, the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—We offer our congratulations to the United Provinces bureaucracy; the scene that comes from the Legislative Council must do it good. The scene was inevitable, and it has come. The false veil is being torn and we are fast getting to face the situation. The Muslims and the Government pull one way and the nationalists pull the other way. The Leader writes:—While we are not opposed to the imparting of religious instruction in educational institutions we cannot appreciate the action of the Muslim members who walked out of the Council Chamber. The Hindu members who opposed the amendment did so not because they were opposed to such instruction but because they realized the difficulty in the way of making a compulsory provision for it for all classes. And yet a communal colour was given to their very reasonable opposition. Under the heading "A Pagan Council" the Muslim Herald writes:—The United Provinces Council has discredited itself in the eyes of the thinking public. It has been found hopelessly wanting in sobriety of its views and sanity of judgement. Grave issues of far-reaching importance have been raised by the rejection of the motion for the introduction of religious education in the primary schools of the Province. It is nothing short of a triumph of materialism over spiritualism, of western culture over time-honoured eastern traditions and of bigotry and fanaticism over true tolerance and catholicity . . . The scheme of religious emancipation and political regeneration is spurned by a haughty, unheeding, unpatriotic section of the people that seeks shelter under the tyranny of the majority over a helpless minority. The Oudh Akhbar says that if an attempt had not been made to rush the Bill through in defiance of the wishes of the Muslim members they would not have been forced to walk out of the Council Chamber as a protest. Hafiz Hidayat Husain's proposal did not deserve such scant consideration. The Muslim members were not inspired by any communal feeling but only desired to secure necessary amendments in the Bill. Where was the harm if theology had been included in the list of additional subjects? Muslim children could be taught the Koran and Hindu children the Ramayan and the Gita. According to the Hamdam the Muslim members deserve the thanks of their entire community for not participating in the passage of a measure likely to prove detrimental to the interests of their co-religionists in rural areas. The indifference of the Hindu swarajists is deplorable; they should at least have got the consideration of the Bill postponed. The Bill is wholly inopportune, as neither the public is prepared for it nor does the Government possess funds for its enforcement. A Bill passed by the vote of single community can carry but little weight.

The Maharaja of Indore.

Strongly criticizing the attitude of the Government towards the Maharajas of Nabha and Indore, the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Lord Reading has rendered the British Raj as unpopular among the princes as among the people by his action against His Highness the Maharaja of Nabha, characterized by a vindictiveness in stopping his allowance that can only be described as unparalleled in civilized rule. We are not sorry; the princes and the people of India must be one and the iron hand of bureaucracy descending on the princes might be the best incentive for them to seek the love of their subjects instead of banquetting the political officers and arranging for the Viceroy's tiger-shooting. In another article the paper says: It was agreed on all hands that the Maharaja of Indore had an excellent case and in abdicating Maharaja Tukaji Rao Holkar has sacrificed himself in 'the higher interests of the state. The Leader writes:—We regret the Maharaja's decision. On personal grounds His Highness would have hesitated to take a step which is certain to be interpreted as a sign of weakness . . . In any case, we are sorry for His Highness. He is reputed to be a well-intentioned, he certainly is a popular ruler. He is generous-hearted. We do not think anyone can say that his subjects have been unhappy during his reign. The Muslim Herald is of opinion that since the Maharaja has preferred abdication to a commission of inquiry his position is legally weak. "It appears to us that the disparity of the treatment meted out to poor men who had the misfortune to be involved in this case and the consideration shown in the case of one whose acquired temporal dignity made him immune from a tighter grip of law, is remarkable. It is here that we have to recognize the triumph of Islam over the recognized conventions and tenets of governments and societies in their dealings with men. Islam recognizes no difference of status or position." The Aj says:—Despite some of his faults, we never wished that the Maharaja should be obliged to abdicate. He was naturally of a good nature, patriotic, self-respecting and a well-wisher of his people. It was possibly because of these qualities that he was an eye-sore to the bureaucracy which fell upon him when an opportunity presented itself. The Aziz-i-Hind is sorry for the great humiliation of the Maharaja of Indore during Lord Reading's régime. His Highness has still so much faith in Government's generosity that he has disbanded his army as a precaution against any ebullition on its part. The loyalty of the Indian princes is a valuable asset and it is to be hoped that the Viceroy will do an act of mercy before his departure. The Hamdam says that Lord Reading cannot be congratulated on the Indore abdication, as it has cast a gloom not only over Indore but over the whole of India and has made the ruling chiefs nervous about their position and prestige. The Awaz foresees serious unrest among the Mahrattas owing to the Indore commission and inquires what act of justice, if any, has the high priest of justice, Lord Reading, done so far in India. Did he punish bloody Dyer and (Sir Michael) O'Dwyer and those judges who hanged innocent persons? The Maharaja himself is not connected with the Bawla murder and he cannot be condemned for the crimes of his subjects. If this novel doctrine of the responsibility of the ruler for the acts of his subjects is to be accepted, then Lord Reading should have to be hanged any number of times, as it was during his régime that hundreds of patriots lost their lives, hundreds of Hindus were killed, and hundreds of Hindu women were abducted.

The Holi festival.

The Abhyudaya says:—This festival occurs every year to remind us of the power of our ancestors to humble the pride of oppressors. It is to be deplored that to-day we do not possess their determination and their courage to oppose injustice. To-day we do not possess the spirit of self-sacrifice and that is why we are insulted at every step and our rights are being taken away. The Holi has come with a message to us to sacrifice ourselves for our religion. We wish that every Hindu should to-day get rid of cowardice and slavishness and be immersed in the spirit of communalism and nationalism. The Bhavishya draws attention to the unity which is to be seen during the Holi among Hindus of all castes and sub-castes and says:—If the Hindus are similarly united (permanently) in the bond of sangathan the atrocities perpetrated upon them will come to an end, the Hindu nation will regain its ancient glory and will be freed from the fear of being beaten and robbed and of its temples being broken. The Hindi Kesari publishes an article in which the writer, Pandit Yagna Narayan Upadhyaya, M.A., LL.B., M.L.C., says :—Before her subjection India never celebrated the Holi festival so miserably as she does now when she is so ill-fed and ill-clad. A comparison of her old glory with her present position brings tears into one's eyes in the midst of the Holi festival. Will the Indian leaders consume their differences in the Holi fires and pay heed to the sufferings of the rural population? It has indisputably been established that unless the Indian leaders exert united pressure on the bureaucracy it will not advance a single step. It is their mutual dissensions which have encouraged the bureaucracy to demand self-surrender on the part of Indians. If the forthcoming assemblage of leaders at Delhi does not carry a thoughtful resolution on the critical condition of the country we shall have to suffer slavery for a very long time. The bureaucratic offer for cooperation is only meant to mislead the people. The bureaucracy taking advantage of disunion among the people wants to humiliate the country. This should suffice to open our eyes and we should renew our struggle, uniting our scattered forces and bearing in mind that mendicancy will never give us freedom. In the course of an article on the Holi festival the Bharat Jiwan refers to the story of the tyrant Hiranyakashyapa and his virtuous son, Prahlad, and says :—History repeats itself. On the one side there was the materialistic Hiranyakashyapa and on the other the idealist Prahlad. On the one side there was the West and on the other the East. As at present, diabolical deeds were being perpetrated on all sides, the simple folk were being crushed in every way, the blood of the helpless was being sucked by every means. Brute force was supreme in the world and next to it was the power of capital. At such a juncture the voice of a weak lad rose against materialism. It was the voice of Prahlad. The power of Hiranyakashyapa—the power of materialism—could not silence it. The method of the struggle was the same as it is to-day. The sword of the murderer and the entire power of materialism were on one side and the sea of helplessness and the storm of satyagraha on the other. The sword could cut bones but not water. Materialism could break mountains but not the peaceful but firm resolve of spiritualism. In the end satyagraha triumphed and Hiranyakashyapa was slain. The Holi reminds us of the same ancient incident. It tells us that if we espouse truth, are not carried away by the glamour of materialism and do not treat brute force as power, we shall triumph even to-day. This festival conveys to us the message of the triumph of the weak over the strong. Let us therefore celebrate this festival and pray to God that what happened in the past may happen again; may the one who triumphed in the past triumph again; may the one who was destroyed in the past be destroyed again.

The Indian Budget.

The Leader writes :—When Sir Basil Blackett assumed charge of office he found that the financial position of the Government was very unsatisfactory. He may with justifiable pride claim that he has been able to establish a foundation of financial stability. Without firm and clear-sighted handling of the situation the conditions would not have improved so rapidly as they have done and for this he deserves congratulations. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—Sir Basil Blackett's budget statement is a tale of all-round progress, efficiency, and strength. It reveals the remarkable strength of our Indian financial system for which a very great part of credit must go to Sir Basil Blackett himself. The Government has distributed the surplus in a generous way. The reduction in the rate of interest on the postal cash certificates will meet with great and universal opposition. The reduction of provincial contributions and the abolition of cotton excise duty are achievements of which Sir Basil Blackett may legitimately feel proud. The Aj writes :—We do not consider it fair to augment public revenue by the income of the commercial departments like the post office, telegraph, canals and railways. They should be financed from loans and their income should be limited to cover depreciation of plant and interest on capital and to maintain a fund to meet losses and pay up the capital. If this is done, their rates can be reduced to a very large extent and they can greatly help trade and industry indirectly. The refusal of the Finance Member to reduce postal rates is very disappointing. Surely the income of the people has not increased to justify enhancement in the rates of public services. Sir Basil Blackett stands on very weak ground when he urges that the general tax-payer cannot be made to suffer for the convenience of those who advocate cheap postal rates but utilizes railway profits to increase public revenue at the expense of the third class passengers. The bureaucracy should always take into consideration the economic position of the people before thinking of increasing its revenue. The same paper in another article says that when Lord Reading restores the grant for the Railway Board rejected by the Legislative Assembly he should explain why Indians are not appointed in that Board, why the bureaucracy repeatedly breaks its promise in this matter and whether an Indian's presence in the Railway Board will spell ruin to the Empire. The Najat does not regard the proposed reduction of ten per cent. in third class fares as at all generous in view of the enormous income derived from railways and asks for a further reduction. It also urges the discouragement of the practice of raising foreign loans for railway extension and says that foreign money markets should be tapped only when the Indian markets fail.

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province.

The Shankar says that if the Muslims succeed in their efforts to get the reforms extended to the Frontier Province the Hindus of that province will have a very bad time of it. When it is possible for the Muslims there to enact a tragedy like that of Kohat without having any power who can say what atrocity they will not commit when they are invested with powers? If the Government and the Assembly flout the cry of the Frontier Hindus nobody knows what will be in store for them in future. The Gyan Shakti refers to the inhuman treatment to which the Hindus are subjected in the Frontier Province and urges the Hindu members of the Assembly to act with courage and to bear in mind that the protection of the weak is the paramount duty of man and the state. The Pratap congratulates the rulers on their success in dividing their opponents into various camps and causing them to fly at each other's throat for trifles. Even Mr. Muhammad Ali is furious over the Frontier question. In his Hamdard he holds out the threat of Muslim secession from the Swaraj party. This does not become the ex-president of the Congress. On the one hand he regards the official crumbs as trifles and on the other attaches so much importance to them. The Medina infers from Mr. Malaviya's speech in the Assembly that the Hindu opposition is inspired simply by a desire to be avenged for the riots at Kohat, Rawalpindi, Peshawar, etc. Whenever Mr. Malaviya talks of the Frontier Province he can recollect only the robbing and exiling of Hindus. The official members will, of course, oppose Mr. Murtaza's resolution, as they can never relish any extension of the Reforms which are depriving the white members of the bureaucracy of their cherished privileges. It is up to the swarajists now to support the resolution as otherwise if it fails, as it is bound to owing to Hindu opposition, there will be a serious defection from the Swarajist ranks and this might lead to the unfortunate formation of parties in the Assembly on communal lines. Al Bashir ridicules the arguments advanced by the various Hindu Sabhas against the extension of Reforms to the North-West Frontier Province and says that if their line of reasoning is to be accepted the Reforms will have to be withdrawn from all Indian provinces in which the Hindus are in a majority, as these people are so turbulent and fanatical that they fight over the sacrifice of cows or cutting of pipal trees. In reality it is the predominance of the Hindus which is the greatest obstacle in the path of Indian progress and freedom and so long as their numbers are not reduced by conversion India cannot hope to emerge from slavery.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Vartman justifies the action of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in forming a new party and says :—How long could the murder of the rights of the Hindus be tolerated? How long could the policy of Mr. Jinnah, which is full of meanness, be regarded as law? In the next elections Hindu voters will have to see to it that their representatives are not a tool in the hands of the bureaucracy and are not murderers of the rights of the Hindus. In an article in the same paper Kunwar Chand Karan Sarda says that when there is an organized attack on Hindus they have no other course than to send their own representatives to the legislature. In the course of an article deploring the present condition of the Hindu community the Bhavishya writes :—We ought to show by our prowess that we shall destroy the house of the man who has the audacity to kidnap our women. We shall slay him and make over his head to jackals as was done in the case of Ravan. The very object of our life is to protect the honour of our community by destroying devilish, brutish men, who have been blinded by arrogance. The Vartman publishes a lengthy account of the Rewari disturbances by Pandit Neki Ram Sharma in which he blames the Muslims and their leaders for the "premeditated and organized" disturbance. In the course of an editorial article on this the paper says :—The readers have seen the attitude of blood-thirsty Muslims. "It is becoming difficult for Hindus to celebrate their religious festivals and to take out processions during marriages.

All this is due to the weakness of Hindus and the partiality of officials." The Aj says that so long as separate Muslim electorates exist the participation of the Hindu Sabha in elections will create only differences among the Hindus themselves and will set the Hindu Sabha against the Congress. Hindus being in the majority in the Congress they can serve communal as well as national interests through the Congress itself. The Hindu Sabha should look after the social and religious interests of the Hindus but should entrust the care of their political interests to political bodies. The Awaz protests against the appointment of a Muslim Home Member in such a predominantly Hindu province specially when more capable Hindu zamindars were available. Nawab Yusuf was also appointed simply because he is a Muslim and when Sir William Marris is not prepared to concede to Hindus the rights and privileges of citizens he should not demand of them the corresponding duties. If war breaks out only the Nawab of Chattari and Nawab Yusuf who have benefited in times of peace should be asked to provide men and money. In all departments the Hindus have their rights denied to them. There are more Muslim tahsildars and deputy collectors and still more are being recruited. The same is the case in the higher ranks of the Police department. We would not have stinted support to Government if Sir William Marris had not reserved all his favours for Muslims. The Muslims are not to be blamed for accepting cheerfully what they get but we have to look at the motive of the giver who simply wants to run the Government machinery by following the policy of divide and rule. He does not care at all for the rights of others and is unmindful of the lasting safety of the Government. In short, he is the real enemy of the public peace.

Indians in the colonies.

The Oudh Akhbar complains that Indians live in unsanitary conditions and are treated as political helots in British colonies and appeals to the Government of India not to accept the British Guiana colonization scheme unless Kunwar Maharaj Singh's suggestions that Indians should be provided with sanitary areas of sufficient extent for their habitations and should be assigned a definite political status and given adequate representation in both the chambers of the British Guiana legislature, are accepted. The Medina is gratified that the Asiatic Bill has been referred to a select committee and an opportunity has been afforded for the presentation of the Indian case which might affect the acceptance of this measure by the Government in England. For Indians, however, the only remedy, as suggested by Mahatmaji is satyagraha. The Najat is dissatisfied with the ineffectual measures of the Government of India and wonders why it maintains such an expensive army and navy when it cannot settle even such a petty matter. The Hamdam agrees with Mr. Gandhi's view that the South African problem can be solved only if Indians unite for the attainment of swaraj and give practical proof of their firm determination. The Haqiqat says that the correspondence with the Government of India had with the Union Government on the subject has only laid bare the former's subjection and servility. Indians in South Africa had to put up with atrocities for 15 years simply because India is not free. The Government of India contents itself simply with soothing Indian sentiments and Indians themselves must present a determined and united front if they want to achieve any success.

United Provinces budget.

In the course of a leading article the Leader says that the provincial finances have begun to look up and it is possible to look forward now to an era of greater activity in the beneficent departments. The paper is, however, of opinion that the share of education, agriculture, public health, industries, medical and civil works out of the total sum provided for new expenditure is inadequate. "The reserved departments have been overfed, while transferred departments have been starved. One has to look only to the totals of expenditures on the two departments to find out how disproportionately a small amount is spent on the nation-building departments. . . . We have urged the stoppage of recruitment abroad, the rapid Indianization of services, the abolition of commissionerships, the reorganization of the Public Works department, and other reforms so that there may be greater economy in administration and more funds may be available for the building up of the beneficial services.

Lord Irwin.

Discussing the cabled summary of Lord Irwin's speech at the British Indian Association dinner the Hamdam observes that it shows that he has very soon imbibed the bureaucratic spirit and has inherited all the traditions of Lord Reading's régime. Lord Reading came as a champion of justice and Lord Irwin is coming as a champion of education and it may be expected that his championship will prove equally farcical. Lord Reading's call for unity and co-operation has almost smothered national life in India and it is to be seen what Lord Irwin's call for the citizen's duty to India does for the country.

Muslim affairs.

In the course of an article on the Royal Commission on Agriculture the Muslim Herald urges upon the Government of India the desirability of appointing at least two Muslims, one from the Punjab and one from Bengal, to represent Muslim agriculturists on the Commission, as Muslims preponderate in these provinces. Hamidullah Afsar writing in the Medina supports Dr. Khan's Bill for the registration of Muslim marriages as, in his opinion, it would save unnecessary litigation and waste of properties. Such a law exists in Bhopal and in Bengal also every Muslim marriage is registered under the Optional Muslim Marriage Act of 1876. The Bill will not interfere with any religious principle. It is to be hoped that the Ulema and Mujtahids will support the Bill.

Taxation Inquiry Committee Report.

The Aj says that the Government of India fights shy of appointing an economic inquiry committee for fear of the exposure of its administrative policy and that is why it has not allowed even the Taxation Inquiry Committee to inquire into the economic position of the country. In another article the same paper remarks that the chowkidari tax can be levied only when those who pay it are given some control over the village police. It contends that the arguments advanced by the Taxation Inquiry Committee for the maintenance of the chowkidari tax are all untenable. When the Government spends very little of the land revenue which it receives from the rural population for its good it should consider whether there is any justification for levying a separate tax on villagers in the name of the chowkidari tax.

Back Bay Reclamation Scheme.

In the course of an editorial note severely criticizing the "Back Bay Muddle" the Leader writes:—It is just because the people have to pay that irresponsible rulers are tempted to launch upon mad and extravagant schemes to which they may have taken a fancy . . . A system under which such huge losses can be caused and such economic injury inflicted directly on the people of a province and indirectly on the whole country, ought to be modified as early as possible in order that those wielding authority may act under a full sense of responsibility to the tax-payer.

Foreign affairs.

The Hamdam is perturbed over the news of the arrival of the British Ambassador at Kabul in India to confer with the Viceroy on Anglo-Afghan relations and deplores that the European Powers do not save Asiatic States from Bolshevik influence by granting them a status of equality but run them down when they go over to the Bolsheviks.

The Swaraj Party.

Referring to the All-India Congress Committee's resolution calling upon the Swarajists to withdraw from the Legislative Assembly and the Provincial Councils the Pioneer writes :—The Swarajists have decided to withdraw from the legislative bodies in order to have a good rallying cry in the next election. The whole controversy has about it an air of extreme unreality and it is not difficult to detect signs that even among the Swarajist rank and file there are serious misgivings. The Leader writes: The resolution is a negation of commonsense, is a mere electioneering claptrap, is illogical and self-contradictory and as usual impracticable and shortsighted . . . The truth is that the Swarajists by deciding not to take any further part in legislative business are seeking to hide the failure of their policy and their discomfiture by a gesture of non-cooperation which is nothing but another strategic retreat in good order which may develop into a stampede and a rout at the next elections. Commenting on Pandit Motilal Nehru's statement the paper concedes that the present negative policy of Government is an extremely short-sighted one and unless revised must lead to future trouble but is of opinion that dramatic walk-outs from the legislatures can lead nowhere and can at best produce a temporary and mild sensation. Indian politicians should make the best of what they have got and strive for more. The Muslim Herald says: The Swarajist exodus can by no manner of means be justified. It strikes us that the withdrawal made with such noise and parade, the statement full of verbosity made prior to withdrawal and the enunciation of future policy are all preparations for the next elections and manœuvres to secure return at any cost. The Aj approves of the action of the Swarajists and urges that they should also resign their seats in the legislatures and take peaceful and proper steps to exert direct pressure on the bureaucracy through the people. They should devote special attention to the organization of labour with a view to strike a blow at the very root of the existing system of Government. In another article the paper says that the bureaucracy will never yield so long as India does not exercise her organized soul force. The Hamdam is opposed to the Swarajist action and says that while the country was being rent by communal dissensions the Swarajists were practically wasting their time in the councils but now that they are helpless to stem the tide of national disruption, they should at least finish what little work they had begun in the councils.

District Boards Primary Education Bill.

Almost every Muslim paper of consequence has strongly criticized the attitude of Hindu members of the Legislative Council towards the amendment to the United Provinces District Boards Primary Education Bill regarding the introduction of religious education. In the course of a note recounting the benefits of religious education the Muslim Herald says:—"A patriot cannot but condemn the vicious and disloyal attitude adopted by these United Provinces (Hindu) councillors." The Paigham ridicules the contention that religious education promotes inter-communal discord. Hindus do not like to see Muslims receiving religious education. Such obstructions cannot hamper the onward march of religion though they must hamper progress towards Swaraj. The Sadaqat says that the Hindus were inspired simply by spite. Woe betide the country. The Medina regrets that the infection has now spread from the local bodies and the Hindus are adopting such an unreasonable attitude that the councils also are being made an arena for fighting over communal rights. The Aziz-i-Hind congratulates the Muslim members on their manliness and wonders what has possessed the Hon'ble Minister of Education that he is so ruthlessly trampling on Muslim rights. When such is the state of Hindu mentality under the Reforms what would be the fate of Muslims under Swaraj? His Excellency the Governor should realize that Muslims can never give up pardah and compulsory education of girls is therefore out of question. The Sada-i-Muslim takes the Hindu members to task for their biassed attitude and says that they opposed the amendment simply because it would lead to the employment of more Muslim teachers. Muslims should now insist on Dr. Zia-ud-din's suggestion that proposals affecting Muslims should not be declared carried unless supported by three-fourths of the Muslim members. The Mashriq advises Muslims to stand by the British who alone would help them in need. The Haqiqat denies that the "walk-out" was a Muslim conspiracy under the leadership of the Nawab of Chattari to wreck Rai Rajeshwar Bali's ministry. Neither the Nawab nor the Muslims have any grievance against the Education Minister. The Hamdam also insists on the need for religious education for Muslims, specially in villages where Shuddhi workers are so active and Muslim teachers are so few. The imputation, however, that the Muslims wanted to wreck the ministry is untenable as it contains a Muslim also and their relations with the Hon'ble Minister of Education are very cordial. Most of the Hindi papers observed a holiday during the week and so far only the Sainik has commented on this subject. It deplores the action of the Muslim leaders in suddenly leaving the Council and says that the attitude of the Muslims is getting extremely reprehensible these days. They are so bent on quarrelling and are so blinded with selfishness that they kick up a row even without any justification.

The Indian Budget.

The Surya views with satisfaction the reduction in the provincial contributions, the abolition of the cotton excise duty and the large surplus effected and says that the members of the Assembly will be well advised not to support the Swarajists in rejecting the Budget. The Anand considers the new budget to be satisfactory in every respect and says that by reducing the expenditure Sir Basil Blackett has removed the bankruptcy of the Government. If affairs are managed with a similar foresight and regard for economy there can be a greater curtailment in expenditure in future. At present the country is overburdened with taxes and it is the duty of the Government to curtail expenditure and to reduce taxes. The Sainik does not see any satisfactory points in the budget and says that Sir Basil Blackett's jubilation is not justified. The salt tax still exists. He could not do even so much as to reduce it to eight annas. The price of post cards and envelopes is still the same. The Aj says: By a clever manipulation of figures and financial jugglery Sir Basil Blackett has been able to show a saving in the budget, but a real saving can be effected only when the cost of administration is reduced. The salaries of high officials continue to be increased and the "Lee loot" is still going on. All this is concealed by items of expenditure being transferred from one head to another. No financial administration can be satisfactory which does not reduce the burden of the tax-payer. The tremendous military expenditure and the top-heavy administrative expenditure are ruining the country. Taxes in other countries have been reduced after the war, but in India they have been increased. The people are groaning under the weight of taxation and the Finance Member praises himself by stating that the financial condition of India is very satisfactory. If the rulers of any independent country had shown the same cruelty as is being shown in India in the matter of taxation they would have found it impossible to govern even for two hours. In another article the same paper bitterly complains that the military expenditure is still excessive and urges the Indianization of the army. It says: If England really wants to grant Swaraj to India she should first of all remove British troops from the country in order to show her confidence in Indians. We would not be satisfied until the military expenditure is reduced to thirty crores of rupees only. In yet another article the paper refers to the refusal of the Commander-in-Chief to limit the military expenditure to fifty crores and says that the army may be increased to any extent, but it will not be able to combat the dissatisfaction caused by the ever-increasing expenditure. We are not prepared to admit the necessity for such a large army for the protection of India only and even if we admit it the question of providing bread to Indians is surely more important than the defence of the country. While favourably impressed with this year's Indian budget as a whole, the Najat complains that little has been done for the protection and development of indigenous industries. The remission of the duty on the finer cotton cloths of India is a minor concession. If a bolder step had been taken and a tariff had been imposed on all imported cloth, some employment would have been provided for poverty-stricken Indians. It is idle, however, to expect such an action from a foreign Government which is a partizan of the Lancashire weavers. It is a fact that the cotton industry of India is in a very nascent state as compared with that of Lancashire and is thus most deserving of State aid.

United Provinces Budget.

The Leader pleads for a larger provision for the Allahabad Carpentry School, for the improvement of communications, for local bodies, for the district health scheme and for medical aid in rural areas. The paper also suggests the creation of an improvement trust at Benares. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The budget is satisfactory not because of the economy exercised by the Provincial Government, but because of the windfall in the shape of remission of contribution to the Central Government. We are constrained to warn the Government that they are adopting a risky policy in borrowing largely for unproductive purposes year after year. The Muslim Herald writes:—Some more money has, no doubt, been allowed to the Transferred departments, but the increase has been, of necessity, a niggardly one, and no amount of juggling with the statistics can hide this fact. Reserved departments still absorb over 11 crores while that step-child, the transferred side of the Government, receives only a little over Rs. 4 crores. The paper pleads for economy in the Reserved departments by means of Indianization of services and the abolition of "costly services that are more ornamental than useful." The Aj deplores that the expectations of the people regarding the reduction of taxation have been dashed to the ground. Economy in expenditure is much talked of, but leads to no tangible results. The increase in taxation and in expenditure during and after the great war is sucking the very lifeblood of these provinces and is the root cause of the real unrest. In another article the paper complains of the excessive cost of administration and the high salary of the Governor. It regrets that the divisional commissionerships have not yet been abolished and the judicial and executive functions have not been separated. "All this fully reveals the alien, top-heavy and irresponsible nature of the administration." In yet another article the same paper writes:—So long as half of the revenue of the province is not spent on the beneficent departments and so long as the representatives of the people are not given the right to vote on every item of expenditure the Finance Member's self-praise can only be regarded as ludicrous. The expenditure on the Police department is unduly excessive and the elected members of the council should make a firm resolve not to allow any further expenditure on this department. We welcome the increased expenditure on education but this money should not be spent on higher education to increase the number of the educated unemployed. Greater attention should be paid to the extension of useful primary education. It will be waste of the money of the tax-payers to increase the expenditure on big buildings and on the inspecting staff. Regarding the increased expenditure on the medical department we have to urge that better arrangements should be made for the treatment of tuberculosis in every district. The authorities should also treat the Ayurvedic and Unani systems of treatment more generously. If even one-half of the sum spent on the Allopathic system is allotted to these two systems they will produce better results. The Surya says that in spite of its various shortcomings the noteworthy feature of the provincial budget is the liberal allotment for the departments of public utility. For this everybody will thank the local Government. But this much must be said that the Government does not evince the same liberality in the actual advancement of education as it does in spending money over school buildings and that the educational and other public institutions of the sanatanists have to go without Government aid. The Sainik deplores that the allotments to the Transferred departments have been niggardly. The Oudh Akhbar complains that contrary to the desire of the United Provinces Council, the Government of India's remission in the provincial contribution was not spent mainly on the Transferred departments and they did not receive even half of it. Will the United Provinces Government at least reserve the whole of the remission now proposed in the provincial contribution by the Government of India for the transferred subjects?

The Maharaja of Indore.

The Surya is deeply grieved at the abdication of the Maharaja of Indore and says that this action of his will pain every child of India inasmuch as the Maharaja was a very sympathetic ruler and a great protector of his subjects. The Maharaja's abdication at the threat of the Governor-General is also objectionable from the viewpoint of the status of ruling chiefs. The Aj writes:—The Maharaja undoubtedly deserves praise for abdicating rather than submit to trial by a commission which would have brought disgrace on his dynasty and throne and lowered the position of other ruling princes also. Whatever people might say about his personal character the Maharaja's views were nationalistic and he was a true and fearless servant of the country. He had become an eye-sore to the bureaucracy on account of his glorious patriotism and commendable self-respect. By compelling the Maharaja to abdicate under this pretext Lord Reading has placed a crown on the edifice of his 'just' administration. The Garhwali regrets the Maharaja's abdication and says that the Maharaja has acted rashly in doing so. He ought to have done his best to vindicate his innocence. If he had faced the situation bravely the officials who are not well disposed towards ruling chiefs would have been discouraged from acting against them in future. The position of ruling chiefs is becoming precarious every day. The majority of the political agents do not treat the states well. The Government ought to accord proper treatment to the ruling chiefs and have regard for their dignity and prestige. The Rahnuma says that the Maharaja of Indore has paid the price of his infatuation for Mumtaz and the blood of Bawla has been avenged. The Indore affair following so soon after the Nabha incident should induce the sluggards among the ruling chiefs to set their house in order as the enlightened princes have no fear from the interference of Government. A writer in the Haqiqat justifies Government's attitude and remarks that the Maharaja abdicated for fear of the ordeal of a commission. The Maharaja's action was wise and other ruling chiefs should also reform themselves so that British Indians may not have occasion to criticize their actions. The Oudh Akhbar also commends the wisdom of the Maharaja in saving himself from disgrace and worry and his subjects needless trouble by not appearing before the Commission. His abdication will have served its purpose if it acts as a deterrent for other ruling chiefs. The Medina characterizes the abdication as another dark chapter in the history of the deeds of Lord Reading which has opened and closed with extremely unpleasant events.

Indian States.

The Haqiqat criticizes the "dangerous" attitude of the Government of India towards the Nizam and says that any action taken against His Exalted Highness will be deeply resented by Muslim India. Points of difference can be easily settled by friendly negotiations but if, of course, Government wants to interfere in the internal affairs of the state it is a different matter. Such an attitude will however alienate not only the ruling chiefs but the general body of Muslims also. The Aziz-i-Hind is pained at the stricture of the Madras High Court on the Nizam for having decreed a suit which was time-barred. The law of limitation is inequitable and the Nizam showed the highest sense of justice in decreeing the suit. Such criticisms lead the people to suspect that the Indian states are rankling like thorns in the eyes of the British. Coming so soon after the Indore affair this incident shows that British officers are everywhere bent on finding fault with Indian states. Disaffection among Indian states is undesirable as it is they that stand in good stead in times of need.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Najat deplores the baneful turn recently taken by the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements. Their avowed object of religious and social reform has been practically abandoned and they have assumed a decidedly militant aspect. The insistence of leaders of the status of Swami Shraddhanand on physical culture shows that they want to create a fighting class among the Hindus for the communal war they want to wage to establish Hindu supremacy. Such an attitude of the Hindu majority towards the Muslim minority is contemptible. If this attitude persists among the Hindus and they continue to invite independent rulers like the Maharaja of Nepal to preside over the Hindu Maha Sabha, the Afghan bogey invented by official brains to scare away cowards may be replaced by the Nepal bogey and alienate Muslims from the national movement for freedom. Muslims should be wide awake and should never regard the enemy as contemptible. The Medina urges the formation of a Muslim council party which should strive for Indian freedom first and Muslim protection next. It should not fall out with the Hindus to please the English and should not become a victim to official intrigues or be influenced to depart from its principles by any temptation or deceit. The Muslim council party formed in Bengal deserves support but it should be borne in mind that there should be no conflict with the Swaraj party so long as it does not go deliberately against Muslim interests. There should be no combination and quarrels for gaining leadership. There should be studious avoidance of flattery of Government officials and communal discord should not be encouraged. Will other provinces also follow the lead of Bengal? In another article the same paper complains of Hindu vindictiveness at Rewari in the matter of the arrest of Muslim rioters and wonders whether the fact of Justice Shadi Lal being a resident of the place and his relations being in power there will make justice dearer for Muslims. Will the Muslim vakils of Gurgaon come to the rescue of their afflicted co-religionists? The Aiena interprets the resolution of the Cawnpore Municipal Board against the slaughter of milch cattle as an attempt to interfere with the religious sacrifices of Muslims and to kill the important meat and hide trade which is in their hands.

Muslim affairs.

The Muslim Herald complains of inadequate representation of Muslims in various Government departments and as an instance gives figures showing that out of 49 posts in the Land Record department at Hardoi only four are filled by Muslims. This, the paper contends, conclusively proves that for a long time to come Indian Muslims will not find themselves safe unless their rights and privileges are guaranteed to them by an act of legislature. The paper expects that the Hon'ble Home Member will take proper steps and see that the Muslim is not treated as a step-child.

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province.

The Nizam-i-Alam urges Muslims all over India to meet the strong Hindu opposition to the Frontier Reforms resolution by raising their voice in its favour. The Hindus want to predominate in most of the provinces on the ground of numerical superiority and in the rest on the pretext of needing protection against the Muslim majority. Such an attitude is narrow-minded and selfish and is bound to fill Muslim minds with misgivings regarding conditions under Swaraj. Muslims should, therefore, ask for separate representation in the elective bodies and services in accordance with their numerical proportion. It is ridiculous on the part of the Hindus to argue that the Reforms would enable the frontiermen to league themselves with invaders and thus imperil India. Are not the reformed councils merely debating societies and do not the local bodies eschew politics? The Reforms will also mean economy and the fact of Hindus paying 86 per cent. of the income-tax strengthens the case for the introduction of Reforms as this shows that the Hindus monopolize all avenues of income and the Reforms are badly needed for the uplift of the submerged Muslims.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an editorial note deploring communal tension and pleading for real harmony the Muslim Herald writes:—"India shall be free the day she is united. To a Muslim freedom should be dearer than to another. The Quran does not even contemplate a life of subjection for the Musalmans. A Muslim is not born to be a slave. No provision is made for him for that life. All the more reason then for him to strive for freedom."

The Andamans policy.

The Hamdam characterizes the Government of India's scheme for the colonization of the Andamans as a huge piece of camouflage which has probably been devised to drive the Moplahs away from their homes. Methods familiar during recruiting days are being employed to induce people to go to the Andamans and it is now not even necessary to convict a man to send him to the Andamans. No mention has been made in the official communiqué about the rights of the colonists and it is therefore feared that Indians will be there as coolies and will be worse off there than in India. This new device of slavery is being contrived only with a view to make the Andamans a calling station for the Singapore naval base. This is highly reprehensible from the point of view of Asiatic morality and it is to be seen how far a policy based on such unethical principles succeeds.

Foreign affairs.

The Muslim Herald bitterly complains of "the mischievous and unholy plans" of European powers against Turkish rights and independence and says: "Turkey shall fight till its last man drops down in defence of its honour and self-respect and Europe knows it. No single power can oppose the might of Turkey; hence this unholy combination against it, hence this devilish scheme of fabricated constitutionality known by the name of the League of Nations. Open, daylight robbery was not possible and therefore this machine was devised for political theft." The Hamdam says that British solicitude for negotiations with the Turks on the Mosul question even after the decision of the League of Nations, exposes the weakness of the English case. The Angora politicians may, however, be trusted to withstand the onslaughts of British diplomacy and the various missions sent by the English to Angora are bound to end in failure. The Sarfuraz publishes a letter addressed by some prominent Indian Shia alims to the Shah of Persia appealing to him to oust Ibn Saud from the Hedjaz, to hand over the holy land to the Hedjazis and to arrange for the unrestricted performance of their religious rites by Muslims in general and Shias in particular. It is complained that Ibn Saud forces his beliefs on others, interferes with the religious freedom of other Muslim sects, and demolishes domes. His declaration of sovereignty over the Hedjaz has alienated even his khilafatist and Wahabi partisans in India. As the Haj season is approaching and the British Government has refused to interfere, the help of His Majesty Reza Khan is urgently needed. The editor supports this letter and asks for the help of the Persian press in the matter. The Medina is perturbed at the news of tension between Afghanistan and Russia over the disputed frontier island. The Amir has been most zealously working for the welfare of his people and it is to be hoped that he will be spared the trial of a war. The Najat holds that the completion of the proposed Russian railway to Quetta via Herat and Kandahar will constitute a serious menace to British imperialism, as the intercourse of the Bolsheviks with the frontier tribes will spread in their country the poison which Britain is so valiantly trying to combat in various parts of the Empire. All the advantages sought for British imperialism and prestige in the Khyber railway will then be lost and the comfort and prosperity of the Central Asian people will be greatly advanced. In another article the same paper interprets the recent Afghan-Bolshevik alliance as a sign of impending trouble between Afghanistan and Britain. This sudden solicitude of Russia for the arming and financing of Afghanistan sounds more like a challenge to Britain for a trial of strength in Central Asia. The return of the British ambassador at Kabul to India to discuss Anglo-Afghan relations shows that they are becoming involved.

The Swaraj party.

In the course of two leading articles headed "Avoid the Coming Storm" the Muslim Herald says: The Herald does not support the policy of the Swarajists, but it wants to show that it is the Government that is primarily responsible for the general Swarajist walk-out. If the Government continues to persist in its heedless policy, there will happen events in comparison to which the non-cooperation movement will shrink into mere insignificance. The Pratap expresses satisfaction at the Swarajist walk-out which it regards as an indication of the inability of Indians to endure any longer the present intolerable situation which has shut all the doors of advancement to them and says: If we ignore the Councils and the Assembly and exert all our power in mobilizing and strengthening our men, those who do not listen to us at present will be compelled to allow us passage for advancement. The Abhyudaya condemns the Swarajist walk-out as an electioneering move and says the party is resorting to a double-dealing policy of uttering co-operation and non-cooperation in the same breath. The paper is of opinion that the talk of non-cooperation in the existing circumstances of the country is suicidal. The Aj justifies the action of the Swarajists and says: Government is getting unjust day by day; it is trampling on public opinion and exulting over the weakness of Indians. This evil cannot be remedied through the councils. Its antidote is to be found only in the soul-force of the people. The paper is deeply grieved over Mr. Patel's statement modifying his previous remarks in connexion with the Swarajist walk-out from the Legislative Assembly and says: In view of the abuse of their special powers by the bureaucracy the President of the Assembly would have been justified in exercising his powers in case Government introduced controversial measures in the Assembly. The Congress should now endeavour to secure the return of nationalists in such strength that they may either be able to compel the bureaucracy during the three years' session of the next legislatures to come to terms with them regarding the future administration of the country or bring the work of the legislatures to a standstill. In another article the paper remarks that by the withdrawal of the Swarajists from the councils the bureaucracy has been exposed in its true colours. They have shown to the world that the British statesmen only make excuses and do not want to grant Swaraj to India. The world should know that Indians do not like the existing system of Government, that the administration is not carried on according to their wishes, that the reforms are a mere sham, and that a handful of British rulers govern the country autocratically and imprison patriots without trial. The Sada-i-Muslim asserts that the Swaraj Party had succeeded to a certain extent in its destructive programme and regrets that when it embarked on its constructive course and formulated the national demands it was met with blank refusal by Government. The Swaraj Party, however, made the mistake of its life in losing touch with the country and allowing self-seeking persons to mislead the people and promote communal strife and thus encourage Government to reject the national demands. The Government has not adopted a sensible attitude. In spite of the iron grip of the bureaucracy the revolutionary movement has not declined in Bengal and has even spread to other provinces. Government should therefore ponder again that the yearning for freedom that has sprung in the country cannot now be repressed by force. If Government does not take heed even now it will soon have to regret its actions. The Hamdam also approves of the action of the Swarajists and says that they are needed more by the country than by the councils. The occasion demands that those who have made concrete sacrifices in the national cause and denying themselves comforts, luxuries and avenues of income and donning coarse khaddar have cheerfully borne all the rigours of jail life should once more convey the message of unity to the nation and should strive to bring to the straight road of freedom and fraternity those who have been led astray by the heat of communal passion. The Medina extols the patriotism and regard for national prestige shown by the Swarajists. They repeatedly offered trust and co-operation to the Government of India but from Lord Birkenhead's utterance down to the inaugural address of the Viceroy they were met only with threats. Justice, concessions, peace, friendship, kindness, removal of racial inequality and avoid ance of abuse of the law were all refused and Indians were only told to bend in submission and to ascend the scaffold like captive criminals. The legislative bodies have now lost their representative character and the reforms have now no legs to stand upon. Still more important and welcome, however, is the determination of these fearless national soldiers to take up the work of national education, popularization of khaddar, Hindu-Muslim fraternization, village organization and electioneering. The final weapon of the Congress is civil disobedience and if instead of entering the councils it had during the last three years sincerely striven for the aforesaid objects the goal would have surely been nearer. The secession has been a most important, sensible and far-sighted act on the part of the Swarajists. The Najat commends the walk-out after every avenue of honourable co-operation had been explored without success. This action will considerably improve the chances of the Swarajists winning the ensuing elections and then bending Government to their will. The election campaign will rouse the slumbering forces of non-cooperation which will be revived in their full youth and vigour and will humble the pride of their opponents and the Government. The Oudh Akhbar deplores the Swarajist secession in the United Provinces, as it believes that the presence of the Swarajists in the council exercised a salutary check on the activities of Government officials, ministers, nominated members and their fearless criticisms kept them on the right path.

The Indian Budget.

The Shakti says that it is a downright injustice to spend 41 per cent. of the total income over the army even in times of peace. In other countries the taxes which were imposed during the war have been abolished but the despotic bureaucracy of India neither reduces taxes nor curtails its extravagant expenditure under the weight of which the indigent and dumb people are being crushed. Another specimen of its solicitude for the well-being of the people is its refusal to stop the opium trade for the sake of an income of two crores of rupees despite the opposition of the whole country. A comparison between the parsimony with which beneficent departments are treated and the extravagance shown in connexion with the military and administrative departments clearly reveals the mentality of the bureaucracy. The Pratap remarks that despite Sir Basil Blackett's exultation over the Budget the people cannot now be caught in the magic snare of figures. The paper complains that the salt-tax has not been reduced and the poor country has not been relieved of the burden of any of the taxes.

United Provinces Budget.

The Leader is dissatisfied with the Hon'ble the Finance Member's reply to the demand of several "prominent" members of the local Legislative Council for financial assistance to the Benares and Aligarh universities and says: Although the universities are all-India institutions they are rendering an important service to the province and a great moral responsibility rests on the local Government of helping these remarkable monuments of non-official efforts. It would cause universal satisfaction if it accedes to the clearly and forcibly expressed views of the non-official members. Commenting on the provincial budget for 1926-27 the Shakti compares the expenditure incurred over education in Japan. which is equal to an Indian province in size, with that in the United Provinces and says that while the object of education in Japan is to turn out patriotic and self-respecting citizens, in India it is to render Indians infirm, spiritless and full of vices and thus to keep them fettered in the chains of subjection. In Japan a sum of four crores has been added simply for the enhancement of the salaries of teachers but in the United Provinces the sum of four crores, seven lakhs and a half has been allotted for all the transferred subjects. It was necessary to reduce taxes and pay greater attention to education, public health and good administration, but why should the Government care to do all this? The Mumtaz regrets that there were no grants for Muslim institutions and libraries in the provincial budget and hopes that Muslim M. L. Cs. will safeguard Muslim rights.

Political propaganda.

The Pratap publishes an article in the course of which the writer, a Punjabi youth, sympathizes with the six "brave" Babbar Akalis who were hanged in the Lahore Central Jail on the morning of the Holi and deploring the indifference with which the people of Lahore treated this incident says: Though they were misguided or fanatical they were after all fearless patriots. All that they did was for the sake of this unfortunate country. They could not put up with injustice. They could not see the fallen condition of the country. They could not bear to see the atrocities committed on the weak. They had spirit and a feeling heart and even if they happened to commit any reprehensible deed they are worthy of being worshipped for the courage and eagerness they displayed in sacrificing their lives for the sake of the country. The Aj writes: The Criminal Investigation department officials are responsible for a number of crimes in the country. Their prospects and promotion depend on the spread of anarchy and revolution in the country and they are always on the look-out for these. They treat everybody as a revolutionary and for this reason they try to know the names and addresses of all those whom they come across. They have ample time at their disposal and if during this time they do not harass the public they have nothing else to do. The Criminal Investigation department officials cannot commit such reprehensible acts in any other civilized country in the world. They have sufficiently damaged the reputation of the Government whose welfare, therefore, lies only in keeping a strict watch over them. The Bharat Dharma compares the administration of justice during the time of the Peshwas with that under the "British Bureaucracy" and says: During the time of the Peshwas decisions were not based on the concocted reports of the police or on the arguments of the vakils as is the case now. The courts of these days are a farce. Proceeding, the paper refers to the complaints of ill-treatment of political prisoners made in Colonel Mulvany's letter to the Inspector-General of Prisons, Bengal, and says: This is a specimen of justice of the British Government which boasts of being progressive. We are experiencing the British ex-Chief Justice Lord Reading's devotion to justice. Far from administering justice can this even protect humanity? What a difference between the liberal justice of Ram Shastri (the chief judge of the Peshwas) and the disgusting cruelty of the present bureaucracy! The Vartman is glad to note that having found the councils to be useless, the workers are devoting attention to village organization. If the scheme prepared by the secretary of the Deshbandhu village organization fund is adopted there will be no difficulty in achieving the object in view. The Aj writes: Taking into consideration all the facts we certainly support the entry of Congress candidates into the councils but at the same time it is our definite conviction that our chief work lies outside the councils. We should work among the people, awaken them and prepare them for civil disobedience. When we know that the greatest sacrifices will have to be made for swaraj and that the foreign domination cannot be got rid of without special sacrifices we must make civil disobedience possible. Civil disobedience will have to be practised, otherwise it is vain to talk of swaraj. In another article the paper counsels Hindus to deal considerately with the demand of Buddhists regarding the Buddha Gaya temple and to make concessions to them, as such a friendly attitude on their part will greatly help in the establishment of an Asiatic Federation. Referring to the remark of an official member in the Legislative Assembly in answer to Pandit Moti Lal's query that Colonel Mulvany was a liar, the Aj remarks that rulers can do anything to maintain their hold on the country. They have no principles. They have no regard for justice or injustice, truth or untruth. Their only principle is to maintain their hold on the country. They, therefore, make out even their countrymen to be liars and suppressing facts and giving currency to falsehoods pose to be truthful. It is indeed a sin to support a government run in this manner on injustice and falsehood.

The Hindu Maha Sabha.

The Pioneer writes: It were difficult to deny to the President of this year's conference the possession of a breadth of vision and a progressive realism, which if followed up in the manner indicated in certain passages of his address, should eventually have the effect of strengthening the position of Hinduism as a vital force in the development of a national spirit in India. Yet that address also bore unmistakably the mark of a communal partisanship robust to the point of aggressiveness. The Leader writes: The address of Raja Narendra Nath as president of the Delhi session of the Hindu Maha Sabha offers a strong contrast to that delivered by Sir Abdur Rahim at the Aligarh session of the All-India Muslim League. It was characterized by a commendable breadth of outlook and spirit of nationalism. The Muslim Herald writes: The speech delivered by the chairman of the Hindu Sabha at Delhi is illuminating. It reveals the mentality of that tribe that is organizing itself under the banner of the Sabha. The paper bitterly criticizes the views and activities of Messrs. Malaviya and Lajpat Rai and Swami Sraddhanand and regrets that the Afghan bogey has affected Raja Narendra Nath also. In the opinion of the paper the Raja has played the role of an Imperialist to perfection. The Aj says that though the decision of the Hindu Maha Sabha regarding its participation in the next elections is in the nature of a compromise, yet it will go a great deal towards preventing confusion in the next elections. We, however, are opposed on principle to the participation of the Hindu Sabha in the elections. It has no political creed of its own and cannot therefore consistently take part in politics.

Indians in the colonies.

The Leader writes: The draft notification issued specifying the terms and conditions on which emigration to British Guiana for the purpose of unskilled work shall be lawful does not mention what civic rights the emigrants after they are settled there will enjoy. Have the Government secured any guarantees regarding their political rights, or will they be mere hewers of wood and drawers of water with no voice in the administration of the country? The Aj says that the object of the Colour Bar Bill is to prevent the non-whites of South Africa from making progress in arts and industry so that they may only serve as labourers and the whites may rule over them. Such a mean, reprehensible and diabolical attempt to prevent self-improvement will not be found in the history of mankind. This means that the Boers have made up their mind to keep the natives of Africa as helots or if possible to exterminate their race. Despite such devilish acts they maintain that their object is to "civilize" the natives. There is a limit to shamelessness but these colonial whites have transgressed even that limit. Races are being exterminated and yet the League of Nations and the civilized world look on passively. The rulers of the Empire who profess to be the guardians of humanity witness such hellish deeds in their own empire but do not make the least protest against them. If this state of things persists the extirpation of the natives of Africa will be inevitable. Al Adl points out that the South African anti-Asiatic Bill has roused resentment even in Afghanistan as is evidenced by an article in the Aman-i-Afghan (Kabul) and urges the whole of Asia to voice its protest against the Bill.

United Provinces District Boards Primary Education Bill.

The Muslim press continues to criticize the attitude of Hindu members of the Legislative Council towards the amendment regarding the introduction of religious education. Al Bashir says that it was a shame for the United Provinces Council to have passed the United Provinces District Boards Primary Education Bill in the absence of the Muslim members. They should resign if His Excellency the Governor does not refuse his assent to the Bill and should again seek election from their constituencies and move an amendment to the Bill in the council and if it is again rejected they should go back to their constituents and the result will be that the Reforms Act will be amended. Further, they should oppose all proposals emanating from Hindus, whether Liberals or Swarajists, and then force them to seek a compromise. Muslim lawyers should also consider whether this law passed in the absence of the Muslim representatives and in spite of their protests is binding on Muslims and whether compulsory education in religious institutions would not constitute an interference with religious freedom. Anyway, neither the Hindu M. L. Cs. nor the Minister of Education can be congratulated on the extraordinary haste with which this Bill was passed. If the Muslim members pursue the matter to its constitutional limits both of these will have to regret their attitude. Al Adl appeals to Hindus to give proof of their generosity and toleration by allowing religious education for Muslims.

Muslim affairs.

In the course of an article entitled "Muslim Soldiers and Statesmen" the Muslim Herald writes: In spite of its fertility in resourceful men and wily, unscrupulous politicians Europe does not possess one so gifted as a Mustafa Kamal, a Gazi Abdul Karim, an Amir Amanullah or an Ibn-i-Saud . . . Against them was an unholy combination of intriguing and unscrupulous politicians, hired and dishonourable soldiers, scheming, wily statesmen, crafty and godless capitalists and an unholy obdurate oligarchy that prided itself on its unholier designs against the rising Islamic countries of all the five continents. Amir Amanullah dreams of a pan-Islamic revival. Who knows he might succeed in combining Turkey, Egypt, Arabia and Morocco and then where is the force that can resist this combination? Europe trembles at the thought of such an alliance. In an article headed "Life of Bondage and Slavery" the paper deplores the disorganization in the Muslim world and urges Muslims to devise some effective means of maintaining their individuality. It says in conclusion:—"There are occasions in the lives of nations and people when, to put a stop to an unchecked process of dissolution and decay, courting death is considered better and more honourable than clinging to a shameful life—life of unsanctioned and unholy bondage and slavery." The Ittihad is of opinion that the Waqfs Act of 1923 will prevent the abuse of waqf properties by mutavallis and urges that the accounts of the waqfs relating to any sect or community should be published in the papers so that people may be able to judge of their correctness.

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province.

Al Bashir points out that the Hindu members of the Assembly were simply giving away the case for swaraj when they urged that the Reforms should not be extended because of the illiteracy and communal strife prevailing there. If the logic of the Hindu leaders is to be accepted then why not that of the Europeans and Anglo-Indians also? After all why should the Reforms be now continued in provinces in which the Muslims are in a minority? While Mr. Malaviya talked so glibly of Kohat and Peshawar why did he forget Arrah, Shahabad, Ajodhya and Katarpur where barbarous atrocities were practised on Muslims? Why were the Reforms introduced in Bihar and the United Provinces? Is it not a shame that Muslim lives and property are endangered for the cutting of some branches of pipal and for the sacrifice of cows and the Reforms still continue in these provinces? The debate has at least exposed the mentality of the Hindu leaders and Mr. Malaviya has been laid bare in his true colours by his advocacy of the new-fangled nationalist party. This will at least afford young Muslims an opportunity to press their communal claims boldly.

The question of capital of United Provinces.

The Leader writes: The citizens of Allahabad in general and the municipal board in particular will be interested to know that section 133 of the South Africa Act constituting the Union provided statutory compensation to the abandoned colonial capital. . . . Is not the municipal board of Allahabad entitled to compensation for similar losses due to the removal to Lucknow of the Public Works department (Buildings and Roads and Irrigation), Public Health department and Police department Secretariats, the office of the Legal Remembrancer and sundry offices which constitute the incidents of a capital, the residing of the Governor, members of the Executive Council, Ministers, Secretaries to Government and Heads of departments away from here for the major part of the year, and the holding of council sittings entirely in another city?

The Reforms.

Referring to the debate in the Legislative Assembly on the constitutional issue the Leader writes: The speeches of Liberal and Independent leaders in the Assembly showed that the progressive constitutionalists in the house who represent the sober and thoughtful elements in the country are not less dissatisfied with the Government policy than are the Swarajists. And is any evidence needed for conceding to an awakened people their just right of administering their own affairs and for putting an end to a system which owing to its irresponsible character, is a growing source of irritation and unrest?

The Allahabad High Court.

The Leader criticizes the speeches of those members of the council who urged an enlargement of the jurisdiction of the Oudh Chief Court and says: The argument urged by Maulvi Fasih-ud-din for increasing the jurisdiction of the Chief Court at the expense of the Allahabad High Court was on the face of it absurd and we hope that if any proposal is again put forward for reducing the jurisdiction of the Allahabad High Court it will meet with strenuous opposition.

Foreign Affairs.

In the course of a series of articles headed "Indians in Iraq: Discarded Tools of British Imperialism," published in the Muslim Herald, the writer complains that the plight of Indians who were sent for service under the Iraq Government is growing from bad to worse and that many of them are now absolutely stranded. Commenting on the Geneva "fiasco" the Aj says:—The Locarno good-will is artificial. The European powers indulge in intrigue even now as they used to do before the war. Intrigue has now entered even the portals of the League of Nations. The League is unanimous on the destruction of non-white nations, but when it comes to a European question it becomes a storm centre of intrigue. The very word "peace" has a bad odour in the mouth of imperialists like Britain, France and Italy. Without a universal revolution there can be no peace in the world in the existing situation. The Oudh Akhbar sees no prospect of a compromise between Turkey and Britain on the Mosul question and thinks that Turkey will refuse to bow to the decision of the League of Nations which she knows is being controlled by Britain. The Medina charges Britain with unjustly occupying Turkish territory in Mosul and says that the decision of the shroud-stealers (League of Nations) giving Mosul to Iraq and the mandate over Iraq to Britain has made matters worse. The Turks are bound to draw the sword in defence of Mosul. The Mashriq advises Britain not to take part in any war between the Balkan States and Turkey, but to try to solve the Mosul question amicably as Turkey can depend on Russian aid in the event of hostilities.

The Hindu Maha Sabha.

The proceedings of the Hindu Maha Sabha have received prominent attention in the Press and have evoked a good deal of criticism even from the Hindu papers. The Signal writes:—The great political propaganda known as the All-India Hindu Maha Sabha held at Delhi on March 15 has proved almost a fiasco. Great hopes ended in the bursting of the bubble. Representatives of almost all Hindu newspapers who were present at the Delhi Maha Sabha testified almost unanimously to the fact that the proceedings ended without bringing satisfaction to either the advanced Hindus or the orthodox section. The language of the resolution on Council election proves without doubt that Pandit Malaviya's attempt to please all parties has pleased none, as the resolution itself is a mixture of contradictions and inconsistencies. The Indian Daily Telegraph has nothing to say against the attitude of the Maha Sabha regarding social questions, but it does not approve of its decision regarding participation in elections. "The compromise resolution is not straightforward. It is forked and we are afraid that it will be a ready instrument in the hands of designing persons for exploiting an illiterate and gullible rank and file. The Maha Sabha has no business to enter the election campaign when there are separate electorates for Hindus and Musalmans." The Sainik says that the proceedings of the Maha Sabha bore the impress of the narrow self-interest which centuries of slavery have produced among the Hindus. Every item in the programme revealed personal and communal self-interest, envy and bigotry. Shuddhi and Sangathan are the quintessence of Hindu religion, but the proceedings behind the scenes were not calculated to accomplish these aims. We are, however, still confident that some day the Hindu community will yet rise and rouse the whole world from slumber. The Abhyudaya commends Raja Narendra Nath's presidential address as containing a proper exposition of the Hindu problems and says that despite unfavourable signs and bickerings between Sanatanists and Arya Samajists the Sabha did not break up and has to-day grown more vigorous than ever before. The paper supports the compromise on the question of the participation of the Sabha in the next elections and says that the Hindus will be losers if they, too, will not be ready like the Muslims to protect their interests. The country can derive no benefit from the election of persons who are not moved by Hindu ideals and sentiments and do not raise their voice for the protection of Hindu interests for fear of offending Muslims. The Najat deplores the decision of the Hindu Sabha regarding the next Council elections as this will encourage the discord-breeding Shuddhi and Sangathan movements. This exposes Hindu solicitude for unity. In the course of an article headed "The terrible spectacle of Hindu mentality: The poisonous outpourings of Hindu leaders: A determined effort to insult and disgrace Muslims" the Medina strongly criticizes the speeches of Raja Narendra Nath and Swamis Shraddhanand and Satyadeva and says:—The Pandit of Allahabad (Mr. Malaviya) was the most blood-thirsty individual in this Hindu gathering. He not only fell foul of the Muslims, but also prejudiced the cause of Hindu freedom. The question arises whether the fire-spittings of Swami Satyadeva, Permanand, Moonje, Malaviya and Shraddhanand; these poisonous utterances, these anti-Muslim activities and the flames of fire of the bigotry of Malaviya, which flare up in the shape of the remarks that he regards chamars as better than Muslims and Englishmen, will not open the eyes of Muslims. Has the religious sentiment of Muslims become extinguished? Will the nation and community which came to create unity in this world remain so bound to-day in the chains of discord and sectarianism that it will so dumbly listen to abuses when opposed to these dhoti prasads (a contemptuous term for Hindus—implying physical inferiority owing to their wearing loose loin cloths)? Will the nation which taught the lesson of morality and humanity to the world take no lesson from the verbal oppressions and disgraceful acts of these brutes? Oh slaves of the Prophet, if you value honour, if you want to live with self-respect, then do reply to these prattlings. Decide on Islamic unity. Learn to cultivate sympathy towards one another. Sacrifice yourselves for God and His Prophet. Leap into the arena of action for the sake of Islam, risking your necks. God will help us.

The Swaraj party.

The Leader criticizes at length Pandit Moti Lal Nehru's presidential address at the Benares District Conference and refutes the arguments he adduced in support of the Swarajist withdrawal from the legislatures. It says:—If the withdrawal conveys any message to the people, it is that they should not trust the Swarajists for protecting and promoting their interests and that they cannot commit a greater mistake than in relying on those who have followed an exceedingly elusive policy and who have come to believe that the country exists for the party and not vice versâ. The Hindi Kesari says that the Councils can do no good unless public opinion is sufficiently awakened to support the representatives of the people. The Swaraj party should no longer think of entering the Councils again, but should betake itself to villages for organization and spread of education. The Shakti publishes an article by Durga Dutt Pande who welcomes the Swarajists back among the people and says that their withdrawal shows that they have discovered the delusive nature of the legislatures. If they want to make India free they should devote themselves whole-heartedly to the propagation of khaddar and charkha. The Bharat Dharma wonders what effect the "show" of Swarajist withdrawal from the legislatures will produce on the bureaucracy. Responsive cooperation is the only easy way to prepare the people for civil disobedience by making the best use of the Councils. The Aj urges that if the voters think that the bureaucracy will not grant swaraj without being compelled to do so, they should return the Swarajists to the Councils in overwhelming majority this time. To-day Lord Reading having trampled upon India is returning to England triumphantly and Lord Irwin is coming here to follow up his policy. The voters should bear this in mind at the time of election, for it is they who will after all have to reply to this. They will, therefore, do well not to give votes to the advocates of mendicancy so that begging at least may be stopped in the Councils. The Medina approves of the Swarajist exodus and urges that the constructive programme should now be vigorously worked so that the country may develop sufficient internal strength and the Government may be forced to concede its demands. The Oudh Punch has a cartoon caricaturing Lord Reading's efforts to force cooperation down the unwilling throat of the Swaraj party. The Government of India is advised to try some new potion as the country is sick of this panacea of cooperation.

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province.

Commenting on the debate in the Legislative Assembly on Syed Murtaza Husain's resolution the Leader strongly supports Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer's views and says :—The impression left on our mind by the speeches of official spokesmen is that while they were anxious to please the Muslims and made light of the objections of the Hindus based on the merits of the question, they shared their apprehensions. We need hardly say that we are not opposed to the introduction of such measures of constitutional reform in the Frontier Province as may be found suitable having regard to the peculiar conditions prevailing there and to the bearing of its problems on the rest of India. The Muslim Herald congratulates the supporters of Mr. Murtaza's resolution and says that the arguments of the opponents were preposterous. The Pathan can be trusted in private as well as public life. If we can once convince him of our honesty of purpose, he will continue to be our fast friend through thick and thin. He will prove our best friend and ally in our domestic quarrels and in the event of foreign aggressions. Let us win his friendship by advocating what is just—the extension of the Reforms to his province. Any other policy will be fatal. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—Now that the resolution has been passed it behoves the people of the province to work the reforms in perfect harmony and evoke applause from friends and foes alike. Let the Hindus and Muslims equally avail themselves of this opportunity and usher in the piping days of peace in the province. The Vartman strongly criticizes the arguments of those who supported Syed Murtaza Husain's resolution and says that the extension of Reforms to the Frontier will increase the helplessness and misfortunes of the Hindus and events like those which occurred at Kohat and Dera Ismail Khan will become more frequent for the fomenters of strife will be backed in the Council. The Frontier Province will thus become a fresh arena of strife. The Anand remarks that if the Government evinces zeal in its policy of pleasing the Muslims, it will not delay in giving effect to the resolution. The Hamdam in welcoming the passing of the resolution appeals to both Hindus and Muslims to forget certain unpleasant features of the debate and press Government to enforce it early and thus right a grievous wrong to the Frontier people.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an article under the heading "Forgotten Holi" the Lokmat writes :—If those who shed tears on remembering the cruel treatment accorded to Prahlad compare the government of Hiranyakashyapa with that of the present bureaucracy they will find very little difference between the two. But they are silent because they do not possess any trace of bravery. In the days of non-cooperation hundreds of Prahlads went to jail smilingly, thousands received bullets in the Jallianwala-bagh by baring their breasts, thousands of mothers lost their sons and hundreds became widows, but we do not feel the least shame because we are cowards. Does it become us to dance and make merry while the black paint of subjection is painted on our faces? The sacred commemoration is in fact the commemoration of a political revolution. . . Let us try to celebrate the true commemoration of Holi and thus make our lives useful. In the course of an article under the heading "War between gods and demons" the Shakti writes :—A war between gods and demons is going on in India to-day. On the one side there is the cry for justice and on the other the bludgeon of injustice. On the one side the Indian nation wants to practise Satyagraha for achieving its national rights, and on the other the alien bureaucracy is standing with the sword of repression. We want to maintain our human existence in our country, and they are anxious to maintain their diabolical authority over us. Entreaties and supplications have had no effect on the heart of the bureaucracy The Mahatma's weapon of non-cooperation and Swarajists' irrefutable arguments, threats and efforts for reconciliation have in a way failed to produce any effect. The bureaucracy does not want to budge even an inch. What is to be done now? That which has always been done. With the help of your penance awaken the slumbering Indian nation which is like the mighty form of God and worship Chandi (the goddess of war) in the shape of the popular power. You can win this war only with their help. The Aj writes :—So far Lord Irwin has given no inkling of his policy except that he will follow the footsteps of Lord Reading. If this is so, we, the patriots, too should be on our guard. There has not been a Viceroy during the last sixty years who has so injured India as Lord Reading. Lord Irwin too is coming to keep up this state of things. Shall we not even now give up the hope of obtaining swaraj by mendicancy as an idle dream? There is no doubt that Lord Reading humiliated India, trampled upon her holy aspirations and made her future still more gloomy. It is for this reason that his countrymen are lavishly praising him and his motherland is eagerly looking forward to welcome him. But, alas, will not even Indians shed tears once on the condition of their unfortunate country; will they not unite for once to strive to break her chains? The same paper refers to the hope expressed by Sir L. W. Ivans in Parliament that British troops in India would not be reduced any further and says that in reality there is no need for the presence of these troops in this country which only proclaims the existence of mutual distrust between India and Britain. When there is already a plethora of British officers in the Indian army, why are we saddled with the burden of expenditure by sending for further troops from Britain?

The United Provinces budget.

The Hindi Kesari holds that the budget cannot be said to be satisfactory as the allotment for the transferred subjects is very small and nothing has been done for villages and industrial education and for the removal of unemployment among the educated. The condition of education in the province is very deplorable yet no step has been taken to improve it. The Shankar remarks:—Many items of expenditure are simply forced upon the province. The salary of the Governor is even higher than that of the Secretary of State for India and the province has uselessly to bear the burden of Commissioners. The money can be properly utilized only when the Government is indigenous. The Hamdam joins issue with the Local Government on its contention that the two communal universities of these provinces should look for funds to the Imperial exchequer, and points out that if they have to close their doors for lack of funds the burden of the education of the ousted students will fall on the other semi-official universities of the province. The Finance Member should therefore provide adequate grants-in-aid in the supplementary estimates out of the remissions recently made in the provincial contributions.

Indian States.

One Nand Kunwar Sharma writing in the Aj says:—Although Indian States are said to be allies of British Government and claim equality of status, yet their position is no better than that of the "king in the chess board." The Indian chiefs who are the real friends of the British Government always remain friends, but those who rule according to their own will have either to be crushed in the mill-stone of maladministration or conceive an aversion to the burden of rule. This and nothing else is the policy of the British Government towards these so-called independent Indian States. The decision about the Bhopal succession has been greeted with a chorus of approval by the Urdu press. The Dilchasp regrets that the Government of India had so far been opposed to the heirship of an educated and enlightened prince like Hamidullah and is glad to find that he has after all been approved as the successor to the gaddi of Bhopal. His ability eminently fits him for this high trust. The Zulqarnain congratulates Lord Reading on the far-sightedness and wisdom shown by him in ultimately accepting Prince Hamidullah as the heir-apparent of Bhopal. This was what Islamic law, the customs of the State and the wishes of the Begum and the people of Bhopal and British India demanded. The Mashriq also commends the Viceroy's action and observes that it would have been outrageous if in spite of the loyal services of the Bhopal State Prince Hamidullah had not been designated as heir-apparent. A number of other papers also write to the same effect. Reports about strained relations between the Nizam and the Government of India are causing considerable disquietude in the Muslim Press. The Zulqarnain says that if the report in the Riasat about the Nizam having been summoned to Delhi to settle disputes about the smaller States under his control is true, it shows that the propaganda pursued against him by his ill-wishers is bearing fruit. It is, however, to be hoped that Lord Reading will take no step on the eve of his departure which might create misunderstanding. The Haqiqat complains that a vigorous semi-official propaganda is being carried on against the Nizam with a view to discredit him owing to his strained relations with the Resident. The unbecoming strictures passed on him in the Madras High Court judgement were widely circulated in India through the Associated Press and probably the judge's remarks that he regarded himself as very fortunate that he was not living in Hyderabad must have been given wide publicity in the press in England. The object is to afford Government a pretext for interfering in the internal affairs of Hyderabad. The present attitude of the Government of India towards the Nizam is causing anxious concern to Muslims and recent advices from Delhi lay bare the motives of Government. The Najat deplores the attacks of the Punjab Hindu papers on the Nizam and asserts that the Hyderabad State follows a policy of strict religious neutrality and appoints foreigners as educated natives are not available. It is vindictive on the part of sangathanist journals to hurl baseless accusations over the devoted head of His Exalted Highness. The Medina complains of the sorry plight of Muslims in Travancore where they enjoy few educational facilities. It resents the reply of the Diwan to a Muslim deputation that the Muslims should migrate to British India if they could enjoy greater rights there. What would the blind Hindu journals who are so mercilessly attacking Nizam say if Muslim States also were to give similar replies to their Hindu subjects?

Indians in the Colonies.

Benarsi Das Chaturvedi writing in the Aj says that the decision of the Government to bring the question of sending five hundred Indian coolies to British Guiana before the Legislative Assembly at an early date is highly improper. Kunwar Maharaj Singh's report has not been before the public even for a month and Indians have not yet considered it from every standpoint. The Government wants to take advantage of the Swarajist withdrawal and is repeating the mistake it committed in sending coolies to Mauritius in a hurry. The Hamdam is diffident of the results of the official Indian deputation to South Africa and says that it is bound to imitate the lukewarm policy of the Government of India. The whites of South Africa are bent on keeping Indians as bondsmen and slaves and the Union Government has hit upon the device of discriminating between South Africa born and India born Indians to set them by the ears.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to the views recently expressed by Sir Abdur Rahim on various matters relating to Muslims the Vartman writes:—Through fanaticism and selfishness Sir Abdur Rahim has lost his past reputation and has become a bigoted mulla. His followers and those of Hasan Nizami and Dr. Kitchlew have converted even peaceful places into battle-fields. They now consider kidnapping of Hindu women and boys, fighting over the question of music before mosques and breaking of idols to be the greatest service to Islam. Qazi Maqbul Husain writing in the Naiyar-i-Azam urges that in view of the persistently intolerant attitude of Hindu councillors culminating in the recent Muslim walk-out in these provinces Muslims should insist on equal rights in all departments.

The Taxation Enquiry Committee.

A writer in the Mukhbir-i-Alam congratulates the committee on the efficient manner in which it has done its work and says that its proposals equalize the incidence of taxation on various sections of the community. It has furnished no support for the uncharitable suspicion that it had been appointed by Government with a view to increase taxation. Its proposals are based on sound economic principles and it is to be hoped that a broader view will be taken of its findings and they will receive the appreciation that they deserve.

Postage Rates.

The Pioneer writes:—The re-introduction of the quarter-anna card would surely lead to a great increase in the number of new customers of the postal department and at the same time many who have become used to the anna letter rate might be loth to revert to the less private form of communication. Sometimes the operations of the Posts and Telegraphs department suggest that not enough distinction is drawn between true economy and parsimony calculated to restrict development.

United Provinces District Boards Primary Education Bill.

The Zul-Qarnain agrees with Al Bashir that the Muslim members of United Provinces Council should resign if the Governor gives his assent to the United Provinces District Boards Primary Education Bill, and says that if they fail to do so Muslim interests will be always overlooked.

Political prisoners of Bengal.

The Muslim Herald strongly condemns the treatment accorded to the political prisoners of Bengal and writes:—Judging from the vague, evasive and untrue replies that questions on prison amenities have elicited from the Honourable the Home Member of the Bengal Government one would think that he bore a personal grudge to the unfortunate political prisoners of Bengal.

Foreign affairs.

The Aj says that the Geneva fiasco has confirmed the suspicion that the League of Nations is a mere clique of major European Powers to further their own selfish ends and that its professions of establishing peace in the world are a mere camouflage. Possibly separate leagues of nations may now be formed in America and Asia. If this happens, the Geneva fiasco will be said to have done much good to the world by exposing the hollowness of the League of Nations and opening the eyes of non-European States. The Zul Qarnain is not inclined to believe that Turkey will be intimidated either by Britain or the League of Nations to yield up Mosul. It has now to be seen how British diplomats handle the situation. The Medina regrets that no settlement has so far been reached between the Imam of Yemen and Ibn Saud and the tension has now assumed such proportions that even the Hedjazis are perturbed. It is said that the Imam of Yemen has collected a huge army and will invade the Hedjaz during the Haj season with the co-operation of Asir. Sir Gilbert perhaps wants another treaty, as the question of Akabah and Ma'an is still in abeyance and the Foreign Office might have hit upon the device of inciting the Edrissi Imam and thus forcing Ibn Saud to sell these two places, as Britain stands to gain by a conflict between Yemen and Nejd. May God dispel all internal dissensions between the Arab States and realize our dreams of a united Arabia.

Lord Reading.

The Press has widely commented on Lord Reading's régime. Under the heading "A great Viceroyalty ends" the Pioneer writes:—His Excellency's family motto is "Aut nunquam tentes, aut perfice." To the best of his great ability he has written it large over his actions and labours on behalf of India. He has not only established the first principles of parliamentary Government but he has been a great friend and sponsor of the best form of Indian Nationalism. The Leader writes:—In bidding farewell to the Indian Legislature His Excellency Lord Reading said nothing which was new and striking. His speech was characterized by the usual dignity and restraint of language and sweet reasonableness, but it gave no indication of an early departure from the policy of inaction in the matter of constitutional advance. Indian publicists may hold the view that his lordship's record in the political sphere was a barren one, but Lord Reading thinks that a positive achievement of great value stands to the credit of his administration. Referring to His Excellency's view that the foundation of responsible government in India was well and truly laid during his viceroyalty, the Muslim Herald writes:—Only a lawyer of the pliable conscience of Lord Reading could have given expression to these and similar sentiments after his sanction of regulation III in Bengal and of many other barbaric sections of the various lawless laws that adorn the statutory columns of the red book. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—We are rather chary in our denunciation of Lord Reading because we recognize the impossible nature of the task of an Indian Viceroy. If his régime has dashed to the ground the expectations of Moderates and Extremists alike, it is not the Viceroy and the Governor-General who is to blame, not even his executive council, but the system which Sir William Marris has justly described as "cumbrous, complex, and confused." The Surya says that during Lord Reading's tenure of office many obstacles were placed in the way of Reforms. The sum and substance of his administration was aversion to co-operation and reaction against the Reforms. The Abhyudaya holds that from the British standpoint no Viceroy has been so successful as Lord Reading. His Excellency did not allow India to gain the least advantage. His mission was to repress the country and he was successful in it. The Aj writes:—The reduction of judicial inequalities between whites and non-whites, the hanging of a European for the murder of an Indian and the abolition of the cotton excise duty are the only three praiseworthy acts of His Excellency's régime. All his other acts were harmful and insulting to the country. Denial of justice to the Jallianwala bagh sufferers, the Black Act of Bengal, and the ill-treatment of political prisoners will always stand to his discredit. In his régime several lawless laws were passed and illegal use was made of the existing laws. A multitude of illegalities were perpetrated to suppress the non-co-operation movement. A saint like Mahatma Gandhi was thrust into jail and brutal treatment was meted out to Akalis in their religious struggle. The deposition of the Maharajas of Nabha and Indore was also a characteristic feature of Lord Reading's administration. Now there is little hope of Indians getting swaraj with the willing consent of the bureaucracy. His Excellency's acts have increased the distrust of Indians in the word of the British authorities. In short, of all the Viceroys of India Lord Reading has done the greatest injury to India. Commenting on Lord Reading's farewell speech before the joint session of the Council of State and the Legislative Assembly, the same paper remarks that His Excellency indulged in much unjustifiable self-praise and spoke of the good intentions of the British Parliament. There is no doubt that peace has been established on the Frontier but for this Indians have had to spend crores of rupees every year and a defenceless population was subjected to aerial bombing. Law and order were murdered to maintain their dignity and the bureaucracy forfeited the little confidence it still enjoyed among the people. The "Lee Loot" is the most glaring proof of His Excellency's professed aim to fit Indians for colonial self-government. The truth is that he left nothing undone to strengthen the "steel frame." He gave such pledges to alien officials as make it impossible for Indians to get swaraj quietly for another hundred years. He has surely given proof of his good intentions by destroying the few facilities provided by the Reforms. The Shankar says that Lord Reading's régime does not deserve to be remembered well by the people. He came here beating the drum of justice but everybody is aware of the policy he subsequently followed. In view of the deplorable condition of the country during his tenure of office we gladly bid him farewell. The Haqiqat says that His Excellency's tenure was most unexpectedly unfortunate for India, though it might have cemented the foundations of British imperialism. No doubt there was no Jallianwala bagh or Moplah train tragedy during his régime but in spite of his much-advertised mission of justice there was not a single just act to his credit during five years. He rather tried to stifle public opinion and in his efforts to deny the just demands of Indians forgot even the principles of the party of which he was a distinguished member. There are, therefore, few in India to-day to mourn his departure, and however highly British statesmen might prize his services and whatever encomiums the British press may bestow on him, to Indians the five years' administration of the ex-Lord Chief Justice of England was singularly a sad one. The day he reached Delhi he was swallowed by the bureaucracy and instead of winning the hearts of the people became the chief idol of the temple of bureaucratic prestige. His address to the joint session of the two chambers unfolded nothing new and nowhere proceeded beyond alluring promises and soothing explanations. Indians now know His Excellency too well and are fully aware of the hollowness of his words. He has admitted the flaws in the reforms, but he never essayed to remedy them. The country cannot at all be taken in by his utterances.

The Election Campaign.

The Leader is extremely gratified to note that the efforts which are being made to form the Indian Nationalist Party have met with a splendid response. The move for the formation of this party is the result of a long-felt want, of a clearer and more widespread realization that the "policy" of orthodox Swarajists has been disastrous to the interests of the country and that a strong, united and determined effort on the part of all constitutionalists is necessary to counter the menace of the Swarajist policy as laid down by the Cawnpore Congress. The success of the Swarajists will be not the victory of the popular cause, but of the bureaucracy. Referring to the opinions and activities of the various party leaders, the Muslim Herald writes:—The object of the great battle of Mahabharat that would be presently fought is clear—to come out successful during the coming elections, at any cost, by means fair or foul. This at least is the aim of most of the leaders. So, electors, beware. The Sainik exhorts the people to beware of the Indian Nationalist Party which Mr. Chintamani is trying to form and says:—Except for a certain period of the Home Rule agitation Mr. Chintamani has always opposed the Nationalists and sided with the Government. At present his only occupation is to try to weaken the swaraj party and strengthen the Government. Referring to Mr. Chintamani's remarks that every vote given to the Swarajists is a vote in favour of the bureaucracy, the Vartman writes:—The record of the Liberals is so black that the people have no longer any regard for them. Mr. Chintamani and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru are to a certain extent responsible for the promulgation of black laws and the imprisonment of thousands of workers including Mahatma Gandhi. If the policy of obstruction has failed anywhere the responsibility lies on the shoulders of Moderates. To vote for Swarajists is to lead the country towards swaraj, whereas to vote for Moderates is to prolong the slavery of India and to help the bureaucracy. The Aj ridicules Mr. Chintamani for remarking that to vote for Swarajists was to vote for the Government and contends that, on the contrary, to vote for Swarajists is to reduce the life of the bureaucracy. Proceeding, the paper says:—The snare of delusion spread by the bureaucracy should be broken by sending the Swarajists to the legislatures and at the same time preparing the country for civil disobedience. The Swarajists trust the Indian public, while the non-Swarajists trust the bureaucracy. With the help of the soul force of the people of India, we should compel the bureaucracy to grant swaraj. The Abhyudaya condemns the mutual wrangling among the various parties and pleads for united action. The Aj says that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's speech on the formation of a new Nationalist Party at a Delhi meeting neither establishes the necessity for such a party nor throws light on its policy. Pandit Malaviya's policy does not go beyond accepting ministerships and we fail to understand how this policy can bring about any substantial results. So long as Indians do not get control of all the departments they cannot accept responsibility for administration. Their present duty lies in rejecting the Finance Bill year by year and thereby compelling the bureaucracy to accept the whole responsibility, and in preparing the people for the attainment of swaraj. The Pratap deplores that after having been defeated in the Congress Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is now busy in forming a new party and says that this action of his in connexion with elections will cause a further split in the already divided Congress camp and spread discord and ill-will in the country. The adoption of a policy of responsible co-operation at the present juncture would only mean a betrayal of weakness. The Medina refers to the impotence to which the Independents have been reduced owing to the Swarajist withdrawal from the legislatures and says that incensed at this discomfiture and apprehensive of total effacement at the next elections Mr. Malaviya is planning with Mr. Chintamani to form a Nationalist Party. The moving spirits of the party are however Messrs. Kelkar and Moonje and it is strange how a party guided by such spirits can be called Nationalist. Al Bashir opines that the absence of the Swarajists will only help Government to do what it chooses. The Swarajists might have planned this dramatic walk-out to improve their prospects at the next elections but they are sadly mistaken if they believe that Congress has still any influence left in the country. The Hindu Sabha and Liberal candidates will have much better chances of winning at the polls. We wonder whether the Muslim Swarajists have also joined in this exodus. If so, they have been guilty of serious treachery to their community which never sent them to the Councils to sell their souls to any party. The Najat observes that Mr. Malaviya's efforts to run the elections on communal lines will prejudice the cause of India's freedom and strengthen the hands of the bureaucracy and warns patriotic Indians against joining his party. The result of Mr. Malaviya's activities will prove nothing short of treason to the country. Communal movements will spring up throughout the land and will lead to disturbances. Experience shows that the Malaviyan creed with its blood-thirsty followers is the enemy of Indian independence and is tightening the chains of our slavery. Referring to the decision of the Hindu Maha Sabha at Delhi to support only such candidates at the next elections as would keep Hindu interests in view, Al Bashir urges Indian Christians and Anglo-Indians to demand separate representation as their interests would now no longer be safe in the hands of the Hindu representatives. We hope that this revelation will lead to the formation of a Muslim Party and dispel all false notions about the nationalism and patriotism of the Hindus. Anyway Britain should be congratulated that, thanks to Mr. Malaviya, Indians will remain subject to her for another century at least. Muslims should now oppose every Hindu proposal and show the Hindus that they can promote neither their own interests nor those of the nation by going against the Muslims. Young Muslims have seen after joining the Congress and making sacrifices for non-co-operation what sort of mentality the Hindus possess and they should profit from their experience.

The Hindu Maha Sabha.

Referring to the proceedings of the Hindu Maha Sabha the Medina says :—The fanatical devotees of Shuddhi and Sangathan are under the blood-dripping standard of Pandit Malaviya scheming for another war of Mahabharat simply to avenge themselves for the subjection of ten centuries and to find a vent for the fire of bigotry that is consuming mean hearts and to assuage the gnawing at hearts and burning in brains caused by one's own failings and weaknesses. We will only give excerpts to-day from the speeches of Dr. Moonje and Swami Shraddhanand. The common trend of all speeches at the Hindu Maha Sabha was that as the Muslims had ruined the Hindus, all Hindu castes should gather under Mr. Malaviya's banner and with the help of Shuddhi, Sangathan, unity and uplift of the depressed classes should combat the Muslims who were styled as worse than chamars by the self-same Pandit. Dr. Moonje's presidential address was one long diatribe against Muslims. They have been called tyrants, oppressors, executioners, rogues and beggars. What an exhibition of Hindu manners! There is no useful thing in the address which is from the beginning to the end an exhortation to quarrel with Muslims. Dr. Moonje, Muslims would have gladly accepted this challenge if it had been issued by Hindus as a whole. The two communities are not going to fly at each other's throats simply on account of the babbling and prattling of a single individual. O unfortunate sangathanists, if you lay claim to bravery, courage, civilization and progress, then beard Britain and free the motherland. It constitutes neither wisdom nor valour to confabulate in pandals of rags and pour vials of wrath on the devoted heads of Muslims. The Sada-i-Muslim wonders why that seat of Islamic culture, Delhi, was selected for this orgy of revilement of Muslims. Matters would not have been so serious if this venom-spitting had been confined to a few Aryas alone but when the venerated sanatanist leader Mr. Malaviya stigmatizes the Muslims as oppressors and robbers and advises even women to wear daggers to combat them, when Swami Satya Deva regards the Muslims as too depraved to be fit for association with Hindus and Swami Shraddhanand accuses them of abducting Hindu women, the situation becomes serious enough in all conscience. Dewan Narendra Nath characterized the Frontier Muslims as blood-thirsty fanatics and the resolutions passed were mainly designed to deprive Muslims of their rights and to injure them. Dr. Moonje falsely accused the Muslims of spreading their religion by the sword. The sole object of these poisonous resolutions and speeches was to incite the Hindus against the Muslims and to harass the latter so that they might either acquiesce in a life of abject subjection or leave the country. This is the only feeling which is now inspiring the Hindu leaders, and Muslims also should devise means to counter these criminal conspiracies.

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province.

The Abhyudaya says that the passing of the resolution regarding the extension of Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province is a striking example of the communal zeal of Muslims and shows to what extent they can go under its influence. This proposal has furnished a good handle to the Government for accentuating Hindu-Muslim disunion and hence it did not oppose it. The Sainik writes :—We have as much regard for Hindu interests as any other Hindu but we are convinced that the opposition to the introduction of Reforms in the Frontier province far from promoting Hindu interests is most likely to injure them. If Hindus oppose the grant of reforms to the Frontier province Muslims will adopt a similar attitude with regard to other provinces where they are in a minority. There is certainly a great danger in granting swaraj to the Frontier province, but it is not wise to hamper progress towards independence. But even bearing all these points in mind we do not like the resolution that has been passed, for what is the use of introducing those very Reforms which owing to their hollowness we wish to destroy. This resolution has benefited the Government only, as it is rejoicing over the fresh Hindu-Muslim tension which it has created. The Rahnuma eulogises the generosity and breadth of vision displayed by Pandit Motilal Nehru in regard to the question of the extension of Reforms to the Frontier Province and is glad that the opposition of the Maha Sabhites proved futile and Syed Murtaza's resolution was passed. This is not the time to revive the unpleasant memories of the long drawn-out debate and all should just now combine to press Government to enforce the resolution.

The Agra Tenancy Bill.

Commenting on the debate on the Agra Tenancy Bill in the Council the Leader writes:—The sacrifices which the zamindars are called upon to make are much less than those which the Oudh zamindars and taluqdars agreed to make. The objection of Rai Saheb Lala Jagdish Prasad that life tenures would practically shut the doors against those zamindars who might hereafter like to take to agriculture, has no legs to stand upon. There is in the Bill provision for the accrual of new sir rights; besides the zamindar can acquire land for carrying on farming on modern lines. We are also of opinion that the Bill contains many provisions which are distinctly beneficial to zamindars and that its general effect will be to improve their position. The right attitude to adopt towards it, both on the part of the representatives of the zamindars and those who might espouse the cause of tenants should be one of making improvements in it and not of wrecking it. In another article the paper writes: The practically unrestricted power of acquisition of holdings for certain purposes given to the landlords is likely to be exercised to the detriment of the occupancy tenant. Then there is no provision for fresh accrual of occupancy right except with the consent of the zamindar and the effect of it will be a progressive decrease in the occupancy area. We think it essential that the rights of the existing occupancy tenants should be safeguarded. The Muslim Herald writes:—The House, as at present constituted, contains the best of men among landlords, so their interests are safe. We expect from them a more sympathetic view of the position of peasants. And then the situation in the province of Agra differs materially from that in Oudh. The measures that have been found advantageous in Oudh may not necessarily be so in this province.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Vartman writes:—It is true that the communal tension is due to the foolishness of Hindus and Muslims, but the bureaucracy too cannot be absolved from blame in this connexion, as disturbances are due to administrative defects. Then, again, Muslim leaders instead of censuring the goondas back them in some form or another and thus encourage them to indulge in hooliganism. It is the duty of Hindus to organize themselves and give effect to the resolutions passed by the Hindu Maha Sabha. The Sangathan contends that Hindu organization is the sine qua non for India's progress and says that this organization can be brought about only if Hindus of all shades of opinion espouse the common cause of cow-protection. The Hindu condemns the proselytising activities of Muslim States, specially of Bhopal and Hyderabad, and ridiculing the perfunctory attitude of the Hindu Sabha towards this it deplores that various Hindu Rajas assist in the propagation of Muslim religion by giving huge donations to the Muslim University and refusing even a small sum to their own religious schools.

Political Propaganda.

In the course of an article on the Cawnpore Congress the Satyagraha writes:—The real work for the country is rousing the masses. Organization in any branch is bound to be fruitful and, if necessary, it should be fortified by civil disobedience and satyagraha. All the force should be directed against the injustice of the foreign Government. Let the volunteers be enrolled for military training on the condition that if the Government disallows free licence of arms for the volunteers they will have to carry on a programme of civil disobedience against the Arms Act.

United Provinces District Boards Primary Education Bill.

Al Bashir contends that a common religious curriculum can be found for even Hindus and says that anyway the materialistic leanings of the Hindu members of the provincial council should not have been allowed to deprive Muslims of the much-desired privilege of religious education, especially when they were prepared to pay for it. The only reason for the Hindu opposition must therefore have been the apprehension that the introduction of religious education for Muslim children would lead to the appointment of more Muslim teachers and would end the cultural domination of the Hindus. We wonder whether the Muslim M.L.Cs. have represented matters to the Governor. If they fail to do so, they would be only betraying their pusillanimity and selfishness and if they were not possessed of more moral courage and self-sacrifice they should not have made a sorry exhibition of themselves by leaving the Chamber like women in a temper. The Rahnuma has every confidence in the justice and foresight of Sir William Marris and hopes that by refusing his assent to the Bill he will not give the Muslim members an opportunity to create a situation by resigning their seats.

Alleged corruption in Government service.

Referring to Rai Bahadur Thakur Hanuman Singh's reference during the discussion of the Police Budget to the increasing volume of bribery and corruption among the various subordinate services the Muslim Herald writes:—We hear of an increasing volume of corruption among the members of the Government Text-Book Committee, the Intermediate Board of Education, and other bodies that prescribe books for use in our schools and colleges. The C. I. D. would certainly do well to occasionally bestow its attention on these bodies.

Indian States.

The Haqiqat warns the Government of India that it would be playing with fire if it rouses the ire of the Indian Muslim public by adopting a severe attitude towards the Nizam. All this trouble is probably due to the fact that the Nizam is unwilling to withdraw his demand for the restoration of Berar. No doubt the Hindu press of South India is opposed to the Nizam but Muslims all over the country will support him to a man if there is any interference with the internal administration of Hyderabad.

The United Provinces Council.

The Zul Qarnain complains that evasive answers are often given to Council questions as is shown by the contradictions into which the official members are led when replying to the supplementary questions but hopes that with the growth of political capacity in the popular representatives the answers will attain a higher level and will become sober and dignified instead of evasive.

The Taxation Inquiry Committee.

The Naiyar-i-Azam congratulates the members of the Committee on the efficient manner in which they have discharged their duties in spite of the obstacles in their path. Its recommendations in regard to various taxes are both feasible and reasonable and deserve acceptance both by Government and the public.

Foreign affairs.

The Medina ridicules the perturbation of the Daily News at the prospect of the formation of a Muslim League of Nations. Such a League ought in fact to rise on the ashes of the Khilafat. It will, however, only strive for the organization of Muslim states for protection against the inroads of European Powers whose kindness alone can be responsible for the idea. Unlike its European sister the object of this body will not be to make it easier for the larger fishes to swallow the smaller fry. The Islamic conference at Cairo may pave the way for the establishment of such a League. The Mashriq dwells on the dependence of the safety of India on the good-will of the neighbouring Muslim states and urges Britain to improve her relations with them as she cannot depend on many of the European Powers which are intriguing against her with Turkey on the question of Mosul. The Najat warns Britain that her policy of procrastination in regard to Mosul with a view to damp Turkish enthusiasm by lapse of time will not pay as the Turks are wide awake and the Eastern Powers are busy devising means to free themselves from the domination of the West. A war over Mosul is inevitable. In another article the same paper refers to a report in the Westminster Gazette about a Greeco-Italian understanding under British aegis against Turkey and says that as this synchronises with the final instructions of the British Foreign Office about Mosul to their representative in Turkey, it may prove the harbinger of some drastic action. The Greek military power is at present being controlled by Britain and we may soon hear of a stir in the Balkans where Greece is not without enemies. The Medina urges India's participation in the Hedjaz Islamic Conference, but asks the Khilafat Committee to get more definite particulars from Ibn Saud about the representation of various countries and freedom of discussion.

Lord Irwin.

The Leader writes:—While we do not want to prejudge Lord Irwin's Viceroyalty and while we wish him every success, we must confess that we do not entertain any sanguine hopes of great things from him. And after all the future of the country largely rests in our own hands. If Lord Irwin desires to convince the people that he is a sincere and earnest well-wisher of the country, he must courageously tackle in a liberal spirit economic as well as political problems. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The speeches of the new Viceroy are pleasant reading because they are so simple and straight. The agriculturists are India's backbone and a Viceroy who has made a special study of the subject may be expected to do something real and tangible for them. If Lord Irwin could devise ways and means to revive the cottage industries he would have made a substantial contribution to the amelioration of the condition of the people. Indeed we hope that Lord Irwin's régime will be fruitful of deeds which will make the dry bones in the open valley instinct with life. The Aj writes:—Lord Reading had come flying the banner of justice; Lord Irwin is coming flying the flag of agriculture and promising to follow in the footsteps of his great predecessor. We welcome the new comer, but it is with a despairing heart. We have ceased to expect anything at his hands. The Abhyudaya says:—We can say nothing more than offer welcome to Lord Irwin on his arrival. If he succeeds in improving the condition of Indian cultivators he will have accomplished a great task. But so long as we are slaves all progress will prove to be illusive. For the improvement of the lot of the cultivators too the chains of slavery need to be relaxed. The Hamdam reminds the new Viceroy of his promises in England of levelling differences between the East and the West by an intensive campaign of educational development and hopes that His Excellency will not forget his promises like Lord Reading. It is to be seen whether Lord Irwin shows more strength of character and refuses to be swallowed by the bureaucracy. In another article the paper says that Indians are now less inclined towards co-operation with Government than they were when Lord Reading landed on Indian soil, and the only legacy left by him is that of bitter communal and political discord. This would go to show that a greater diplomat than even Lord Reading was needed here and Lord Irwin has come with little prospects of success. But in reality it is sympathy and not diplomacy which solves eastern problems and our new Viceroy seems sufficiently supplied with the former as is shown by his interest in agriculture which provides occupation for three-fourths of the Indian population. We fondly trust that Lord Irwin's sympathy will heal where Lord Reading's diplomacy has wounded, and in spite of the disturbing factors of communal and political strife left behind by the departing Viceroy the new Governor-General would be able to do some good to India.

Lord Reading.

The vernacular press continues to indulge in strong and bitter language in reviewing Lord Reading's régime. The Leader writes:—Taking every aspect of his administration into consideration Lord Reading's Viceroyalty has been a personal triumph for him. He has been a success judged from the narrow imperialist point of view and from that of maintenance of law and order. But he has left the main problem which affects the relationship of India with Britain unsolved. With all his great qualities he has been lacking in the quality of statesmanship. The Anand remarks that nobody in India is sorry at Lord Reading's departure for he tried to whittle down reforms and increase the autocracy of the bureaucrats and in his time Hindu-Muslim tension was accentuated. The Sainik writes:—Lord Reading was such a consummate diplomat that by mere artfulness and diplomacy he has succeeded in doing what the sword of Nadir Shah had failed to accomplish; by sheer diplomacy he has lulled India to sleep. The ultimate result of his policy, however, will be that the relations of India and England will be embittered and the interests of humanity will receive a great shock. It will always be said of him that he did grave injustice to India. The Hindi Kesari says that during Lord Reading's administration Indian aspirations were trampled upon at every step. He not only became a tool in the hands of the bureaucracy, but constituted himself as its special patron. The injustice which has been done to India during his régime cannot allow the British Government to hold its head high. The only two good acts of his administration were the abolition of the cotton excise duty and the improvement of the financial condition of the country. The Aj says:—At the departure of Lord Reading not a single Indian heart will feel afflicted. He has burdened India with fresh taxation and increased the salary of highly paid foreign officials. As if to revive the memory of the Jallianwala Bagh he has made the gift of the Black Act to Bengal. The enforcement of lawless laws throughout the country was the characteristic feature of the administration of this personification of "Justice." It was he only who after trampling upon the holy aspirations of India could summon courage to call upon her sons to co-operate. His name will top the list of those who have embittered relations between India and Britain. The Pratap remarks:—Lord Reading's talk has been like a shower of flowers, but his acts were tyrannous. He has been, as it were, a gentle lancet. He has more of cleverness than goodness in him. The Shakti has a contributed article in which the writer depicts Lord Reading as an autocrat and says that his régime has in no way been less despotic than that of Clive or Warren Hastings, Changez Khan, Taimur or Aurangzeb; it can only be compared with the rule of Ravana or Kans or the Tzar of Russia, the only difference being that these rulers did not make loud professions of justice. The Oudh Punch has a cartoon depicting Lord Reading as departing only with a load of sins. The Desh Bhagat accuses Lord Reading of murdering justice to crush non-cooperation. The calm produced by Lord Reading's ruthless repression is like the lull before the storm, and as soon as the masses recuperate a tornado will sweep the land. Discussing His Excellency's address before the joint session of the two Chambers the Hamdam says that the administration aims at developing the resources of the country only in so far as such development is to the advantage of British capitalists. Peace on the frontier has been ensured by throwing all constitutional scruples to the winds and enslaving the tribes by sheer military force and strategic railways. Internal peace has been secured by breeding communal discord and killing all national life. Financial stability also has been attained by adding to the burden of the groaning poor. The Najat sees neither truth nor sincerity in Lord Reading's address to the two Chambers and regards it as a final blow on Indian nationalism. Peace has been maintained on the frontier either through naked brute force or tortuous diplomacy. Justice has been murdered by thrusting respectable and educated citizens into jail without trial or proof of guilt and communal movements have thriven with rank exuberance. His financial proposals have always gone to make the yoke of the groaning poor still heavier. Whatever he has done has been for the benefit of the Government and of officers of its race. His attitude towards the dumb and poor Indians should provoke thought among us and goad us to action. The Haqiqat remarks that Lord Reading's administration proved unfortunate for all classes of Indians, and while trade depression remains unremedied, the feelings of the ruling chiefs can be best learnt from the erstwhile rulers of Nabha and Indore. The Aziz-i-Hind pays a tribute to the tact and wisdom shown by Lord Reading in administering British India, but regrets that he has left behind deep-seated dissatisfaction in the Indian states by his cruel attitude regarding the Nabha and Indore affairs under mistaken notions of justice. Al Bashir holds Lord Reading to be the most successful Viceroy from the British standpoint as with his diplomacy he killed both non-cooperation and Hindu-Muslim unity which were damaging British prestige and shaking the administration to its very foundations. British rule is now more secure than ever at least for fifty years to come. But Englishmen would be most ungrateful if they overlooked the important contribution of Mr. Malaviya, Swami Shraddhanand, Lala Lajpat Rai and Dr. Moonje to the success of Lord Reading's game. His Lordship deserves praise only for his insight in selecting and skilfully handling the tools best suited for his purpose.

The Election Campaign.

The Leader regards the formation of the United Nationalist Party as an indication of a new chapter in the history of the national effort to achieve constitutional freedom, and says:—The happy compromise which was arrived at ought to inspire the sceptics with new faith and will have a disconcerting effect on the Swarajists. The Swarajist ship is sinking. Under the heading "The Triumph of Liberal Diplomacy" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Friend and opponent of the Liberal League must admit that the Bombay Conference was a great Liberal victory. We welcome in all sincerity and satisfaction the expansion of the League. This is, perhaps, the first time in the history of the reforms, when elections are going to be fought on a vast and organized scale on lines followed in free and democratic countries. The Aj deplores the formation of the new party in the name of unity by various leaders, as it would strengthen the bureaucracy and weaken the power of the people. In the existing circumstances there can be only two parties in the country, namely, the bureaucratic party and the popular party. Co-operation between these two is impossible for the present. The only way to attain swaraj is to organize the masses and make preparations for civil disobedience. The Vartman deplores that party leaders are quarrelling among themselves to serve their selfish ends and exhorts young men to crush individual leadership, dictatorship and party spirit. When leaders fall it is the duty of young men to assert themselves to organize the country. Lenin and Trotsky took advantage of a similar situation during the Russian revolution and the world knows what great work they accomplished. The time for the internal revolution of young men has come and we offer them our full sympathy and co-operation. Al Adl forecasts failure for Mr. Malaviya's new party which it ridicules as a hopeless medley and hotch-potch of conflicting political creeds and religious beliefs. The Hamdam thinks that the only object of the new party is to oppose the Swarajists. The fusion of all anti-Swarajist elements is, however, to be welcomed as a single trial of strength will give the quietus to the entire motley group. It is difficult for the party to last till the actual polling takes place as its secretary, Mr. Chintamani, is accused of helping Government in sending thousands of Indian patriots to jail and its president, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, has himself confessed in England that he had full share of the responsibility for the arrest of Mr. Gandhi.

The Calcutta riots.

Referring to the Calcutta riots the Leader writes:—The tragic occurrences have once more afforded to our mentors the opportunity of reading a homily to Indian politicians and of pointing out the indispensability of the British official. But these never ask as to what precautionary steps the local British official had taken to prevent a breach of the peace. They must be assumed to have done their duty. But can those responsible for the maintenance of law and order in Calcutta be exonerated from all blame for the happenings? In another article the paper writes:—The accounts published in Calcutta papers read more like an outbreak of a spirit of anarchism, of indiscriminate destruction of life and property, than of communalism. The spirit of communalism if it goes on developing may one day break out into general anarchism aimed at the very destruction of authority which stands in its way. It is bound to be exploited by revolutionary elements in the country for furthering their own purposes. No one can be sure that these were not active in Calcutta. The Aj says that although the Government has the police and the army at its disposal, it is unable to maintain law and order and protect life and property in Calcutta. Does this state of things justify the boast of foreign rulers of the country that they have the capacity to govern? The inability of the police to check the riot at its very outbreak is one more example of their administrative inefficiency. It is the "much maligned leaders" who have done much to improve the situation. The Vartman remarks that Hindus are determined to enforce their customary right of playing music before mosques. In future Hindu Sabhas should try to secure the participation of Hindus of all sects in such processions. The frequent riots also point to the need of a drastic change in the present system of government for it is so defective that poverty, famines, pestilences and riots instead of decreasing are on the increase. The demand of Indians for swaraj is, therefore, quite justifiable. The Hindi Kesari writes:—The Calcutta riot shows that the tendency of Muslims to indulge in violence over the question of music before mosques is growing stronger day by day. Both the communities should learn to respect the true religious sentiments of each other and to cultivate the spirit of tolerance. We have to hang our heads when we see that it is the Hindus who are beaten in larger numbers during such disturbances. The Hamdam says that Hindus have always started trouble in Calcutta and wants a check on the aggressive spirit of the Aryas if peace is to be maintained. Aryas reply to polite remonstrances against music before mosques with physical violence. No community can submit to deliberate insult and interference in prayers.—No other Muslim paper has so far commented on this subject.

Indian States.

Referring to the Government's decision regarding the Nizam's request for the restoration of Berar, the Leader concedes that the Nizam had a strong case, but writes:—The rejection of the Nizam's claim will cause general satisfaction among the Beraris, for it is an undeniable fact that, notwithstanding its imperfections, British administration is more acceptable to Indians than the system of government which prevails in Indian States. Commenting on the Viceroy's observation that no ruler of an Indian State could justifiably claim to negotiate with the British Government on an equal footing, the paper writes:—This clear and emphatic assertion of the rights of suzerainty should show to the rulers of Indian States that whatever powers they enjoy are by sufferance and open their eyes to their real position which is one of subordination. Constitutional lawyers may say what they like, but the right of supremacy can only be challenged by force. The Pioneer writes:—Over a month ago the Chief Justice of the Madras High Court, himself a judicial officer of great reputation, expressed very decided views on certain aspects of the administration of the Hyderabad State. Remembrance of that obiter dictum must make the people of Berar all the more grateful to Lord Reading for couching his decision in so final and definite a form. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—This last act of Lord Reading interpreting the relations of British India and the Indian States has given much food for constitutionalists and newspaper editors and let us hope also the Maharajas. The Vartman says:—We ourselves are not in favour of the restoration of Berar to the Nizam for such autocracy as is found in his state is not to be seen even in Afghanistan. As far as Hindus are concerned they would prefer the Andamans to Hyderabad. What we take exception to is the bitter tone of the Viceroy's reply. It amounts to a threat to the whole body of ruling chiefs. They should take a lesson from it. So long as they remain disorganized, oppress their subjects, indulge in sensuality and do not cultivate self-respect they cannot possibly command respect from others and should not expect their demands to be conceded. The Abhyudaya remarks that the Viceroy has added insult to injustice by asserting that the Government of India is the paramount power with which no Indian prince can claim equality of status. This is the Viceroy's parting gift to the Indian princes. Those who kept quiet at the Nabha and Indore affairs could expect nothing better than this. The Aj says that Lord Reading's letter to the Nizam shows that the treaties and agreements made by the Government with the Indian States have no value in such matters. The Muslim press has supported the Nizam with one voice in the Berar controversy. The Haqiqat commends the Nizam's proposal for a commission of inquiry to decide the Berar controversy and says that it would have won the support of the Beraris themselves. From the very outset the motives of the Government of India were tainted and Lord Reading's reply has fully proved this. The Hamdam is pained at Government's failure to do justice even though the Nizam exhausted every resource of entreaty and argument. The grant of a permanent lease to the British cannot do away with the Nizam's proprietary right in Berar and the hauteur with which Lord Reading has rejected the Nizam's prayer can commend itself to nobody. Still more serious, however, is Lord Reading's enunciation of the principle that the ruling chiefs possess no status higher than that of ordinary citizens or zemindars and taluqdars. It is up to all ruling chiefs and the Chamber of Princes to see how their treaties are being treated now that there is no war and their services are not needed. A century and half of British diplomacy has so weakened Indian States that they do not possess the strength to enforce their rights, otherwise Lord Reading would never have dared to come out with such a proud answer. Al Adl deplores the Government of India's decision and says that it shows that old treaties are interpreted merely in the light of political expediency and are liable to emendations with changing circumstances.

Reforms in the North-West Frontier Province.

The Hindi Kesari says that if the resolution passed in the Legislative Assembly regarding the extension of reforms in the North-West Frontier Province is given effect to it will seriously interfere with the social, economic and political advancement of the Hindus and that they should therefore organize themselves into a compact body for the protection of their interests. The Aj writes:—The question of the introduction of reforms in North-West Frontier Province was moved by consistent supporters of Government. This shows that it was a serious move of the Government to accentuate Hindu-Muslim tension and thereby establish its own importance. It was a good plan to give a crushing reply to the decision of the Cawnpore Congress, and Government actually achieved partial success. But the credit of restricting the evil must go to Pandit Motilal Nehru who saw through the official move and prevented a split in the ranks of the Swaraj Party by making it adopt a neutral attitude over the question. The Medina is suspicious of the intentions of the Government about the introduction of the reforms in the Frontier Province and wonders whether there is any other constitutionally governed country in the world besides India where the decisions of the Legislatures are treated with such scant courtesy. After all what is the good of an Assembly whose decrees are not binding on the executive. What a sham these reforms are? Will not Government hang down its head in shame after this? Is it on the strength of such deeds that cooperation is demanded? Fie!

Political propaganda.

In the course of an article referring to the public demonstration at the imprisonment of twelve communists and the Ammanford miners at Albert Hall, London, on March 7, the Muslim Herald writes:—England is heading towards a disaster—a revolution, a revolution more hideous than the one enacted on the French soil. The sailors, airmen and soldiers are all persuaded to declare their revolt against the Government of England..... The capitalists of England should be shot. Their long collared necks deserve the guillotine. The capitalists have to be extirpated at all costs and they shall be extirpated. There are signs of distemper visible in the English race. The Aj refers in strong terms to the Jallianwala Bagh "atrocities" and exhorts the people to keep alive the sacred memory of this event in every Indian home by observing the national week and by setting about to work out the programme adopted by the Congress. Exhorting the people to observe the national week the Hindi Kesari says:—The national week serves to keep alive the fire of patriotism in our hearts. If we are to attain freedom we should awaken the spirit of the nation. A number of other papers also publish impassioned appeals for the observance of the "national week" by promoting the Congress programme.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to the Hindu-Muslim question the Bharat Jiwan says:—If the Muslims are bent on opposing the Hindus we shall have to reply by brute force. On the one hand we shall have to open wrestling arenas and acquaint Hindu youths with the use of lathi, sword and spear, and on the other to develop unity and mutual love and communal self-respect. We shall have to learn to die for Hindus and Hinduism. In reply to the Muslim threat regarding their connexion with independent Muslim states we shall have to establish our connexion with China and Japan on the ground of religious brotherhood, and if we succeed in this the Muslims will find the desert of Sahara cooler than India to live in. To bring about religious unity with the Buddhists the Hindu Maha Sabha should make over at least partial control of the Buddha Gaya temple to them, specially when such an action on their part is likely to secure them political advantages also.

The Agricultural Commission.

Referring to the announcement of the personnel of the Agricultural Commission the Aj says:—There is not a single Indian on the commission who commands public confidence. These commissions only waste the money of the poor tax-payers, but yield no satisfactory results and are convenient instruments for purposes of evasion. The bureaucracy will be seriously mistaken if it thinks that such commissions will satisfy the public. The Hamdam complains that there are very few agricultural experts in the commission and hopes that amends will at least be made for the manner in which the rights of the inhabitants of the United Provinces and the taluqdars of Oudh have been ignored. It is also a pity that there is only one Muslim member, and he too is possessed of such a mentality that he may be counted as a member of the English rather than the Indian group.

Unemployment.

The Sainik writes:—In season and out of season the Government proclaims its solicitude for the welfare of its subjects. Even if it shoots us it says that it is for our own good. In such cases even a blind man can see the Government in all its nakedness. The bureaucracy is to a large extent responsible for the plague of unemployment. It should give up the habit of making excuses, but should formulate and enforce a sound scheme for solving the problem of unemployment.

The Agra Tenancy Bill.

The Pratap assures the zamindars that the Bill will not be allowed to affect their interests as a handful of foreigners can never rule over such a vast country without their cooperation, but urges the Government to reduce land revenue to a minimum if its sympathies with the tenants are real and not hypocritical. The zamindars also will do well to change their angle of vision and cease to take advantage of the ignorance and disorganized condition of tenants.

The hides and skin trade.

The Hamdam views with concern the ousting of Indian hides and skins from the German market through foreign competition and asks for the introduction of improved methods of tanning and the reduction of the export duty.

Foreign affairs.

The Medina remarks that France is now usurping the place of Britain as the despoiler of Muslim territories and is giving the world a taste of the unholy mentality of western imperialists by the barbarities she is practising to establish her domination in Syria. France is however faced with defeat in every quarter, and it is a fact that whosoever has pitted himself against Islam has only come to grief. To-day Muslims are negligent, indifferent and enslaved, but once the spirit of Islam is roused among them they will again teach the world the lesson of freedom and liberty. In another article the paper warns Britain that with the removal of Zinovieff India has become one of the main objectives of Bolshevik propaganda and she can secure immunity only by earning the good-will of Indians. The capitalistic intrigues of British statesmen have convinced the Russians that the success of socialism is not compatible with the existence of Britain, and so long as the citadel of capitalism is not invaded, it is futile to attack the outlying posts.

Calcutta riots.

The Calcutta riots continue to absorb the attention of the Press. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—It is so cheap and easy to lay the blame for the communal riots at the door of the Government, but why should an alien Government be anxious to help those who cannot help themselves? The attitude of the much maligned district officers has not been so very enthusiastic after the advent of the Reforms and the reckless criticisms to which they are exposed in the Legislatures. The police cuts in the budget and curses in the speeches have not provided encouragement to the police officers either. It is a cry of the weak and the desperate to lay the blame at the door of the Government. The blame must rest at the door of the people themselves whose insufferable rodomontade in the name of sangathan and tanzim has been undermining the respect in which one community held the other. The Pratap writes:—The Calcutta riot was a bloody welcome to Lord Irwin. Our mentors say that if they leave India Hindus and Muslims will fly at each other's throats. God only knows what will happen after the departure of the British, but we too know what is happening already in spite of their presence. During the Calcutta riot the goondas were masters of the whole city and it appeared as if Nadirshahi was rampant everywhere. What a good specimen of British administration? The peace which prevails during normal times is not the result of good administration. The people are quiet because they are dead. The people had so long been hypnotized into the belief that it was British rulers who were maintaining peace and protecting life and property, but events like those which have occurred in Calcutta will break this spell. This is the only silver lining in this dark cloud. The people should now give up all hopes of help from the authorities and should organize themselves for self-defence. At the bottom of these communal troubles is the system of communal representation which the bureaucracy has considered it necessary to introduce in every nook and corner of the country in order to keep its power intact. The Gramvasi holds that the existing system of government is chiefly responsible for the ever-growing Hindu-Muslim disturbances. The policy of "divide and rule" cannot but lead to this result. The interests of the foreign Government cannot be served by the adoption of a policy making for peace and contentment. The Calcutta riot is a specimen of the maintenance of peace by Government. Can any official now claim to be the protector of the life and property of Indians? Will the Hindus and Muslims not realize that their mutual dissensions can do them no good and only benefit a third party? The Abhyudaya remarks :—It seems to us that such riots cannot possibly be stopped so long as there is a third party which stands to profit by them. We hold the authorities responsible for all such quarrels. Muslims are only taking advantage of bad administration. At present it may be pleasing to the authorities to yield to unreasonable demands or to allow fanaticism to grow, but if this malady continues to develop it will some day become uncontrollable and the police and the army will find themselves helpless. The Surya says :—The British and the Anglo-Indian press contend that the Calcutta riots show that India still stands in need of the British bureaucracy. The mere fact that the British bureaucrats and their good government failed to stop this destruction of life and property which continued unhampered in the biggest town of the country for seven days is a sufficient proof of their incompetency, inaction and irresponsibility. If Indians cannot maintain peace and order, why do such riots not occur in Indian States? The Vartman writes :—Accounts of the brutality and barbarism displayed by Muslims make one's hair stand on end. The police did nothing to show that the British administration is really the guardian of the lives and property of the people and that during critical times it performs the functions of a true government. Are Hindu-Muslim riots really like sports for the underlings of the bureaucracy? The Aj observes :—It is very difficult to understand the working of the mind of European journalists. They say that the Calcutta riots establish the necessity of the British Government for India. So far they were proud of peace ; now they are proud of breach of peace. In our opinion such incidents show that our rulers cannot maintain peace in the country. We, therefore, cannot but conclude that we have no need for the existing Government which either does not know its duty or is indifferent to it. It is so busy in hunting patriots that it has neither time nor energy to deal with hooligans. No country can feel the necessity for such a Government. The Bharat Jiwan writes :—The Calcutta riot makes it quite plain how the police, which smells anarchy in the hearts of educated people even from hundreds of miles, makes itself scarce when the time for real "policing" arrives. The public only knows too well how the police discharged its duties on this occasion. Such is the police on which crores of rupees are spent and to which is entrusted the duty of protecting the life and property of the people. In another article the paper writes :—If Muslims want to obtain their right by force, Hindus too are fully justified in securing their right by force. Necessity now dictates that Muslim violence must be met by violence. This time not only temples but mosques have also been demolished. We hold mutual wrangling to be highly reprehensible, but when it has come to fighting we maintain that it is still more reprehensible to leave the battlefield. Even the greatest advocate of non-violence will admit the need for violence in self-defence. It is on this principle that we say that if the mosques were destroyed as a result of the destruction of the Hindu temples, this was not bad but good enough. Ultimately this will do good to the Muslims themselves for they will realize that those who live in glass houses must not throw stones at others. The Gyan Shakti remarks that if the Hindus do not organize themselves and take proper steps to check Muslim aggressiveness, to say nothing of playing music, they will not be allowed even to speak and laugh. It appears that Muslims go to mosques not to say prayers but only to pick up quarrel with Hindus under this pretext. It is not wise to molest Hindus as they too are capable of showing fight under extreme provocation despite their proverbial mildness. Are the Hindus not human beings? Have they no rights in the world? They will certainly play music and play it to their heart's content and Muslims will have to bear it. When even Aurangzeb could not stop music, it is impossible for Muslims to do so now. The Mashriq regrets that processions are taken out simply to harass the Muslims. Muslims also should realize that it is no affront to their religion if music is played before their mosques in a non-Muslim country. The Hindus have as much right to play music before mosques as the Muslims have to sacrifice cows on public roads, but the latter are not allowed to exercise this right. Al Barid regards the riot as the outcome of an organized conspiracy and regrets that the Aryas are adding to the misfortunes of their country by insisting on their novel right of playing music before mosques. The Sada-i-Muslim takes the Hindu press to task for publishing garbled versions and throwing the entire blame on the Muslims. A perusal of the Anglo-Indian and Muslim journals of Calcutta will show the seriousness of the Muslim losses and Government should refuse to be influenced by the false Hindu propaganda and should not fail to punish the guilty. The Medina says that the preaching of violence to Hindu youths by the Maha Sabha leaders at Delhi has had its effect and the trouble started at Fatehpur has been re-enacted at Calcutta, and it is now patent that the Arya Samajists are making an organized attempt to make it impossible for Muslims to live in India. The Arya Samajists take processions with music before mosques just at prayer time and once trouble is started they themselves slip away leaving Hindus and Muslims to break each other's heads. In the end it is the Muslims who are arrested and sent to jail and have to suffer destitution. In an article in a subsequent issue the same paper refers to the glee of the Arya papers on the completion of the mission of sangathan by Hindus by demolishing mosques and warns Muslims that the conspiracies to annihilate them have now matured and the magic of blood-thirsty pandits and barbarous Swamis has proved effective. Muslims should now be prepared for the terrible day when the Hindus will prepare a hundred battlefields for them with the help of the present Government and should learn to become true believers as thus alone can they save themselves from annihilation. The Hamdam complains that the Aryas are accusing the Muslims of being solely responsible for the Calcutta riots, though the former themselves set the ball rolling. The Aryas have been trying to create trouble throughout the country by insisting on music before mosques and trying to overawe Muslims with the numerical superiority of the Hindus. Surely the police failed to make adequate arrangements for protection of life and property, but their greatest blunder lay in allowing music before mosques. No doubt there is greater religious fervour among Muslims which sometimes manifests itself in most reckless ways, but the responsibility for trouble lies on those who start it and thus inflame the Muslims. In a subsequent issue the paper says that the way in which the riff-raff of Calcutta were allowed to hold sway for a number of days reflects little credit on the guardians of law and order. They repeatedly urge the maintenance of law and order as a justification for their repressive acts, but in spite of their police and military they failed to ensure safety of life and property in Calcutta and in broad daylight, in the markets and streets, arson, murders and rapine were committed as if there was no Government established by law left in the city. The Sadaqat inquires where that much advertised Pax Britannica was during the hooligan rule in Calcutta. It advises Hindus and Muslims to fight with clean and not dirty weapons, in the open and not in the dark, so that there may be a clearing of hearts, the clash of nobler souls may lead to a better mutual appreciation, the ruffianly element may go down and antagonists may eventually become comrades in the higher fight for the common cause of the country. The people should depend less on Government and more on the aid of sober and thoughtful Hindus and Muslims. It is a pity that our Arya friends are creating a new source of friction by taking out processions. No doubt the Muslim case about music before mosques is weak and they can insist on its stoppage only in cases where it has been customary to stop it, but what does it avail the Hindus to insist on a display of music before mosques?

The election campaign.

The Sainik deplores the divisions in the ranks of political workers and urges the promoters of the Indian Nationalist party to display their valour against the enemies of the country—the Government—and not against the Congress. The paper bitterly attacks Mr. Chintamani for having been a party to the "repression" during the non-cooperation movement and says:—Mr. Chintamani should not labour under the delusion that Pandit Motilal Nehru is alone. Mr. Nehru has on his side that national power which on being roused can shake the whole universe. The Pratap charges the promoters of the Indian Nationalist party with having supported the Government in sending thousands of patriots to jail and says that the party has been brought into being solely for electioneering purposes. It will not further the interests of the country. Its policy and the policy of the Congress are poles apart. The Surya observes that the formation of the Indian Nationalist party opens a new chapter in the history of constitutional agitation for the attainment of swaraj. There is no doubt that this party has come into existence to combat the harmful, inconsistent and disruptive policy of the Swaraj party which is now reaping the harvest of its misdeeds. The boat of the Swaraj party is now sinking and those who do not like to go down with it must dissociate themselves from it and join the new party. The Hamdam says that the very first public meeting of the new Nationalist party which was held at Bombay exposes the looseness of the bonds which hold it. Mr. Jinnah was not at all successful in deluding the audience into the belief that the party was not opposed to the Congress. Still more remarkable was the absence of Mr. Chintamani and Dr. Sapru who were responsible for sending Pandit Motilal Nehru and Mr. Gandhi to jail. It seems that they are ashamed to appear in public, but they surely cannot expect to lead their election campaign to a successful issue from behind the purdah.

Political propaganda.

The Pratap prints a series of articles by "A Student of International Politics" in the course of which the writer says that for the past twenty-four years Tibet has been the victim of the crooked and venomous policy of British Government. The very Tibet which formerly regarded the coming of any white man as the sting of a scorpion has now become the playground of the British. It is now in a way in the whirlpool of British imperialism. Its passing into the grip of the British is harmful not only for India but also for China, Japan, Nepal and other Asiatic countries. In the course of an article on the national week the Bharat Jiwan remarks that it is a matter for grave suspicion that whenever there is any occasion for awakening the nationalistic spirit of the people some serious trouble takes place in one or other part of country and insinuates that this is due to skilful wire-pulling. While the national week is just now being observed and appeals are being made for unity, the attention of the people is distracted by fearful happenings in Calcutta. Is it only a divine dispensation? The Aj writes:—April 13 reminds us of the awful Jallianwala Bagh incident and of the fact that modern India has been born of the immolation of its innocent victims which made us determined to establish swaraj in the country. While on the one hand this day tells us that we are slaves, on the other it stimulates us to strive to get out of bondage. Our rulers ask us to forget this tragic day, but this does not sound well in their mouth, when they maintain the Cawnpore memorial well and have only recently erected a memorial at Chauri Chaura. We do not hate Englishmen, but we are surely opposed to the irresponsible bureaucratic system of government. Swaraj is the only remedy for it and we should strive to the utmost to attain it.

The Agricultural Commission.

Raja Syed Ahmad Ali Khan Alawee, M.L.C., of Salempur, writing to the Pioneer, says that the announcement of the personnel of the Royal Commission has caused some surprise and disappointment in the United Provinces, and especially in Oudh, "in that it does not include a single representative of the landed interests of these provinces, or an expert having first-hand knowledge of agricultural conditions and rural economy in the United Provinces". The paper calls upon the British Zamindars' Association of Oudh and the Zamindars' Association of the province of Agra to make a representation to the Government on the subject of nominating an able and representative member of their order to the Commission. The Bharat Varsha notes with dissatisfaction that the terms of reference of the Agricultural Commission do not include inquiry into rent and revenue and similar questions. This shows that the Commission will confine itself only to superficial matters. The tax-payers should not have been saddled with the heavy burden of this Commission for such a purpose. The most serious objection against the Commission lies in the fact that persons well qualified to support the cause of cultivators have not been sufficiently represented upon it. The Desh Bhagat says that the terms of reference and personnel of the Commission show that the cry of agricultural advancement is only a camouflage and the real object is to provide salaries for a few individuals. The European members have generally no knowledge of Indian agricultural conditions and the knowledge of most of the Indian members is also very superficial. It is now clear that India cannot progress under the British Government and that swaraj is essential and Indians of all classes should muster strong under the banner of the Congress.

Indian States.

The Surya declares that although the decision of the Government regarding the Berar question is in a way improper, yet the Hindus will feel gratified at it for there is no justice for them in the Nizam's dominions and they are always oppressed there. The Haqiqat regards Lord Reading's regimé as the worst for Indian Chiefs since Lord Dalhousie's time. Lord Dalhousie's policy of annexation cannot be re-adopted at present, but the Government of India possess even now the widest powers to harass Indian Chiefs. The Government of India have shown their attitude clearly in the letter relating to Berar which has followed so closely on the heels of the "voluntary abdication" of the Chiefs of Nabha, Suket and Indore. The British Government is now declared to be the paramount power and can interfere in the internal affairs of its erstwhile allies and friends, the Indian States. Thus is the Nizam rewarded for the steadfast loyalty of his house for one hundred and fifty years. Lord Dalhousie's greed contributed to the mutiny of 1857, but Lord Reading has ignored the pledges of non-interference which were repeatedly given after that event. Lord Irwin should consider how far the Berar decision will add to the popularity of the British Government. The Medina remarks that the Nizam cannot claim equal status now that there is no Haider Ali to combat. Is this the way, it exclaims, in which the British reward steadfast loyalty? It is downright folly to expect justice from the British in the matter of territories and Muslims who have every sympathy with the aggrieved Nizam should set about organizing and uplifting their community. May God inspire our ruling chiefs with a sincere passion for public service and may He also so alter Hindu mentality that the Hindus may not protest against the rendition of Berar and thus aid the British.

Oudh Hindu Conference.

Referring to the "split" in the Oudh Hindu Conference the Indian Daily Telegraph criticizes the attitude of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and says that if his views and ways are endorsed the great Hindu Sabha will be converted into a small caucus of loyalists and place-hunters, and if, acting on his advice, it declares war on the Congress, which is mainly Hindu, it will only be repeating the old story of Jaichand and Prithviraj in a new form.

Organization of Hindus.

The Vartman exhorts the Hindu Sabha to direct their efforts towards the achievement of perfect unity among the various castes and sub-castes of Hindus, the enlisting of the sympathy of depressed classes, the inculcation of a fighting spirit among Hindu boys and the removal of fear and false modesty from the minds of Hindu women.

Indians in the Colonies.

Referring to reports published in South African papers the Leader writes:—There is gratifying indication that the better minds among the white settlers in Natal and the Cape Province are asserting themselves over the forces of blind and unreasoning racial intolerance. The Indian deputation has, it appears, also done useful work in clarifying the issues and we hope that it has not conceded any vital points. We must state clearly that Indian opinion will not easily approve of any compromise the basis of which is the co-operation of the Union Government and the Indian Government for accelerating the process of repatriation. The South Africa born Indian has as much right to stay there and to enjoy the status of a free citizen as the white settler and no compromise which involves his repatriation can be accepted as just and equitable.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the defeat of Abdel Krim by the joint efforts of Spain and France the Aj remarks:—Once more justice has had to bow down to military powers. For the satisfaction of the demoniacal imperialistic greed which has come into being in Europe after the great war the brave Riffs have had to give their life-blood. Despite this the eyes of Indian Muslims are not opened and they continue to put obstacles in the way of the attainment of swaraj by insisting on separate communal rights. Muslims are being crushed today throughout the world and yet Indian Muslims are dreaming of establishing Muslim supremacy in India. If there be unity in India and Hindus and Muslims be inspired with one national feeling, not only will India get freedom, but the existence of all the independent Muslim states of the world will also be safeguarded. The Vartman says that in order to promote their selfish ends European nations have not desisted from any sin. Schemes are being hatched in secret in order to seize Asiatic countries. The selfish nations of Europe are thus preparing for a terrible war which may break out within two years.

Calcutta riots.

Communal recriminations and attacks on the police in connexion with the Calcutta riots continue to be an absorbing occupation for the vernacular press. Referring to Sir Michael O'Dwyer's view that the Reforms have bred political unrest, anarchism and communal riots the Leader writes:—The Reforms have not been introduced in the North-West Frontier Province nor has the British element been weakened there. And yet Kobat witnessed one of the most terrible communal riots which have occurred in this country. If these riots prove anything it is that the department of law and order should be transferred to popular control. The Shankar says that the Calcutta riots which synchronized with the arrival of Lord Irwin are ominous and are due to the inflammatory speeches of Muslim leaders and the inaction of the police. Proceeding it writes:—Do the Muslims want that Arya Samajists should not live in this world? Muslims are foolishly creating an atmosphere which will prove harmful to themselves. They should take note that a storm is brewing in the Hindu society which will make it difficult for the Muslim community to live in safety. Once the spirit of retaliation is roused among Hindus, Muslims will have to be prepared for the day of reckoning when every wrong will be so avenged that no song of Arabia will avail. Owing to the foolishness of Muslims the bureaucracy is beating the drum with heavy clubs and all political agitation is being reduced to dust. The Garhwali writes:—If Lord Irwin really means to make India happy and contented he should first of all investigate the causes of the present Hindu-Muslim tension and take steps to remove them. The root cause of this tension is that Hindus and Muslims are regarded as separate communities from the political standpoint and have accordingly been granted separate representation. Some Government officials also accentuate this tension in order to achieve their object and it is strange that the Government have never tried to put a stop to such practices. The Hridaya writes:—When the British troops in Calcutta failed to suppress the riot which took place under their very nose the Englishman need not have been perturbed over the probable consequences of British troops ever leaving the country. If they had left, Indians would have been relieved of a great burden and the waste of crores of rupees would have been saved. Indians would have had to pay less taxes, lakhs of cows would have been saved from being sacrificed and there would have been plenty of milk and ghee in the country. India is in fact looking forward to such a day. The Hindi Kesari blames the police for the Calcutta riot and its consequences and notes with satisfaction that the local Hindus organized themselves in self-defence. The Muslims have themselves to blame if this time their mosques were attacked as the spirit of reprisals has been induced among the Hindus by the attacks on temples. The Abhyudaya writes:—It seems to us, although it is not so easy to prove it, that the question of music before mosques is being made an all-India question by a band of persons working in secret to serve political interests and to secure some rights at the expense of Hindus. Were there no mosques in India before and did Muslims not say prayers in them? Processions were taken out and music was also played all along. These are facts which cannot be denied by any honest man. The Aj writes:—Sir Edward Baker, the Governor of Bengal, had to resign because of his failure to put down a serious disturbance in Calcutta in the time of Lord Hardinge. This time, too, the disturbance continued unchecked for several days. This should be a matter for shame to the authorities. If they had been impartial in this matter none would have ventured to cause the disturbance. But the "justice" of Lord Reading has encouraged the hooligans with the result that they have not the least hesitation in committing breach of public peace. Lord Irwin will have to remedy this malady. In another issue the paper says:—Communal and religious riots have now assumed such serious proportions that it is impossible to stop them without inflicting the severest punishment. Firing should at once be resorted to on such occasions, but before such a practice is adopted the department of law and order should be placed in the hands of ministers who may thus be made responsible to the legislative councils for all the acts of police. This will not render the task of the police difficult but easy owing to the support given by public opinion. Special joint boards of officials and non-officials should be established which should inquire into the causes of riots and inflict the severest punishment upon those who foment the disturbances and those who are the first to commit breach of peace. All others should be released. In a subsequent issue the paper suggests that immediate firing should be restricted to communal and religious riots. The Surya criticizes the suggestions of the Aj and says:—In view of the irresponsibility and excesses of the police to vest it with the power of firing would be like giving a sword to a mad man. The Gyan Shakti refutes the allegation that the Government is responsible for Hindu-Muslim quarrels and extols the action of the Hindus who protected Muslims and mosques during the recent riot in Calcutta. If the Hindus succeed in suppressing hooliganism both the communities will gain. The Hindus of every district should, therefore, organize themselves for protection against hooliganism. The Haqiqat vehemently accuses Arya Samajists and Sangathanists of deliberately provoking riots by loudly beating drums and making noise before mosques just at prayer time and inquires what action the police has taken against those Aryas who set the whole of Calcutta ablaze by their mischievous action. In a subsequent issue the same paper says that the Calcutta police betrayed lamentable inefficiency in permitting the riots to continue for three days and remaining helpless against the law-breakers throughout that period. The Muslims complain that the alacrity of the Bengali Hindu police officers in arresting Muslims was on a par with their indifference in saving Muslim passers—by. The Bengal Government should inquire into these allegations and should severely punish those policemen, if any, who were guilty of siding with the Hindu rioters, Muslims should also receive adequate representation in the police service. It is a pity that sangathan is working such havoc and ruin in the country. The Hamdam regrets that even though Muslims have suffered greater loss in the Calcutta riots Mr. Malaviya has established a Hindu Citizens' Association there for defence and the Marwaris have simultaneously begun to dismiss their Muslim employees. Mr. Malaviya also appealed to Muslims to regard India as their motherland and to strive for her freedom but he seems to forget that the Muslims had already established a national Government in India and it was the treachery of the Hindus that brought in power a third race which is foreign. Mr. Malaviya's colleague Swami Sraddhanand is jubilant that the Hindus have shown a splendid spirit of self-defence and has even thought fit to warn Muslims with regard to the protection of the honour of their women. It is to be hoped that the Muslims will take warning from the utterances of Mr. Malaviya and Swami Sraddhanand and complete their organization at least to save the honour of their women. The Medina says that howsoever terrible and disheartening the immediate results of the communal riots may be they are pregnant with possibilities for ultimate good. They have removed the inertia which was so fatal to national growth. A long list of mutual rights and duties is being automatically prepared which will help inter-religious legislation for the country. These riots will one day prove that it is impossible for any one community to exercise political domination over another. Religious superstitions which are excrescences in the religious code are being discredited and a sincere desire to ascertain the true principles of religion is being developed so that true brotherhood and love may prevail in India. The helplessness, selfishness and ridiculous religious neutrality of the foreign administration and the high-handedness of the law of the land are being exposed. These very disturbances will in the end clearly show that the administration and its laws were not meant for public welfare and peace but to serve the selfish ends of foreigners. The unjust and improper practices of various bodies are being exposed in all their worst aspects and in spite of the lying propaganda of such selfish bodies their mischievous objects are being laid bare and the time will come when the mass of the Indian people will condemn and annihilate them. These riots will not cease but will continue their task of purification and create a pure atmosphere for Indian nationalism. Our Hindu friends are glad that Hindus have adopted the offensive and have shown their vindictive spirit by desecrating mosques. But Muslims also should be glad that they have realized that however brave and reckless a race may be it becomes helpless under subjection and slavery. Instances have been very rare in India where mosques could be attacked in the presence of Muslims unless they were totally helpless. Aye, Muslims should be glad that the law and might of the foreign administration have failed to protect their places of worship and their duty has now become all the greater to protect their places of worship themselves and to show the races of India that they have fully realized their helplessness and are prepared for the final effort. We would ask our elders also not to lose heart. They should continue their efforts. God willing, these very riots will one day become the harbingers of peace and prosperity for India. The Oudh Akhbar agrees with the views expressed regarding the Calcutta riots by Pandit Motilal Nehru at Lahore and says that the policy of divide and rule is mainly responsible for the recent trouble in Calcutta. If both the communities were to turn their attention towards combating a stronger third party not only would their mutual quarrels cease but much good would result to the nation as a whole. Referring to the article in the London Times by Sir Michael O'Dwyer in which he has urged a reversion to autocratic rule owing to the Calcutta riots, the Hamdam says that Indian leaders should hang their heads in shame. But Sir Michael also should remember that such communal riots are the inevitable adjuncts of national awakening. When the masses regain their mental equilibrium, as they are bound to do very soon, the English element in India will have to go and Indians will have to be left alone to decide their fate. Communal tension will then disappear as there will be no third party left which would be interested in setting Hindus and Muslims by the ears.

Oudh Hindu Conference.

The Leader writes:—The Oudh Hindu Conference is reported to have been a great success. The Conference reiterated its protest against separate communal representation in the legislatures and local bodies and "preference accorded to certain communities in public services at the sacrifice of efficiency and involving injustice to the legitimate rights of Hindus." We recently cited figures which showed the extent to which in certain important branches of the public service the Hindus are grossly under-represented. We do not know how the Government, which claims to hold the balance even, can justify this preferential treatment of one community at the expense of another. The disparity of representation ought to be rectified if the Government cares for the confidence of the Hindus in its policy. However one may dislike the growth of communalism in the country, especially among the Hindus, it has to be admitted that the majority community suffered long on account of its disunity and disorganization before it realized that its preservation lay only in sangathan. It had ceased to be respected either by the Muslims or the Government. Even now on crucial occasions it is treated with scant courtesy by the local authorities. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya was unconsciously dealing a severe blow to the Hindu Sabha when he made out in his Lucknow speech that it should oppose the Swarajists because he meant the unionists were better from the communal point of view. The conversion of the Hindu Sabha into a virulent political organization as the extreme communalists want it to be, will drive out of it the numerous Government servants, social reformers, non-political workers and also congressmen all of whom for their own respective reasons will not agree to worship in the new political temple of Pandit Madan Mohan. The Pratap deplores the anti-Congress activities of Bhai Parmanand and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and says that by dealing a blow at the Congress they are applying the axe to the very roots of the country and are doing great disservice to the Hindus by getting them caught in the mire of the legislatures. The Anand supports the view of Bhai Parmanand, the President of the conference, that by following the policy of securing rights for other communities at the expense of the Hindus the Congress is weakening the Hindu community and urges the Hindus to vote only for the candidates of the united nationalist party during the next elections. The Hamdam deplores the mistake made in electing as president of the Oudh Hindu Sabha, Bhai Parmanand, the Punjabi firebrand, specially at a time when the country has not been able even to recover from the shock of the Calcutta riots. Bhai Parmanand wrongly fell foul of the Congress and separate representation as shuddhi and sangathan were in reality responsible for the present communal tension. The Medina says that from the very brief reports of the Oudh Hindu Sabha that have appeared in the press so far, it is clear that a section has sprung up among the Hindus which now plainly desires to set up a strong opposition to the Muslims and to establish a purely Hindu raj in India. Mr. Malaviya and Bhai Parmanand are the standard-bearers of this movement and in spite of the efforts of a few nationalist Hindus this sentiment is constantly growing. The speeches of these two gentlemen repeated the old lies that Muslims were responsible for riots. As a matter of fact it is these Hindu Sabha speeches and the articles of Hindu papers that engender trouble. The Sada-i-Muslim condemns the classification by Swami Sraddhanand of Indians into cow-protectors and cow-eaters and says that this method of promoting internal unity among Hindus will make them hate Muslims and Christians and thus injure the cause of Indian nationalism.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to the formation of the Bengal Muslim party by Sir Abdur Rahim the Leader writes:—The manifesto of the party is so worded as to deceive the unwary and to disguise its real object which is not national but communal. The formation of the party is a distinctly reactionary move which will not help but retard the political progress of Bengal and deserves to be opposed by the better minds among the Muslims of the province. Mr. Sita Ram, M.L.C., writing to the Indian Daily Telegraph says that those who are acquainted with the history of India even of the recent times, cannot accept the proposition that the Government is absolutely unconnected with the tension that is prevailing between the Hindus and Muslims. "I am not a believer in the doctrine that the Government cannot remove the tension if it means to stop it. The favoured wife treatment of Fuller and the assurance of Lord Minto which have worked so much mischief in India should be regarded as things of the past and the Government of Lord Irwin should start with the clear determination to eschew religion from politics and to bestow appointments on the score of merit and merit only." In the course of an article discussing the means of winning swaraj the Vartman says:—The main obstacles in the way of attaining swaraj are the disorganized condition of the Hindus, their sense of weakness and the fear of death in their minds. If they remove all these there will be no difficulty in establishing swaraj and securing their rightful place among the great nations of the world. It is true that the bureaucratic policy is serving to separate the Hindus and Muslims, but if the former organize and strengthen themselves the latter will be the first to seek unity. Moreover, one crore of Muslims and 34 crores (sic) of Christians can be converted to Hinduism. This is a task to which all the religious societies of Hindus should address themselves. The Aiena dwells on the ties between Muslims and Englishmen and says that they need each other's support and urges Lord Irwin to concede equal rights to Indian Muslims to counteract the efforts of the Hindus to establish their own rule.

The Election Campaign.

The Sainik strongly criticizes the promoters of the Indian Nationalist party and says that they profess to keep away from the Congress in the name of conscience and independence of judgement, but the real fact is that their attitude is an indication of their slave mentality. Their conscience had forsaken them when they co-operated with the bureaucracy stained with the general massacre of Jallianwala Bagh, but it assumes formidable proportions when the question of co-operation with the Congress arises. Is freedom's battle won by such methods? In the battle of life victory is won by those alone who possess military discipline. In another note the paper compares the liberals with Jaichand and the Swarajists with Prithviraj and says that the promoters of the Indian Nationalist party are out merely for personal gain. The paper also violently attacks Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and says:—It seems that the road to India's ruin will be paved with the good intentions of Pandit Malaviya. The Pratap takes Bhai Permanand and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya severely to task for their efforts to set up Hindu Sabha candidates during the next elections in contravention of the resolution of the Delhi Mahasabha and says that if the Hindu Sabha meddles in this affair there is sure to be a serious split in its camp which consists of men ranging from official toadies to anarchists. Even if the sabha triumphs in the next elections the only thing it would gain would be a few high offices for the Hindus. It is vain for it to expect that it would be able to get all that it wants through the majority of votes in the legislatures because the steel claw of the Government will never allow it to do so. The Aj opposes the active participation of the Congress in the forthcoming elections on the ground that it would be derogatory to its position as the national Parliament of India and would imply a tacit recognition of the Legislative bodies as the sole means of attaining swaraj. We think that to take part in elections is to acknowledge the need for constitutional agitation and we still prefer the winning of swaraj through proper and peaceful efforts of the people themselves. The Shakti regards the formation of the Indian nationalist party as a revolt against the Congress and says that this "unity" has been brought about by the liberals only with the object of opposing the Swarajists and as such cannot last beyond the next elections. Mr. Chintamani says that to vote for the Swarajists is to vote for the bureaucracy but our view is that to vote for the liberals is to vote for Czardom. If these apostles of unity are really striving for swaraj they should take a step forward and flock under the banner of the Congress.

Political propaganda.

Under the heading "Preparations to swallow Tibet" the Pratap publishes an article in which the writer dealing with the efforts of the British Government "to annex Tibet" refers to the recent growth of anti-British feeling in that country and says that the British Government is sure to devise some means to meddle with the affairs of Tibet. It may do so by setting it against Nepal but it would be a great misfortune for us if the Indian armies or the Gurkha bayonets and rifles roast the hearts of Tibetans. It is, therefore, necessary to carry on propaganda to save Tibet whose annexation will not only affect India but will prove to be a new nail in the coffins of other Asiatic countries. Commenting on the above the paper remarks that the Tibetan policy of the British Government is a part of its policy of dominating Asia. A wall of subjection is being built round India and we the Hindus and Muslims are ruining ourselves by mutual quarrels. Writing on the "National Week" the Prem deplores the activities of those who, forgetting the Jallianwala Bagh incident, are seeking election to the Councils and thus to make themselves parts of the same machinery which reduced their honour to dust. This national week tells us that in order to maintain its prestige the conquering nation treats with the greatest contempt the self-sacrifice of the slaves and does not hesitate in the least in crushing them in the mill of repression whenever such an occasion arises. Har Dayal Nag writing in the Hridaya holds the foreign Government responsible for the present miseries of the villagers and says that village organization is the only means of attaining swaraj and of removing the sufferings of the people.

Indian states.

Discussing the position of Indian states in connexion with the swaraj movement the Aj writes:—The recent proceedings of the Government have made it plain that it cares little for Indian chiefs. The time has come when they should espouse the cause of swaraj. They should grant swaraj to their own states, which is nothing more than the establishment of representative government on democratic principles. They should make themselves the presidents of such democratic administration and thereby preserve themselves and their dynasties and become leaders in the emancipation of India. The Vartman bitterly complains that Hindus are being oppressed in Hyderabad and says:—Perhaps no other state has so many diabolical laws as are in force in Hyderabad and Bhopal. For Hindus these states are worse than hell. The Nizam has even overdone Aurangzeb and has made it impossible for Hindus to live there. Can the law of the British Government strike at the rulers of Nabha and Indore only? The Aziz-i-Hind takes strong exception to the tone of Lord Reading's reply to the Nizam and says:—Lord Reading has thrown all caution and wisdom to the winds in his reply and has severely strained the loyalty of the Indian princes. The Swarajists will now have every opportunity for propaganda among the chiefs and will be able to establish the truth of their warning that the British Government would forget its well-wishers as soon as the war was over. This sad travesty of the title of "Faithful Ally" bestowed on the Nizam will disgrace His Majesty the King-Emperor himself and will spread the impression throughout India that British policy changes with every new Viceroy. There was a time when the Nizam not only helped with men and money but used his influence as a Muslim leader to promote loyalty to Government and all Englishmen used to praise him. But today a departing Viceroy not only thinks fit to scold him severely but declares for the benefit of the other chiefs also that they cannot count before the British Government. His Excellency has given the enemies of the British Government an excellent handle to tamper with the loyalty of the Indian chiefs and if, God forbid, bad times again befall the British Empire, these ill-treatments accorded by British officials will serve it very badly indeed. We would advise the Nizam to abandon his dream of the restoration of Berar and to take warning from the fate of the Sultan of Turkey, the Czar of Russia and the Holkar of Indore. He should now cultivate good relations with the British Government and its officials as an antagonist like Lord Reading is now no longer in power and has been replaced by a nobleman of noble family like Lord Irwin. We also appeal to Lord Irwin to heal the wounds made by Lord Reading in the hearts of the chiefs than whom there is no more loyal class of Indians. The Najat says that Lord Reading's decision denying the Nizam's right over Berar is in direct contravention of treaties and British principles of administration and the Queen's Proclamation of 1857. Lord Reading's contention that as Britain is the paramount power in India she has the right to give final decision is not justified as possession of power does not place any person above justice. If Britain wants to do what she chooses in her pride of power she should never try to justify her actions. When Britain has not dealt fairly with a potentate who gave such aid in the critical times of the war how can we poor Indians put any faith in her promises?

The Agricultural Commission.

The Haqiqat acknowledges the ability and experience of the members of the Agricultural Commission and hopes for great good to the country if there is adequate public co-operation with that body. In a subsequent issue the same paper supports the Raja of Salempur in his protests against the non-representation of the landlords of Agra and Oudh on the commission.

The United Provinces Co-operative Conference.

The Oudh Akhbar welcomes the holding of the United Provinces Co-operative Conference at Fyzabad under non-official aegis, but fears that this new move will not help to make the co-operative movement more popular in these provinces as the peasants have not sufficient faith in the liberal leaders who alone seem to hold the stage in that body. Little good can result from the accompanying agricultural and industrial exhibitions as the general run of peasants and artisans can hardly be expected to take to the complicated English machinery which would be exhibited in it. Time and effort would be better employed in exhibiting Indian implements and in trying to improve on them in the Indian way.

Release of political prisoners.

Referring to Lala Lajpat Rai's suggestion made in the People regarding the release of political and Akali prisoners the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—A man of tranquillity with no higher ambition than to serve India, as His Excellency has impressively told us in his first utterance, we would seriously suggest to the Viceroy to leave no stone unturned to earn India's good-will by adopting the suggestion of Lala Lajpat Rai.

Foreign affairs.

The Medina insinuates that the present estrangement between Italy and Turkey is due to mischievous activities of the British behind the scenes who want to set these two countries by the ears in order to render the Turks too weak to prevent British exploitation of Mosul and Iraq. The expulsion of the British from these regions will mean the extinction of European domination over the East. Whatever may happen in future, it is certain that Mussolini will in the end befool these British statesmen and land them in inextricable difficulties. As for Turkey, her life and honour depend upon her own strength of arms and the establishment of a league of eastern nations. The Hamdam vehemently denounces French action in Damascus and writes:—We wish the admirers of Western civilization could take notice of these atrocities and the League of Nations, if it really desires to establish peace in the world, should call France to account for them.

Calcutta riots.

The riots continue to absorb the attention of the Press. The Leader writes:—The sickening details of cowardly and brutal assaults in Calcutta show the utter incapacity of the Calcutta police to control the situation. Can the administration pride itself on this state of anarchy? Is this the sample of bureaucratic efficiency? The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The only cure for the present communal outbreaks is either to scrap the Reforms and restore the old autocracy of the Civil Service, because then alone can it recognize its sense of duty and responsibility which can admit of no dyarchy—or to give power to the people when they will do exactly what Akbar or Asoka would have done or what the Maharaja of Kashmir or the Nawab of Rampur will do today. Proceeding, the paper says that Government would have adopted martial law had a tenth part of the riotous demonstration borne a political hue. "But when (communal) lawlessness reigns supreme, the Government of Bengal sits comfortably in the cool heights of Darjeeling leaving the 'niggers' to have it out among themselves in the heated plains below. The Calcutta riots are the best indictment of the British administration in Bengal and India." The Aj writes:—The recrudescence of riots in Calcutta is a proof of the impotence of the administration. If rulers exhibit such weakness on such occasions, not only will riots increase in number, but the prestige of the Government will also suffer. Will not their eyes open even after so much bloodshed and loss to trade? If bands of educated and zealous youths are organized in every ward such riots will never occur, but it is to be regretted that rulers put obstacles in the way. The Shakti writes:—The "steel frame" which from time to time seizes innocent and unarmed patriots with its bloody claws could not do anything when the hooligans were indulging in plunder, massacre and bloodshed in Calcutta. It appeared as if for one week the "steel frame" did not exist in the city. Order could not be restored without the intervention of those very leaders whom the Government calls rebels and who have at one time or another been charged with causing breach of the peace. The Anand remarks:—If even the Calcutta riots in which the Hindus have been the sufferers do not open their eyes and they do not strengthen their organization, then their annihilation is inevitable. The Vartman notes with gratification, that the Hindus were able to defend themselves and says:—Hindu Sangathan has caught on and we warn the Mulims that they will now have to bow everywhere before it. They should, therefore, abandon all hopes of injuring the Hindus by creating disturbances and should come to the right path. Otherwise they will begin to be consumed by the fire of their own making. The Gyan Shakti writes:—It is altogether false that Englishmen instigate riots for their own good, but certainly there can be some truth in the statement that the British Government does not try to suppress them or that it takes inadequate steps to prevent them. These riots, however, are capable of doing the greatest injury to the Government. The hooligans who commit these riots are getting emboldened, and if the Government does not take steps to suppress them, it will sooner or later have to repent of its indifference. The Arya Mitra writes:—It appears that Muslims want to extirpate Arya Samajists so that they may have a free hand in dealing with the Hindus. It is for this reason that Muslims are ready to pick up quarrels with Arya Samajists. Government should protect peaceful people from the attacks of miscreants, but it is to be regretted that in several places instead of bringing the aggressors to their senses Government has exerted pressure on the aggrieved party. Instead of stopping lawful processions of Arya Samajists and of Hindus the Government should arrange for their safe conduct. If it cannot do so owing to the threats of Muslims, it will show that the British Government is defective. In the course of an article discussing the causes of the riots that have taken place during the last few years the Medina says:—The power which is at the bottom of these riots and is working as an agent is selfishness and is such that in the near future it will prove to be the messenger of death for those very self-seekers. When we deeply look into these riots we find that they began with the establishment of British rule and have become part and parcel of those blessings which have come to India along with Western domination. The Western rulers had taken India from Muslims. So in order to weaken the rightful heirs such laws and regulations were made as were sufficient to annihilate the Muslims. And then by various legal and political means the Muslims were thoroughly robbed. The ungrateful Hindus, too, who owed their civilization and prosperity to Muslim rule, were actuated by hatred and enmity and they decided that either the Muslims should be turned out of India or should be converted to Hinduism. The Hindus carried a persistent campaign against Muslims. Malaviya went to the Punjab and handed over the sword of Sangathan to Multanis. Calumnies were spread and simple Muslims were provoked so that they might commit riots. The other selfish group is the Civil Service of the Government whose existence and the heavenly luxuries which it enjoys depend upon Hindu-Muslim tension. During 150 years of administration there could be only one way of maintaining the rule, that is to keep the two great communities perpetually at strife with each other and then to bestow favours, now on one community and then on another, so that in the hope of securing favours the helpless slaves may continue to fly at each other's throats. A clear proof of the selfishness of Government is furnished by the fact that the machinery of "law and order" becomes paralyzed and proves helpless in preventing the riots and in their initial stages. It is only when a long list of loss of life and property is ready that the machinery begins to move and then it sprinkles salt over wounds. The only remedy is an inter-communal pact. The Government cannot stand on the foundation of these riots. These disturbances will one day entirely dispel the illusion and will bring into being a united front against the Government. Your administration cannot possibly continue for ever. A change is inevitable and where will the Government then be? In the abyss of ignominy. The Haqiqat says that the injured Hindus and Muslims of Calcutta should thank Malaviyaji, Swami Sraddhanand and their Sangathanist followers whose dissension-breeding speeches have involved them in such troubles. The local police was unable to suppress the riots because the number of Muslims in it is only 20 per cent. and it is a general complaint of the Muslims of the place that the police is in sympathy with the Hindus. (This complaint is voiced by some other Muslim papers also.) In these circumstances Sir Abdur Rahim was right in feeling the necessity for establishing a separate Muslim party in Bengal. The position of the Calcutta Muslims is very delicate, as they have got neither their press, nor tanzim, nor a leader to organize them. The Sangathanist Hindu leaders are wholly responsible for the riots in Calcutta. Referring to the remarks of Anglo-Indian papers that the Calcutta riots have established the indispensability of the British Government the Nejat writes:—In spite of a powerful administration with its army and the police, laws and regulations the temples and mosques of Calcutta were destroyed, murder and rapine in broad day-light were rampant for seven days and disturbances have broken out all through the length and breadth of the country during the past three years, but the Government could not stop them. In these circumstances the existence of such a Government cannot be said to be indispensable.

Armed recruits of Government were unsuccessful in establishing peace and it was the Hindu-Muslim volunteers of the Congress who saved places of worship. This demonstrates nothing but the bankruptcy, incapacity and failure of Government.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to executive orders stopping music before mosques at Allahabad, Lucknow, Mussoorie and other cities the Signal writes:—The Government in India appears to be presenting a new theory of law and order. Here law-abidingness does not mean respecting the rights of others. To penalise the Hindus for their weakness or peacefulness is to place a premium on turbulence. "Then what does the Government expect? Conciliating the Musalmans? The Government may set the two communities against each other, but does it know that by this policy it is also making its own fate certain? It is alienating the sympathy of even the moderate Hindus? This interference in their religious things is sure to incense even the Hindu villagers both against the Musalmans and also the Government for its siding with the Muslim case. On the other hand, this encouragement to the Muslims to appeal to force off and on will surely make them bold and assertive and, if not for India at least for Muslims abroad, the Musalmans of India may come into a serious conflict with the Government and then it may realize its mistake. Or if the foreign Muslim politics prove barren, the Musalmans may some day again combine with the discontented Hindus and then? Thus it will be seen that this unscientific and inequitable policy of the Government is not going to benefit even the Government in the end." The Leader writes:—The dispute about music before mosques is of very recent development. The Muslims have not become more prayerful than before and yet formerly they did not object to it as interfering with the discharge of their religious duties. Their mosques in large towns are often situated on crowded thoroughfares where the din of modern traffic is generally at its height at the time of their evening prayers. But this evidently does not interfere with their prayers. It is the Hindu music alone which is objected to . . . . Reasonable Muslims must themselves admit that their co-religionists who have begun to object to music before mosques are gratuitously thrusting a quarrel on the Hindus. The latter are not prepared to yield on a point on which they feel convinced that they are in the right. The Calcutta tragedy should be a warning to all, and it is high time that the question is settled in a reasonable and friendly spirit. A correspondent writing in the Arya Mitra strongly protests against the stoppage of the Aryasamaj nagarkirtan procession at Mussoorie by the Superintendent of Police, Dehra Dun, and says:—It is neither fair nor proper that the activities of the Arya Samaj should be interfered with on account of the threats of hooligans. Is the Superintendent prepared to stop Muslim processions also in this manner? If not, why is such injustice perpetrated on Arya Samajists? Does not the provincial Government recognize the religious rights of Arya Samajists? The Sainik opines that nothing has contributed so much towards promoting friction between Hindus and Muslims as the system of communal representation. The Pratap remarks that the formation of the "Bengal Muslim Party" by Sir Abdur Rahim, synchronising as it does with the recent Calcutta riots, is calculated to aggravate the prevailing tension between the two communities. It is the duty of all the Hindus and the Muslims of Bengal and of the entire press to stop the progress of Sir Abdur Rahim's new party and preach unity and mutual tolerance. Referring to the report that at Jubbulpore the Arya Samajists preferred cow-sacrifice to abstention from music before mosques the Hamdam writes:—We wish to warn the Sanatan Dharmists how the Arya Samajists are creating new troubles which lead to cow-sacrifice. The Arya Samajists have shown that they have not the same reverence for the cow which the Sanatanists have and that they do not mind sacrifice. Mahatma Gandhi who is the greatest advocate of cow-protection should now come out of his retreat and rouse public opinion against these Arya Samajists. He should try to remove these mischievous elements and to restore such cordial relations between the Hindus of ancient faith and Muslims as existed between them during and long after Muslim rule and without which no movement for Indian liberty can succeed. Referring to a demonstration of the Banda Muslims under the presidentship of Mr. Masud-uz-Zaman, the local M.L.C., the Haqiqat regrets to see that the ill-treatment of some Muslim employees in the local boards by Hindus has compelled Banda Muslims to go to the length of passing a resolution requesting Government not to grant any further instalment of the Reforms. The paper asks Indian leaders to inquire into the matter and find out why Banda Muslims have adopted such a harsh attitude.

The Sabarmati agreement.

The Leader writes:—The agreement reached at the Sabarmati conference under the shadow—we do not know if with the blessing—of the Mahatma has given away the vital principle of non-acceptance of office and thus marks one more and a very important climb-down on the part of the orthodox Swarajists . . . Now the greatest of all the Swarajist somersaults has come. Commenting on these remarks the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—If Panditji has really "climbed down" there is no reason why there should be a liberal party hereafter in the country, or for that matter a unionist party, or any other party? If there is any honesty in their professions, the liberals must now return to the Congress and Pandit Malaviya should relinquish his latter day hostility to the same. "Never was liberal confusion more confounded." The Aj does not approve of the compromise as in its opinion it involves the sacrifice of principles and means a complete surrender to the responsive cooperationists. It is most surprising that ministerships are sought to be accepted in the name of the Congress. The Anand regards the agreement as a triumph of liberal principles. The Surya writes:—The agreement is a victory of responsive cooperationists and of those who stand for constitutional methods. We are satisfied with the compromise, but doubt very much whether the Swarajists will stick to it after securing victory in the elections. The Oudh Akhbar hopes that the Swarajists and responsivists will patch up their differences to make a united stand against the nationalist party.

Indians in the colonies.

The Leader hopes that the acceptance by the Union Government of the Government of India's proposal for the holding of a round table conference and its decision to postpone consideration of the Areas Reservation and Immigration and Registration Bill mark the beginning of the adoption by the Government of South Africa of a considerate and broad-minded policy which cannot fail to create a favourable atmosphere in both countries. Its attitude places an obligation on the people of this country who feel strongly on the subject to exercise wise self-restraint and to say and do nothing calculated to disturb the friendly atmosphere that has been created. The Indian Daily Telegraph hopes that the announcement will satisfy all classes of Indians. While expressing satisfaction at the Union Government's decision the Haqiqat remarks:—From the wording of the announcement it appears that all the anti-Indian activities of the Union Government are actuated by the spirit of racial distinction against Asiatics, which has spread almost all over Europe. No such spirit should be allowed to prevail in the conference. The Hamdam entertains no hope of any real good coming out of the proposed round table conference in South Africa and says:—The gist of the correspondence on the subject shows that the present state is more disquieting than before and we are afraid that Mr. Andrews has been entirely deceived in the matter. The efforts made by the Indian Government in this connexion indicate no way of solving the problem satisfactorily, nor does the correspondence show that the Indian Government has truly represented the feelings of Indians. South African or other national or international questions cannot be solved in accordance with the wishes of Indians until Indian national representatives are given an opportunity of dealing effectively with these matters, and this cannot be without a national Government. The Oudh Akhbar remarks that Indians will not tolerate any agreement involving the repatriation of South African Indians because they did not send out their people to distant countries to be eventually returned disappointed, leaving the fruits of their labours to be enjoyed by others.

The Agricultural Commission.

In the course of a letter to the Pioneer, the Hon'ble Lala Sukhbir Singh, Honorary Secretary, United Provinces Zamindars' Association, writes:—In the present circumstances neither the Government, nor the proprietors, nor the cultivators have any inducement to invest money in the improvement of land which is due chiefly to the defects of the Tenancy laws and land revenue assessment. It is, therefore, most regrettable that these matters have been excluded from the terms of reference of the Commission. As the Commission is not properly representative and every province has its own aspect of agricultural development, it will be, I think, most appropriate if at least two co-opted members from each province having practical knowledge and experience of agricultural problems are added to the Commission. The Oudh Akhbar also pleads for the co-optation of men having a thorough knowledge of the agricultural conditions of their respective provinces. Commenting on the invitation of the Governor of Bombay to Mr. Gandhi in connexion with the Agricultural Commission the Abhyudaya remarks:—If this invitation is an indication of any change of heart on the part of the Government, then surely it will do good both to the Government and the people. There will hardly be any room for complaint if the authorities consult the leaders in this manner and try to solve the problems of the country in the light of their suggestions.

Muslim affairs.

Under the heading "The Muslim Mentality" the Leader opposes the proposals of a communal nature made by Mr. Mohammed Yaqub in his presidential address to the United Provinces Muslim League and says that his suggestion regarding the election plank for the Muslims is one which zealous supporters of Sangathan will very likely not be slow to avail themselves of. In another note the paper writes:—The resolutions of the Provincial Muslim Educational Conference show almost without exception a narrow communal outlook and a rooted distrust of Hindus which we deplore. We have no hesitation in saying that we know of no justification for such attitude on the part of the leaders of the Muslim education movement in these provinces. In yet another note the paper writes:—"It seems that there is but one policy understanded of a section of Muslim public men: 'All for Muslims'. It need not be said that no Hindu publicist, be he a nationalist the most fervent, can or will swallow this."

Military training for Indians.

Referring to the report that the Prince of Wales College, Dehra Dun, was able to send only five candidates for the Simla Sandhurst examination in 1925, the Leader writes:—The inadequate provision of facilities for military training and the selection of cadets chiefly from a particular class of people are all parts of a higher and highly unsatisfactory military policy against which public opinion has been and is protesting. That in a country of more than 300 millions only six persons should be found fit in a year to be given the King's Commission if a fair selection were made nobody outside bureaucratic circles would believe and that the State should be able to provide facilities for military training for 70 cadets only does not show that the Government have been pursuing a generous military policy and that they are keen on providing facilities for military training for Indian boys.

The Viceroy.

Referring to the report that the Viceroy made expeditions incognito at Dehra Dun and visited several outlying villages the Leader writes:—This is a promising start. Lord Irwin when he descends to the plains should find time to acquire first-hand knowledge of rural life, the economic condition of the agricultural classes who are the real people of India and of the provisions that exist for their education, medical relief and sanitation. Knowledge will breed sympathy and insight and will enable him to understand why there is so much discontent in the land and to make him realize more keenly the urgent need of rural reconstruction. The Oudh Akhbar regards the visit as a practical proof of His Excellency's interest in agriculture, and suggests that in the beginning of the winter season he should make an extensive tour and should inspect not only the agricultural conditions but also sanitary and educational conditions as well of poor cultivators. If like other preceding Viceroys he too depends on the reports of departments no useful agricultural improvement will be possible.

Indian States.

Referring to the report that the Nizam has made it a criminal offence for any person to keep pictures of cows the Leader says:—The Nizam has been doing things which do not fit in with his designation 'exalted'. The Sada-i-Muslim complains that certain Hindu journals led by the Vartman have started a campaign of calumny against the rulers of Hyderabad and Bhopal simply in order that certain Muslim chiefs also may be dethroned like the chiefs of Nabha and Indore. It is to be hoped that the Government will not be influenced by such malicious propaganda and will not take any action against the popular states of Hyderabad and Bhopal as this will cause serious resentment among Muslims.

Bolshevism.

Referring to the report of the existence of a secret society of Bolsheviks in Paris called the "Indian People" the object of which is to teach Indian, Persian, Afghan and Chinese students the doctrines of Bolshevism and bring about simultaneous revolutions in several Asiatic countries with a view to remove British supremacy from Asia, the Vartman remarks:—It undoubtedly involves a great menace to India especially at a time when it is full of dissensions and conflicts. If the British Government does not stop its repressive policy and does not endeavour to improve the existing situation in the country these conspirators will gain ground in India. Although the Indian political situation is not favourable to Bolshevism, yet it cannot be said that India is altogether unaffected by socialism. Besides the propagation of socialism is easier than other movements.

Foreign affairs.

Commenting on the installation of Reza Khan the Pratap remarks :—The people of Persia have acted unwisely in founding the dynasty of Reza Khan and in accepting this Reza Khan has gone against the spirit of the times and the interests of his country. How good would it have been if instead of accepting the crown he had established a Republic? The Oudh Akhbar says that the British Government is using all its power to usurp the oil-springs in Mosul and in intrigues against Turkey. The only conclusion which can be drawn from the news regarding the agreements between Italy and Greece and the former's intention to invade Turkey is that all these agreements and intentions against Turkey are due to Britain's intrigues and that after the remission of a considerable portion of Italy's debts it was secretly agreed between Britain and Italy that the latter should enter into an agreement with Greece and should itself make preparations for invading Asiatic Turkey. The news received from Turkey shows that the Turks are also aware of Britain's intrigues and Italy's intentions and have begun to make necessary military preparations to defend their national rights. We think Britain has made the state of affairs sufficiently critical. It should now act wisely and should not long trifle with the sense of honour and self-respect of a noble and brave nation, and should not goad the afflicted world to another dangerous and world-wide war. Turkey's condition is quite different from that of the Riffs. Turkey is not only powerful but it is on friendly terms with its neighbouring nation with whose powerful aid it can carry on war against any power for a long time. Britain should have some regard for its subject nations whose aspirations for liberty it is wantonly crushing. They will not again commit the mistake which they made during the late war.

Calcutta riots.

The riots continue to be the main theme of press comments. The Leader strongly supports the demand of Calcutta papers for an inquiry to find out the "clever brains working behind the disturbances" and says:—The Government of Bengal cannot shirk the inquiry without arousing profound misgivings. The Abhyudaya says that the continuance of arson and bloodshed in Calcutta for more than three weeks shows that not only the Bengal Government but the Government of India also is totally unfit to rule. Not only Indians but the people of the whole world can to-day ask the Government of India whether the scene at Calcutta is a specimen of its much vaunted "law and order." Does "law and order" mean that the Governor of Bengal should enjoy himself at Darjeeling when Calcutta is in the throes of bloodshed? The Surya suggests the organization of civic guards and says:—The continuance of hooliganism for so many days in a premier city like Calcutta is an indelible blot on the Bengal Government. In another article the paper points out that the lesson which the Calcutta riots convey is that Hindus should lose no time in strengthening their organization and making themselves strong. Hindu organization is indispensable for Hindu-Muslim unity. Referring to the questions asked in Parliament about the Calcutta riots the Vartman says:—If those who asked the questions had been an eye-witness they would have seen how negligent the bureaucracy of Bengal has been in allowing this riot to spread and what a terrible conspiracy of imperialism lies hidden in this negligence. This policy which is casting a blot on the administration is being enforced through those very persons who during the past years enacted a strange drama in the name of the maintenance of public peace and the protection of the lives of the people and showered bullets on unarmed and peaceful Satyagrahis. But there is a vast difference between the disturbances of those days and the present riot. The peaceful agitation of those days was fatal to imperialism whereas the terrible and brutal bloodshed of to-day is being considered as desirable for strengthening the foundations of the Empire. The paper publishes a letter from Debi Datt Dwivedi (temperance preacher of United Provinces, now in Calcutta) under the heading "Prostitutes, pimps, tailors, vegetable-sellers, doctors, etc., poison the Hindus and stab them: Englishmen and Christians should also be on their guard: Invasion of mullahs in villages: Efforts to annihilate Hindus in every way." The writer gives instances of the allegations contained in the head-lines and exhorts both Hindus and Christians to be very cautious in appointing Muslims in any capacity whatever. It is reported, says the writer, that a band of Maulvis is going round in every village and town of the country to incite Muslims with a view to the ultimate establishment of Muslim raj. The Aj strongly criticizes the authorities for the delay in the suppression of the riot and says:—They wanted that the Hindus and Muslims might get bewildered over their mutual fighting, appeal to the Government for intervention and be convinced that they could not do without the bureaucracy. This suspicion is confirmed by the efforts of Sir Abdur Rahim to form a separate Muslim party in the Council to oppose Swarajists and by the Governor not coming down from the hills till the riots were over. It is a point worth consideration whether the responsibility for the riots cannot be laid at the door of those who stand to gain by the diversion of the attention of the people from politics to communal or religious disputes. It will be desirable to demand an explanation from Lord Lytton for the prolongation of the riots. The Anand says that the weakness displayed by the authorities on the occasion of the two riots in Calcutta casts a slur on the prestige of the British Government, with the result that people have begun to doubt its capacity to maintain peace and order. It is also said that the Government itself wants to set the two communities by the ears and that is why it does not stop disturbances. The Shankar points out that while Swami Shraddhanand condemned the desecration of mosques by Hindus at Calcutta, Maulana Shaukat Ali gave vent to venomous sentiments against them and gave a certificate of good conduct to Muslims despite their atrocities on Hindus. This has exposed the blackness of the heart of Maulana Shaukat Ali and Hindus will no longer trust him. The Medina says that Hindus in their passion for revenge and bigotry have taken leave of their senses. They are wantonly making an exhibition of their innate wickedness. Reports of arson, murder and rapine are received every day. It seems that there is an organized and persistent conspiracy against the Muslims. The police is in sympathy with the Hindus and whenever it resorts to firing it is the Muslims who are the victims. If the helplessness of the Muslims and the high-handedness of the Government and the Hindus demand that the Muslims of Calcutta should be ruined, then it is all very good for a Muslim does not become a true believer unless he is utterly ruined. These troubles of the Muslims of Calcutta are bound to evoke the protection of God and the sympathy of the Prophet. Then the Muslims will realize that they have no protector or helper in India except the Almighty. At that time, the negligent and selfish Government and the mischievous and villainous Hindus will realize with what calamitous and fatal consequences this high-handedness was fraught. Meanwhile we request the Muslims of Calcutta to keep quiet and organize themselves in religious brotherhood. The Hamdam thinks that special preparations had been made to molest the Muslims and that the use of firearms and bombs clearly reveals the hands of high class people. The Haqiqat says:—Although the Muslims have suffered heavy casualties they have been charged in large numbers with murder, etc. Why did the police not arrest Hindu murderers? It is the duty of His Excellency Lord Lytton and his Executive councillors to inquire into the matter. The Arya Patra remarks that communal representation in local bodies and Government service is the main cause of communal tension. The Hindustani accuses the Government of Bengal and the Government of India of callousness to the sufferings of the people and says:—His Excellency Lord Lytton came down to Calcutta only on Thursday last and that too not with any other object but to see off his wife. How can, then, Indians remain satisfied with rulers who remain indifferent to the loss of life and property of the people? We have repeatedly said that such Hindu-Muslim riots which are now taking the form of a regular warfare and are spreading from one province to another, will prove very dangerous to the Government itself because they will make those very people arrogant, bloody and tyrannical who have so far been thoroughly loyal and faithful to the British Government. The Rahnuma says that Muslims were not only fired at from house-tops but at one place a bomb was also dropped on them. Such incidents show that high class and educated persons also participated in the riots. We can only regard this state of things as the blessings of Pandit Malaviya's visit to Calcutta.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Calcutta riots have greatly accentuated the communal tension. Commenting on the report of Mr. Muhammad Ali's interview to the Associated Press the Leader writes:—His interview is an intimation to the public that he is going to make another bid for the active leadership of his community. Mr. Muhammad Ali by the sort of views he has expressed at a psychological moment has rendered a disservice to the cause of a better understanding between the two communities. The Aj writes:—We do not know where the Muslim demand for special privileges and facilities will lead to. It is because their unjust demands are conceded that they are increasing day by day. Muslim leaders have now begun to urge reservation of separate educational grants and of seats in educational institutions. Such unfair demands have poisoned national life. They want to get more advantage out of the taxes paid by non-Muslims and yet they demand separate representation also for themselves. We cannot but strongly oppose such an attitude. The Vartman exhorts Hindus to organize their own bands, to boycott Muslim bandsmen and to give up the worship of Muslim saints and tombs. This, says the paper, has become necessary for self-defence as Muslims are bent on creating disturbances. If Muslim bandsmen are engaged there will be occasions when Hindu marriage processions will be attacked and robbed and the well-dressed processionists will be beaten and all their pomp and show will vanish. And then neither the police nor any one else will come to the rescue. The Anand writes:—Hindus have always had the freedom to play music before mosques and until two or three years back no Muslim took any objection to it. It is inexplicable why they have adopted a different attitude now. The Hindus too are not prepared to yield in this matter. The Aj is surprised to find Maulana Muhammad Ali blaming the majority of Hindu leaders for not opposing the Hindu Sangathan and says:—An unbiassed mind can easily find out who the aggressors in these disturbances are and what the cause of the Hindu Sangathan is. The Hindus cannot be blamed for they were in need of it. The blame lies on the shoulders of those who at the instigation of the foreigners established the Muslim League in opposition to nationalism and are laying great stress on the separation of Muslims from non-Muslims. We dare say that no nationalist would support the unfair demands of Muslims. We are ourselves no advocates of the Hindu Sabha but in truth and justice it must be said that it was the unfair demands of the Muslims that compelled the Hindus to form a separate organization for self-defence. Reverting to the subject in two further articles the paper writes:—If Muslims do not want to become nationalists without special privileges and separate representation, the rest of the country will have to unite to oppose their demands. This will be a most unpleasant task but it will become inevitable. The Bharat Dharma says that Muslims do not act upon the precept "Live and let live." They still dream of a Muslim raj in India little knowing that like the sword of Democles the bureaucratic sword hangs alike over the Hindus and the Muslims. They have no idea of the miserable condition of their holy places and of the Muslim states outside India but are only determined to break the heads of their Hindu brethren. The brutal atrocities perpetrated by them almost convince us of the trite saying that "no one is meaner than a Muslim." The Prabhat strongly protests against the stoppage of nagarkirtan procession of the Arya Samajists at Mussoorie and Hapur and says that the Government not only interferes in the religious duties of the Hindus but also deprives them of their civic rights. The Medina complains that following in the footsteps of Christian missionaries and padris, the Hindus have also commenced to paint the character of the Prophet of Islam in the blackest colours. The Secretary, Tabligh-ul-Islam Association, Nigram, has brought to notice a book named "Vichitra Jiwan" published by the editor of the Arya Musafir, Agra, in which unholy and the meanest possible attacks have been made on the sacred personality of the great Prophet. It seems as if such non-sense and barbarities are the sole instruments of propaganda in the hands of the Samajist missionaries. By these unholy doings they are revealing their own meanness. We appeal to Muslims to invoke legal aid for the punishment of these slanderers and to convince officials that the Arya Samajist goondas and mischief-makers are fanning the flames of riots and disturbances in India. If proper measures are not adopted to crush this movement the bureaucracy itself will be held responsible for any future bloodshed. The Rohilkhand Gazette also urges the forfeiture of this book. The Mashriq draws the attention of the Government to the need of appointing Christians and Anglo-Indians as head assistants or head clerks in the various offices of the Government as the Hindus when appointed to these posts do all in their power to keep out Muslims. Referring to the editorial article of the Vartman of April 30, advocating the boycott of Muslim bandsmen, the Sada-i-Muslim writes:—It is well known that idolators have always been striving to injure Muslims. The attitude which a large body of our compatriots has adopted at present is extremely hostile and for months the Hindus of Cawnpore have been trying their best to injure Muslims by boycotting them. The views expressed in the Vartman are extremely provocating. It is the duty of Cawnpore Muslims to find work for such of their co-religionists as are out of employment, or have been or are proposed to be boycotted. Even if now Muslims prefer selfish and individual existence to corporate life then all the designs of the enemies of Islam will be fulfilled and our negligence will spell our ruin.

Muslim affairs.

The Indian Daily Telegraph deplores the emphasis laid by the President of the Provincial Muslim League on the protection of Muslim interests and says:—Supposing we grant the extraordinary protection that Mr. Yaqub wants in matters legislative, then farewell to the dream of responsible government through Parliamentary institutions. The paper holds the system of communal representation to be responsible for the present communal tension and riots. The Sainik holds a similar view. Approving the general tone of the presidential address of Maulvi Muhammad Yaqub the Hamdam says that the first and foremost thing on which he has rightly laid stress is the need of a strict adherence to the safeguards provided in the Lucknow pact according to which no legislative proposal affecting the religious or national rights of any community can be proceeded with when it is opposed by at least three-fourths of the members of the community. During the last two years the pact has, to the detriment of the Muslims at large, been disregarded by Hindu members. His remarks for the separate representation of Muslims are useful. The statistics of the posts held by Muslims and Hindus under the provincial Government may well be considered by the Hindu members of the Council to whom a little increase in the number of Muslims in the police department is not pleasing. His proposals regarding the Hindu-Muslim unity are especially worthy of the consideration of influential men of both the communities. In another article the paper remarks that more than half of the resolutions passed by the Provincial Muslim Educational Conference point out the difficulties which the Muslims have to face in the establishment and the maintenance of primary schools and maktabs in accordance with their needs. These difficulties are due to the indifference and the opposition of the Hindu members of the local bodies who acting upon their Sangathanist principles, like to spend more on Hindu education and the minimum on Muslim education and are not prepared to give grants to Muslim schools from the general educational fund on the plea that the rules do not allow them to do so. In fact the Meston scheme is for affording additional aids to Muslims and in no way prevents the local bodies from giving grants from the general fund. There is already a demand from the Hindus for the abolition of the Meston scheme and hence the conference has passed a resolution against the said demand. The paper strongly supports the resolutions passed by the conference. The Haqiqat remarks that Mr. Yaqub's address has fulfilled all expectations. In supporting Muslim claims he has shown that the Muslims are helpless in the face of the Hindu majority not only in the reformed councils but in the matter of employment also they get much less than what they are entitled to. Some Hindu correspondents wrote to the Leader complaining of excessive representation of Muslims in the Police and Tahsildarships. They should look at the figures cited by Mr. Yaqub. Referring to the answers given in the local council to Khan Bahadur Hafiz Hidayat Husain's questions regarding the nomination and education of the depressed classes, Al Bashir accuses the Government of partiality towards the Hindus with a view to increasing their power and prosperity. It says that the inauguration of the reforms in these provinces has led to the establishment of Hindu raj and asks:—Can there be any intelligent and honest Muslim who, after these events, can honestly entertain loyal feelings towards the Government and support the reforms scheme? Can Government be congratulated on having reduced the Muslims, who have themselves been rulers in this country, to such a state and left them to the mercy of the Hindus? In another editorial note the paper charges the Government of Sir William Marris with weakness and remarks that the hopes entertained of his Government with regard to Muslim education have been turned into disappointment. During the time of a friend of the Muslims like Sir William Marris the claims of Muslims in the matter of their educational advancement are overlooked. All this leads us to the view that it is the duty of every patriotic Muslim to try to make the reforms scheme a failure by all possible means and it is necessary for them to follow the Swaraj party in this matter. Referring to the contribution of a lakh of rupees to the Franc fund by the Gaekwar of Baroda, the Jadu says that such help to other European powers by Hindu States amounts to a manifest opposition to the Muslims. One might well think that while there exists a Hindu Sangathan in this country to oppose Indian Muslims, another similar organization is contemplated to destroy non-Indian Muslims. The Indian Muslims look upon Great Britain with suspicion in that it is difficult to imagine an Indian State venturing to accord such help to other nations without her permission. It is to be hoped that the British Government would clear its position and would allow Muslim States the freedom of helping non-Indian Muslims who are fighting France.

The Sabarmati agreement.

Referring to the failure of the Sabarmati pact the Leader writes:—The truth appears to be that in Mr. Nehru's anxiety "to dish" the new National Party a truce had been patched up between men who did not mean the same thing and at the first breath of adverse criticism it was torn into shreds. So the meeting which was expected to bring about a greater unity and to which non-Congressmen had been invited to explore the avenues to it, has resulted in the destruction of the very pact which was said to have opened the door of the Congress to all parties outside it. If the proceedings of May 4 and 5 will lead at least some distinguished persons to think calmly and without prejudice and to base their future policy upon thought much more than upon feeling, these proceedings will have abundantly justified themselves. The Bharat Varsha welcomes the pact and hopes that it will remove the main cause of friction between the two wings of the Swaraj party. The Aj deplores the agreement as in its opinion it leads the Congress back to the path of mendicancy for which the liberals were so much abused. The paper urges adherence to the Nagpur resolutions. The Abhyudaya congratulates the Swarajists on the wisdom displayed by them in composing their differences with the Responsivists and the Responsivists on the victory of their principles. The Pratap writes:—The pact is improper and impracticable, improper because it wholly changes the decision of the Cawnpore Congress regarding acceptance of office and impracticable because such tactics delude the public. It is insulting and futile to beg the autocratic provincial Governor to allow the Ministers to work without interference. The Bharat Dharma thinks that the pact has strengthened the Congress. The Hridaya welcomes the agreement as it opens the door of the Congress to all the parties. The Hind-i-Jadid hopes that the pact will end the disorganization and disunity in the country.

Political propaganda.

Hardayal Nag writing to the Hridaya says:—Those who are happy at the retirement of the Mahatma from the political field should bear in mind that just as the last days of Ramchandra and Yudhishthir, the crucifixion of Jesus Christ and the flight of Muhammad from Mecca to Medina are associated with important events, in the same manner Mahatma Gandhi's downfall will result in the establishment of a social republic at least in India if not in the whole world. The interests of humanity demand that Mahatma Gandhi should re-enter the political arena for if Satyagraha is started the Council-entry nuisance will disappear. The Swadhin writes:—The storm of non-co-operation has so clouded the vision of the masses that the British Empire, which keeping this country in the dark sucks its juice, is having a happy time of it, for while formerly it tried to satisfy Indians by gradually granting them rights of self-government, it is finding them slumbering at present and is therefore adopting measures to strengthen its foundations and perpetuate its rule here. Now instead of Indianizing the services Englishmen are being indented in larger numbers and that on higher salaries. The Bharat Dharma remarks:—The bureaucracy describes its Government as "established by law" but it does not follow that it is a righteous Government. The real nature of the existing laws was exhibited by General Dyer at Amritsar. If inhuman laws framed by one particular nation in its own interests are forced upon Indians they will obey them only so long as they have not acquired the strength to defy them. There is no lack of strength in India, only it is scattered and efforts are being made to concentrate it. The burden of these lawless laws has become unbearable to non-co-operators, responsivists, nationalists, swarajists and co-operators alike and the cry of civil disobedience has begun to emanate from every quarter. It is, therefore, high time that the authorities should repeal all the obnoxious laws and try to establish a righteous rule so that it may have permanent existence.

Indian States.

Referring to the Nizam's orders regarding Hindu schools and pictures of cows the Anand says:—Was it on the basis of such acts that the Nizam wanted to ensnare the Beraris with the bait of autonomy? If the Nizam persists in such an unjust policy his subjects should seek redress at the hands of the British Government and should endeavour to get such a ruler dethroned. Some other Hindu papers also strongly protest against these orders. Muslim papers, on the other hand, defend the action of the Nizam and caution the Government against the malicious propaganda carried on against him by Hindu papers. The Muslim press continues to protest against Lord Reading's reply to the Nizam's demand for the restoration of Berar.

Indians in the Colonies.

The papers generally welcome the decision of the Union Government to hold a round table conference but emphasize the need for continuing the agitation to safeguard the rights of Indians in that colony. They fear that if the agitation is slackened the "Black Bill" will ultimately be passed.

United Provinces Legislative Council.

The Oudh Akhbar joins the United Provinces Zamindars' Association in its protest against the next session of the Council being held at Naini Tal and says:—If the session is not held at Lucknow both the zamindars and tenants, specially the latter, will complain that the Government wants to trample upon their rights and it is not unlikely that the enforcement of the Act may be attended with troubles. It adds that the Naini Tal session will entail a heavy expenditure on the members as well as on the Government and only such members will attend the Council meeting as are accustomed to go to the hills every summer.

Elections to local bodies.

The Tohfa-i-Hind holds that official interference is inevitable in the present system of elections to local bodies and suggests that the official agency now employed in conducting the elections should be supplemented by a body of non-official returning officers, that the preparation of electoral rolls should be left to some capable and selfless workers in every polling station and that the rural voters should be educated as to their rights and privileges.

Foreign affairs.

THE strike in Britain has received considerable attention in the Press. The Leader writes:—The end of the strike means a striking triumph of constitutionalism and a severe blow to the policy of direct action. Non-violent non-cooperation in Britain has failed, despite the international support of trade unionists. We hope that its lessons will not be lost on those in this country who still have faith or profess to have faith in the method of direct action and who cannot wean themselves from a wrecking policy whose futility and sterility has been fully established. The sympathies of the extremist papers are decidedly with the strikers. The Aj thinks that the strike may stimulate the Bolsheviks and Fascists. The paper welcomes signs of international co-operation of labour and writes:—Universal measures are required to deal successfully with a universal malady. Without such meas ures there can be no co-operation between labour and capital. The Hamdam writes:—The present despotic Government of England is trying to give the colour of rebellion to the legitimate demands of the miners. Mr. Baldwin will be wholly responsible for any bad turn which the strike takes in future. The Sada-i-Muslim thinks that if labour comes out successful the Government will, to a certain extent, come into the hands of the Labour party. The Muslim press is following the Riffian struggle with keen and sympathetic interest and is paying a warm tribute to the Riffs for their bold stand. The Hamdam writes:—We hope that the agreement between Turkey and Persia will produce a very good effect on the common politics of the Islamic powers and that both the countries will act up to the maxim that "all Muslims are brothers" and by means of a universal union of the Islamic powers will devise some plan of checking the imperialistic and anti-Islamic activities of the Christian League of Nations. The Mansur does not see any justification for the all-World Islamic Conference to be held at Cairo, as the Egyptians are not their own masters and are under British domination. The same paper says that the Islamic world will be grateful to learn that a zealous research relating to Islam is being carried on in Germany, a grand mosque has been erected in Berlin and an institution has been established to which Indian religious heads of Islam have been invited. The chief aim of the institution is to remove the curtain of darkness and difference which has hitherto been hanging between the East and the West.

Calcutta riots.

The press continues to indulge in communal recriminations and serious allegations against the authorities in connexion with the Calcutta riots. The Pratap remarks:—It has now become quite evident that the authorities acted negligently during the Calcutta riots and Lord Lytton followed the example of Nero who was fiddling while Rome was burning. The paper strongly protests against the proposal of the Bengal Government to prosecute certain papers under section 153A and says:—The sinful supineness of Government in Calcutta compelled the people to adopt whatever measures of self-defence they liked. Had the Government been alert and had it not failed in its duty there would have been no occasion for giving vent to communal ill-feelings. It is thus the Government which is responsible for these poisonous effusions and if any one deserves to be punished it is Government's own men. To punish others is to sprinkle salt over wounds and to seek to hide one's sins. The Surya remarks that a rigid scrutiny of the causes of communal disturbances will show that the partizanship of the Muslim leaders is at the root of the whole mischief. If Muslim leaders refrained from taking up the cause of Muslim goondas the regrettable and humiliating scenes would be witnessed no more and the opponents of India would have no opportunity for proclaiming the unfitness of Indians for swaraj. The Gyan Shakti writes:—Has the British Government really become unfit for administration? Has it no longer the power to maintain peace and order in the country? If it is not so, the Government should make a plain statement that public roads and lanes belong to all communities alike and that those who interfere with processions and music on those roads will be severely dealt with. It is time that the Government took measures to suppress hooligans and those people who in the name of religion want to deprive others of their rights and to dominate over them. The Aj writes:—How can the Bengal Government escape from its responsibility for the continuance of the disturbances for so many days specially if the news about the desecration of Hindu gods in other parts of Bengal be true? The incidents at Calcutta give rise to serious suspicions and it is the duty of the higher authorities to compel Lord Lytton to give an explanation for them. We hope the new Viceroy will show impartiality and vigour in this matter similar to that exhibited by Lord Hardinge in connexion with the Calcutta Bakrid riots. The paper strongly criticizes the Calcutta Emergency Bill as in its opinion the powers provided in it are very comprehensive and there is no guarantee that they will not be abused in the political sphere. The prolonged disturbed conditions in Calcutta were not due to the absence of laws or powers, but to defects of administration. Referring to the Conference of Hindu and Muslim leaders held at Calcutta to devise means to put an end to communal disturbances the Najat says that such conferences have never been and can never be successful so long as the mischievous leaders stick to crooked and hypocritical ways. Proceeding, the paper says:—The truth is that we can have no idea of the irreparable loss which has been caused to truth, plain-speaking and fairness by the British laws and British administration. Falsehood, hypocrisy, dishonesty and shamelessness are rampant everywhere. In the courts falsehood and hypocrisy are so freely indulged in that we have lost all sense of the enormity of these evils and even big leaders have no scruples in resorting to hypocrisy and lies on platforms and in the press. The Hamdam regrets to find that the Forward, the leading organ of the late Mr. C. R. Dass, has been attacking the Muslims openly since the Calcutta disturbances. It has been fully established that the Arya Samajist procession was responsible for the first disturbance. It has also been shown that the second disturbance was caused to gratify the revengefulness of the Marwaris. Referring to the allegations regarding the responsibility of Government for the riots the Aziz-i-Hind says:—The charge which as usual is being levelled by political leaders against the Government is unfounded. When the power of Government is waning daily and people are being taught to resist the police and the army there is no wonder if there is some delay in quelling the riots. The peace of the country should be the prime consideration of political leaders. They should not so undermine the faith of the people in the Government as to throw difficulties in good administration. So far as the Calcutta riots are concerned, Muslims have been treated cruelly. The Muslims cannot be entirely exonerated, but certainly the offensive was taken by the Hindus.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The question of Hindu-Muslim relations is being widely discussed with much bitterness. Under the heading "Midsummer madness" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Maulana Mohammad Ali's proclamation of his spiritual ambition to convert Mahatma Gandhi to Mahomedanism would be perfectly worthy of an insane Maulvi who revels in waving a red flag in front of an angry bull. Let him not talk of nationalism hereafter, but tie his fate and fortune to the Jaggernath car of Sir Abdur Rahim. The Ali Brothers have evidently lost their heads. Referring to the Muslim party formed by Sir Abdur Rahim in Bengal, the Hindi Kesari says:—Sir Abdur Rahim is only fanning the flame of communal hatred. His new organization is the practical form of his address at the Muslim League. The Vartman tries to make out that Muslims have always and everywhere been the aggressors in all disputes and disturbances to which they were a party. Ignorant Muslims always attack Hindu processions and object to artis; in anger they slaughter cows, destroy temples, kidnap women and children, but nowhere have Hindus retaliated by attacking the processions of Muslims, kidnapping their women and destroying their mosques. It is true that at Calcutta Hindus did retaliate to a certain extent when they got disgusted, but even there it was the Muslims who were the aggressors. The Aj writes:—It is regrettable that the bureaucracy is mostly responsible for giving a religious complexion to the Hindu-Muslim dispute which is essentially a political question. Today the country as well as the Government are suffering the consequence of Lord Minto's policy of special and separate representation to Muslims. God only knows where special rights and separate electorates will lead to. Sooner or later the Government will have to oppose these unjustifiable demands. One Vivekanand Sharma, writing to the Bharat Dharma, says :—Far-sighted Indian politicians have warned us that the Muslims cannot be relied upon and it is time that we took heed and non-cooperated with the Muslims. This will reduce the power of the Muslims and ensure the protection of the wealth, the cows and the people of India. Referring to the statement made by Mr. Mahomed Ali to a representative of the Associated Press, the Anand remarks :—Maulana Mahomed Ali's statement removes the mask and presents the Ali Brothers in their true colours. It shows that the Maulana wants to sacrifice nationalism at the altar of Muslim leadership in order to regain the prestige he had lost by the failure of the Khilafat movement. He should, however, know that if he does not put an end to the meanness of the Muslim goondas, the Hindu goondas will retaliate and render it impossible for the Muslims to live in peace. Discussing the possibilities of Hindu-Muslim unity the Medina writes :—Nationalism is a brutish sentiment which has arisen with the deceitful Western civilization. Western inauspiciousness has eaten into the vitals of Eastern civilization. Ever since the selfish white-skinned people set their impure feet on her soil, Asia has thrown away her morality and spirituality. The sun of Asiatic civilization has been obscured by the storm of Western foulness and impurity. Asia has now chosen to move about in the darkness of this narrow and blood-thirsty nationalism. In India the community which has been affected by this foulness and darkness is the body of educated Hindus because their moral and religious preceptors had nothing but brutish sentiments left to inculcate. Hindu civilization had become altogether bereft of every virtue. On the other hand, Muslims have come with a bright civilization possessing a complete code for the regulation of mundane and spiritual existence. How can, then, a lasting union be possible between Hindus and Muslims? Even if a common line of action could be found by means of extraordinary efforts the presence of the third, that is the ruling party, could easily thwart it. The Hindus have always kept aloof from movements which were likely to be helpful in bringing about unity between Hindus and Muslims. Their reform movements have accepted Western civilization and have laid the foundation of that blood-thirsty nationalism which has led to terrible bloodshed in Europe. Having adopted this angle of vision, it was inevitable for the Hindus to raise the standard of war against all other civilizations of India and to deny the right of others to live in the country. From Sankaracharya and Guru Nanak down to Swami Dayanand and Malaviya the aim of every one has been that only one community should live in the country. In this twentieth century the efforts of Malaviyas, Savarkars and Moonjes are actuated by unholy brutish sentiments. These men have adopted various means to overwhelm Muslims and to render them helpless. One of these is to try to hold up Islam and Muslims as extremely mean and immoral and to paint Muslim leaders and scriptures in the worst possible colours. In foreign politics Muslims are helpless in the face of the terrible imperialism and militarism of Western Christendom. We ask what is the duty which has been enjoined on Muslims by the Prophet in such circumstances? Brethren, arise! Take lessons in education and economics and give a fitting reply to the accusations of the enemies. Improve your morals and habits and show to the world that Islam teaches us to live a better life. Adopt a common line of action and begin your work with the name of Allah. The Hamdam regrets the attitude of Mahatma Gandhi towards Hindu-Muslim differences, and says :—The obvious cause of the differences is the numerical, economical, social and educational superiority of the Hindus who wish to assert it by their strength. Al-Barid complains that the orthodox Hindu leaders who formerly opposed Muslims in the press and on public platform have now begun to attack even those Hindu leaders who raise their voice in favour of Hindu-Muslim unity. The Hindus wish to convert the Congress into a Hindu Sabha. It seems as if they want to use the Congress to poison the Hindu-Muslim relations which have already been estranged by the Hindu Sabha. But will the fall of the Congress bring about Hindu Raj? This is a dream which no sane man will cherish. Its only interpretation can be slavery. The Aiena supports the suggestion for a national pact, but apprehends difficulty in making Hindus agree to any compromise as their leaders like Mr. Malaviya, Sraddhanand, Lajpat Rai and Dr. Moonje are utilizing their political talents in preaching a war of aggression. The Muslims will be willing in every way as they only want to safeguard their rights and do not wish to harm their Hindu brethren. Referring to the general boycott of Muslim bandsmen and makers of fireworks in Hindu marriages, specially at Meerut, the Aiena remarks that the Hindus who first favoured the Muslim boycott indirectly, are now openly encouraging the movement, with the result that even Muslim masons, tailors and blacksmiths have been discarded. Will not even such a movement open the eyes of Muslims and make them realise how dark and dangerous their future is becoming?

Khilafat conference.

The Leader writes:—The speeches at and the resolutions of the Khilafat conference we have read with grief. Is it conceivable, is it possible that Hindus can accommodate themselves to the Muslim requirements as pronounced in the Delhi speeches and resolutions? Should they, ought they to? Our answer can only be and is in the negative . . . It is evident that the Hindus are in no mood to turn the other cheek. The Vartman writes:—The Khilafat Conference has emitted terrible poison and has thereby made a deliberate attempt to throw the country into a very critical situation. The Aj deplores the sentiments expressed by a nationalist leader like Hakim Ajmal Khan and says:—He too reiterates the untrue charges brought forward by those who have made it their business to foment dissensions between Hindus and Muslims. Before blaming the Hindu Sangathan the Hakim should have taken into consideration Khwaja Hasan Nizami's scheme and the Tanzim and Tablig movements. Referring to Maulana Syed Sulaiman Nadvi's presidential address, the paper remarks:—It is very painful that such a great man should have made such baseless and venomous statements and incited Muslims against Hindus. The Hamdam commends the addresses delivered by Hakim Ajmal Khan and Maulana Syed Sulaiman Nadvi and says:—It has been fully proved in these addresses that the present tension owes its origin to the zeal of our fellow-countrymen which is in every way hurtful. It is to be regretted that the reports of the speeches sent by non-Muslim agencies emphasized the complaints regarding the Shuddhi and Sangathan and made light of what was said regarding the necessity for union. Had the speeches been fully reported the Hindus would have found no cause for complaint. Even as it is, these complaints are not justified, for whatever Hakim Ajmal Khan and Maulana Syed Sulaiman Nadvi said was based on facts and was not provocative like the utterances of the presidents of the Hindu Sabha.

The Sabarmati agreement.

Referring to the failure of the Sabarmati pact the Leader says:—Such political jugglery was never witnessed before in the history of the Congress after it came under the control of quick-change artists. It beats all records of unabashed opportunism. The Indian Daily Telegraph blames Responsivists for the breakdown of the pact and says:—The pact broke on the rock of insincerity and hypocrisy and lust of office without power. The broken pact, however, opens a new era in the history of Indian nationalism, because it brings nearer to each other the Responsivists and the Liberals and reduces the number of the innumerable parties to three. The Aj is glad that the pact has failed, as in its opinion it upheld a retrogressive course. The Abhyudaya remarks:—The collapse of the pact indicates that even in the present critical situation of the country our leaders attach greater importance to the interests of their parties than to those of the country. There is no doubt that it will cause a serious set-back in the country and will result in Mian Fazle Husain and Sir Abdur Rahim dominating the Councils and the provinces and the British and Muslims having their own way. The Surya remarks:—The collapse of the pact has proved beyond doubt that as long as Pandit Motilal Nehru wields absolute authority it is impossible for other political parties to join the Congress, and that he cares more for his leadership than for the country. The Oudh Akhbar regrets the failure of the pact and says:—The Liberals have achieved the desired triumph and their hopes have been fulfilled. The Sadaqat also deplores the failure of the pact and remarks that the Swaraj party will have to yield and to unite with other parties because the country is no longer in favour of non-cooperation.

Muslim affairs.

The Mashriq invites the attention of His Excellency the Governor to the presidential address of Maulvi Muhammad Yaqub (at the Provincial Muslim conference) which depicts the deplorable condition of Muslims in United Provinces and says that Maulvi Muhammad Yaqub has stated the plain truth and has ably proved that the Congress-League pact is not being acted upon in these provinces. The figures given by him showing the posts held by the Hindus and Muslims in the various departments of these provinces are worthy of the consideration of His Excellency. Commenting on the presidential address delivered by Hafiz Hidayat Husain Sahib at the Muslim Local Boards conference at Pilibhit the Sadai Muslim remarks that Hafiz Sahib has given a very sound opinion on all the controversial problems in local boards, and hopes that if the Muslims act upon his advice they will very easily be able to solve all their difficulties regarding the protection of their rights. The paper regrets that the Government has failed to give a practical shape, in its fullest sense, to the Lucknow pact, otherwise, it holds, there would have been no communal tension in these bodies. The Hamdam expresses surprise at the comment of the Leader on the resolution of the Provincial Educational conference regarding the transfer of primary education to the charge of the Minister of Local Self-Government and says that the suspicion of the paper is frivolous. Even Mr. Chintamani, who was Education Minister, did not keep primary education in his charge.

Political propaganda.

The Hridaya publishes an article communicated to it by one Hardayal Nag in the course of which he says:—The existing system of Government wants to suck the blood of India, to crush and powder its bones and devour them up . . . This alien administration cared only for its own interests, with the result that the rulers paid no heed to considerations of kindliness and humanity and went on plundering to the best of their powers and in all possible ways. When this loot continues even at present, how can it be possible for the villagers to meet their common, most ordinary and necessary wants? . . . The alien administration has totally ruined the villagers and defrauded them of what little was left to them. It has plundered Indians from all sides and has robbed the simple villagers of their wealth, corn, power, blood and flesh—pecked at it and devoured it. When the villagers had been maddened by hunger the alien administration made them drink liquor in order, on the one hand, to see the fun of it and provide amusement to the world, and on the other hand, to serve their own purpose. The villagers intoxicated with liquor and under the spell of the alien administration sell all their produce in the market. The poor and ignorant villagers have been tied down in such a manner that they cannot move.

Music before mosques.

Referring to the claim put forward by Calcutta Muslims that music shall not be played outside a mosque at any hour of the day or night the Leader writes:—In a recent Privy Council decision published elsewhere it has been laid down that the "worshippers in a mosque or temple which abutted on a high road could not compel the processionists to intermit their worship while passing the mosque or temple on the ground that there was continuous worship." Such extravagant claims, which cannot be supported in law and which are altogether novel, carry their own condemnation. It is impossible for the Hindus and other non-Muslim communities to accept them. The Aj holds a similar view. The Mahashakti commends the attitude of the Central Provinces Government regarding this question.

Indian States.

The Medina seeks to justify the Nizam's orders regarding the pictures of cows as in its opinion these pictures are not only calculated to insult the Muslims and the Quran, but also to inflame the Hindus. There is a picture in which a cow is shown helpless by the side of a demon (meaning probably a Muslim) standing with a naked sword over her head and a Hindu imploring him with folded hands to spare her. This reveals a most dangerous mentality. We do not know whether or not these Hindus will allow Muslims to remain alive in India. Muslims, beware of the time when the power of paganism and falsehood will grind you down into dust. The Adalat, the Mashriq and the Rohilkhand Gazette also write to the same effect and consider it merely a propaganda on the part of the Hindus to defame the Nizam. The Haqiqat apprehends that the relations between the Nizam and the Government of India are becoming strained and says that the treatment accorded by the Government to the Nizam has created unrest throughout India.

The unemployment problem.

The Shakti remarks:—It is strange that no regard is being paid to the future of lakhs of Indian youths who are at present receiving education in schools and colleges even in the face of the prevailing dearth of employment in the country. To us the future of these youths appears to be worse than that of an ordinary labourer. But will their unemployment go in vain? No, it will cause a serious commotion in the country within the next ten or fifteen years and our rulers who are at present taking things lightly will then find themselves perplexed. It is quite possible that this unemployment may swallow up the existing administration itself.

The High Court staff.

The Leader writes :—We have published numerous letters drawing attention to the pitiable condition of the ministerial staff of the Allahabad High Court. We publish elsewhere a forcible letter from Babu Durga Charan Banerjee in which he pays a well-deserved tribute to the devotion to duty and efficiency of the members of the ministerial staff and joins others in pointing out the necessity of increase in their salaries. We earnestly hope that the Government will take early steps to afford relief to them.

Recording of evidence.

The Leader supports the resolution of the United Provinces Muslim League urging the necessity of restoring the old double record system in the subordinate and district judges' courts and says that, taking everything into consideration, the change is likely prejudicially to affect the administration of justice.

United Provinces Judicial Service.

The Leader strongly supports the representation of the United Provinces Judicial Service Officers' Association with regard to the improvement of their status and prospects.

Foreign affairs.

The extremist press is disappointed at the breakdown of the general strike. The Aj writes:—The failure of the strike shows that the British Government is prepared to utilize all the powers of the State in aid of employers with a view to keep down labour and that it is also possible for it to tell white lies to discredit the aims of labour. For purposes of propaganda labour was wrongly accused of seeking to subvert the existing Government. The Vartman says that there can be no effective and permanent solution of labour difficulties so long as there is no equal distribution of wealth. Unless this is done, strikes will go on and the people, the capitalists and Government will continue to suffer. The Prabhat apprehends that the calling off of the strike will result in strengthening the hands of the Government and capitalists and in the rights of the labour being trampled upon for all times. The Medina welcomes the recent Turko-Persian treaty and wishes Najd and Afghanistan also to join the alliance so as to form a combination of Islamic powers capable of opposing the imperialistic greed and military aspirations of Christendom. Al Bureed is glad that the humiliating peace terms offered by Spain and France have been spurned by the brave and self-respecting Riff warriors. It has been repeatedly declared by Ghazi Abdel Krim that the Riffs are always willing to accept an honourable peace. The fact is that France and Spain, puffed up with their pride and vanity, wish to enlist the sympathy of the world by proclaiming that they are for peace and the war has been forced upon them by the bellicose Riffs.

Khilafat Conference.

The proceedings of the Khilafat Conference have greatly accentuated the communal tension and recriminations. The Prabhat says that the sentiments expressed at the conference against the Hindus constitute an open challenge to them. The uproar in the audience at the Hindus being called "brethren" by one of the speakers shows how much the Muslim public has begun to hate the Hindus. The Aj remarks that the special session of the Khilafat Conference has sought to rehabilitate the Khilafat Committee and to restore the waning influence of its workers, but it is doubtful how far these objects will be achieved. Now the Khilafat Committee has virtually become a communal organization. The incident regarding the use of the words "Hindu brethren" shows what bigotry has taken hold of the Muslims now. Will the Khilafat Committee establish swaraj in India by fostering such a spirit? These are all signs of the forthcoming terrible communal conflict in the country. There is no doubt that the Khilafat movement has now become an anti-Hindu movement. This being the case it has become the paramount duty of the Congress to expunge the Khilafat from its objects and to wash its hands off the Lucknow Pact. The Anand writes:—The mask has been removed and the inner feelings of Muslim leaders like Maulana Mahomed Ali and Shaukat Ali have been exposed. Having duped Hindus for five years these Maulanas have given up the nationalist ideals and reverted to their old policy. We are not sorry, but rather pleased at this change, for Hindus will no longer be taken in by their moves and will think out their course of action for themselves. The Surya remarks:—A perusal of the report of the conference makes it abundantly clear that the Khilafat leaders have made venomous attacks against the Hindus and indulged in the most objectionable language against them. No condemnation of this action of the Khilafat leaders can be too strong. It baffles our understanding why the Government is not confiscating copies of these speeches. It is equally surprising that while the authorities in Calcutta are enacting the emergency legislation, the authorities in Delhi, where the communal tension is growing deeper, have forgotten even section 153A, I. P. C. The Abhyudaya writes :—The speeches delivered and the resolutions passed at the meeting show that the conference was organized with the sole object of opposing the Hindus. It is regrettable that nationalists and protagonists of Hindu-Muslim unity like Hakim Ajmal Khan, Syed Sulaiman Nadvi and the Ali brothers gave utterances to untrue, inflammatory and anti-Hindu views. The president's declaration that it had become necessary to wage jehad in India for protecting Islam is an open incitement to violence. The anti-Hindu feelings expressed in the conference show that the Khilafat Committee is becoming a very dangerous organization for the peace of the country. The Vartman remarks :—By their inflammatory speeches the Ali brothers have fanned the fire of communalism kindled by Dr. Kitchlew and Sir Abdur Rahim and their followers. Had such speeches been made elsewhere, section 144 would have been enforced without delay. Surely the fact that the Government takes no notice at all of such barbaric speeches in the very capital of India and the heart of the Central Government is an incontrovertible proof of its deliberate apathy. The Medina is glad to note that the Khilafat Committee is now really entitled to be regarded as a living and practical body. It has now included among its objects the protection of Muslims from the high-handedness of Hindus. The Hindus have absolutely no ground for complaint with regard to the proceedings of the Khilafat Conference. The moderate speeches delivered at the conference and the peaceful business transacted by it are being viewed with hostility by the Hindu press. This shows nothing but the malice of Hindus against Muslims. In the Hindu Maha Sabha the speeches, the uproar and even the decorative material indicated a general hostility towards the Muslims. The incendiary and mischievous Swamis and Deshbhagatas openly advocated the breaking of the heads of Muslims. The Muslims were openly threatened with expulsion from India or conversion to Hinduism. On the contrary, every action and gesture of the Khilafat Conference was just and cautious, every speech was statesmanlike and every decision was far-sighted. If a peace-maker and impartial man like Hakim Ajmal Khan threw the responsibility on the shoulders of the Hindus, it only shows that their malevolent activities have now become intolerable. Similarly such earnest advocates of unity as the Ali brothers have also become despondent in view of the persistently mischievous activities of the Hindus. The Hamdam is surprised that Hindu papers are looking at the revised aims of the Khilafat Committee with suspicion and says :—The Conference clearly expressed its desire to improve relations with non-Muslims and reaffirmed the resolution of the Unity Conference regarding the appointment of joint boards of Muslims and Hindus for the settlement of disputes. Other resolutions aimed at the improvement of Muslims which will help the attainment of swaraj. All this must reassure the Hindus. The Haqiqat writes :—The Khilafat Conference resolutions have spread general uneasiness and unrest among the Hindus and particularly in Sangathan circles. There is hardly any Hindu paper which is not showering abuse on the Ali brothers, although their articles published in the Hamdard and the Khilafat leave no room for doubt that even today, in spite of such acute communal tension, they are sincere advocates of Hindu-Muslim unity. If the Sangathan movement is harmless and its object is to organize and protect the Hindus in emergencies, no blame should attach to the Khilafat Conference for introducing a similar organization among the Muslims. The course which the conference has chalked out, bearing the Hindu-Muslim relations in mind, is most suitable, but real success can be achieved only when the resolutions are acted upon and the communal differences are laid aside. Al Bureed remarks that one gifted with even a tinge of fairness and justice cannot blame the Khilafat Committee for breach of union. The Khilafat Committee struck the bargain of union with the Hindus at such a high cost that it had to realize ultimately that it has become insolvent. Still some bigoted and obstinate Hindus do not hesitate in throwing the blame on the Khilafat Committee. The committee had to amend its internal policy in order to defend itself against the Hindus who resorted to offensive ways. The distinguishing feature of the presidential address was the calmness and sobriety worthy of the peace-loving Muslims. The proceedings may be summed up in two words: "Union and defence". Muslims will ever extend their hand towards an honest and well-meaning union. If the zealotry of the sangathanist Hindus cannot accept this union and they are anxious to break the heads of Muslims with the rod of Dr. Moonje and the bricks of Pt. Malaviya, are not the Muslims entitled even to protect themselves? The Sadaqat is gratified to note that the Khilafat Conference realized its duty and its proceedings were throughout informed with a moderate and peace-loving spirit. It is deplorable that the Hindu papers are criticizing even such a moderate attitude of Muslims, although the conduct of the Hindu Maha Sabha has been extremely harsh and painful to the Muslims. The Mukhbir-i-Alam remarks:—The unceasing oppressions of the Sangathan heroes on the Muslims and the unpleasant results of past endeavours to bring about amity and union forced the very Muslim leaders, who were the advocates of Hindu-Muslim co-operation, to acknowledge their mistake and at last they had to voice the general Muslim feeling.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Aj rebuts the charge levelled by Muslim leaders that the Hindus are responsible for the present communal tension and says:—It can be boldly asserted that wherever disturbances have taken place they have been initiated by those who in the name of religion are calling Hindus kafirs and slaves. We are among those who have so far been opposing Sangathan, but after seeing the attitude of the special Khilafat Conference and hearing the speeches of Hakim Ajmal Khan, Maulana Saiyed Sulaiman Nadvi and the Ali brothers our mind is filled with misgivings about the future of the country and we begin to suspect that we ourselves were under a delusion and that the leaders of Sangathan had after all really divined the true nature of Muslim swaraj and Muslim nationalism. One Srikrishna Vaidya Shastri writing in the Aj says that a close observation will establish that the existing system of Government is responsible for the Hindu-Muslim strifes and the ever-growing tension between the two communities. The attitude of the bureaucracy is always liberal towards the Muslims and indifferent towards non-Muslims. It is the crooked policy of the bureaucracy which does not allow the people to live in peace. If the Hindu religion and the Hindu community are to be saved the policy of the bureaucracy to encourage one community and discourage the other should be counteracted and the Hindu Maha Sabha should return its own candidates to the Councils to protect Hindu interests. The Pratap publishes a letter from a correspondent under the pseudonym "A Hindu" in the course of which he refers to the desecration of Hindu temples by Muslims in some districts of Bengal and says that he considers temples to be inviolable and in their defence is ready to sacrifice his life and also to take the lives of other people. The correspondent also refers to the defilement of an idol at Gaughati and the threats of attacking Hindu processions and says that he considers it to be right that a religion which enjoins such things must be destroyed. Is it not the duty of the Bengal Hindus in these circumstances to return blow for blow? Commenting on Maulana Mahomed Ali's "threats" to Hindus the Arya Mitra remarks that while blaming the Hindus for not denouncing the evil deeds of Hindu rioters the Maulana lost sight of the happenings at Malabar and Kohat. No Mulla or Maulana denounced the high-handedness of their co-religionists at the time. They were not even ready to believe the true facts. We shall challenge Maulana Mahomed Ali to point out even one instance in which the Hindus had been aggressors. Can any one say that the disturbances at Calcutta were not begun by the Muslims? The Muslims commit all sorts of high-handedness and still try to show that they are innocent. Now the Hindus have awakened and are ready to fight in self-defence. Mahomed Ali's threats cannot affect them. In the course of an editorial note on the Sikh procession at Calcutta the Medina writes:—By siding with the non-Muslim population the Bengal Government presented an instructive spectacle of the helplessness of the Muslims of Calcutta and pointed out to the Muslims of India that they should not expect anything from law and justice. The administration yields to majority, power and wealth and by humiliating and insulting Muslims wants to please Hindus. When the Sikhs stopped music before mosques the Police Commissioner had music played under orders. The Muslims looked on like pictures of helplessness. Machine-guns and rifles were protecting the Hindu rowdies. When Muslim religious sentiments have begun to be hurt like this by a Government which is regarded as the greatest Muslim Empire in the world we do not know what the fate of Muslims will be . . . . Why did not Sir Abdur Rahim, who claims to be the undisputed leader of Muslims in Bengal, restrain his favourite Government from these tyrannical acts? Referring to Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's recent speech at Delhi defending the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements the Hamdam writes:—The question is whether the Muslims have misunderstood the objects of these movements or the Pandit is trying to misinterpret them. One can see that Shuddhi is provoking the Hindus against the Muslims by bringing into contempt the saints, the Prophet and the holy books of the Muslims and Sangathan is stimulating the meanest spirit of the Hindus and is preparing them to face the Muslims. The fact is that Hindus do not possess the capacity for carrying on such movements and are merely imitating Muslim organizations, but they ignore their good and adopt their bad points. Mr. Malaviya's speech will only wound the feelings of Muslims and will not help the cause of national union. Though the Hindus at some places threw bombs and boiling oil and acid over the Muslims, yet Mr. Malaviya regards the Hindus as meek and helpless and tries to represent the Muslims as wild and ravenous beasts.

Music before mosques.

The question of music before mosques has again come to the fore. Referring to Mr. Ghuznavi's statement that it has been the established practice on the part of Hindus to stop playing music when passing by mosques no matter what time of the day or night, the Leader writes :—This statement is absolutely incorrect. There is no such established practice as claimed. We do not admit that any disrespect is involved if a procession with music passes a mosque abutting on a public thoroughfare, and it is wrong of Muslims to interpret it in that light. If they can put up with a thousand and one noises, they can, if they choose, tolerate the sound of passing music. The beating of big drums during the Moharram, especially throughout the night, accompanied with other sounds, is felt as a nuisance by many Hindus, but they have never objected to it, nor bave they taken the law into their hands . . . , It is obvious that the Muslims are not anxious for peace. The IndianDaily Telegraph strongly opposes the resolution proposed to be moved at the Lucknow municipal board regarding the prohibition of Namaz in the Aminabad Park by enforcing a municipal bye-law. It says :—We do not think responsible Hindu members including the chairman will be a party to the madness of enforcing the bye-law at the risk of bloodshed. We would ask the reader to put in one scale the certainty of the groans of the dead and dying (the concomitants of a riot which is inevitable under the circumstances) and in another the anxiety to enforce a bye-law honoured for long in the breach—and he can easily know which scale will weigh the more. The Arti-Namaz question cannot be settled on a lawyer's note on the bye-law, but on the higher note of old traditions and practice. The Surya regrets the Muslim obduracy on the question of music before mosques and says :—It shows that a few Muslim leaders want to achieve in the twentieth century what could not be possible for even the mightiest and the most tyrannical of Mughal rulers. It is surprising that Muslim leaders do not even realize that any attempt at suppressing the Hindu religion which has survived the most serious shocks and trials cannot but be ludicrous. It is the duty of the Hindus not to stop music under unjustifiable outside pressure. The solution of the question is bound up with Hindu organization. Referring to the failure of the conference of the representatives of Hindus and Muslims at Calcutta to arrive at a settlement regarding the question of music before mosques the Aj says :—No decision on the question could be more suitable than that of the Unity Conference of Delhi ; but when that decision is trampled upon it means that some power is working against the interests of the country. The demand that music should not be played before mosques at any time is altogether novel. No Government should support such a demand and thereby lay the axe at the root of public rights. We wish that this question were settled by mutual agreement, but this is not to be. The authorities will frame certain conditions of licence which will have to be observed by both the parties. This may or may not do anything else, but will surely establish the need of foreign rulers for the country. In another article the paper supports the resolution of the working committee of the Hindu Maha Sabha recently passed at Delhi regarding the objection of Muslims to music before mosques and remarks :—We cannot but oppose the action of those who in the name of religion wrongly insist on interfering with the liberty of others. We would warn the Muslims in amicable but emphatic terms that their attempt at interference with the liberty of others cannot be successful. The Hamdam writes :—The recent decision of the Privy Council on the appeal of the Shias of Aurangabad so generally quoted by Arya Samajist organs in support of their right to take their processions with music on highways without any restrictions cannot help the Hindus in any way because the same decision has authorized the magistrates in special circumstances to stop all music in front of places of worship.

Bengal Presidency Area (Emergency) Bill.

Indian papers have unanimously opposed the Bengal Presidency Area (Emergency) Bill. The Leader writes :—Exceptional legislation vesting large discretionary and arbitrary powers in the hands of an irresponsible executive has been so often abused in this country that we sympathize with the attitude of distrust of the swarajists. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The commonsense point of view is that the civil sword is strong enough to put down an uncivil uprising. Law cannot provide for the lack of heart to act in a communal situation when Indian lives are put in danger. Mr. Sen Gupta could have asked whether Lord Lytton's Government would have waited for an emergency Act if instead of Indian lives as many European lives were in jeopardy. The Abhyudaya remarks:—This Bill is altogether unnecessary and injurious. The cause of the recent arson and bloodshed in Calcutta was not inadequacy of the law but the worthlessness, incapacity and the negligence of the authorities. The police will take undue advantage of this measure as it has already done in the case of other repressive measures. Besides there is no guarantee that it will not be misused for political purposes. The Aj, the Pratap and the Surya express similar views. Commenting on the speech of Lord Lytton on Calcutta riots the Hamdam remarks that when the present bureaucratic Government fails in properly managing any affair owing to its incompetence it takes refuge in special laws. The present demand of Bengal Government for a new emergency law is wholly due to this incompetence. Indians are helpless and the Imperial Government cares not whether an officer is competent or not and whether an administration is just or oppressive so long as the object of the "steel frame" is fulfilled by the officer and "the iron hand" of the Government is not weakened. If the arbitrary powers of the executive and the police are increased there will be greater mismanagement and unrest. If the Criminal Investigation Department of Bengal is really useful, Lord Lytton must have come to know of the power which is inspiring the publication of false news regarding the breaking of temples. It is well known to every one that Arya Samajists are trying everywhere to gain both of their main objects, namely, opposition to idolatry and antagonism to the Muslims. Lord Lytton should deal severely with those whom he believes to be real instigators of the disturbances. If his policy is to show favour to one community at one time and then to the other, it would be a waste of time for any self-respecting Hindu or Muslim to take part in any proceedings of the Government.

Indians in the colonies.

Referring to the adoption of the Colour Bar Bill by the joint session of the Senate and the Assembly of the Union of South Africa the Leader writes:—We are afraid the atmosphere created by the passage of the Bill will be prejudicial to a calm consideration of the Indian problem at the round table conference. Its passage is not in keeping with the spirit of the agreement arrived at with the Government of India and we hope the latter will lose no time in making a protest against the irritating measure. The Aj points out how the Act may seriously affect the interests of Indians in future and urges them to protest against it and tell the Union Government that this move of starving out Indian immigrants cannot be tolerated. The Hamdam remarks:—It appears that no change has taken place in the angle of vision of the statesmen of the Union Government. The whites of South Africa have no regard for the public opinion of the world. This is why we entertain no great hopes from the proposed conference. The only way of solving the difficulty is to adopt such plans as may compel the Union Government to accede to the legitimate demands of Indians. The Gandhi-Smuts agreement was the outcome of passive resistance and not of any conference. The Oudh Akhbar pleads for the inclusion of Mr. Gandhi and Dr. Abdur Rahman among the representatives of India at the proposed conference.

Political propaganda.

The Aj says:—Although separate representation and special rights have begun to cause even bloodshed in the country, yet the bureaucracy continues to encourage this system as is evidenced by the recent announcement from Simla regarding appointments to the Civil Service by competition as well as selection. There is no doubt that the appointments are being made to satisfy the Muslims. This policy of making appointments not on merit but on communal considerations will surely earn the gratitude of incapable communities and may be defended on political grounds, but is in reality very dangerous. In the course of a lengthy article the Sainik gives the history of the Arms Act and remarks:—The Arms Act is one of the most terrible laws which have been framed by the bureaucracy. It is an emblem of our slavery and a blot on India. It has emasculated the whole nation and has made sheep of lions. We are in sore distress on account of the bribery, administration and the laws of the authorities and our soul exclaims: God save us from these protectors of ours who have become our devourers. The Hridaya publishes the second instalment of the article under the heading "Swaraj in the villages" communicated to it by Babu Har Dayal Nag in the course of which he remarks:—The first and foremost attack which the aliens made on the Indians effected a radical change in the system of education. Our thoughts and ideals changed with the change in our education, and the inevitable result was that our wealth and property were plundered, our trade and industries were destroyed, and today we are starving. Indians have now realized that the cause of their degenerate condition is the alien rule which has ruined them and blotted them out of existence. The atrocities practised by the foreign traders in the name of trade still continue, and it cannot be said when they will cease. Whatever name may be given to British trade and commerce, it will be universally admitted that its object is to plunder Indians and impoverish them.

Election campaign.

The Barat Jiwan exhorts the voters to vote for the swarajists in preference to other political parties. It says:—It is essential to return the swarajists in next elections in such a large majority as will enable them to fulfil their promises. The scheme of the Indian National Party might prove more effective, but it is a new and untried medicine, whereas the swarajist prescription has proved to be useful, and if taken in larger doses is likely to eradicate the disease. The Aj writes:—If the swarjists declare that so long as the Government does not give a satisfactory reply to the national demand they will oppose almost all the demands of the Government and will remain neutral in regard to questions of public good; they are even now likely to secure a larger number of votes than other parties, but for making such a declaration it is necessary that they should be prepared for mass civil disobedience and should work among the people. Non-cooperation and obstruction can be of no avail without mass civil disobedience.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the presidential address of Maulvi Muhammad Yakub at the Provincial Muslim League, Pilibhit, the Mukhbir-i-Alam invites the attention of the United Provinces Government to the fact that the privileges provided for the Muslims in the Congress-League Pact have not been granted to them in this province so far and that in considering the question of compulsory education the local Council paid no heed to the Muslim demand for including religious instruction which is an essential element of swaraj. The Central Government and the Government of Bengal have recognized the principle of minority representation, but Muslims in the United Provinces are labouring under special disadvantages. Emphasizing the need of congregational prayers the Medina says:—By God, if all Muslims make it a habit to meet together for prayers, all the powers of the world will have to bow to them within a year. This is the key to success of every kind.

Public Services Commission.

The Leader objects to the Commission as well as its personnel on constitutional and political grounds and also for financial and administrative reasons. "We do not know why India should be saddled with this unsatisfactory and unwanted Commission of three Englishmen, one official Hindu and one pronouncedly communal Musalman."

Foreign affairs.

The Leader remarks that the victory of the Franco-Spanish forces in Morocco will neither bring glory to them nor rich territories to the two European powers. The narrow spirit of imperialism blunts the conscience of nations and makes physical force the test of right. But it carries within it the seeds of destruction, for the cult of force brings about its own nemesis. Commenting on the proceedings of the Khilafat Congress in Cairo the Hamdam regrets that the Central Khilafat Committee and the Jamiat-ul-Ulema of India did not send their representatives to the Congress as they could have produced some effect on the foreign offices of Europe. Even if the Congress elects Sultan Faud as the Khalifa he will not be able to benefit even his own country so long as Egypt does not become independent. Muslims are living the lives of slaves in countries which they once entered as conquerors. The paper approves the resolutions passed by the Congress and is glad to note that they are based on the memorandum presented by Inayatullah Khan who declared himself to be a representative of Indian Muslims. In another issue the paper congratulates the Turks on the settlement of the Mosul dispute, which it hopes will be a guarantee of peace in the Near East for a long time and expresses satisfaction at the provision permitting Turkey to join the League of Nations. Referring to the licence granted to the Turkish petroleum company in Mesopotamia, it says:—The successor of the blood-sucking statesman (Lord Curzon) is thinking of sucking the blood of Mesopotamia in the shape of its oil-wells. Had Mesopotamia been free it would have demanded a reasonable share in the profits of the scheme.

Khilafat Conference.

The proceedings of the Khilafat Conference continue to be discussed with much bitterness. The Aj remarks that Khilafat leaders having lost their influence with their community have resorted to the mean policy of humouring it by attacking the Hindus. The exclusive and aggressive policy of Muslims has given a serious blow to the national movement for freedom. Swaraj and Swaraj alone is the panacea for all the social, religious and political ills of the country. In a lengthy article contributed to the paper the writer, Pt. Salig Ram Shastri, takes serious objection to the spirit of fanaticism inculcated by Muslim leaders at the Khilafat Conference. He wonders what good those leaders have in view in inciting the ignorant masses. If there are disturbances on the occasion of the Bakr-Id the responsibility will be on the shoulders of Maulana Muhammad Ali and Abdur Rahman, who incited the masses to commit violence during that festival, but to save their skins have departed for the Hedjaz. That day will be written the last chapter of the Indian history of Islam when Indian Muslims will forfeit the sympathy of other communities of the country and will not be able to win the support of outside Muslims. The Hridaya deplores the anti-Hindu speeches delivered at the conference. It takes strong exception to the remarks of Mr. Muhammad Ali about his wish to convert Mr. Gandhi and says: Is it cooperation or a challenge or the sword of tanzim? What is the import of Mr. Muhammad Ali's statement that the kafirs and not the Muslims are afraid of death? Is it not a hint that Hindus should be killed? Kill and be killed is the sum and substance of all these utterances. The Arya Mitra remarks that there was not a single speech at the conference in which an attempt to provoke the Muslims against the Hindus was not made. There can be no limit to the perversity, fanaticism and intolerance of a people who cannot bear to hear the word "brother" used for the Hindus. We do not understand why the Government does not take action against such violent speeches? Does it not realize that these speeches provoke the people? The Bharat Jiwan says that Maulana Muhammad Ali's speech marks his secession from the national field into the camp of fanaticism. It is most regrettable that by their fanaticism the Khilafat leaders are helping in perpetuating the thraldom of the country. The Vartman remarks: Instead of breaking up the Khilafat committees for which there is no need after the abolition of the Khilafat the Indian Muslims are still maintaining them in order to convert them into arenas of communal warfare. The performances of the Muslim leaders at the special Khilafat Conference show that their sole object is to propagate Islam, to vilify the Hindus and to excite the fanatics by irresponsible utterances. The Mashriq approves all the resolutions passed by the Khilafat Conference with the exception of those relating to Swaraj and the organization of the Khilafat committees and says:—The speeches delivered by the Muslim leaders show that they have now become alive to the real facts. The Hindus have been provocative and aggressive. The Jadu writes: Since the inauspicious advent of the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements enthusiasm for freedom has been replaced by communal hatred. Our Hindu countrymen have begun to make venomous utterances against the Muslims who have always been on the defensive. Even at such a critical juncture the Khilafat Conference is willing to extend its hand of co-operation. If this last appeal for union is also spurned by the Hindus, Muslims will be compelled to give up the idea of helping their fellow-countrymen and shall have to make their own arrangements for self-defence. The Rahnuma remarks:—The distinguishing feature of the proceedings of the conference throughout was a moderate, conciliatory and constructive spirit which will be appreciated in all justice-loving circles in India. It is not fair to say that the Khilafatists deviated from the road to union. On the other hand, the Hindu Maha Sabha resolutions were instinct with an obstinate and uncompromising spirit and challenged war.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Hindu-Muslim tension continues to grow. The Vartman says that the namaz at the Aminabad Park (Lucknow) is becoming an obstacle in the way of every Hindu procession. It has encouraged the Muslims to think of taking the law in their own hands and to demand the stoppage of music even on certain roads. It is, therefore, the duty of the Lucknow Municipal Board to prohibit namaz at the park and thus to put an end to this communal dispute. In the course of an article published in the Arya Mitra Pandit Sheo Dayal, assistant secretary, Arya Pratinidhi Sabha, United Provinces, writes:—The followers of the Prophet are making preparations for crushing Arya Samaj. The Hindus have been warned not to side with Arya Samajists. The time of trial is drawing near when the great human sacrifice will have to be performed and every child of the Aryas will have to be sacrificed at the altar. The Aryas should be united and ready to fight out their right cause. The Abhyudaya remarks that the speeches of Maulana Muhammad Ali surpass all venomous speeches ever delivered before by those opposed to Hindu-Muslim union. Had the Hindus been bold the Maulana could not have attacked them in this way. Had the Hindu leaders been like the Maulana, we do not know what would have happened in the country. In spite of being insulted the Hindus consider it a sin to commit excesses like the Muslims. The Hindus do not want to fight with the Muslims. They only want to protect their lives and property. If in spite of this the Maulana and his colleagues threaten war, the Hindus will protect their honour and rights even at the sacrifice of their lives. The Gyan Shakti takes strong exception to the speech of Maulana Muhammad Ali at Bombay before his departure for the Hedjas. It says:—The Maulana was most foulmouthed on the occasion and indulged in impudence even against the Government. It is only because of the tolerance of the Hindus and the want of organization among them that the Maulana can freely attack them. He who wants to annihilate the "cow civilization" in India cannot live in peace here. "Camel civilization" cannot supplant "cow civilization" in the country. It is idle to hold out threats to Hindus who too know how to die for their religion. The Vartman publishes an appeal issued by Taraknath Das, M.A., PH.D. from the Hindu Maha Sabha office, Delhi, in the course of which he says that the deliberate policy of the British Government has been to inflame Hindus and Muslims against each other and then to favour the latter. A number of Muslim leaders are advocating violence and the establishment of Muslim raj. The twenty-two crores of Hindus are disorganized and have lost touch with China and Japan. As a result, they are humiliated at every step and are oppressed. Emancipation lies in atoning by deeds for our sins and then proclaiming that India is for Hindus. The Pratap says that the authorities can if they like suppress communal disturbances very easily and can even prevent them. But if they do not do so the people do not suffer much thereby. The occurrence of disturbances throughout the country from time to time is not something very bad. It will, no doubt, result in some loss of life and property, but the gain will outweigh the loss. The desire of the people to live in peace and comfort has made them indolent. The so-called "peace" and "peacefulness" are even worse than death. These disturbances will remove the indolence of the people and make them alert. They will devise means of self-protection, give up luxury and abandon the idea of depending on others. This change in the life of Indians is bound to prove beneficial. The Shakti remarks:—Maulana Muhammad Ali's Bombay speech is like a cup of poison. It is a repeated threat to the Hindus and is calculated to weaken the roots of Islam. Surely the Maulana will be held responsible for any future communal outburst in the country. Commenting on the proceedings of the Bengal Provincial Conference the Hamdam remarks:—The change in the mentality of Bengalees in the short period of two years after the death of Mr. Das is regrettable. Unless the responsible Hindus of Bengal make a public declaration that they are opposed to the rescission of the Bengal Pact the Muslims of Bengal or of India cannot be reassured and they will entertain doubts regarding the fulfilment of any other pacts made in future by Hindus. Referring to the rumour about the cancellation of the Bengal Pact the paper remarks:—It should serve as a lesson to the Muslims that so long as they do not depend upon themselves their rights will not be safe. Even now the Muslims should unite together to face the national danger. Commenting on Babu Sita Ram, M.L.C.'s articles published in the Indian Daily Telegraph, advising Muslims to read the Satyarth Prakash, the Hamdam writes:—If there is any book which cuts the root of national unity in India it is the Satyarth Prakash. The Muslims hold that this book should be proscribed. It is the followers of this book who are mostly responsible for breach of peace in India. Commenting on Pandit Malaviya's speech at Calcutta the Jadu remarks that the Pandit is accustomed to shed crocodile tears to pacify the oppressed Muslims. If he is really anxious to win peace and prosperity for the country he should not encourage the Sangathan movement. Muslims are neither bellicose nor cowards, but when one is too much oppressed one is forced to take up arms. There is a limit to everything. The Sada-i-Muslim says that it has come to know that wherever Arya Samajists are placed in responsible positions they exert undue influence on their Muslim subordinates, specially Rajput Muslims, in order to convert them to Hinduism. Government should investigate the matter and satisfy the Muslims, otherwise this state of affairs will render Government service disagreeable to the Muslims and create unrest. Government should watch the movements of its officers who hold Arya Samajist views. It hopes that Government will respond to the Muslim appeal and punish the guilty immediately. The Hamdam complains that Hindu Railway employees show special consideration for the Sadhus in allowing them to travel without tickets but treat Muslim fakirs harshly. Those who collect subscription for cow-protection make inflammatory speeches in the railway compartments against the Muslims. This will tend to create hatred among the Hindus and will fan the smouldering fire of communal hatred. It is hoped that the Railway authorities will prohibit such religious subscriptions and objectionable speeches.

Music before mosques.

Referring to Lord Lytton's statement about the failure of the conference between Hindu and Muslim leaders at Calcutta the Vartman writes:—It is mere obstinacy to raise the question of music. We see that efforts are being continued to keep up this unjustifiable obstinacy and when an opportunity occurs to encourage it and then to make political capital out of it. This is the meaning of Lord Lytton's statement. His Simla talks and the tactics connected with this statement appear to be disingenuous. The only way to keep up the Hindu-Muslim tension was to prevent a settlement. The Bengal leaders should be on their guard and should frustrate the designs of crooked diplomats. In another issue the paper strongly protests against the stoppage of music when the procession of the President of the Bengal Provincial Conference reached in front of a mosque and says:—To concede such unreasonable demands as the stopping of music before mosques at the sacrifice of one's ancient rights is to encourage injustice and to undermine the basis of nationalism. Those responsible for stopping music have trampled upon the sentiments of twenty-two crores of Hindus and have set a very bad precedent. The Anand remarks that the Muslim insistence on the stoppage of music before mosques in spite of the decision of the Privy Council to the contrary makes it incumbent upon the Government to do justice and to protect the rights of the Hindus. It is only then that the Muslims will abandon their obduracy and follow the right path and the prevailing communal tension will cease. Referring to the claim of the Maha Sabha that the Hindus have the right to play music on public roads at all times the Medina writes:—We hear that as a reply to this the Muslims of Calcutta have decided, as an expiatory act, to kill seven cows in front of every mosque which has been dishonoured by the playing of music. Every Muslim will have full right to use public roads. Probably the Hindu Maha Sabha will have no objection to this.

Political propaganda.

The Vartman remarks that the devotion and enthusiasm which marked the efforts of the British for the improvement of Indian administration during the last years of the eighteenth century are not visible today. Terrible massacres, riots and communal disturbances are increasing in every part of the country in spite of the strengthening of the military and the police forces. It appears that the present administration is not at all for the benefit of Indians. It is the British who are deriving the utmost facilities and happiness from it. But this atmosphere of luxury created by the exercise of power is weakening the British Government as is shown by the fact that it is not prepared to undertake the protection of the civil rights of the public despite its large army and ubiquitous police. We have our own doubts whether the British Government will defend India against foreign attacks in case Britain is not immediately affected by them. Very little concern is shown for the lives of Indians. This growing intoxication of selfishness and luxury is gradually changing the British. The administration falling from its high purpose is assuming the form of frightfulness and making the rulers traders in politics. In another article the paper welcomes the multiplication of political parties in the country and regards the differences of opinion among the politicians as an indication of that enthusiasm which has always been found to precede political revolutions in every country. It compares the existing situation of India with the days of the Russian revolution when old and experienced leaders who opposed the Russian youths were not only not heeded but were also imprisoned and says that a few accredited leaders of the Liberal or the Swaraj party cannot now hope to secure a blind following among the people. It does not necessarily follow that there will be a revolution in the country or that the youths of the country want to attain Swaraj by means of red revolution but there is no doubt that after several struggles they are now coming to the right path and demanding that the next struggle for Swaraj should be carried on according to the wishes of the rank and file and in the spheres pointed out by them. The Hridaya publishes the fourth instalment of the article under the heading "Swaraj in the villages" communicated to it by Babu Hardayal Nag in the course of which he remarks:—England feeds herself by depriving others of their food. She secures food and clothing for herself by unjust means and by oppressing the weaker nations. If today England is rich and powerful she has become so by cutting the throats of others. England's patriotism is nurtured on injustice and oppression. The Indian villagers are at present faced with the question of life and death. The principle of self-preservation will soon drive them into the struggle for existence. The efforts of one nation to perpetuate its domination over another by destroying its progress, wealth and rights is bound to fail. It is time that our brethren in the villages realised that they have every right to enjoy the fruits of their labour in any manner they like. The first thing for them to do is to be on their guard against being robbed and cheated by the foreigners. Babu Sampurnanand, writing in the Aj, welcomes Hindu-Muslim disturbances as dealing a blow to Government prestige and encouraging self-help, self-defence and cooperation among the people. At present this spirit may be visible separately among various communities, but when they are tired of mutual dissensions it can be utilized for the good of the country. Riots and disturbances are, no doubt, bad things, but they are indications of the birth of a new nationality. Communalism must give way to nationalism in course of time. The Hamdam emphasizes the need of winning the sympathy of the free and powerful nations of the world for achieving the freedom of India. It regrets the abolition of the British Congress Committee and the newspaper India and strongly urges the Congress to establish its offices in New York, London and Geneva for carrying on propaganda in foreign countries.

Muslim affairs.

In the course of a series of articles pointing out the evils of nationalism and patriotism as inculcated by European nations the Medina writes: This bane of nationalism has affected Indian communities also with the single exception of Muslims. India will, in future, be ranged into two groups, one representing nationalism and another Islam. The former will consist of Hindus, Sikhs, Christians, Parsis and others. An instance of this has already been furnished by the combination of non-Muslim members of the Calcutta corporation against its Muslim Deputy President. It means that twenty-four crores of the inhabitants of the country will be ranged in a terrible struggle against seven crores of Muslims. Contemplating such a future, we leave it to the helpless and forlorn Muslims of India to decide what their line of action should be. We would once more urge that the only thing which can help Indian Muslims is inter-Islamic union and alliance with the Islamic world. All hopes from Western capitalists will be vain. The problem of winning the friendship of any other community of India is insoluble. On the one hand, Muslims are faced with European capitalism and militarism and, on the other, with the terrible nationalism of India. Today we are forced to call upon Indian Muslims to devote themselves to their organization. They should at once convene an inter-Islamic conference and proclaim that all Muslims of India are one. They do not intend to purchase Swaraj at any price if this Swaraj is to be the Swaraj of Malaviya and company, or of nationalism. They should proclaim that they will not go in for a union which can be had only on self-immolation. If they cannot help annihilating themselves these few Muslims will first annihilate foreigners and strangers. The Mashriq suggests that the Government should direct the district authorities to form Hindu-Muslim committees to prevent disturbances on the occasion of Bakr-Id. It adds: The cow-sacrifice is not binding on the Muslims. They do it on account of their poverty. We, however, advise them to be sparing in cow-sacrifice. The Bir Hindu says that as a result of the recent Calcutta riots, the public naturally apprehends danger on the coming Bakr-Id. On such occasions the Hindus being rich, suffer greater loss of life and property and, therefore, it is essential for them to adopt precautionary measures. Every Hindu should provide himself with such things that if a goonda enters into a house he may not be able to go back without being sufficiently wounded. Defensive societies like Mahabir Dal, Shankar Dal and Seva Samitis should be formed to cooperate with the police, if necessary. The Sada-i-Muslim says that there is no doubt that the Hindus are bent upon expelling the Moplahs from India. If the Muslims of India remain indifferent, Hindus will surely succeed in this matter. We request the Government of India not to send the Moplahs to a country where they will not only be cut off from their national traditions but will also be annihilated. The paper also pleads for the release of the Moplah prisoners. The Hamdam requests the Local Government to take necessary and early steps for the passing of the Muslim Marriages and Divorce Bill.

Indians in the colonies.

The Leader writes: It is our clear opinion that the Government of India ought not to accept the Colour Bar Bill as a settled fact and should make strong efforts to have it included in the subjects for discussion at the conference. There can be no lasting settlement of the Indian problem without a clear understanding as to how far this measure is going to be applied to Indians. Commenting on the passage of the Colour Bar Bill the Surya remarks :—This Bill is blacker and more terrible than the Asiatic Bill and its passage indicates the probable attitude of the South African Government regarding the Asiatic Bill. The situation demands that an organized protest against the Bill should be made in India. Otherwise the proposed Round Table Conference is bound to fail and the South African Whites will drive out Indians as untouchables. The Hamdam writes :—Lord Birkenhead's speech revives our anxieties and we are convinced that the interests of Indians in South Africa are not safe in the hands of the English statesmen of India and England. The question is not so complicated as it is made out to be in the speeches of the British statesmen. Indians demand only human rights and impartial justice. To raise diplomatic points in this connexion shows that the intention of the patrons of Indians is not above suspicion. The Haqiqat suggests that Mr. Shastri, Mrs. Naidu and Mr. Andrews should be included in the proposed Round Table Conference, otherwise it will be a great disappointment to Indians.

The Rewari riot case.

Commenting on the judgement in the Rewari Hindu-Muslim riot case the Surya remarks: The judgement is most important and deserves to be considered by the Hindus and the Muslims alike. It recognizes the right of the Hindus to take out their processions accompanied by music before mosques. No commendation of the judge can be too high for this impartial and ideal justice. The obduracy of the Muslims will certainly disappear if they have to face such justice a number of times. The authorities in every part of the country will do well to follow this precedent. The Medina writes:—In connexion with the Calcutta riots Muslims are being convicted and Hindus are being set free. Why? Because the Government is afraid of Hindus and Muslims have no power. The decision of the Magistrate in the Rewari case is that the Muslims had no right to stop music and that they had prearranged the riot. Why did the Magistrate give such a decision? Because the Muslims were resourceless. The Magistrate is an Englishman and is a part of the administration. He could not, therefore, decide in favour of Muslims. Will those Muslims who seek Government help not remember their God even now and depend upon Him alone?

Calcutta riots.

In the course of an editorial note on the Calcutta disturbances the Medina writes:—There is absolutely no doubt that the disciples of Malaviya and company who are embodiments of peace made the most strenuous efforts to avenge Kohat. But the bold Peshawaris and other Muslims of Northern India did not allow the fire of Malaviyajee's heart to be quenched. Owing to the excesses of the Hindu police and the combined attack of the whole of the Calcutta population Muslims had to incur greater losses and punishments, but the boldness displayed by them in the protection of their communal rights and in spurning the impossible demands of strangers is really commendable. It is true that Lord Lytton's follies in taking out the Sikh procession wounded the hearts of Muslims and the cowardly Bengalees desecrated the mosques. But oh weak Muslims, your God is very powerful and your religion is perfect. Bear all these sufferings with patience and fortitude. Bury your martyrs cheerfully and rejoice over the fact that they have attained life immortal.

Election campaign.

The Sainik warns the electors against voting for members of the Indian National Party and representatives of the Hindu sabha as that would weaken the Swaraj party which alone can fight the Government. The tactics adopted by the Liberals might result in the election of those who are known traitors and who are a step ahead of Dyer and O'Dwyer. The Pratap points out the need for holding a special session of the Congress in August or September with a view to bid good-bye to elections and strive to concentrate the entire energy of the country on the constructive programme.

Indian states.

The Sarfaraz complains that since the beginning of the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements the ruler of Hyderabad is being defamed and since the demand for the restoration of Berar the Government of India have been finding fault with his administration. There is a rumour that some important changes are to be made in the internal affairs of the state and that the question of increasing the number of British officers in the Civil and Military departments of Hyderabad and some other matters relating to the state are being discussed at Simla. We may say here that any change in the internal affairs of the state will wound the feelings of the Muslims all over India. The Hamdam and the Haqiqat express satisfaction at Her Highness the Begam of Bhopal's abdication in favour of Prince Hamid Ullah Khan as they think that this will put a stop to all future troubles.

Bengal Provincial Conference.

Referring to the opposition to the Bengal Pact at the Provincial Conference the Leader writes:—It probably means another breach in the swaraj party and a blow at Mr. Sen-Gupta's leadership. The net result of the Bengal Provincial Conference is a further disintegration of the party.

German lottery.

The Advocate, Hindi Kesari, Haqiqat, Hindustani and some other papers have published advertisements of a lottery said to have been authorized by the German Government.

Foreign affairs.

The fate of Abdel Krim has evoked wide sympathy in the Press which pays a warm tribute to his prolonged and heroic resistance in the face of heavy odds. The Leader writes:—An ardent patriot, a valiant fighter and a chivalrous foe, he will go down in history with the halo of a martyr to the cause of liberty. The Aj writes:—Whatever the fate of Abdel Krim may be the whole world will applaud him with one voice for his heroic struggle and will sympathize with him in his failure. Though the Riffs were defeated yet they are victorious, whereas the French and the Spaniards though victorious are defeated and have fallen in the estimation of the world. Their very name has become disgusting. Sooner or later they will have to face the wrath of the whole world. The Vartman deplores that Abdel Krim did not fulfil his vow that he would fight to the last man and die rather than surrender and says that if he had died a heroic death the Riffs would have become stronger a thousand-fold. The Pratap remarks:—It was not the combined strength of the French and Spanish armies but their delusive tactics and despicable diplomacy which inflicted a defeat on Abdel Krim. This victory of France represents her moral downfall. It is a victory of brutality and let us see how long it lasts. The Hamdam regrets the defeat of Abdel Krim and says:—Unfortunately he has submitted to hard-hearted enemies who do not appreciate bravery. We shall soon see how cruelly he is treated. The peace negotiations were intended by France and Spain to spread disunion among the tribes and the ruse has at last succeeded. But as the defeat of Karbala opened the door of Islamic victory so this defeat of the followers of the Prophet will promote the cause of independence and liberty. The Haqiqat writes:—Abdel Krim's heroic defence for a year and a half against one of the greatest military powers of the world is a glorious achievement of the Riff Commander on which he deserves congratulations from friends and foes alike. His defeat involves no disgrace to the great warrior. History will surely do justice to him and his name as a brave and victorious commander will ever illumine its pages. The Sada-i-Muslim says:—Europe having done its utmost to swallow up Islam will now be thrown into the abyss of ignominy. Ghazi Abdel Krim was not defeated in a pitched battle, but was left friendless and helpless as his followers were made to turn traitors. The extremist press is jubilant over the victory of Zaghlulists in the Egyptian elections. The Aj writes:—The news about Egyptian elections is highly inspiring. The victory of Zaghlulists in the elections has caused a stir in Britain and threats have begun to be held out to them. This should serve as a warning to those who advocate cooperation for the attainment of dominion Self-Government in India. The Pratap pays a tribute to the Egyptians for having returned the Zaghlulists to the Assembly in an overwhelming majority and says that only a leader like Zaghlul can liberate Egypt from the grip of John Bull. The Sada-i-Muslim remarks:—The result of the election has shown that the greatest enemy of the British power can be the greatest friend of the Egyptians. Referring to the comments in the British Press on the elections the Haqiqat writes:—The clamour of the British Press will only accentuate hatred and animosity against the British and will serve no useful purpose. By turning Egypt into an enemy England cannot protect her interests in the Near East nor can she peacefully guard the Suez Canal by enslaving Egypt. The Aj expresses satisfaction at the settlement of the Mosul question and gives the credit for it to the Turkish statesmen. It says:—The history of this dispute does not reflect any glory on the British foreign policy which tried its best, though without complete success, to usurp Mosul with all its oil-fields. The Haqiqat remarks:—A union between Britain and Turkey will be a guarantee for the peace of the Near East and by according generous treatment and friendly concessions to Turkey, Britain can very well strengthen her position in the Islamic world. The Medina says that even if the terms of the Mosul decision prove economically beneficial to Turks there is no doubt they are injurious from the moral and political point of view. The Turks, no doubt, will become members of the League of Nations, but the membership of the League is slavery under European capitalists. Perhaps the Turks will realize this very soon. The Haqiqat thinks that although the Cairo Conference was not a representative one it has laid the foundations of Islamic brotherhood which will develop into a League of Nations. Referring to the action taken by the British Government in dealing with the general strike the Signal writes:—The State has allied itself with capital and is trying by every means to crush organized labour and to reduce it to a state of perpetual vassalage to capital. But this much we can say with confidence that an armed coercion to trample down the demands of labour would undoubtedly involve a serious disaster that would shatter the very foundations of constitutional Government so much trumpeted by the descendants of Milton and Cromwell and Burke.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

There has been a marked improvement in the tone of the Press in the discussion of Hindu-Muslim relations. In the course of a letter to the Pioneer and the Leader discussing measures for stopping communal disturbances Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru writes:—"I think that the situation demands that not only should our law be able to cope with dangerous manifestations of religious bigotry, but that it should also have the power to deal with political ambition which feeds upon the ignorance or the enthusiasm of the many who can be easily misguided and inflamed. I raise no question as to the present-day slogans—Hindu or Muslim—but I do suggest in all seriousness that we should ask for legislation making it possible to disenfranchise all electorates of local boards, councils and the Assembly in any area where communal riots take place. It should not be difficult to understand or define what is meant by a communal riot nor should it be difficult to get a properly constituted authority to declare that a communal riot has taken place. Once a declaration of that character has been made the electorate of that particular district should be completely disenfranchised and should not be allowed to take part in any election to local bodies or councils, for, say, three years." The Pioneer doubts if the Government would be able to induce the Legislative Assembly to pass legislation of the kind suggested by Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and refers to the difficulty of setting up a properly constituted authority. "If that difficulty could be overcome the proposal deserves careful attention." Pandit Motilal Nehru in a letter to the paper gives his fullest support to Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru's proposal and says:—"I quite agree with him that such legislation will prove an effective deterrent to a considerable section of a well-known class of people who trade on communal differences . . . My humble suggestion is that if the Government has really set its heart on eradicating the evil it should in addition to the taking of powers suggested by Sir Tej Bahadur introduce certain changes in the practice relating to the framing of the periodical honours lists and also in the rules regulating appointments and promotions in the public services . . . A useful amendment may also be made in the Election Rules by providing that any candidate or his agent who excites communal passions and prejudices in the course of his election propaganda shall be guilty of a corrupt practice." Saiyid Asghar Abbas in a letter written to the Pioneer thinks that the riots are due to religious movements and therefore, legislation which is calculated only to chastise political ambition may not prove as fruitful as it appears to be at first sight. Mr. A. P. Dube opposes the proposal. The Anand heartily supports the suggestion of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru. The paper urges the Hindus to proceed very cautiously in respect of the arti-namaz dispute in the Aminabad Park, Lucknow. Instead of enforcing the municipal bylaw themselves the Hindu leaders should approach the authorities for bringing about a permanent settlement of the controversy. The Pratap remarks that the only means of preventing Hindu-Muslim conflicts and removing the nation's weakness is that a few selected, true and determined persons should declare a jehad against religious bigotry. Freedom cannot be attained through pacts, patched up peace or distribution of Government posts. The Garhwali says that it is owing to self-seeking leaders who mislead the people for self-aggrandisement that Hindu-Muslim tension and friction is growing day by day. It is to be regretted that such leaders are to be found more among Muslims than Hindus. The Ali brothers, Sir Abdur Rahim and Khwaja Hasan Nizami have laid themselves open to this charge by their recent speeches. The Medina does not expect that any good will come out of the order of the Magistrate of Delhi prohibiting the publication of posters and notices as it holds that the communal disturbances are the results of the activities of Arya Samajist leaders and newspapers. If the Government can restrain the fountain-heads then these daily disturbances may possibly stop. Commenting on Mr. Malaviya's speech at Patna the Hamdam remarks :—If the Hindus become the worshippers of one God many disputes connected with the cutting of a branch of the Pipal tree, or the killing of a monkey or a cow will come to an end. Had the Pandit exerted even a little for establishing joint civic guards they would have been established long ago. The Mahabir dals not merely protected their co-religionists, but also attacked mosques and killed solitary Muslims. Music has always been stopped before mosques. The Sada-i-Muslim takes strong exception to an article published in the Vartman alleging that there is excessive rowdyism among Muslims and says :—The statements made in the paper are always unfounded and misleading. As a matter of fact it is the Hindu goondas who have left no stone unturned to desecrate places of Muslim worship in most of the cities of India. Thousands of women and children and the old and the sick have been beaten inside mosques. Rowdyism is much more prevalent among Hindus and this is inevitable for their religious tenets leave a man free to become what he likes, e.g., a drunkard, a gambler and the like.

Music before mosques.

The Signal writes :—Our Hindu leaders should not throw away their valued time and activities in pandering to the whims of Muslim politicians. They should oppose communal representation for any class of people in India. The Abhyudaya condemns the action of congressmen in stopping music before a mosque while taking out the president of the Bengal Provincial Conference in a procession and says that if they had regard for the sentiments of Muslims they should have shown a similar regard for Hindu sentiments also, but the right of the Hindus " was murdered " to humour Muslims. Such unjustifiable partiality cannot lead to satisfactory results and will only make the Muslims more obdurate in their unfair and new demand for the stoppage of music before mosques. Referring to the report that the District Magistrate has stopped cow sacrifice and music before mosques on public roads at Jubbalpore the paper writes :—Why have the innocent been punished along with the guilty in this manner? Have the Hindus done anything to create a disturbance? If not, why was the traditional music of Hindus stopped for fear of rowdies? It was the Muslims who gave cause for excitement by sacrificing cows in open places and thereby tried to disturb public peace. The Jubbalpore authorities should therefore have stopped such sacrifices and taken securities from those who caused excitement. The Anand says that Lord Lytton's statement that he was prepared to include in the licence the condition that music would be stopped before certain mosques at the time of namaz proves that the Muslims have partly gained their object by recourse to hooliganism and bloodshed. It also betrays the weakness of the Government inasmuch as it could not refuse to recognize the Muslim demand in spite of its illegality. If the Government does not act prudently at the present time it will have to face critical situations every day in future. The partial success achieved by the Muslims through threats will encourage them to disturb peace and tranquillity. It is, therefore, the main duty of the Government to suppress the meanness of the hooligans. In another article the paper says :—The agitation of the Muslim fanatics led by a few bigoted Maulvis is increasing anarchy and lawlessness day by day. The Muslims want to cow down the Hindus by means of threats, but no self-respecting Hindu will submit to their dictatorship and music will not be stopped before mosques. The degraded mentality which the Muslims are displaying is detrimental to the interests of the country and is likely to cause incalculable injury to both the communities. Referring to the judgement of the Privy Council on the question of music before mosques which is being prominently quoted by Hindu papers Al Barid says :—Our fellow-countrymen forget that this judgement was delivered in connexion with a dispute between the Shias and Sunnis of Aurangabad which arose on the occasion of Muharram celebrations and that it contained a proviso laying down that in special circumstances the Magistrate's orders must be explicitly obeyed. Does not the playing of music before mosques at prayer time for the sake of wounding the religious sentiments of Muslims constitute a special case? The Haqiqat deplores the growing tension between Hindus and Muslims and says :—Selfish leaders promote their own interests by communal differences and see their greatest success in them. It is not at all difficult to remove these differences if efforts are made to effect a compromise in a friendly and disinterested spirit.

Political propaganda.

The Aj refers to the denationalizing process formerly induced among Indians by foreign domination and notes with satisfaction that this process has now been arrested and is being rapidly supplanted by love of old national ideals. Now the foreign muslin is an eye-sore to the people and the home-spun khaddar is an object of love. Now muslin stands for national downfall and khaddar for national regeneration. The Hridaya publishes the fifth instalment of the article on "Swaraj in the villages" communicated to it by Babu Hardayal Nag in the course of which he remarks:—Swaraj is the panacea of all our sufferings and the villagers are the roots of that panacea. As long as we allow ourselves to be duped by the foreigners, as long as our blood continues to be sucked by them, and as long as we do not become thrifty and industrious we cannot get Swaraj. The villagers should sever their connexion with the aliens and non-cooperate with them which means that they should state clearly that they do not like to be looted by the aliens, that they can meet their requirements and that they will not depend on others. Foreign trade is the root of the miseries of the Indian villager. This foreign trade may better be described as foreign loot, because it is in the interests of foreign trade that our old indigenous industries have been destroyed.

The Bengal Pact.

The Surya remarks that the most important event of the Bengal provincial political conference is the burial of the Bengal Pact. The swarajists may yet protest against the collapse of the Pact, but their protest will prove as ineffective as that of the Indian Muslims against the abolition of the khilafat. The Anand attributes the accentuation of the Hindu-Muslim tension to Mr. Das' Bengal Pact and says that wisdom demands that the Pact should be repudiated. The Abhyudaya also condemns the Pact and says that the Muslims will nowhere show gratitude for the concessions embodied in the Pact. Referring to the opposition to the Pact the Al Barid remarks:—Not only the Sangathanists, but even nationalist Hindus are vehemently opposing the Bengal Pact. It is to be regretted that the foundation-stone of national union laid by the late C. R. Das is being demolished. If the repudiation of the Bengal Pact fails to bring home to the Muslims of India the fact that rights and an honourable life can be secured by self-help alone, the Muslims will be doomed to perdition.

Election campaign.

The Aj deprecates the action of the Punjab Provincial Hindu Sabha in deciding to secure an undertaking from Hindu candidates to the council to protect Hindu interests. It says that by adopting this suicidal course which cannot but lead to divisions among the various Hindu castes themselves the Hindus will lay themselves open to the same charge which they level against the Muslims. The Surya charges the swarajists with wilful indifference towards the cause of the Hindus and exhorts the voters not to vote for the swarajists in the next elections. It refers to the introduction of the Bengal Pact and the refusal of a well-known swarajist leader to join the Hindu-Muslim Round Table Conference as illustrative of the swarajist mentality and says that if the Swaraj party secures the Hindu seats there is no doubt that it will lay the axe at the rights of the Hindus and favour the Muslims. In the course of a leading article the Vartman says:—Muslims have become extremely bigoted and the executive body of the European Association is not content with even ten seats. And it is well known how the interests of Hindus have suffered by their going to the legislatures solely as congressmen. Why then should Hindus alone go to the councils and the local bodies after spurning their Hinduism? They should combine patriotism with solicitude for the protection of their religion. The Abhyudaya says that responsive cooperation is the only suitable policy in the existing circumstances in the country and urges voters to give their votes to responsivists only.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the Bengal Government's decision to increase the percentage of Muslims in Government offices the Sada-i-Muslim remarks:—The minority of Muslims in Government offices is also one of the causes of the prevailing communal disturbances and therefore it is hoped that the United Provinces Government will follow the example set by the Government of Bengal and take necessary steps to remove this real grievance of the Muslims. The Zulqarnain says that the disturbances on the occasion of the Bakr-id are often due to misunderstanding among the parties concerned or the hastiness of officials or the want of full instructions and therefore suggests that opportunity should be given to District Magistrates to form committees of local influential persons for advising them. The paper commends the action of the District Magistrate of Saharanpur in forming such a committee. The Nizam-i-Alam takes strong exception to the publication of a book "Vichitra Jiwan" (Strange life) written by an Arya Samajist named Kali Charan in which, it says, the author defames Prophet Muhammad in the most profane language. If such a venomous propaganda calculated to wound the religious susceptibilities of Muslims is not checked they will be forced to bid farewell to all communal considerations and to have recourse to effective demonstrations and protests. The situation will then become dangerous.

Indian States.

The Hamdam apprehends that the stay of the Resident of Hyderabad at Simla for nine days and his secret conference with the new Viceroy and the superior officers of the Political Department have some sinister meaning. It is difficult for us to believe that the Resident has brought with him some papers signed by the relatives of His Exalted Highness complaining against him but history is not devoid of such instances. It is well known to everyone how the representatives of the paramount power obtain such signatures. We would like to tell His Excellency Lord Irwin that Indians in general, and the Muslims in particular, have special and deep faith in the Hyderabad state. The Haqiqat says:—Government are trying to discover legal flaws on the basis of which the Nizam may be entrapped. May God protect the Nizam from the weapon of abdication!

Punjab Jails Committee.

Commenting on the report of the Punjab Jails Committee the Leader writes:—The report of the committee shows that the whole system of jail administration in the Punjab is rotten. The resolution of the Punjab Government shows that its ideas on the subject of penology are in consonance with the views which have been accepted in civilized countries in the west. We congratulate it on its courageous adoption of a sensible policy and its decision to introduce radical measures of reform which will be welcomed throughout the country. The Pioneer writes:—The measures contemplated by the Punjab Government should, when given effect, have a satisfactorily remedial effect. All are salutary and the money spent on them will be well spent.

Railway affairs.

The Weekly Mazdoor strongly criticizes the Government for its indifference towards the grievances of railway employees and says:—Many things are happening daily before the very eyes of the Government and when questioned Government reply that they have no information. Government must know everything when they are getting fat by the Indian tax-payer's money. Let the Government understand that labour in India is also gathering strength and their number is not a negligible one. A day will soon dawn when the railwaymen in India will be forced to adopt direct action against the Government to better their position.

Congress politics.

The Aj complains that the Lucknow Pact has vitiated national life by recognizing communal representation and special rights in administration and public work. Unless the Congress is released from its grip no fresh life can be infused into the national movement. As a result of this Pact communal and religious distinctions have taken the place of merit in Indian administration and local bodies and it has proved to be the apple of discord in the national life. The swarajist policy has proved to be a failure. We shall get swaraj only when our rulers realize that they cannot govern by disregarding public opinion. Such a situation can be brought about only by non-cooperation. It will be better if the Congress dissociates itself from council politics.

The Rewari riot case.

In the course of an impassioned appeal to the Muslim community to help the families of those Muslims "who have fallen a victim to the Nausherwanian justice" of the Magistrate of Rewari, the Medina writes:—The decision in the Rewari case has shown that Muslims cannot expect justice even from Government courts. The blood of one Hindu was considered so precious that the gods of justice were not content with ruining twenty Muslims for it and sprinkled salt over the wounds by according legal recognition to the unjust claims of Hindus.

The Khilafat Conference.

Commenting on the resolutions passed by the special session of the Khilafat Conference the Medina says that although all Muslims aspire after independence they do not want swaraj, for swaraj as defined from time to time from the Congress platform cannot fulfil the requirements of Muslims. Its Sanskrit interpretation is Hindu raj. According to the Indian political creed it cannot go beyond the Dominion status. This would be most dangerous for the religious life of Muslims. The Khilafat Committee ought to have defined swaraj as complete independence and true democracy. The Nejat vehemently criticizes the comments in the Hindu Press on the Khilafat Conference and remarks :—When the mentality of the majority of Hindus has become so mean as is revealed by the attitude of Hindu papers in connexion with the proceedings of the special meeting of the Khilafat Committee we doubt if any attempts at improving communal relations will be fruitful. Why do not the Muslims and the Hindus then make a formal declaration of final rupture so that each party may set about to improve its condition and do whatever it can ?

District gazettes.

The Hamdam complains that the publication of summonses and court notices in English papers and the Government Gazette and the District Gazettes does not serve the object in view and deprives the national organs of pecuniary help to which they are justly entitled. The District Gazettes in some districts have, moreover, become competitors of private papers and are openly published under the patronage of local officers. The Government should declare that it makes no distinction between the District Gazettes and private papers and should direct the Deputy Collectors not to take any part in the publication of the former. The District Gazettes have rendered no public service and are quite useless.

The Bengal Presidency Area (Emergency) Bill.

Commenting on the passage of the Emergency Bill the Shakti remarks :—The Emergency Bill which has been enacted for Calcutta is not useful in any respect. We had never even dreamt that the Hindus and the Muslims of Bengal would have to atone for Lord Lytton's sin in this manner. Does not the constant demand for new legislation prove the unfitness of the authorities to carry on the administration of India ? Is it not, therefore, advisable that the bureaucracy should leave India bag and baggage in time ?

Artificial ghee.

The Tijarat says that the consumption of artificial foreign ghee in every town and city is mainly responsible for the loss of vitality among the people and the prevalence of epidemics in the country and suggests that health officers should try to check its use.

Abolition of mukhtarship.

The Mukhbir-i-Alam protests against the abolition of the Mukhtarship examination and says that it will cause great hardship to the poor zamindars and tenants who hitherto used to engage mukhtars on nominal fees.

Foreign affairs.

The Egyptian elections have received prominent attention. Extremist papers express warm satisfaction at the victory of Zaghlulists and strongly criticize British attitude towards Zaghlul Pasha. The Aj says:—The Egyptian dispute with the British Government is of great significance to India also. Zaghlul Pasha and his patriotic party have the sympathy of all thinking Indians in their struggle for independence. Referring to the "provocative comments" of the British press on the elections the Hamdam says:—How can a nation claim to be the champion of liberty and democracy when its press is so infused with the spirit of despotism and imperialism? If even Adly Pasha is not liked by Britain on account of his patriotism it would only mean that Britain's talk of granting independence to Egypt is mainly intended to deceive the world. British policy in Egypt is directed mainly towards acquiring complete control over the Suez Canal and the adjoining territories and for this every fair and foul means is being adopted without any hesitation. In another article the paper contends that Zaghlul Pasha's election is quite valid and says:—The British Government's opposition to Zaghlul is an open violation of the Egyptian law and shows that puffed up with her materialistic power Britain has no regard whatsoever for any legislation. The Sada-i-Muslim says:—It is strange that the British Government should refuse to acknowledge a person who has been elected under the rules framed and sanctioned by itself. The action of the British Government is absolutely unlawful and it should realize that such high-handedness is not always successful. The Najat regards the success of the Zaghlulist party as a menace to British domination over Egypt and says:—It is certain that British aspirations can no longer be fulfilled in Egypt and sooner or later Britain shall have to face the danger which has been created by the success of the Zaghlulist party. Referring to the surrender of Abdel Krim the Medina says:—To-day not only Muslims but all others who have been carrying on a life and death struggle against western capitalism and militarism will shed tears over the defeat of Abdel Krim. The whole world has come to know that the immoral and capitalistic Europe, the cruel and blood-thirsty Europe, the avaricious and tyrannical Europe is assuming pleasant but deceitful garbs in order to fulfil its capitalistic, imperialistic and materialistic designs. France, Spain, Germany and Italy are all disciples of Satan and slaves of devilish power. They are all enemies of humanity. Behind their courts, their laws and their assemblies are played the most dreadful games of militarism and imperialism. The whole of this group is a messenger of death for weak and helpless nations. The garden of the world's morality and civilization has been parched up by their breath. In the name of civilization these brutes are using their satanic power to suck the blood of God's helpless creatures. The day is, however, near when these enemies of morality and civilization will be hurled for good into the abyss of ignominy by the kick of God. The Hamdam apprehends some sensational and drastic proceedings against Abdel Krim and says:—Such proceedings though opposed to international usages will not be surprising because the western principles of morality and international laws become perverted when applied to a weak Asiatic nation. It is impossible for France and Spain to accord good treatment to the Emir. Has the world become so demoralized that it will become a passive spectator of this method of revenge? The Leader regards the Mosul agreement as another triumph of British imperialism. The Hamdam congratulates Sir Ronald Lindsay on his successful negotiations regarding the Mosul question and hopes that after this settlement the friendly relations between England and Turkey will very much improve. The Medina exhorts all delegates to the Islamic World Congress to lay the foundation of a permanent Muslim organization for the protection of pan-Islamic rights and the establishment of cordial relations and co-operation among Islamic states. If this object is fulfilled the period of western high-handedness will end and the Islamic countries will soon become free. The Hamdam is gratified to note that all Muslim countries are represented on the Congress and hopes that it will be able to solve the problem of the protection of the holy places of Islam and to prepare a programme which will prevent a repetition of undesirable occurrences at these places. The Pratap publishes an article from Swami Mangalanandpuri on Iraq in the course of which he remarks :—Although the people of Iraq have got swaraj their king, Faisal, is a mere puppet in the hands of the British. The Indian settlers in Iraq have to face overwhelming difficulties. They cannot get Government service in any department and cannot buy land. The British Government which brought the Indians to the country at the hour of its need is throwing them overboard now that its interests have been served. The British Government is preparing to swallow up Iraq.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The suggestions of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Pandit Moti Lal Nehru for the prevention of communal disturbances have received wide attention in the Press. The Sainik writes :—These measures cannot cut the root of the disturbances, but they can, to some extent, serve as a deterrent. Instead of resorting to wholesale disenfranchizement it ought to be enough to invalidate the elections of those who are directly responsible for the disturbances. The Anand urges the Government to accord earnest consideration to these suggestions and says that it will not be undesirable to apply drastic measures to deal with the existing deplorable communal situation in the country. The Aj does not approve of the suggestions and says that people should not be disenfranchized in any circumstances. Such punishments will constitute an unjustifiable encroachment on the rights of the people. The paper holds that the root cause of these communal troubles is the grant of separate representation and special rights to Muslims and asks whether some higher authorities had no hand in the formation of separate Muslim parties in Bengal and other places? The paper publishes a letter contributed by Babu Shiva Prasad Gupta (Benares) in which he attributes communal strifes to the Reforms and to the desire of the "aliens" to give a further lease of life to their unnatural authority in the country by placing obstacles in the way of national life and to divert public attention from the pursuit of liberty. He says that if Indians do not wake up soon and get over the intoxication of the liquor of the Reforms they will surely destroy themselves in mutual conflicts. Proceeding he writes :—The aliens are wholly responsible for the communal dissensions. They have deliberately created this situation by means of their crooked diplomacy. The way to escape from it is not to disenfranchize simple people as suggested by Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru but to accord exemplary punishment to wire-pullers. If a communal disturbance takes place in some province its Governor should be dismissed forthwith and he should be required to defend himself before Parliament. The Commissioner of the division and the Collector of the district in which the riot has taken place should be severely punished, and if there has been loss of life they should be transported for life. The highest police officers and the Kotwal of the town may even be sentenced to death for loss of life. The Abhyudaya remarks :—It would have been better if instead of offering such a novel and futile suggestion Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru had advised the abolition of communal representation which is the root cause of the whole trouble. The Haqiqat writes :—Dr. Sapru's proposal can be rendered practicable with a slight modification. It is an undoubted fact that the present communal riots are the result of council and municipal elections. The Shankar refers to the reports of Muslims demolishing Hindu temples, throwing idols into gutters, forcibly stopping the blowing of conches in private houses, committing rape upon women, etc., and remarks :—It is regrettable that the Muslims are not hesitating even in committing rape upon girls of six years. What a downfall! How diabolical! Are Hindus behaving in a similar manner? If not, the Muslims should drown themselves through shame. One Chaudhri Budh Singh writing in the Sudharak appeals to Hindus and Musalmans to cease mutual dissensions and conflicts if they want to get rid of the foreign yoke. He advises the Government not to take advantage of Hindu-Muslim strifes for this not only brings discredit on it but also makes people lose faith in it. Besides who knows that getting accustomed to violence Hindus and Muslims will ultimately not turn against the Government itself? The Aj pays a warm tribute to Maulvi Muhammad Taiyabullah of Assam for his courageous views on the recent activities of the Khilafat Committee and calling attention to the danger to Islamic countries from European powers, says:—The subjection of India is proving to be the cause of the ruin of all the eastern countries. If the thirty-two crores of Indians become self-conscious, what power is there on earth which can even dream of extending its domination in Asia? The Medina, the Sada-i-Muslim and the Farishta take strong exception to the publication of the book named "Vichitra Jiwan" (strange life) in which the author, Kali Charan Sharma, editor of the Musafir (Agra), is alleged to have vehemently and in the most profane language attacked the prophet Muhammad. They urge the Government to proscribe the book and to punish its author and thereby allay the unrest among Muslims.

The Raj Rajeshwari Procession.

The action of the authorities with regard to the Raj Rajeshwari procession has evoked strong protests in the Hindu papers, the burden of the comments being that it is calculated to encourage obstinacy and rowdyism among Muslims and ultimately to throw serious difficulties in the way of peaceful administration. Referring to the action taken by the authorities at Delhi and Calcutta in connexion with the Pahari Dhiraj route and the Raj Rajeshwari procession respectively the Leader writes:—In both places the Hindus feel aggrieved, in one place because the right of passage of Muslims along a public road has been upheld and in another because the right of Hindus to carry a procession along a time-honoured route has been denied. We leave it to the responsible authorities to consider what is the impression likely to be created on those concerned and the general public by this lack of uniformity in the course of action followed at the capital of India and of Bengal. In another article the paper says:—The impression produced by the action of the Commissioner of Police in changing the route of the Raj Rajeshwari procession originally sanctioned will not inspire respect for or confidence in the local authorities and will only complicate the situation. Those who by their attitude show a defiance of orders lawfully issued ought to be suitably dealt with. The Aj remarks that the Raj Rajeshwari procession affair is simply astounding. Is Calcutta ruled by the British Government or by the Musalmans? We firmly assert that the Government's action in this connexion teaches the people to disregard the law. The authorities of Calcutta may not realize the seriousness of this matter to-day but they will surely one day repent of it when the obduracy of the obstinate has gone beyond limits. Who can say that those who are to-day obstructing the public road for the Hindu processions will not another day exhibit similar obduracy in other matters? In another article the paper says:—The reason given by the Bengal Government in its communiqué for stopping the Raj Rajeshwari procession provokes laughter. Those guardians of peace are unfit to govern who consider it necessary to deprive a peaceful section of the people of its right relating to the use of public roads for fear of a disturbance on the part of another section. The Abhyudaya remarks that the order of the Police Commissioner was altogether unjust and betrayed the cowardice and the unfitness of the authorities. If the authorities yield to the threats of the hooligans in this manner a day will come when they will get encouraged to such an extent that it will become very difficult for the Government to control them. The Vartman says that the Calcutta authorities have hurt the religious sentiments of Hindus by ordering them to change the route of the Raj Rajeshwari procession. If the old customs are changed it will have to be said that the authorities wish to curtail the rights of one community in order to please another and they themselves will be solely responsible for the unrest which is bound to follow such a policy. If the authorities are unable to arrange for the taking out of processions in accordance with the established customs then it must be said that they are pointing out the need of a change in the administration itself. The Bharat Jiwan says:—Will the people still have respect for and faith in the Government and its laws?

Political Propaganda.

A new English weekly entitled "Republic" has been started from Cawnpore. It is edited and published by G. P. Nair at Cawnpore and printed at the Alijah Darbar Press, Gwalior. In the course of the leading article the paper says:—"The very name (Republic) is suggestive of both its message and aim . . . India wants a Federal Republic, though not now, at a later date. But Swaraj we want immediately and it is impossible for us to do without it any longer." The paper publishes an interview granted to its representative by Maulana Hasrat Mohani in the course of which he says:—" I have always been of opinion that the swaraj that is to be established in India must be in the form of a Federal Republic, or a federation of the free and united states of India by all fair means . . . I am sure that ultimately the Congress will find out that mere constitutional agitation is meaningless in a country like India which has no constitution and will again have to adopt the same view which I wanted it to approve at Ahmedabad." In the course of a leading article the Hridaya remarks:—Our birth-rights are robbed before our very eyes and yet we stand unmoved like a statue of stone. Our religious rights are throttled and yet we remain unaffected; objects of our veneration are spurned and yet we pass it over in smiles. Be that as it may, when we are destined to die why should we not make preparations for death? How long will you continue to offer to the devils of the bureaucracy tea made of the bones and skeletons of crores of poor Indians? How long will you continue to provide for the entertainment of those heartless men the wails of countless cows, orphans and widows? The paper publishes the sixth instalment of the article under the heading " Swaraj in the villages " communicated to it by Babu Hardayal Nag in the course of which he remarks:—The sword of foreign trade destroyed the happiness bound up with the freedom of the country and let flow the stream of blood in the form of wealth as a result of which hundreds of thousands of our villagers are crying for a morsel to-day. This foreign trade, education and industries have almost killed the Indian peasants or the Indian villagers who formed the most powerful community in the world. They have ruined their lives, maimed them and left them alive only that they may bear the greatest tortures and agonies. If the villagers still want to exist let them establish swaraj which means that they will grow corn for themselves, sell the surplus to their neighbours at reasonable price and on no account sell it to the foreigners. Suffice it to say that every Indian should realize that every shell going to the foreigners represents a drop of blood from the body of the Indians.

Music before mosques.

The Medina deplores that on the question of music before mosques Hindus are evincing extreme obstinacy, bigotry and hatred. If by combined action they succeed in forcing the Government to recognize their right to play music before mosques will the country and the Government continue to live in peace? How long and to what extent will Government continue to bow down to Hindu majority? We would urge Muslims to strengthen the foundations of pan-Islamic unity and to take up the task of internal reforms. Al Bashir says:—If the Hindus claim the right to play music before mosques on the ground that the roads are public property are not the Muslims also entitled on a similar plea to sacrifice cows on public thoroughfares? While claiming the right to play music before mosques, Hindus object to the sacrifice of cows even within the four walls of the houses of Muslims. What inscrutable justice? Sensible, just and liberal leaders of the Hindus who dislike these disturbances should advise their co-religionists to abandon this unreasonable obduracy. Al Barid remarks:—Since the advent of the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements the unfounded and unjust claims of the Hindus have wounded the religious sentiments of the Muslims. Muslims do not wish to provoke quarrels by spurning the just demands of the Hindus but they are not prepared to tolerate any insult to their religion even if offered by the biggest power. Those responsible for the Calcutta riots not only spurned the decision of the Unity Conference regarding the observance of old customs, but also tore the Bengal Pact into shreds and caused a conflagration the flames of which have affected the four corners of India. Was not the playing of music before mosques in Calcutta a violation of the old custom and of the Bengal Pact? It is the duty of farsighted nationalists who are anxious for India's prosperity to settle this question which is paving the way for bloodshed and plunder. Commenting on the Bengal Government's communiqué regarding music before mosques the Hamdam says that although the decision would not satisfy those holding extreme views in both the communities yet it is a most sound and wise decision in which due regard has been paid to moderation, caution and old customs. Now it is the duty of both the Hindus and the Muslims to abide by the decision and live peacefully.

The Bengal Pact.

The Vartman says that the evil caused by the Congress-League Pact of Lucknow has been aggravated by the Bengal Pact and remarks that not content with the provisions of these pacts Muslims want an extension of their special rights and some Muslim papers want that the principle of communal representation should be observed even in awarding punishments to thieves, rogues, etc. This is the limit of meanness. It is the duty of all wise Hindu and Muslim members of the Bengal Provincial Committee to bury the Bengal Pact for good. The Pratap remarks that the Bengal Pact was framed by Mr. C. R. Das in the hope of persuading the Muslims to give up their demand for separate communal representation. But when at the instance of Sir Abdur Rahim and other shrewd leaders the Muslims of Bengal began to press the fatal demand still further there remained no need for the pact and it is in the fitness of things that it has been rescinded. The Bharat Jiwan deplores the resolution passed in the Bengal Provincial Conference cancelling the pact and says that it will not only accentuate communal tension but create discord among political parties also and thereby prolong the thraldom of the country. Al Barid writes:—The programme of the Hindu mischief-makers has succeeded and the most important achievement of the late Mr. C. R. Das has been wrecked altogether. The sangathanist zeal has perverted Hindu mentality and so long as it persists the Hindus will not be prepared to listen even to the greatest of their leaders on any matter other than that of usurping Muslim rights and dragging them towards annihilation. The Zulqarnain remarks:—The noble achievement of the late Mr. C. R. Das which gave indications of just treatment being accorded to the Muslims has at last been repudiated. The Muslims should not regret it much as after the death of Mr. Das the pact had become a dead letter.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the apprehensions of serious communal riots on the occasion of the coming Bakrid the Rahnuma remarks:—The communal tension is being accentuated by the provoking activities of Arya Samajists. Now instead of carrying on their propaganda for cow protection peacefully and appealing to Muslims they are adopting provocative methods and are secretly concerting measures to stop cow sacrifice forcibly. All this will result in exceptionally serious riots. The Mashriq says that the Hindus have no right to obstruct Muslims in sacrificing cows nor can the authorities justly ask them to sacrifice cows only at a particular place. Sacrifice is a religious injunction for Muslims and they are at liberty to sacrifice any animal they like. In case of obstruction it becomes incumbent on them to sacrifice the very animal objected to. The paper, therefore, asks the Hindus not to provoke Muslims in this matter but at the same time advises Muslims to sacrifice cows sparingly. The Aiena deplores the recent communal riots which have only ended in loss of innocent lives, bloodshed and unnecessary prosecutions and exhorts both Hindus and Muslims to exercise moderation and toleration during the coming Bakrid in order to avoid all quarrels and disturbances. In the course of an article discussing Islamic problems the Medina says:—We would like to emphasize that it is useless for Indian Muslims to oppose the present Hindu mentality. Bravery can be met by bravery but cowardice, deceit and mischievous zeal cannot be countered. Indian Muslims have two important tasks before them, viz., a strenuous war against western capitalists and the establishment of Islamic brotherhood. The former includes the freedom of India and of other Islamic countries. Non-cooperation with the necessary changes in methods will be our real guide.

Agricultural development.

Referring to the Viceroy's speech at the Conference of Ministers and Directors of Agriculture, the Leader writes:—India may look forward to an active policy of agricultural development during Lord Irwin's viceroyalty. His speech also showed that he is keen on ameliorating the lot of the villager. In this common object of helping the helpless masses and of bringing sunshine to them all political parties and classes of people can co-operate with the Government. The vastness of the problem and its vital connexion with national progress demands such co-operation and all policies and programmes which stand in its way should be discarded on patriotic grounds . . . If the Government is sufficiently in earnest about the matter and adopts prompt measures for spreading the light of education, developing communications and enlisting popular support and providing resources needed for embarking upon a comprehensive policy of rural reconstruction then certainly a new era will dawn and the people will come to appreciate better than they do the beneficent purpose of British rule. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—From the din of communalism and the despair of politics the speech and its subject make a refreshing change. An agricultural commission is any day more welcome than a futile Reform commission which will do more harm than good in the present impossible state of things. If the reforms are withdrawn, there will be less trouble because the mischief of communal representation is at the bottom of it. The seeds of mischief were sown in what is known as the Jahangirabad amendment which was the precursor of the Congress-League Pact which has been a veritable harbinger of feuds the like of which India did not witness in recent years.

Punjab Jails Committee.

The Pratap remarks that the entire credit for the appointment of the Jail Inquiry Committee, the publication of its report and the readiness of the Punjab Government to introduce reforms in jails is due to the Bande Mataram. But for its courageous exposure of the atrocities practised in the jails there would have been no reforms to-day. The condition of the jails in other provinces is no better than that of the Punjab jails. Will the United Provinces Government also introduce reforms in this direction? A number of other Hindi papers write in a similar strain. The Abhyudaya says that the condition of the jails in the United Provinces is equally bad if not worse than that of the Punjab jails. The Surya says:—It is indeed a matter for regret, shame and disgrace to the Government that such inhuman and monstrous practices should be possible under its civilized rule in the twentieth century. The Aj urges that even in the administration of jails due regard should be paid to considerations of humanity, civilization and social well-being.

United Provinces Cooperative Committee's report.

The Leader is of opinion that the report of the cooperative committee appointed by the Local Government contains a comprehensive and able survey of the existing conditions and a large number of valuable suggestions. The report is in fact a strong indictment of the lines on which the movement has been so far conducted and Government cannot escape responsibility for the state of things. Better results could certainly have been achieved if the department had not been starved for funds and greater attention had been paid to the needs of proper organization, efficient supervision and cooperative education.

Indian States.

Referring to the recent interview of the Resident of Hyderabad with the Viceroy at Simla the Najat remarks:—The moral courage displayed by the Nizam in the matter of Berar has displeased the official gods; yet it is plain enough that he cannot be treated like the Maharaja of Indore as he is much esteemed and respected not only by his subjects but by the whole of Islamic India. Referring to the news published by the Riyasat of Delhi regarding the proposed appointment of a commission against the Nizam the Aziz Hind says:—We do not for a moment believe that the Government of India will take such a serious action on scandalous and trivial complaints against the Nizam. If such trivialities form the basis of the appointment of commissions all the ruling chiefs will soon be dethroned and their states will perish. The paper urges the Viceroy to issue a communiqué to remove the existing general unrest concerning Hyderabad and to check the suspicions prevailing regarding himself. The Naiyar Azam, warns the Government of India that Indians in general and Muslims in particular entertain a deep devotion for the Nizam and any action taken against him is likely to cause sensation all over the country.

Indians in the colonies.

Referring to the report of the select committee of the South African Legislature on the Class Areas Bill the Leader writes:—"It appears from the report that the members of the Paddison deputation stood their ground well and put up a valiant fight on behalf of the Indian settlers." The paper specially commends the firm attitude displayed by Mr. Bajpai and says:—"Mr. Bajpai must have acted in accordance with the instructions of the Government of India which deserves the warm thanks of the people for its opposition, root and branch, to the Bill."

Mr. Gandhi's visit to Mahabaleshwar.

The Aj says that Mahatma Gandhi has humiliated the national cause by his visit to the Governor. The cause of self-respect, soul-force and self-confidence has received a rude shock by the Mahatma's visit to Mahabaleshwar. If this visit was inspired by the desire to make the bureaucracy an instrument of propagating charkha then the Mahatma has disregarded a principle to secure a slight gain. This example of his can never serve as an ideal to non-cooperators.

Foreign affairs.

Muslim papers strongly protest against the alleged interference of the British Government with Egyptian elections. The Medina says that the name of Zaghlul Pasha is absent from the list of distinguished ministers of Egypt in the same way in which fairness and justice are absent from British politics. It is true that by means of its warship Britain has succeeded in depriving the Egyptian Cabinet of the services of its worthiest son, but this very fact will dig the grave of British domination in the East. The patriotic spirit of Egyptians cannot be stifled by such threats and demonstrations of force. The Haqiqat remarks :—The brilliant success of Zaghlul Pasha's party has upset the official and semi-official circles in England. But the British statesmen would be well advised not to trample the wishes of the Egyptians regarding the Suez canal and Sudan and in order to make Egypt a trusted friend of England they should settle the matters in dispute by compromise. The Najat says :—Had Egypt been really free Britain would not have dared to send a warship to exert pressure on her. To save his country Zaghlul Pasha has withdrawn his lawful claim to Premiership but this is not likely to end the difficulties of Britain in that country because the Zaghlulists are in a majority and they will surely insist on their old demands. The Haqiqat welcomes the Anglo-Turkish settlement and says that it is equally honourable to both the parties. It is hoped that Persia will also join the alliance in order to ensure peace in the Near East. The Najat says that the Turks have after all compelled Britain to concede their demands and in this way they have achieved another great victory over her. The Pratap is of opinion that in the Anglo-Turkish agreement the British have had to yield more than the Turks. The agreement has enhanced the international importance of Turkey. The Haqiqat says :—Arabic papers received from Egypt and Syria have been providing some details of the black deeds of the hard-hearted Frenchmen in the latter country. Although the reports are being rigidly censored, it is clear that the brave soldiers of Syria are fighting their cruel self-constituted masters with redoubled vigour and bravery. France has been most contemptuously trampling upon their just and legitimate rights with the support of the League of Nations. The brilliant feats of the brave soldiers of Syria are expected to encourage other subject nations. Referring to Abdel Krim's surrender the Sadaqat says :—The defeat of Ghazi Abdel Krim will be mourned not only by the Islamic world but by the whole of Asia. The heroic resistance offered by the Riffs with a small and helpless army to two great powers of Europe is in fact a matter for shame for Europeans. The defeat of the Riffs is no defeat. The Haqiqat says that no good can be expected from the Islamic Congress at Mecca. The most important question before it should be how to put a stop to the Nejdian atrocities which have agitated the entire Muslim world. Indian Muslims should devise some speedy means of saving the sacred Mecca from the cruel and impure hands of Nejdis; otherwise they should be prepared to hear one day that the Holy Mausoleum of the Prophet has also been demolished. Referring to the alleged demolition of holy places at Mecca the Sarfaraz remarks :—We cannot expect a gentlemanly treatment at the hands of Ibn Saud whose activities have already been revealed to the world. The consecration of the Hedjaz will only be possible when his unholy feet are removed. The Hamdam eulogizes His Majesty the Amir of Kabul for granting reforms to his subjects and says that like the Montford reforms they are not a sham but are real and substantial. The inauguration of reforms in a country notorious for its backwardness shows the tendency of Islam towards democracy. Europe should feel ashamed that at a time when imperialism is getting the upper hand in European countries Muslim countries are advancing towards republicanism.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In the course of a letter to the Pioneer Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru replies at length to the criticism which has appeared in the press of his suggestion regarding the disenfranchisement of areas within which communal riots take place. He says:—I feel that once my suggestion is accepted, the intriguing and the evilly-disposed who thrive politically by playing upon popular fanaticism and also the rank and file will think not twice but several times before they play with public peace. The Aj agrees more with Babu Shiva Prasad Gupta than Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru regarding the genesis of communal disturbances and argues that disenfranchisement as suggested by Dr. Sapru cannot touch non-official wire-pullers in these disturbances. Proceeding it says:—Political ambition is to be found not only in non-officials; officials too are greatly obsessed by it. Many officials find a sort of pleasure in our troubles. It is from the Indian officials that an incentive comes and that is how they know when trouble is brewing. They proceed in so skilful a manner that while they get titles and promotion the masses suffer loss in life and property. Those who should preserve law and order strike a fatal blow at them and are patted on the back. We support the views of Babu Shiva Prasad Gupta. We have not the least doubt that if measures are taken to inflict suitable punishment on Government officials the communal trouble will vanish in no time. In that event (subordinate) Government officials too will get no opportunity to fulfil their ambition, for it is on the support of (higher) officials that they hatch their conspiracy. We want that Government officials without exception should be adequately punished on the outbreak of the disturbance. If they wish there can be no disturbance. This suggestion is offered in case it is thought desirable to stop riots but if riots are held to be desirable there is no need either for us or for the Government to consider the remedies. The Hindi Kesari says:—Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru's suggestion may or may not succeed in achieving its object but it will certainly help the bureaucracy to withdraw the rights which it was forced to concede. The suggestion is altogether impracticable and can have no effect on the goondas who disturb public peace. The Hamdam writes:—The suggestions of Dr. Sapru and Babu Shiva Prasad Gupta involve drastic remedies. We believe that the administration of a strong dose to cure the prevailing disease in India is likely to do more harm than good. Babu Shiva Prasad holds that communal representation is at the root of all dissensions. The fact, however, is that during the one hundred and fifty years after the fall of Delhi the Muslims remained sunk in heavy sleep, while the Hindus, being alive to the needs of the time, got an opportunity of securing a majority in all Government departments and for a long timg availed themselves of it in trampling the Muslim rights. When the Muslims awoke from their torpor and asked for their just rights the Hindus were annoyed and became perturbed. If the least regard had been paid to Muslim rights in joint elections they would never have demanded separate representation. Where the Muslim rights are not secured by legislation, Muslims, in spite of their possessing the requisite qualifications, do not succeed in securing posts of distinction. The Jatvir publishes an article communicated to it by Swami Satyadeva in the course of which he remarks:—The entire energy of Muslim organization is being concentrated on fighting with the Hindus because it cannot fight with the British. By trying to secure Government posts for the Muslims their leaders want to perpetuate their serfdom. The vaunted claim of the Muslims that they conquered India is quite baseless. Those who invaded India from the north were the Turks and the Tartars. Their descendants form only a microscopic section of the Muslim population of India. The Muslim inhabitants of India were first shoe-beaten by the Turks, then they were cudgled by the Hindus and now they are fighting among themselves for the crumbs from the tables of the British. The only means of their emancipation is that they should assimilate Hindu civilization and be ready to sacrifice themselves for Mother India. Thus alone can their sins be expiated. The bigotry of Muslims is probably necessary for bringing to the field of action those young men who are ready to sacrifice themselves for Hindu civilization. Al Burid pleads for mutual tolerance with regard to music and cow sacrifice and remarks:—If national leaders are honestly determined to stop quarrels they are sure to succeed in doing so. The Jadu says:—The anxiety and uneasiness shown by the British Government during the days of the non-cooperation movement were worth seeing. It was a time when union and friendship prevailed in India and Hindus were working shoulder to shoulder with the Muslims for achieving liberty but British diplomacy succeeded in winning over the so-called leaders to its side. Shuddhi, Sangathan, Mahabir Dals and Ali Ghols were started. These movements offered such a death-blow to Hindu-Muslim unity that the dream of swaraj has vanished. Communal differences have been accentuated and the political structure so arduously raised has fallen to pieces. In these circumstances it is no wonder if the Britishers rejoice in their triumph. The Haqiqat says that the United Provinces Government encouraged the formation of Aman Sabhas to combat the non-cooperation movement. But now that the communal questions have endangered the public peace of the country and riots have actually occurred at several places no Aman Sabha is ever being heard of. Perhaps there is no need for establishing peace or in the eyes of the Government breach of peace means only struggle for the freedom of the country and inter-communal riots are not included in this term.

Music before mosques.

Referring to the opposition of Calcutta Muslims to the decision of the Bengal Government on the question of music before mosques the Leader writes :—The fact is that fairness and charity do not form part of the moral and intellectual equipment of those who have girded up their loins to wage a communal war. If there is any community which should feel aggrieved against that decision, it is the Hindus of Calcutta. Concessions to those who are apt to take law into their hands is construed as weakness and leads to more trouble. From this point of view the Bengal Government's decision is a mistake. It has not mollified those who threatened trouble. It has only whetted their appetite for more. The duty of the Government is to uphold the just rights of every community and not to countenance unreasonable communal demands which involve the sacrifice of the legal rights of other communities. If it fails to do so it will increase its own troubles. The Pratap writes :—The decision was not unexpected as the Bengal Government was bent upon favouring the Muslims in this matter. By fulfilling their cherished desire the Bengal Government has betrayed its weakness. The desire of the Government to make the Muslims dance to its tune and revive dyarchy in Bengal and to some extent its fear of the Muslims are at the root of this decision. We regard this decision of the Government as devoid of any principle. The Hindu public must on no account obey this order. We request the Maha Sabha to hold at once a special session at Calcutta and enjoin the Hindu population of Bengal to violate this order. To submit to it quietly would be to display cowardice. The Gorakshan remarks :—The Bengal Government's decision is one-sided and therefore unacceptable. It lays the axe at the root of the social as well as the religious rights of the Hindus, constitutes an insult to them and is a source of danger to all the provinces of India. It is the outcome of the Government's fear of the Muslims and its knowledge of the weakness of the Hindus. The Vartman says :—It will be better if Government makes over the public roads in front of mosques to Muslims and orders that no Hindus should use them. Its policy had already trampled the hearts of Hindus in cities and now hear of villages. Which is the village in East Bengal where idols have not been broken ? Which is the day when we do not hear of a temple being burnt, an idol being broken and beef being thrown ? . . . Where is the wonder if on seeing the miserable plight of Hindus in villages, and cases of theft, dacoities, kidnapping of women and boys and the daily evil incidents in temples one is led to imagine that instead of British Raj Aurangzebi is rampant there. Hindus ! open your eyes. If you rely for your protection solely on Government then it is all over. In another article the paper strongly criticizes the decision of the Bengal Government and says :—No rights can be achieved through cowardice. By firm determination and organization the Government were forced to cancel the partition of Bengal and to repeal the Rowlatt Act. It is a great mistake to think that the Bengal Government's order is irrevocable. Nadirshahi, Dyerism, Aurangzebi and Czardom were not permanent. How can then this order remain in force for ever ? Such autocratic interference as has been shown in the matter of stopping music has not been seen in any other civilized country. The Hindus should organize themselves and wait for the instructions of the Maha Sabha. The Anand remarks :— By this decision the Bengal Government has trampled upon the rights of the Hindus which they have been enjoying for the last several centuries. The decision is marked by partiality and constitutes an interference on the part of the Government with the religious rights of the Hindus. It is unjust and improper and is calculated to create a sensation in the country. The Hindus should not take it lying down and should become prepared to sacrifice their all for the protection of their religion. The Sevak says:—The demon of music has at present possessed the Muslims and they are determined to deprive the Hindus of their religious rights and for this have raised the standard of jehad especially in Bengal. Government is taking advantage of the communal situation prevailing in the country. The internecine quarrels are only strengthening its hands. The paper exhorts Hindus to gird up their loins for self-defence and to be ready to sacrifice their lives for their religion. They will then be able to secure the liberty not only of playing music but also of every other kind. The Medina acknowledges that the Governor of Bengal did his utmost to reconcile the two communities on the question of music before mosques but says that in order to please Hindus he has deprived Muslims of their rights. Does this not show that the Government is afraid of mischievous persons? By leaving the mofussil places at the mercy of magistrates and police officers, who will generally be Hindus, the door of mischief and disturbance has been left open. The Najat regards the decision as praiseworthy from every point of view and says that it would have been much better if it had not been confined to Calcutta. It is desirable that other provincial Governments should also take similar action and issue communiqués upholding the old custom and practice. The Sada-i-Muslim says that if the decision is strictly enforced it is likely to lessen the present communal tension to a great extent. It is just possible that there may be some among Muslims who may not like the playing of music before mosques at any time, still we would consider it a good luck for the country if the Hindus and Muslims agree to abide by this decision. It is hoped that the educated classes in both the communities would appreciate the decision and would do their best to improve the relations between the sister communities. Discussing the question of music before mosques the Signal suggests the complete stoppage of music not only in close proximity of the mosques but at all places and on all occasions such as marriages and even in Hindu homes. It says:—There is no alternative open to us than to yield to the Muslim zid. By doing so we Hindus shall practically lose nothing while the unexpected and unthought-of victory of the Muslims will stimulate their nerves as they are a part and parcel of the great Indian nation. It is the desire of all true Hindus that that limb of ours should get sufficient nourishment to keep pace with us. It is time for us to mourn and not to play music. Like Rana Pratap Singh of Chittore we should take the vow of not taking out any musical procession so long as swaraj is not achieved through the combined efforts of Hindus and Muslims. If this stoppage of music during Hindu religious and social observances be effected throughout the length and breadth of the country even for a short while, it will set athinking, even those who never heard of the word swaraj, of their real condition.

Muslim affairs.

In the course of an article discussing a line of action for the Muslims the Medina says:—Every community and religion has different guiding principles of life. For instance the secret of the present success and imperialism of Europe is its irreligiousness, apostasy, atheism, tyranny, covetousness, land-hunger, deceitfulness and narrow patriotism. The emancipation of Hindus, according to their present day leaders, lies in communal strife and kissing the feet of Government. The Muslims, however, should seek their safety behind the sacred walls of their religion. The economic and political laws and regulations in vogue cannot serve as their guide. The Quran alone can guide them. If we want that both in peace and war Muslims should remain safe from the high-handedness of our fellow-countrymen and Government, we should seek the economic freedom and progress of the followers of Islam. What the bricks from the kiln of Malaviyajee, the pistols from the loins of gopis and the lathis and shots of sangathanists cannot accomplish is achieved by blessed money in courts. We have no danger from pistols and bombs dropped secretly. We are Muslims and the life and body of Muslims are meant only for bearing hardships. But we have to save our community from those silent, innocent-looking wolves who sitting in their shops suck the economic blood of Muslims. The Ittihad exhorts responsible officials to adopt such measures during the Bakr-id as may render communal tension impossible and enable the Muslims to perform their religious rites peacefully. The Haqiqat calls attention to the apprehension of disturbances during the coming religious festivals and exhorts Hindus and Muslims to exercise patience and forbearence. The Rozana Akhbar suggests that committees consisting of Hindus and Muslims should be formed in every district which shall be responsible for maintaining peace. The Najat expresses surprise at the action of the Hindus of Delhi in asking the authorities to change the route of Pahari Dhiraj and ironically remarks that this shows the eagerness of the Hindus for compromise. Certainly the Hindus are in a majority. But this never means that they alone are the sole masters of India and that the non-Hindus have no alternative but to bow down their heads before them. Muslims came to this country as conquerors and have got rights and privileges similar to those of the Hindus. There appears no reason why they should forego their right to sacrifice cows. The route of Pahari Dhiraj is already fixed and the Hindus have got no right to object to cows being taken through that route. The Hamdam expresses wonder at the queer attitude of the sangathanists who on the one hand are anxious to secure the full right of using the public thoroughfare for playing music in their processions and on the other hand are trying to stop the old route of Pahari Dhiraj.

The Hindu Maha Sabha.

The Sainik vehemently criticizes those leaders of the Hindu Maha Sabha who advise the Hindus to secure their rights by co-operating with the Government and winning its favour. It says :—This would mean that they would compete with Muslims for kissing the feet of the Government. We should remember that the Government will never allow the Hindus to become powerful enough to crush the Muslims and thus to endanger its own existence. Government will never side with the Hindus in Hindu-Muslim quarrels. Its policy with regard to the Raj Rajeshwari procession, the Pahari Dhiraj route and the question of music before mosques furnishes fresh instances of this. The Aj disapproves of the decision of the Hindu Maha Sabha to set up its candidates against the Congress nominees in the next elections and attributes the alienation of the Hindu Sabha from the Congress to the Lucknow and the Bengal pacts. It apprehends that in the event of the Hindu Sabha contesting the elections there is the danger of a few ji huzurs posing as orthodox Hindus getting access to legislatures and thereby helping in tightening the bonds of India's slavery and exposing her to world-wide ridicule by practising slavery in the form of co-operation. Another result of the Hindu Maha Sabha putting forward communalist Hindus in place of nationalist Hindus will be that the Hindus themselves will become divided into innumerable groups. In these internecine dissensions each sect and community will try to enlist the support of the bureaucracy and monopolize all offices from ministerships to the posts of peons Such a bankruptcy of intellect has never before been seen in the history of India. Referring to the decision of the Punjab Hindu Sabha to nominate its candidates for election to the legislatures the Najat says :—This shows that Hindu mentality has altogether changed and the Hindus want to keep the fire of communal tension burning. The action of the Hindu Sabha is sure to damage the prestige of the Congress and it is apprehended that this great national body will be smashed to pieces by the reprehensible communal feelings of the Hindus.

The Bengal Pact.

The Aj writes :—The Bengal Pact has been saved but it has caused a serious split in Congress ranks. We cannot congratulate the Bengal Congress Committee on this state of affairs. The supporters of the pact have upheld it with a view to ensure success in the coming elections but is it possible for the swarajists to secure success by wounding Hindu susceptibilities? Instead of bringing peace and amity to the country the Bengal Pact has sown seeds of discord and hatred between Hindus and Muslims. The sooner this pact is drowned in the Bay of Bengal the better for the country. The Hamdam expresses satisfaction at the defeat of the resolution opposing the Bengal Pact and is gratified to learn that Mr. Sen Gupta kept up the tradition of his distinguished predecessor.

The Agra Tenancy Bill.

Commenting on the report of the select committee on the Agra Tenancy Bill the Leader writes :—We find that the Bill after the modifications it has undergone at the hands of the select committee is more defective than it was originally. It increases the disabilities of the occupancy tenant and empowers the landlord to acquire his holding for agricultural development. Not only has the position of occupancy tenants been rendered precarious but the select committee has modified certain provisions in the original Bill the effect of which will be virtually to nullify the provisions relating to life tenures. The Sainik writes :—The Bill was sufficiently bad but the select committee has made it worse so much so that it will not be improper to characterize it as the Black Bill of Kisans. Its very object has been defeated. Mountains of troubles will fall on the cultivators if the Bill is passed. The cultivators and their well-wishers should abandon all other work and inaugurate a furious agitation over the Bill.

Agricultural development.

The Hindi Kesari writes :—The Viceroy's speech before provincial ministers of agriculture at Simla indicates that the show of the agricultural commission and the cry for agricultural development are only intended to make India an agency for producing raw material. This speech will open the eyes of those people who had built high expectations on the commission. If the commission succeeds in the object mentioned by His Excellency it may well benefit the Manchester manufacturers and other foreigners but it cannot improve the lot of the poor Indian cultivators. The Aj insinuates that the " Bureaucracy " has started the movement for agricultural development in order to discredit the national movement. It says :—Were agricultural development at all possible under the terrible subjection we would have withdrawn from the political movement and concentrated our energies on it. But this is far from being the case. On the other hand the alien rule is at the very root of the misery of the kisans for its interests lie in the increased export of Indian corn to foreign countries and the waste of crores of rupees in England every year in the name of the good of India. The Hamdam remarks :—The Government's kind attitude towards peasantry is not intended to improve their condition, but only to wean them from the influence of political leaders and to bring them under that of the Government. While discussing India's position in the world market the Viceroy laid much stress on the production of cotton, jute, wheat and oilseeds, etc., but he made no mention of the production of coarse grain which is the only means of subsistence of the rural public. The new agricultural policy of the Government is intended for the good of the British manufacturers and to check the political awakening in the peasantry, otherwise the Viceroy would have cared more for the coarse grain than for the world market.

United Provinces Government's communication regarding communal tension.

Commenting on the communication addressed by the United Provinces Government in connexion with the growth of communal tension the Leader refers to the intention of Government to use freely all the powers vested in them by law and says :—These powers should be used with thorough impartiality and uninfluenced by threats of disturbances held out by any section of the people. They should not as a rule be used to the detriment of those whose legal rights are threatened. If this is not done communal tension will continue to grow. The paper suggests that the burden of punitive police whenever necessary should be imposed on the aggressive community.

Indianization of services.

Referring to the speech of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at the Indian Civil Service dinner the Leader writes :—We regard the speech as a regrettable utterance although we do not hold His Royal Highness responsible for the views expressed in the speech. The Prince should not have been advised to make a reference to the Lee recommendations. Royalty ought not to be dragged into controversial politics. Is His Royal Highness aware that Indian opinion demands that British recruitment for the services should be completely abandoned ?

Tibbi college.

The Haqiqat disfavours the idea of opening any new Tibbi college at Lucknow as private institutions will suffer thereby and poor students will be deprived of their present facilities. The most desirable step in this direction would be to give financial aid to the existing institutions instead of wasting public money on new ventures.

Indian States.

The Farishta complains against the action of the Maharaja of Bharatpur in removing the Muslim element from the various services of the State and urges that Muslims should have proportionate representation in them.

Foreign Affairs.

The Muslim Press continues to pay warm tributes to the heroic resistance of Abdel Krim. Referring to the Anglo-Turkish agreement regarding Mosul the Hamdam deplores that the Turks have sold their sovereign rights for a sum of 5 lakh pounds and says that the entire Muslim world will be shocked to hear this sad news. The Bedar regrets that the mighty British Empire has exercised undue pressure on Turkey regarding Mosul. The paper is gratified to note that the Islamic Conference at Mecca was fully representative and hopes that it will realize the dreams of Islamic unity and devise means to frustrate the intentions of Christendom to annihilate Islam. The Sarfaraz says that the people of the Hedjaz are sick of Ibn Saud's atrocities and are determined to uproot tyranny and coercion from the holy land. It hopes that Ibn Saud will be punished by God for his atrocities. The paper reminds Britain of the unswerving loyalty of the Shia Muslims, protests against the support given by the British Government to Ibn Saud and exhorts Muslims to organize volunteers who may be ready to sacrifice their lives in their attempt to destroy the enemy of the faith (Ibn Saud). The Najat writes :—The Russian paper Provda has prophesied that "the action of the black heart of Britain has stopped. The decline of British Government is as certain as the sinking of the Titanic." The prophecy seems to be significant in the light of the arrangements which the Third International has sanctioned for carrying on anti-British propaganda in British colonies and possessions. The prophecy may possibly be based on real facts.

United Provinces Government's communiqué regarding communal tension.

The United Provinces Government's communiqué regarding communal tension has received wide attention in the Press. Almost all papers acknowledge the necessity for strong measures, but urge that the innocent should not be punished along with the guilty and that the burden of punitive police should be imposed on the party which is found to be aggressive. While welcoming the communiqué the Indian Daily Telegraph regrets that there is no indication in it of a policy of drastic suppression and repression without delay, a policy of putting in prison the leaders of the communal movement whose actions, according to the Government diagnosis, have invariably led to communal tension. The paper says that the anxiety caused to Government by every festival and local ceremony is of Government's own making because "it is rooted in a policy of illegal leniency withdrawing prosecutions against perpetrators of crime, arson, loot and even murder at the alleged request of both the communities." The Anand remarks :—The Government ought to have followed the policy indicated in the communiqué as soon as communal tension began in these provinces. If the Government still acts impartially and justly peace will be restored and the people will be reassured. The Aj says :—Why should the burden of the cost of the additional armed police fall on the transferred subjects and not on the departments which are responsible for the maintenance of peace but fail in the discharge of their duty? How is it that these departments are praised if there is no disturbance; but if there is one, the people alone are blamed and punished? We cannot help pointing out that it is the Government itself which has encouraged communal feeling through its policy of separate representation and separate electorates. Whenever a disturbance occurs a joint committee of officials, Hindus and Muslims, should be formed to inquire into it. Those who are held by the committee to be aggressors or fomenters should be got severely punished by law courts. If the committee finds that the local officials were guilty of dereliction of duty or were inspired by a partisan spirit, they too should be severely punished. The Pratap remarks:—The communiqué is evasive on the point of music before mosques. The statement of the Government that it is for civil courts to adjudicate on the rights of communities may well expound a legal principle, but involves injustice. The decision of the Government to take legal action even where a settlement has been arrived at between the warring Hindus and the Muslims will instead of improving matters make them worse. It seems that whatever opportunity still remains for compromise and reconciliation is going to be lost. Will Hindus and Muslims realize their fallen condition? The Surya remarks:—We are glad that the United Provinces Government has decided to deal with the rioters very severely. There is no doubt that all thoughtful persons will support this decision. The Vartman says:—Proper measures should certainly be adopted for establishing peace, but care should be taken that the tragedy of the Jallianwala Bagh is not repeated in the name of peace. The Hindi Kesari writes:—If the authorities give up propitiating one particular community by conceding its unjust demands they will contribute very materially towards the extinction of the internecine feuds. If a riot occurs through the carelessness and inaction of a Government official the severest penalty should be inflicted upon him. The Bharat Dharma urges all sections of the people to cooperate with the Government in preserving peace and suggests that district authorities also should instruct their subordinate officials not to allow injustice to be done to any community. The Haqiqat writes:—It is a mercy that the Government has after all become alive to the dangers that have imperilled the peace and security of the province. The deliberate indifference of the Government was surely deplorable. When the communal movements were inflaming feelings was it not the duty of Government to stop those inflammatory speeches which were feeding the fire of communal hatred? Has Government prosecuted any communal firebrand for speeches likely to inflame popular feeling? Government must be aware of the general complaint that it itself is perpetuating communal tension to serve its own political ends. But has it ever taken any practical steps to repudiate this accusation? The penal law invests the authorities with ample powers for dealing with mischief-mongers and no far-sighted patriot would ever object to strong official action to stop communal disturbances. The Government should soon convene at Lucknow a committee of the leaders of both the communities so that if Government is compelled to adopt strong measures in future it may not be held solely responsible for them. The Hamdam congratulates Government on the communiqué and opines that the authorities can best improve communal relations by holding the scales even between the two communities in all administrative matters and not giving any opportunity to their subordinate officials, who are unfortunately not free from communal prejudice, to injure the individual or collective interests of the other community. The paper fears that the Government's advice to have communal rights adjudicated by civil courts would give a fresh impetus to litigation in the country and would lead to worse results. It thinks that it would be better if Government advised people to compose their differences by referring them to the political organizations of the country or to arbitration courts. The Oudh Akhbar appreciates the instructions which have been issued to Commissioners and District Officers and says:—We consider our province to be extremely fortunate in that it is under a kind-hearted and just Governor like Sir William Marris. The communiqué shows that the Chief Secretary is also anxious for our welfare. The Sada-i-Muslim also welcomes the communiqué and says that differences and disorders can be stopped only if Government exerts its full force just as it did to suppress the non-cooperation movement. The present atmosphere can be cleared if Aman Sabhas are again organized to combat communalism. The Khurshed advises Government to put a stop to communal trouble by bringing to book leaders responsible for disturbances and by forbidding lecturers to use abusive language regarding religious personalities. The paper suggests that the Shuddhi and Tabligh movements should be abandoned and that Government should have some unalterable compromise effected as regards music and cow-sacrifice.

The Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Arya Mitra publishes a manifesto issued by "Mahatma" Narayan Swami on behalf of the Sarvadeshik Arya Pratinidhi Sabha, in the course of which he says:—The threats of Muslims or of any other body cannot deter the Arya Samajists from the propagation of their religion. The Arya Samajists regard Swami Dayanand with the same veneration as the Muslims do Prophet Muhammad.

Nagarkirtan with music has always formed part of the annual celebrations of Arya Samajists and this has been recognized by Government and other bodies. The Sarvadeshik Sabha warns the Muslims that no threats of theirs can deter the Arya Samajists from the exercise of their legitimate religious rights. The said sabha informs Government that if its officers interfere with Nagarkirtan processions at the instance of Maulanas as has been done at Dehra Dun, Meerut and Rohtak, the Arya Samajists will undergo sacrifices and will welcome troubles for upholding their birth-right of propagating their religion. The paper strongly supports the manifesto and remarks :— We appeal to Government to change its policy towards the Arya Samaj and not to interfere in its functions at the instance of Muslims. How is it that Government becomes ready to crush the religious rights of Hindus? In conclusion the paper says that it will be a blessed day when every Arya child will gladly and peacefully give up his life for the protection of his religion. The Abhyudaya remarks :—No condemnation of the policy followed by the Government in respect of communal matters can be too strong. It is the Hindus who have been pressed down both at Delhi and Calcutta. We want to know why the authorities are following such an unjust policy. What is the explanation for the disparity between the order of the Bengal Government regarding the Raj Rajeshwari procession and that of the Delhi Government regarding the Bakr-Id procession? If the decision of the Bengal Government was influenced by the Muslim threats, then the Calcutta authorities are quite unfit to carry on the administration and the reins of administration should no longer remain in their hands. A Government which cannot protect its peace-loving subjects from rioters and is unable to safeguard their civic rights has no right to rule. To punish peaceful citizens for fear of a disturbance instead of punishing rioters is to murder justice and betray cowardice. The Anand says that the bulk of Hindus hold that the Muslims are depriving them of their rights unjustifiably and that the Government in disregard of the dictates of justice is siding with the Muslims and pressing down the Hindus all the more. The Bharat Dharma says that it has become a very easy affair for the Muslims to trample upon the rights of Hindus and the Government finds it difficult to bring the former to the right path. The official communiqués published in Bengal and Delhi and other places clearly show that the Muslims are steadily making the Government yield. If the Hindus organize themselves properly both Muslims and Government will begin to respect their rights. The Aj emphasizes that the official decisions regarding the Raj Rajeshwari procession, the Pahari Dhiraj route and music before the Nakhuda mosque at Calcutta are opposed to the principle rightly enunciated by the Governor of the United Provinces that the disputes regarding civil rights can only be settled by law courts. It makes no difference, says the paper, that the principle has been enunciated by the United Provinces Government only for there ought to be only one uniform policy of Government for the whole of the country. The Government should protect the law-abiding individuals and communities. So long as this is not done, it will be largely held responsible for the disturbances. We do not say that Government deliberately incites disturbances, but if it wants to prove its good faith it should carefully and impartially scrutinize its policy and the acts of its officials and introduce necessary changes in them. The continuance of riots and the inability of Government to stop them show that it is incapable of discharging its natural functions and is unfit to hold the reins of administration for a long time. In the course of a leading article the Vartman remarks :—The religious training of the Muslims has taught them to regard the worship of God as consisting in oppressing the followers of other creeds, demolishing temples, breaking idols, throwing filth and excrement into wells and tanks, kidnapping Hindu boys and girls, and converting them to Islam either surreptitiously or by force. Having been soundly thrashed and thwarted at Calcutta the Muslims have again started demolishing temples and idols, throwing beef into houses, placing the heads of cows in temples and such other cowardly acts. If to-day the Muslim leaders do not think it proper to condemn such actions of the Muslim hooligans, the irritated Hindus may to-morrow indulge in similar objectionable activities the result of which will not prove comfortable to the Muslims. All that we have to say to the Hindus is that they should be vigilant in the protection of their temples and religious places and should not encourage the Muslim goondas by becoming overtolerant. The Medina writes :—The Hindu papers and the Hindu leaders are now openly saying that they should rely only on their own population of 24 crores and preparing their field of action should secure the freedom of India. They think that the help of the Muslims or of the Government is no longer required and suggest that the Congress should be abolished and all the Hindu leaders should sit together and strive for freedom. Let the Muslim unionists and true sons of India think over this. What a good lesson this avenging spirit is teaching. We also say to our Muslim friends that they all believe in the same God, the same Prophet, the same Quran and the eight crores of Muslims should therefore unite and enter into treaties with Afghanistan, Persia, Turkey, Arabia, Egypt, China, Turkistan, Russia, Java and Morocco, and giving up the idea of Indian nationality, and acting upon the Divine precept "convey that what we have conveyed to you" should lay the foundation of a pure Islamic rule in India. This effort will remove all evils. They should convey, under the rain of fire and iron, the message of God to ignorant persons, should oppose infidelity, idolatry and mischief and once again revive the memory of Mahmud Ghazni and Shahabuddin Gori in the land of the Ganges. Well Mr. Tej (Swami Shraddhanand's paper), would you like this? You may create Sivaji with your 24 crores and let us make efforts to create Khalid, Sultan Muhammad Ghori and Alauddin with our eight crores and then of course India will be completely liberated. Al Bashir deprecates the idea entertained by a large body of Muslims that their co-religionists will be destroyed by the Hindus if Englishmen leave India. It says:—Government has utterly failed to protect the Muslims who have suffered most in every respect in the recent riots, especially at Calcutta. The present administration of Government is mostly responsible for all the disturbances. The suffering undergone by Muslims in the disturbances which have taken place during the last three years proves the absurdity of the idea that the British Government is our protector and helper. Muslims should, therefore, try to stand on their own legs and work out their own salvation. Moreover, according to their religion it is heresy to depend on any one except God. The Najat says that emboldened by their achievements the Sangathanists have now put forward the curious demand for the stoppage of azan (the call for Muslim prayers). This shows that Hindus stand firmly by their unjust demands. Muslims should, therefore, be vigilant regarding the protection of their religious obligations. In the course of a lengthy article holding the Government to be solely responsible for the present Hindu-Muslim disturbances the Desh Bhagat writes:—The fact cannot now be concealed that the present Hindu-Muslim disturbances have been created by Government and that the gulf between the two communities is being widened by its agents. Apparently the Government pretends to prevent and to quell these disturbances, but those who know the truth are well acquainted with this policy. We think this fire is the result of the non-cooperation movement, for we have heard from a reliable source that a responsible officer of Government told one of his special agents that if the Hindus could, by winning over the friendship and sympathy of Muslims, make preparations for putting an end to the British Government, why should not the Government, by winning over Muslims, put an end for ever to the political efforts of Hindus. What he said was all right and this has happened and will happen. At present disturbances are rife all over the country especially in Bengal, where the swaraj party is still powerful. The Government considers it humiliating and impossible to concede the demands of that party. Therefore Lord Lytton, the Governor of Bengal, in consultation with Lord Reading prepared a clear and straight road for Bengal, that is, it was decided that Hindu-Muslim dissensions should be bred and open fights should be caused there. Sir Abdur Rahim was made a tool for this purpose. We think that it is not impossible that so long as this Government exists in the country events more terrible than the Hindu-Muslim disturbances may take place in the country. The remedy seems to be going out of the hands of the present generation. It is possible that the next generation may be powerful enough to put an end to the dissension-breeding tactics of this Government and, after disabling it completely, to compel it to leave the country. It is our mature opinion that we should on no account give up our aspirations for swaraj through fear of Hindu-Muslim disturbances, for so long as this Government exists in India, not one but thousands of disturbances will occur in the country. We should leave no stone unturned to defeat this scheme of the Government.

Music before mosques.

Commenting on the order of the Bengal Government regarding music before mosques the Abhyudaya remarks:—We are not surprised at the illegal order of the Bengal Government because it is in keeping with the attitude adopted by it on the Hindu-Muslim question. We wish to assert in unambiguous terms that by this order the Bengal Government has not only wronged the Hindus but it has also throttled British laws. There is no doubt that this order is a repudiation of the Queen's Proclamation. To submit to it would be to encourage both the Muslims and the Government to perpetrate greater injustice. The Aj writes :—We are not satisfied with the Bengal Government's decision regarding music before mosques. The Government of India should appoint a joint committee of officials and non-officials to inquire into the question whether music was or was not played before mosques formerly. It should also take the evidence of old and pensioned European officials whether or not any objection to music before mosques was taken ten years back. It will be possible to decide this question satisfactorily on the basis of such evidence. The demand for the stoppage of music before mosques at all hours of the day on the basis of shariat is dangerous and reprehensible, for non-Muslims cannot be compelled to obey shariat. This extraordinary demand of Muslims should be sufficient to open the eyes of the bureaucracy. The Bedar congratulates the Bengal Government on its decision, and hopes that other local Governments will show similar farsightedness and put a stop to communal disturbances by issuing similar orders.

The Rawalpindi riot.

The Aj charges the authorities with dereliction of duty in that they could not suppress the Rawalpindi riot before serious loss of life and property had occurred and says : —The reprisals inflicted for the Rawalpindi riot compel us to ask the authorities if the protection of the life and property of unfortunate Indians has been left only to the tender mercies of goondas and badmashes. The Hamdam says :—The Rawalpindi riots furnish fresh evidence of the regular and organized conspiracy which is being carried on against Muslims in India. The cause has been the usual one, namely, disturbance of prayers by music followed by brutal attacks on Muslims in reply to their protests. The result has been that Muslims have lost more heavily in men and will also suffer more in the police and magisterial proceedings. The Medina writes :—It is certain that now the Sikhs have also taken to Sangathan work and a band has come forward to oppose Muslims. Had the disturbances produced any good or bad but permanent result we would have urged the Muslims to oppose these Sikhs also and to show that if Hindu conspiracy is bent upon annihilating (Muslims), the seven crores of Muslims will die after annihilating at least ten crores of kafirs; but these disturbances do not assume the form of war, nor do they lead to any decisive results They are a pestilence of deceit, hatred, bigotry, conspiracy and stubbornness which has come over Hindus. The Sikhs were never friendly towards Muslims; on the other hand their barbarous sirdars advocated war against them. It was thought that having received some education the Sikhs would keep aloof from communal strife, but the Rawalpindi disturbances have dispelled this belief. We would again urge the Muslims to be ready for self-defence. It is better to be wiped out than to live in humiliation.

Agra Tenancy Bill.

In the course of a series of articles on the report of the Select Committee on the Agra Tenancy Bill the Leader writes :—It escapes our understanding why in the revision of tenancy legislation undertaken with the ostensible object of improving the position of unsecured tenants provision should have been introduced which will prejudicially affect the tenants who have by hard labour acquired rights of occupancy. Is it to be assumed that the Government is opposed to the existence and acquisition of occupancy rights and wants to extinguish them gradually? We are afraid that the cumulative effect of all these provisions will be rapid diminution in the area of occupancy holdings. We ask if the Bill, especially as it has emerged from the Select Committee, is likely to promote peace or class war? The representatives of the landed interests in the province of Agra ought to look ahead and remember that if they want to retain their natural leadership and influence they cannot do so by pursuing a shortsighted policy. We would strongly urge upon the Government seriously to consider the advisability of supporting those in the Council who may stand up for the rights of occupancy tenants and may seek to insert provisions for the accrual of occupancy rights. The Pratap remarks :—The Bill as passed by the Select Committee is so blood-sucking and injurious that the difficulties of the kisans of the province of Agra will be considerably increased. They are now being deprived of a right which had never been interfered with during the last seventy years of British administration. The provisions made in the Bill regarding sir are fatal to the kisans. The whole Bill is so wicked that no condemnation of it can be too strong. On the one hand Lord Irwin is dreaming of improving the condition of the kisans by appointing a Royal Commission and on the other the United Provinces Government is coming forward with this deadly legislation. In the course of an article under the heading "The great grandfather of the Rowlatt Bill" vehemently criticizing the report of the Select Committee, the Sainik writes:—There is no limit to the evils of the Tenancy Bill. If this thunderbolt falls on the rights of the tenants of our provinces, then there will be complete ruin. This Bill is a messenger of death for occupancy tenants and will ruin crores of cultivators. The Government will of course benefit in every way. By befooling the zamindars, setting them and the tenants by the ears and thereby making litigation rife it will carry on its administration quietly and milk both the zamindars and the tenants and retrieve its lost prestige. But this will be for a few days only, for if the Bill is passed there will be such an outcry in a few years that the seat of not only this Government but even of God will be moved. To pass the Bill will be to invite to the United Provinces Bolshevism a thousand times worse than the Russian Bolshevism. An agitation stronger than that carried on against the Rowlatt Bill should be inaugurated to oppose it and a kisan week should be observed and meetings should be held everywhere.

Bakr-Id.

The Leader writes:—It is regrettable that there was some trouble at Jhusi in the Allahabad district where, according to our information, the Hindus unjustifiably took the law into their hands. We unhesitatingly and emphatically condemn the action of those Hindus of the place who committed deeds of violence resulting in the loss of one valuable human life and the wounding of a number of persons and who showed such criminal lack of self-restraint. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Jhusi indicates that all is not well with the province still. Peace on the surface cannot conceal everywhere the panic below. Unless drastic remedies are applied, murders are punished and not given immunity by withdrawing prosecution, riots will flourish like a green bay tree. The Medina says that the restrictions imposed by the Magistrate of Delhi regarding cow-sacrifice are not only provoking but also oppressive. The order that no more than seven men should accompany an animal is an open invitation to the Hindus to attack the Muslims wherever they like. We know that the authorities are afraid of Hindu majority and are less prepared to do justice to Muslims on account of their weakness. It would, therefore, not be surprising if the Magistrate imposed these strange restrictions in order to please Hindus. We would urge Muslims to watch these events with patience and peacefulness, to pray to God and to take action unanimously. If you give proof of your life, then God will recompense you.

Election Campaign.

The Hridaya remarks:—The sin committed by the liberals in their love of the reforms deserves a severer expiation than the sin of drinking. The misery of India and its retrogression are attributable to the policy of the liberals. Their mantle has now fallen over the shoulder of the Responsive Co-operation party. It is the misfortune of Indians that their own brethren are causing injury to the country and are cutting the throats of their own poor countrymen in the name of the emancipation of the country. In this process of amputation they have outdone the foreigners who suck the blood of Indians.

Foreign affairs.

The Haqiqat says that the Nejdian campaign of vandalism has exasperated the Muslim world in general and Indian Muslims in particular. The accounts of vandalism are simply intolerable. The situation calls for immediate measures. Mere protests and lamentations would not avail. Referring to reports of British threats to Egypt the Hamdam writes :—Egyptians and their leader Zaghlul Pasha are already aware that British pacts and promises cannot be relied upon, for what the British Parliament can give with one hand she can also take away with another. The time is near when the curtain of the juggleries of these British statesmen will be removed. Indians who are anxious to achieve liberty through constitutional reforms should take a lesson from Egypt. The problem to be considered is whether liberty which may be snatched away at any time deserves acceptance or not. We submit that imprisonment and subordination are far better than such liberty as has been experienced by Egyptians. If Indians cannot take a lesson from other nations, they will themselves learn it in the near future. In another article the paper says :—Spain is demanding the head of Amir Abdel Krim, and in spite of the assurance given by the French papers the news is shocking to the Islamic world. We wish to warn the statesmen of France and Spain that any tyrannical action against the Amir will ultimately prove disastrous to their countries and that after taking the Amir's head they will have to give up for ever all hopes of ruling the Riff territories. Al Adl says that the Muslim world is looking forward to the decision of the conference which is going to be held on the occasion of the Haj, and hopes that it will be able to discover some remedy for the fatal disease which is prevailing in the Islamic countries.

United Provinces Government's communiqué regarding communal tension.

Commenting on the United Provinces Government's communiqué on the communal tension the Gyan Shakti asks the Government to make arrangements to restore perfect peace and safety and to publish its decision in clear terms regarding processions accompanied by music. This will greatly abate the communal trouble. The Garhwali remarks that the communiqué should have been issued long ago. If the trouble had been dealt with at the very outset the communal tension would not have assumed such proportions. Ill-feeling has been fanned by the fulfilment of the unjustifiable demands of one community and by ignoring even the just ones of the other. The Medina writes :—After much evil had been done, the United Provinces Government has come to realize the need for restoring peace and the head of the Government has awakened after three years of disturbances and bloodshed. We knew that the authorities would one day suddenly start from sleep and raising the standard of law and order would come forward with their frightful powers, but only then when the communal estrangement would have reached the extreme limit and no hope of reconciliation would be left. Read the communiqué of the United Provinces Government and judge for yourself if it contains anything beyond self-complacence and the praise of its police. Is there any evidence of real burning anxiety for a reconciliation between the two communities? Instead of announcing the adoption of preventive measures, threats of punishing the guilty and imposing punitive police are held out. You are welcome not to adopt mild measures, but for God's sake also discharge your duty of preventing riots. The duty of the Government is not only that of an executioner but also of a statesman. The authorities do not know in what mischievous activities the Sangathanists are engaged against the Muslim minority in these provinces.

Is it not the duty of the Government to check them? The Mashriq remarks:—We were surprised to see that the United Provinces Government which successfully combated the non-cooperation movement with the aid of Aman Sabhas did not call for their services to check the Hindu-Muslim riots. Thank God we have to-day received a communiqué from the Chief Secretary to Government which shows that His Excellency the Governor fully realizes our troubles. Both communities should act upon this communiqué. The communiqué is opportune and completely accords with our views and policy and consequently we thank Government for it. The Haqiqat remarks:—Communal riots cannot successfully be stopped without the co-operation of Government. The Delhi Unity Conference failed in its object because there was no third party, namely, the Government, which could enforce its decisions. Government itself cannot win popularity by adopting a policy of non-intervention for the old charge of "divide and rule" will then gain strength. To refute the charge drastic measures are not necessary. They will only create general hatred against the Government. Government should act as a peace-loving arbitrator first, and if this policy fails, then it may maintain peace by repressive measures. The communal tension in these provinces cannot be removed by merely issuing minatory communiqués. The better course is that Government should invite a representative conference of Hindu and Muslim leaders either at Lucknow or at Allahabad, and in consultation with them it should devise a scheme which might effectively suppress the daily quarrels. The proposed conference should be held under the chairmanship of His Excellency Sir William Marris and the Hon'ble Nawab of Chhatari should be its convener in his capacity as Home Member. The Hind-i-Jadid remarks:—It will be better if the task of adjudicating upon national and communal rights is entrusted to arbitration boards and national and political institutions instead of civil courts. We welcome the Government's wish that leaders of the two communities should help the district authorities in preventing riots. The Najat says:—During the height of the non-cooperation movement Government formed committees in every district and town to ensure peace. These committees tried to serve Government by every means, fair or foul, and above all they succeeded in putting obstacles in the work of the Congress and Khilafat Associations; but now when peace and the lives and property of the people are threatened there are no Aman Sabhas to be found anywhere. This is a living proof of the fact that the Government does not regard the Hindu-Muslim quarrels as a menace to peace and order, and that from its point of view patriotism is the only unpardonable offence. In these circumstances we have not much faith in the communiqué issued by the United Provinces Government. The Agra Akhbar says:—We are glad to learn that our Government is fully aware of the growing communal tension and is trying its best to remove it by every possible means. The communiqué is well-reasoned and suitable.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Aj says that the resignation of the Muslim members of the Calcutta Corporation was prompted by their excessive communal spirit. Such spirit has poisoned not only the public life of the country but all the Government departments and local bodies also. Muslims should ponder whether they will be able to do any good to themselves if a similar venomous feeling is developed by other communities also. The paper urges that the Lucknow and the Bengal pacts should be cancelled as they stand in the way of unity between Hindus and Muslims by encouraging the latter to increase their demands day by day. The abolition of the system of separate electorates cannot but lead to the restoration of harmonious relations between the two communities. The Bharat Jiwan remarks that attempts to maintain the Bengal pact and the demand for separate electorates are calculated to aggravate the communal tension. The Anand also holds a similar view and says that the time has come when all thoughtful persons should combine and strive for the abolition of separate electorates. The Pratap strongly protests against the proposal of the Sindh Khilafat Committee regarding the celebration of the coronation day of Aurangzeb and the victory day of Muhammad Qasim in Sindh, as in its opinion it will aggravate the communal tension. The Hridaya remarks that any agreement regarding the communal questions if it is to be effective must be concluded by the masses themselves. The Medina deplores that Muslims were deprived of their sovereignty by Englishmen and of their worldly possessions and arts and industries by Hindus, and now a mischievous section of Hindus wants to deprive them of the religious and educational facilities which are offered by mosques. It is now being urged that the existence of mosques is dangerous, and therefore, no gathering should be allowed in them except for the purpose of namaz. It is to be seen if Government has also become so foolish as to consider such silly suggestions as worthy of attention. Be it remembered that although Muslims have become disorganized and backward, they still retain their zeal for the protection of mosques and no power can impose restrictions on them. The only reply that Muslims can give to these Arya Samajist nonsensical talks is that if the time comes they will exhibit to the world the spectacle of the Cawnpore incident. The Najat remarks: —In our opinion Government, and only the Government, is responsible for the communal tension because during the hundred and fifty years of its rule it did not impart such education to Indians as would have made them realize that communal strifes mean country's ruin. Even to-day India is as illiterate as she was before the establishment of the British rule, and the Government's administrative machine is as slow and useless as it was in the beginning. The only way of putting an end to these communal strifes is to grant self-government to India as soon as possible. It will then be possible to impart such education to the people as will lead to right thinking and put an end to communal tension.

Bakr Id.

The Leader appreciates the preventive action taken by the District Magistrate of Allahabad in connexion with the recent disturbances and says:—Nothing but the fear of the law can have a restraining influence on the few irresponsible and evil-disposed persons who dislocate the business of the entire city. It has to be seriously considered whether a special law is needed for controlling the goonda elements in the towns who, taking advantage of the communal feeling, try to establish a reign of terror. Is the present law sufficient for dealing with them in cases of emergencies? The Abhyudaya remarks that had the kotwal of Allahabad acted with wisdom and arrested the hooligans who attacked Lala Sanwal Das the quarrel would have ended then and there, but he did not do so and the result was that the fire of disturbance was kindled. The disturbance was started by the Muslims. From the manner in which it spread in the city it appears that the Muslims were prepared for it while the Hindus had no apprehension whatsoever of it. The Jatvir gives the credit for the peaceful celebration of the Bakr Id festival to the Government and the police, and expresses the hope that similar arrangements will be made on the occasion of the Muharram also. The Aj congratulates the Muslims on the peaceful passing off of the Bakr Id and commends the Hindus for their forbearing attitude on the occasion. It remarks that if public opinion and Government machinery continue to function properly, the communal excitement will subside in course of time. Government can prevent riots if it wishes to do so. The Medina says that the fact that the Id in the larger cities was peacefully celebrated under the protection of the military ought to furnish a lesson to both Hindus and Muslims. They ought to know that they are under a foreign Government which, in accordance with the needs of expediency, can either hold the unruly elements under restraint or set them at liberty. Is it not better for us to learn to respect each other's sentiments and instead of strengthening the hands of the Government, to strengthen the ties of friendship and love between the two communities? The Haqiqat writes:—The events that followed the Bakr Id indicate that Muslim expectations have not been fulfilled and at several places sacrifice was interfered with. This shows that the epidemic of religious bigotry prevailing in the country calls for a speedy and effective cure. Among educated and sensible persons the idea is gaining strength that Government does not fully realize its responsibilities regarding communal affairs and that no efforts have so far been made to ensure peace. With the co-operation of Hindu and Muslim leaders Government should devise some means to improve the unwholesome atmosphere of the country.

Agra Tenancy Bill.

Commenting further on the report of the Select Committee on the Agra Tenancy Bill the Sainik writes:—If the Bill is passed there will be wailing in the houses of lakhs of kisans. The indifference of the leaders, the ignorance and helplessness of the peasants, the disorganized condition of good zamindars and the inexorable policy of the foreign Government will inevitably lead to the cutting of the throats of poor peasants. A foreign Government is obliged to take the help of those (zamindars) who incur the ill-will of most of their countrymen and have consequently to remain as its slaves. Such a Government can never do full justice to the people. The existence of Governments depends on the mutual strifes of the subjects. The Pratap remarks :-- A careful perusal of the various notes appended to the report by the zamindar members of the Select Committee leads us to the conclusion that even if there has been a casual provision in the proposed legislation which is likely to benefit the tenants, it has been strenuously opposed by zamindar members. Does not this mentality sow seeds of party strifes? We request the kisans of the United Provinces and those Hindu and Muslim members of the Provincial Legislative Council who are Independents, to support the Swarajists in the next Council session. The present condition is only temporary. The kisans will sooner or later wake up and look after their interests. Therefore, let all those beware who are taking an undue advantage of the present slumbering condition of the kisans. The Aj remarks that it will not be too much to say that the Bill as it has emerged from the Select Committee does not now deserve even to be considered by the Council. The provisions of the Bill are so deleterious that they leave no room for a compromise. The Haqiqat remarks :—One can very well realize from even a cursory perusal of the new Tenancy Bill that while maintaining its own demands intact, the Government wishes to give something to the tenants out of the rights of zamindars as if Government is in sympathy with the tenants only so far as it can secure something for them from the zamindars without having to give anything itself.

The Rawalpindi riot.

The Bharat Jiwan strongly condemns the inability of the authorities to prevent the Rawalpindi riots and says:—In the existing state of affairs the people will be compelled to come to the conclusion that they cannot leave the protection of their life and property to the police and the authorities alone. The Anand says that the Muslims receive an encouragement from the present policy of the Government. The troubles created by them have increased with every concession made to their obstinacy. If the Bengal Government had ignored their unjustifiable demands regarding music before mosques the present situation would not have arisen. But the Government humoured the wrong-doer, with the result that there is trouble throughout the country. So long as it does not change this policy there can be no peace in the country and the prestige of the Government will also suffer. The Hamdam takes the office-bearers of the Hindu Mahasabha to task for their audacity in blaming Muslims for the Rawalpindi riots and says :—Had the Muslims been keen on fighting they would not have been murdered and wounded in such a way in spite of their majority. Muslims had no lathis even, while the Sikhs and Hindus used guns and pistols. The Haqiqat says:—Instead of sympathizing with the murdered and wounded Muslims the orthodox Arya Samajist papers of Lahore are throwing the whole blame on the Maulvis and are trying to establish the innocence of the fiery Arya Samajist speakers who tour from one city to another to provoke Hindus against Muslims. The Krishna says that in view of the Pathan attacks in Rawalpindi and the Frontier districts the need is being felt of the birth of a Hari Singh Nalwa to bring the successors of Nadir Shah to their senses. This need can be met only by the Shiromani Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee of Amritsar. Several bands of Akalis should be permanently posted at the Frontier districts and with the hearty and zealous co-operation of the Hindus the robber Pathans should not only be prevented from committing raids, but should also occasionally be punished in their own districts. A nation which by its bold sacrifice and organization has defeated the British Government through peaceful Satyagrah can also produce a Hari Singh Nalwa in time of need.

Political propaganda.

In the course of a leading article on civilization the Aj writes :—Civilization commonly means the power to kill human beings. Japan was acknowledged to be a civilized country only when in the Russian war she gave proof of her power for legalized human slaughter on an organized scale. It is in this scramble for augmenting man-slaying power that Britain is increasing her naval power in the East. It has now become an indispensable element of civilization to rob weak nations, occupy their country and make them slaves. Another phase of civilization is to raise the standard of life, and for this purpose it has become inevitable to usurp the wealth of other countries. The paper notes with satisfaction that British journals, too, have begun to condemn the action of Lord Lytton in staying on at Darjeeling while the disturbances were rife at Calcutta. It says that not only Lord Lytton, but other Governors too, have been guilty of such indifference. This is so because the administration of this country has become a heartless machinery which implicitly trusts the man on the spot and is a slave to rules and regulations. Another reason for the absence of Governors from the scenes of riots is the multiplicity of capitals. If this system of summer capitals is abolished as a result of the attention paid by the British Press, Lord Lytton's fault will prove beneficial to the country. In the course of an article in the Desh Bhagat "Swami" Manglanand writes from Arabia that the British Government has to spend 5½ crores of rupees to maintain its prestige in that country. An English company like the East India Company (which subjugated India) has been established. It has brought a suit against the Iraq Government. This case will show how cleverly Britain is trying to swallow Arabia. The possession of Iraq will, moreover, shorten the journey from India to England. In order to keep the inhabitants, of the countries, including India, from Singapore to London under perpetual slavery, Britain is spending 5½ crores of rupees a year on Mesopotamia.

Muslim affairs.

The Medina regrets that the Indian arts and industries in which Muslims played an important part in the past are now gradually being taken out of their hands. As an instance it quotes the case of the leather industry and says that this industry which was formerly avoided by the Hindus on religious grounds has now been wrested from the hands of the Muslims. In the last examination of the Government School of Dyeing and Printing, Cawnpore, out of 31 successful candidates there are only two Muslims. And the wonder is that in the tanning class there is not a single Muslim. The paper hopes that the Principal of the Cawnpore Dyeing School will encourage Muslims and offer facilities in their admission. The Haqiqat publishes a contributed article in which Muhammad Idris Khan, Secretary, Islamia Anjuman, Budaun, takes strong exception to the proposed publication of the Urdu edition of the "Vichitra Jiwan" which has already caused agitation among Hindi-knowing Muslims and appeals to Government to forbid its publication, otherwise Muslims will be excited and public peace will be disturbed.

Indians in the colonies.

Referring to a report that the Government of Brazil is desirous of importing labourers from India and Japan the Leader writes :— Whatever the present attractions for an Indian labourer in Brazil may be, the Government of India should not lend their support to any scheme of labour emigration until they are assured of an honourable status. The Aj traces the history of the emigration of Indian labourers to Natal and points out that it was on the repeated request of the Natal whites that the Indian labourers were allowed by the Government of India to go and settle there. It expresses the hope that the representatives of the Government of India will strongly press this point at the forthcoming Round Table Conference in South Africa. To make efforts to starve out the descendants of these labourers and thereby to compel them to go back to India is against civilization and Indians will not put up with such an injustice.

Military training for Indians.

Referring to the speech made by the Amir of Afghanistan on the question of military training and national defence the Leader writes :—What steps are the Government of India taking to enable Indians to defend their country themselves? How many King's commissions have been granted to Indians during the last 150 years of British rule in India? Which progressive national Government would have been satisfied with this progress of the country in the art of self-defence? The British Government should learn something from what other and much smaller Governments are doing to prepare the people for their country's defence and do the same in respect of India too.

The Bengal Pact.

Referring to the opposition offered in the Bengal Congress Committee to the Bengal Pact the Medina regrets that the Sangathanist Hindus are trying to convert the Pact, which was calculated to promote peace and amity, into an instrument for creating mischief. These men, says the paper, now want to utilize the Congress Committee for furthering the aims of the Hindu Sabha. Muslims have no fear of these Congress Committees. Let the thin veil of nationalism that still remains over the face of some Hindus be removed. It would be better if the Congress went completely into the hands of Hindus so that it might not serve as a screen for the promotion of Hindu designs.

Election campaign.

Under the heading the "Doings of Traitors" the Najat writes :—The simple-minded inhabitants of India and other British possessions are seriously mistaken in their estimate of the promises of the British Government and its gift of liberty. The real fact is that Britain's promises are only meant for the time being. The truth regarding the liberty of Egypt is before us and the impressions of Government's childish proceedings in Indian matters are engraved on our hearts. The Government gets hold of a party through which it keeps the public under delusion and these traitors side with the Government when it takes severe steps against their brethren. The time of elections to the Indian Legislative Assembly is drawing near, hence we should make a proper use of our votes and should not encourage the traitors who in any capacity may be connected with Government.

The Swaraj Party.

The Aj writes:—The Swaraj Party has been torn to pieces by internal dissensions. If it had striven to follow the obstructionist policy within the Councils and to fulfil the constructive programme of the Congress in the country, always keeping civil disobedience in view, it would not have been reduced to such a plight. The most serious defect in the programme of this party is that it does not want to prepare the people for mass civil disobedience.

Foreign affairs.

The Hamdam denounces the atrocities perpetrated by the international police upon the people of Tangier and says that if Muslims want to maintain their existence they should combat the conspiracy of European nations by establishing a league of Muslim nationalities and by striving to make the Asiatic federation an important factor in the politics of the world. Referring to Spain's "demand for the head of Amir Abdel Krim," the Haqiqat says:—We do not know what opinion civilized Europe and America will entertain regarding this disgraceful act of Spain. If France, disregarding her sense of honour, accepts Spain's demands and sends the Amir's head to the savage people of Madrid, France and Spain shall have to suffer for this brutal deed. In the course of an article on Egyptian affairs the Haqiqat remarks:—The personality of Zaghlul Pasha is not an ordinary one and any attempts to lay hands on him will revive the evils which have temporarily subsided. The experience of Lord Lloyd's governorship of Bombay and the oppression practised by him will not be able to uphold the dwindling power of Britain in the valley of the Nile. The Hamdam doubts if having once got hold of Iraq, the British Government will ever liberate its people, and says that the latest events in Egypt furnish striking evidence of Britain's land-hunger.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The root of the riots in these days is representation through separate electorates. The Lucknow Pact must be modified in the new light of experience gathered. If this is done, we shall have removed an insuperable obstacle in the way of national unity and solved a knotty problem for the next reform commission. The paper suggests that the Maharajah Saheb of Mahmudabad and Pandit Motilal Nehru should take the lead in settling the communal differences. The Hindi Kesari remarks:—It is necessary to find out who is responsible for the prevailing communal tension in the country. It is the bureaucracy and not the Hindus or the Muslims which is actually benefited by communal disturbances. The Times and the Bengal Government are of the opinion that communal disturbances prove the unfitness of India for Swaraj and urge the postponement of the next instalment of Reforms. In these circumstances the presumption that the bureaucracy has a secret hand in the communal riots is not unwarranted. For the last forty or fifty years the bureaucracy has been striving to sow seeds of discord among the Indians by fomenting religious quarrels. Commenting on the order of the Delhi Government prohibiting the taking out of the Ved Bhagwan procession the Vartman remarks:—Can this action of the Government, which is inspired by fear of breach of peace, be said to be just? Could not arrangements for maintaining peace similar to those made on the occasion of the Bakr-Id, when cows were taken for slaughter through Pahari Dhiraj against the wishes of the Hindus, be made on the present occasion also? This method of the authorities to facilitate the celebration of the festivals of one community and to interfere with those of the other is calculated to cause further affliction to discontented hearts. Hindus should adopt every legitimate means for the protection of their just rights. The Anand remarks that it has now dawned upon the Hindus of all classes that it is not wise to sacrifice their rights for pleasing the Muslims. The policy of granting concessions to them has accentuated the dissensions and if it is continued in future Hinduism will disappear from India. It will be beneficial to the interests of the Hindus to strive resolutely for the protection of their rights until the Muslims change their attitude. It is the duty of the authorities to decide communal disputes impartially and in the light of local customs and usages. The Pratap depicts a gloomy picture of the present political situation in the country and remarks that there is no doubt that a very large number of Muslims entertain hopes of the re-establishment of Muslim rule at least in Northern India. They are fools, but their folly makes them dangerous. On the other hand, there is a growing desire among the Hindus to win the favour of the authorities with a view to getting Muslim hooligans punished and to protecting Hindu interests. What a delusion! How can we strengthen ourselves by flattering the authorities? The Sikhs do not flatter the authorities, but a few lakhs of them had terrified even Afghanistan. Even now Pathans, Afghans, Afridis and other tribes cannot stand against them. Concluding the paper remarks that the remedies proposed are even deadlier than the malady itself and suggests that the Congress should take no part in the elections to the Councils and municipal and district boards and that it should not try to remove the estrangement between the Hindus and the Muslims, but should let them fight between themselves to their heart's content. The Vartman attributes the present communal tension in the country to Khwaja Hasan Nizami's book entitled "Dai-i-Islam" which, it is alleged, suggests a number of secret methods like the employment of the services of fakirs, fortune-tellers, astrologers, amulet-givers, patwaris, male and female beggars, vegetable-sellers and Muslim employees of Hindus for the conversion of one crore of Hindus to Islam. Proceeding the paper says:—It is not known what steps have been taken by the Government to arrest the poison of this scheme and to establish peace. No useful measure is being adopted by the bureaucracy to allay this communal tension. The paper quotes a few "inflammatory" extracts from certain Muslim papers, viz., the Light of Lahore, the Medina of Bijnor and the Sada-i-Muslim of Cawnpore and remarks that when Muslim journals are hurting the feelings of the Hindus in this manner, what is there to be wondered at if Hindu journals warn the Hindus against the secret blows of the Muslims. What is the Government doing to suppress this fanaticism? The agents of the Government who are busy devising means of prolonging British rule in India may not support bloodshed or disturbances, but it is very probable that the estrangement between the Hindus and the Muslims is most beneficial to their interests. The criticism of Lord Lytton by the Indian Press of Bengal makes it easy to believe that not only the Indian bureaucracy but also the Secretary of State for India in England consider their future burdens to be lightened by the prevailing communal tension. What advantages Englishmen wish to derive from the present situation is obvious from the sweet and circumlocutory speech of the Secretary of State. In spite of his continuing to swear a thousand times we cannot believe that the British Government cannot stop this communal tension. In another article the paper says that disturbances will completely stop if firm and indefatigable workers like Mussolini come forward. It is essential that Hindus should give up their cowardice and Muslims should learn to love India. Other communities also should come forward and make up their mind to make India free. India is ours and we shall live and die for her. In the course of two articles discussing the causes of the present communal tension, the Medina gives a list of the charges levelled against Muslims by Hindus and asks all fair-minded persons to say if there is any truth in them. It says that the communal tension is due to the bigotry, narrow-mindedness and cowardice of Hindus. If they dream of Indian democracy they should refrain from preferring the list of charges against Muslims. Proceeding it says:—Be serious in your talks, give up your demands and the question of untouchability, join us in our joys and sorrows, do not seek to serve political ends in the name of religion and give up Hindu Sabha, Mahavir Dal and other dangerous movements. Muslims are ready to abandon their demands and to take the first step towards union. Then see how vastly India is transformed in a few days. The paper publishes a statement showing the number of times the words goonda, badmash, "kidnapper," "blood-thirsty," "oppressor," mleccha and "unbeliever" were used by the Tej (Delhi), Hindu, Milap, Bande Matram and Partab of Lahore, Shankar (Moradabad), Aj (Benares) and Hindustan Times (Delhi) with reference to Muslims. According to the statement the total number of times these words were used by the papers is 120,900. This shows, says the paper, what foul words are used by Hindus against Muslims. The readers should mourn over such manners and politeness. The Najat contends that the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements have perverted the mentality of Hindu leaders and deprived them of the sense of truthfulness, toleration and patriotism. If they teach the Hindus to be just and tolerant to others, the Hindu-Muslim tension will subside in a day, but the difficulty is that if they do so they run the risk of becoming unpopular. Deploring the losses which the Muslims have to undergo in communal conflicts the Mashriq cites the case of Jhusi as an instance of the defective organization of Muslims and urges them to shake off their lethargy and establish their equality of rights by fighting or at any rate waging a political war with the Hindus.

Bakr-Id.

The Anand refers to the reports that in order to hurt the feelings of the Hindus arrangements were made for the slaughter of cows on a public road at Sihali in the Bara Banki district on the occasion of the Bakr-Id and that fire was opened upon the Hindus who had assembled to protest against this action and urges that an inquiry should be held with a view to ascertain facts. It is alleged that all the authorities in Bara Banki are Muslims, and this is why such an improper treatment was accorded to the Hindus. In another article the paper remarks that from a perusal of the reports of the communal riots which occurred at Allahabad and Darbhanga on the occasion of the Bakr-Id it appears that the Muslims perpetrated great atrocities upon the Hindus and that the responsibility for the riots falls on them. It is therefore the duty of the authorities of both these places to inflict the severest punishment upon the rioters which may frighten the hooligans in other places also and render disturbances in the future impossible. Referring to the riot at Allahabad the Abhyudaya remarks :—It is at present a matter of the greatest importance to devise means of preventing the repetition of a riot like the one which occurred at Allahabad during the Bakr-Id. In our opinion the most important thing which should be done is that the administration of the city should in the meantime be entrusted to a high official. The Kotwal should be removed and an impartial inquiry should be instituted. The public has many complaints against the Kotwal. His management is unsatisfactory and according to public opinion he has proved a complete failure in his administration of the city. Proceeding the paper remarks :—Let the authorities open their eyes and find out how many riots have occurred at Allahabad since the present Kotwal took charge of this city. We want to ask both Hindus and Muslims how far they are prepared to submit to the raj of the goondas. If respectable Hindu merchants can be openly assaulted to-day, then to-morrow respectable Muslims can also be similarly beaten. If the local Hindu goondas are not bold enough, others can be called from outside. But what will be the result of this? The Mashriq thanks the Government for the satisfactory arrangements made on the occasion of the Bakr-Id without which the festival could not have passed off peacefully and says :—When everything has got to be done by the Government we are constrained to say that the Hindus and Muslims cannot manage their domestic affairs and that the Government have committed a great blunder in inaugurating the reforms prematurely. The Hind-i-Jadid regrets that the masses are still possessed with the spirit of the founders of Sangathan and supporters of Tanzim and that they are under the spell of the leaders who involve them in communal difficulties. The Medina says that the riots that took place during the Bakr-Id at Muzaffarpore, Delhi, Allahabad, Jhusi, Calcutta and other places demonstrate the helplessness of the military and the police and the aggressiveness of the Hindus. At nearly every place Muslims were unexpectedly attacked, at a time when relying on the arrangements made by the Government they were engaged in the performance of their religious duties. They had therefore to suffer greater losses. Will the Government not concede even now that the Hindus were the aggressors? The Aiena says that in spite of the stringent precautionary measures adopted by Government the mischief-makers did not refrain from creating disturbances. If Government had not made proper arrangements God knows what would have happened and how many Hindus and Muslims would have been killed and wounded and how many of them would have been sent to jails. The leaders who loudly press the demand for Swaraj could not stop these communal dissensions and they will not be able to carry on other administrative measures if they are granted liberty. The continuance of these communal differences will render unworkable even the reforms already inaugurated.

Music before mosques.

The Leader writes :—We need not hesitate to express our approval of the resolutions of the Hindu public meeting held in Calcutta to protest against the attitude of the Government of Bengal on the question of music before mosques, except, we may say incidentally, of the tribute paid therein to the Government of the United Provinces. We cannot agree to new injustices, to new invasions of the time-honoured rights of the Hindus, and on this question of music before mosques we cannot at all bring ourselves to sympathize with the recent impossible Muslim claim. It is a question for the Hindus of the whole of India to take up in conjunction with their compatriots of Calcutta and Bengal. The Aj refers to one Rahim Ali's opinion, based on Ibn Saud's action in taking his subjects to task for opposing music accompanying the Egyptian Mahmel to Mecca, that the Muslim opposition to music before mosques in India is altogether unjustified and remarks that this opposition is not only improper but ridiculous inasmuch as nobody can prove from the Islamic law that their religion has given the right to Muslims to enforce dead silence on all sides at their prayer time. One Devanandan Dixit writing to the Pratap remarks that the communiqué issued by the Bengal Government regarding music before mosques has converted this question between Hindus and Muslims into one between Hindus and Government. Hindus should resort to Satyagraha for the protection of their rights. The Oudh Akhbar urges the Government to concede the demands of the mass meeting of the Hindus of Calcutta held under the chairmanship of Mr. J. N. Basu to protest against the decision of the Bengal Government regarding the question of music before mosques and says :— The simplest course for the Bengal Government is to follow the time-honoured traditions of the country, because if it goes on sanctioning every innovation neither the public nor the Government can rest in peace.

Agra Tenancy Bill.

The Pioneer writes :—Although it is to be regretted that the United Provinces Legislative Council has given way to the reactionary tendencies of the landholders on one important point in the Agra Tenancy Bill, the Government are on the whole to be congratulated on the success which has attended their conduct of the debates on the Bill so far. The Aj notes with satisfaction that officials too are opposed to the amendments of zamindars in the Agra Tenancy Bill relating to the enlargement of their rights in regard to the acquisition of sir land and urges that public protests should be made against the efforts of zamindars in this connexion. The Vartman takes the peasants to task for not agitating against the Tenancy Bill which, in its opinion, increases the powers of the zamindars and restricts the rights of the tenants and is calculated to aggravate their misery. Proceeding it says :—Will the peasants be able to secure their rights through such indifference? They should be bold and alert. Those who like agitation among peasants should rouse them. The country cannot progress nor can she attain Swaraj unless the tenants wake up. The Anand says that the Swarajists should try to secure greater rights for the kisans and if the liberal-minded zamindars will follow suit, the narrow-minded among them will be compelled to follow the right path. The Haqiqat says :—The Bill has many defects not only from the point of view of the tenant but also of the zamindars. Government is increasing its demands every day, while the zamindars are sucking the very blood of their tenants. Government has no sympathy with the zamindars, nor does it advocate the cause of the tenants, but keeping its own gains in view it takes with one hand what it gives with the other. Government treats both the zamindars and the tenants alike. The Najat refers to the "unsympathetic" attitude of the official members of the Select Committee on the Agra Tenancy Bill towards the zamindars which has led the latter to seek the assistance of the Swarajists and advises the Swarajists to avail of the opportunity and to devise means for maintaining the time-honoured relations between the zamindars and tenants. It says that the object of all that the Government is doing in this connexion is to fill its own pockets and not to do good to either of the parties. The attitude of the official members has, however, furnished the zamindars with a fresh proof of the indifference of Government towards them, and it is to be seen what lesson they will derive from it.

Political propaganda.

In the course of a leading article the Hitaishi writes :—At a time when the country is entangled in the net of slavery, when more than half of its population has to go without a sufficient meal despite incessant toil, when obstacles are being placed in our progress at every step, when we can be brutally slaughtered like goats on any pretext and our birth-rights are being throttled . . . it is incumbent on us to sacrifice our differences at the altar of liberty. The Sainik publishes an article by Pandit Sri Krishna Datt Paliwal in which he relates the experiences which he acquired while helping plague patients at Agra. He says that the first thing that he saw in the affected quarters was that the people had a terrible fear of officials and their methods. "The foreign Government and the methods of the bureaucracy have so frightened the people that they do not fear plague so much as they fear officials . . . Owing to the tyranny of the bureaucracy the people begin to tremble with fear whenever any official talks to them." The paper publishes a letter from "Raja" Mahendra Pratap in which he gives a brief account of his visit to Tibet and says that he wants to establish cordial relations among Tibet, Nepal and Afghanistan. In a footnote the editor says:—We might well differ regarding the methods which the Raja Saheb is employing for securing the independence of India, but there is no doubt that his work is commendable. It is possible that India, which is a subject nation, may not be able to realize the value and importance of his services, but the future historian will refer to him with respect. India will be grateful to Japan, China, Kabul, Tibet and other Asiatic countries which are helping him. The paper publishes a report of the debate in the United Provinces Legislative Council on Pandit Sri Krishna Datt Paliwal's resolution regarding bribery and says:—Bribery is a living proof of the failure of the British Government in India and of our immorality due to slavery. The Bharat Dharma remarks that the British rulers were not so irresponsible and did not sacrifice justice at the altar of national pride in the time of the East India Company as they do at present. At present only an ordinary fine is imposed upon a white murderer and whites charged with rape, etc., are let off. If any one of them happens to be convicted and is sentenced to be flogged he considers it to be an insult to be flogged by a "brown" sweeper. White prisoners are provided with khas tattis and fans in the jails during the hot weather. The change that has taken place within the last fifty or sixty years proves that the British rulers are not now so God-fearing as before. The Bharat publishes an article on the next elections from Satyabhakta in the course of which he says:—For those who want to secure Swaraj and to liberate the country from the clutches of foreign rule it is quite useless and against their principles to go to the Councils. Their battlefield is not in the Councils but in the villages and the cities of India. It is their duty to go to every village and city and carry to the people the message of freedom and to organize the masses into such a strong body as may frighten the Government and compel it to leave this country bag and baggage.

Election campaign.

The Aj concludes from Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's speech on responsive cooperation at the University Institute Hall, Calcutta, that the forthcoming elections will be fought on the basis of local, individual and communal dissensions, that money will play a very important part in them, and that communal animosities will be fully exploited. Many wholly incompetent candidates or members of the ji hazoor party will this time get entry into the Legislative bodies as fanatical Hindus and Muslims. In another article the paper contends that the Hindus cannot strengthen their position in the administration without the cooperation of the bureaucracy, and that for this cooperation they will have to pay a price involving the sacrifice of their national and patriotic feeling. Moreover, it is impossible for them to secure the cooperation of Government as against the Muslims who have ever been favoured by it to serve its own ends. Al Adl strongly criticizes the proposal of some Hindu Swarajist members that in communal matters those members of the Swaraj party who are Hindus should be permitted to act upon the instructions of the Hindu Maha Sabha. It thinks that if this proposal is accepted the Swaraj party which hitherto considered Hindu and Muslim aims from a national point will look at them with the spectacles of the Maha Sabha or the League. In that case only two bodies with conflicting aims, namely, the League and the Maha Sabha, will be left in the political arena and they will find no time from mutual dissensions.

The Honours List.

The Aj writes:—In hankering after titles many persons have been completely ruined, while others have bidden goodbye to humanity itself. Honours are no new institutions in India, but never were they so abused before as now. Most of the recipients of titles are undeserving of them. The bestowal of the distinction of Rao Bahadur on Mr. Natesan is an insult not only to him but also to the Indian journalists. The Haqiqat deplores that higher titles were not conferred on Indians. The Hamdam acknowledges that the list of Indian titles contains many names which will please the people, but regrets that among Rao Sahebs and Rao Bahadurs there are no Muslim names and that the United Provinces have received the least share of titles of high order.

Indian States.

The Pratap publishes an article under the heading "Our Indian States and British Government" communicated to it by Laxmipat Sharma, B.A., in which he discusses the past and present policies of the British Government towards the Indian States and remarks:—For the attainment of its selfish ends the Government sometimes plundered the States and spurned at them, at others patronized and wooed them. At the present time the British Government seems determined to set the Indian States against the Indian patriots and the people of British India. The future policy of the British Government towards the States will depend upon the political situation in British India, but there is no doubt that the British Government will throw several obstacles in the path of the freedom of India in the name of the Indian States. The British Government by cultivating intimate relations with the Indian States is antagonizing them against Indian aspirations and wants to grasp capable and independent-minded princes and frontier chiefs in its clutches.

India's representation at the Imperial Conference.

The Leader criticizes the selection of the Maharajadhiraj of Burdwan and Khan Bahadur Shaikh Abdul Qadir to represent India at the forthcoming meetings of the Imperial Conference and the Assembly of the League of Nations and says:—We have this unedifying spectacle of a Burdwan and an Abdul Qadir being selected as the successors of such men as Lord Sinha, Mr. Sastri and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, as Sir Sivaswamy Iyer, Sir Ali Imam and Hasan Imam . . . It has been descent all along the line. Let any one make a list in parallel columns of past and present Indian members of governments in India, beginning with Lord Sinha and the year 1909. How startling would be the contrast!

The proposed Indian academy in the United Provinces.

The Hamdam is gratified to learn that the Hon'ble Minister of Education, who is a great patron of art and literature, has directed his attention towards the establishment of an Indian academy in the United Provinces and hopes that it will lead to the intellectual and mental progress of the masses and popularize Hindi and Urdu languages. It will gradually annihilate dirty and harmful literature which has dealt a death-blow to the traditional friendly relations between Hindus and Muslims. The academy will enable the learned authors to render better literary services to the country, for they will be free from the anxiety of earning their livelihood. We hope that this academy will in future achieve an exalted position like that of the French Academy.

The Congress.

The Hamdam urges the election of some Muslim as president of the coming Congress and says that this would restore confidence among Muslims and show that the Congress is a really national organization in which, in spite of there being a Hindu majority, the claims of capable Muslims are not ignored.

Jail reforms.

The Haqiqat commends the action taken by the Punjab Government on the report of the Jail Inquiry Committee and regrets that the Maharajah Saheb of Mahmudabad paid no attention to the grievances of the prisoners in these provinces, nor is his successor, the Nawab of Chhatari, likely to be able to draft any scheme for the alleviation of their miseries and troubles.

Foreign affairs.

The Bharat attributes the miseries of the Chinese to the greed of the foreigners and remarks that the robber states of Europe are cutting the moribund country into slices and devouring them like vultures. The land of China like that of India is very fertile for the production of traitors. How can that country prosper which abounds in dogs who are prepared to tighten the bonds of their country for the sake of crumbs? Brother Chinese, do not think that India and Korea are happier than China. The Aj says:—The Riffs and Druses have shown that nobody can withstand true nationalism. They have awakened a new spirit of nationalism among the non-white nations of the world. The diffusion of this spirit will mean the extinction of white domination. Referring to the remark "you are all murderers" made by a labour member during the third reading of the Coal Mines Bill the Medina says:—The progress of Bolshevism, the tyranny of Conservatives, the decrease in revenue and increase in unemployment, the sympathy of all the labourers of the world with British workers and the decrease in the output of coal are all signs of the decline of the British nation. If the Bolsheviks succeed in winning the sympathy and love of the unemployed and the strikers in Britain, then it is certain that the revolution in England will take an unexpected turn. The remark "you are all murderers" is in fact the voice of the helpless Indians, Africans and Egyptians inspired by revengeful nature. The Hindustani holds the extremely imperialistic nature of the British Government to be responsible for the present labour unrest in Britain and says that as the feeling against capitalism is getting stronger day by day every country is sooner or later sure to witness a big revolution which will ultimately enable the poor to live like men. Al Adl entertains grave doubts about the success of the Islamic conference and deplores that Ibn Saud far from fulfilling his promises, has spurned the feelings of great Muslim countries. Al Burid says that the demolition of Jannat-ul-Baqi has caused universal consternation among Muslims. If Ibn Saud follows the policy of ignoring the sentiments of other Islamic sects he will have to pay dearly for his mistake. Referring to the recent speech of the Director of Public Information at Calcutta the Najat foreshadows a war between the Bolsheviks and the British on the Frontier and says that in this war Afghanistan will also take part in some capacity or another.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Leader writes:—The situation in the interior of Pabna appears to be bordering on anarchy . , . . The only right policy in the circumstances is for the Government to deal severely with the law-breakers and not to lend any sort of countenance to unreasonable communal claims. The growth of violent communalism will affect the very stability of the state and make Government impossible. The Bharat publishes an article in the course of which the writer, Bhai Parmanand, remarks:—The inner spirit of the Hindu Sangathan is that if in Peshawar a villain kills a Hindu boy or in Sindh a miscreant kidnaps a Hindu girl or in Bhagalpore or Mymensingh a widow is assaulted, all the Hindus from the Himalayas to Ceylon should feel pain and grief. In the course of an article on the decisions of the meeting of the working committee of the Congress at Calcutta the Aj says that "our foreign rulers" will not allow Hindus and Muslims to fight among themselves to a finish, but will allow fighting at the utmost only to such an extent that the issue may remain indecisive and the two contending parties may remain eager for fighting a second time. The Arya Mitra urges the need for putting down inflammatory literature published both by Hindus and Muslims. The paper publishes an article contributed by Thakur Udaivir Singh, Bar.-at-Law, in which he recounts the various atrocities committed by Muslims in past centuries for the conversion of Hindus to Islam and wonders why Muslims should complain when following their example Hindus have begun to reclaim their own brethren. Proceeding he remarks:—If Hindus do not want to be degraded still more, they should do their best to crown the Shuddhi movement with success. The Hindus by not reclaiming their outcasted brethren are helping in the slaughter of cows. The Garhwali says that if the officials of the British Government had acted impartially and far-sightedly the Hindu-Muslim question would not have assumed the present complicated aspect. They have helped in creating the communal feeling. They have committed a serious blunder in introducing the system of separate communal representation, which has widened the gulf between the two communities. It is owing to the policy of these officials that riots and dissensions have been increasing of late. Khwaja Hasan Nizami is said to have had an interview with Lord Reading and thereafter he engaged in activities calculated to create ill-feeling among Indians. It is our firm conviction that the district officers are largely responsible for the communal disputes. The Manorama publishes an article in which the writer, Chand Karan Sharda, B.A., LL.B., complains that Indian Muslim leaders are spending all their energies in inciting their co-religionists against the Hindus and says:—Indian Muslims are those people who were scolded by Turkey and afterwards beaten by Hindus and are now quarrelling among themselves for crumbs thrown from the table of the aliens. Dr. Moonje has rightly stated that ordinary Muslims are the descendants of abducted women or have been converted to Islam by deceit. They should remember that this is the age of Sangathan. Now there can be no organization in the name of religion or the Qoran or Muhammad Sahib. The Hindu-Muslim riots will only benefit the Hindus. If fanatical Muslims had not created disturbances, the Hindu community would not have been awakened. If Hindus want to stop communal disturbances they should carry on the Shuddhi movement in an organized manner. If Muslims assimilate Hindu culture the communal disturbances will cease of themselves. When the Muslims cease to exist, the question of cow-protection will be solved of itself. Every Hindu should therefore make it his duty to revive the ancient Shuddhi system. . . . The Hindus of Calcutta exhibited a good specimen of Sangathan and made the Muslims taste the fruit of their goondaism. Now through the efforts of the Arya Samaj and the Hindu Maha Sabha devourers of cows are becoming protectors of cows. Muslims should undergo Shuddhi and come under the banner of the Hindu Sangathan. Commenting on the disturbances at Pabna the Pratap remarks:—The Pabna tragedy has made it clear that the Muslims initiated the riot without any cause and that the provocation given by them added fuel to the fire. There is goonda raj at Pabna and the surrounding villages. What is the Government doing? It has arrested Hindus in larger numbers than the Muslims. What a justice it is that Hindus should be arrested when it is the Muslims who initiated the riot? The Haqiqat attributes the Hindu-Muslim dissensions to the Montagu-Chelmsford Reform Scheme and says:—The present constitution awards greater share in Government to the community which forms the majority. In truth the solution of these Hindu-Muslim dissensions rests in the hands of Government and till such changes are introduced in the constitution as may grant Muslims equal share with Hindus in Swaraj, communal union will be impossible even if a hundred conferences are held or arbitration boards are established. A true and lasting union between Hindus and Muslims can only be effected by some compromise like the Bengal Pact; otherwise the policy of "divide and rule" will continue for ever to ruin the country. Commenting on Lord Olivier's statement that there is a predominant bias in British officialdom in India in favour of the Muslim community the Hamdam says:—Far from evincing any such bias the British officials are restricting the rights of Muslims under the excuse of abiding by the opinion of the majority. This statement has been made at a time when signs of peace between the leaders of the two communities were visible and its object is to set the Hindus and Muslims against each other. Would that even now the bigoted communal leaders of India saw through these political moves and realized how they are dancing to the tune of an alien bureaucracy. The interest which the bureaucrats take in promoting Hindu-Muslim antipathy needs no proof. The Hindustani urges the Viceroy to conduct a thorough and impartial inquiry into the question of music before mosques and then to enunciate his policy. Al Khalil says that the communal riots have also begun to affect Government servants and any increase of communal spirit among them will render the administrative machinery useless. The failure of Government to establish peace is becoming evident and its helplessness is encouraging the mischief-makers. The days of a Government which is not able to suppress riots and maintain peace are numbered. Government is so weak, its power is so scattered and its policy is so hopelessly inconsistent that it cannot protect the established rights of its subjects. The policy of "Might is right" is being followed everywhere. The majority community gains victory over the Government by secret ways. The decisions of the Government are not acted upon, with the result that its power is gradually being crushed while it is labouring under the delusion that it is acting as an arbitrator. The Medina vehemently attacks Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya for his activities in connexion with the Sangathan movement, especially for his speeches in Bengal. It says: Every corner of the country is now bewailing the rebellious activities of this magician of Benares. We see that this greatest enemy of the country is doing his utmost to fan the flame of hatred and bigotry. He is bewitching Bengal by displaying the feats of Sangathan. At a meeting in Calcutta he exhorted the darwans to answer swords by swords, guns by guns and lathis by lathis. Will the Government say if the advice given in this speech is not calculated to incite the people to render the law useless and to usurp the functions of the courts and the police? Has the Bengal Government entrusted these duties to jamadars and darwans? Are these speeches of Malaviya which are fiery and calculated to spread hatred and enmity his satanic instigations and his exhortations to the Hindus to take the law into their own hands not actionable? Did Mahatma Gandhi deserve jail for six years for preaching real peace and order? But this pious wine-vendor of Benares does not deserve even a warning! We emphatically urge the Government of Bengal to remove under the Goonda Act this source of mischief and disturbances. Otherwise we fear that this fire will reach the citadels of Government. In reply to a remark of the Milap (Lahore) that if Muslims consider India to be inauspicious they should leave the country, the paper says :—India is ours and will continue to be ours. Why should we go from India now? On the other hand, the day is near when another Aurangzeb will be seen on the throne of Delhi. Then India will become the same paradise whose gifts are feeding to satiety the hungry people of the world. The Rasalat denounces the Sangathan activities as detrimental not only to the interests of Muslims, but also of the Government, and says that if local authorities impose strict restrictions on the playing of all music except in connexion with marriages and inflict severe punishment on the defaulters, the trickeries and moves of the Sangathan workers will disappear and no one will talk of Swaraj or patriotism. Hindus should be obedient and should not interfere in the religious affairs of others. Urging Muslims to combat the Sangathan activities Al Bashir says:--Muslims can be organized only by means of congregational prayers in mosques and lectures delivered from their pulpits. They can become brave if they can shake off the burden of loans taken from strangers and give up debauchery and other bad habits. The introduction of the Boy Scout movement is essential. They should train themselves in the use of lathi all the year round and not restrict the training to Muharram only and should buy guns, obtain licences and go on shooting excursions once a week at least. They should also take to trade. Internal reform is indispensable for the educational and economic advancement of the Muslims.

Agra Tenancy Bill.

The Leader criticizes the attitude adopted by the swarajists with regard to the amendment to clause 40 of the Agra Tenancy Bill moved by Khan Bahadur Mr. Muhammad Ismail and says :—We are surprised that the swarajists should have entered into a compromise the effect of which would be vitally to impair the security of tenure which the Bill sought to give. It is indeed very regrettable that in this vital matter the swarajists should have shown themselves less mindful of the interests of the tenants than of the expediency of an understanding with the landholders. In another article the paper asks the swarajists if the scales have not been heavily weighted on the side of zamindars. "Should the Swaraj party have yielded a vital point which affects the central feature of the Bill? Will the Bill make for 'a bold and contented peasantry' which the Swarajist members of the Select Committee declared in their note was 'a country's pride'? Will not the concession of compulsory power of acquisition of statutory holdings to the landlords make life-tenures precarious and statutory tenants live in dread of the landlord?" Under the heading "Fatuous Legislation" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—We do not believe in settling the tenant-zamindar question by a legislative enactment. These legislative enactments hedged in with limitations and restrictions do not cure the disease, but only make it worse. The Agra Tenancy Bill will either create more trouble for the tenant and the zamindar or it will become a dead letter. We do not believe in premature legislation imposed from above without sanction. The Sainik says :—The amendments which have been made in the Agra Tenancy Bill by the Council have rendered it more harmful than it was on emerging from the Select Committee. A prescription for ruining crores of tenants is being dispensed in the cool climate of Naini Tal. No one is paying any attention to the knife which is being sharpened in order to cut the throats of tenants. After calling attention to the amendments for securing more rights for zamindars the paper says:—Dr. Shafa'at Ahmad Khan's amendment debars Hindu widows from inheritance. Thus it is sought to encourage immorality among them and to throw them into the grip of badmashes. Those who claim to be the champions of Hindu rights should pay attention to this amendment which is full of mischief. The Haqiqat remarks that antagonism between zamindars and tenants will injure both and that if the zamindars treat their tenants generously they will easily win public sympathy, but if they persist in satisfying Government demands by sucking the blood of their tenants they are bound to suffer one day. The Medina says:—The report of the Select Committee will put an end to whatever power still remains in the hands of the zamindars. After the Bill is passed their status will be that of a mere broker between the Government and the tenants. Whatever concessions have been accorded to the zamindars in this Bill will be completely withdrawn in future. This is, however, a suitable recompense for the unflinching loyalty of the weak-hearted and servile zamindars. Unrelenting nature is having its revenge in the shape of this Bill for all that the zamindars have, in the name of law and order, done against the nation and the country. We have deep sympathy with them and we hope they will be wiser in future. Al Khalil says that the Government which during non-cooperation days used to hold Darbars to rehabilitate the authority of the zamindars is now itself bent on ruining them. In passing this Bill it has trampled upon the principles of legislation in a way which is unprecedented in the annals of any other Government in the world and has spurned the most reasonable objections of the zamindar members. The Aziz-i-Hind exhorts the zamindars to strengthen their party as Government is so much possessed with democratic ideas that it neither cares for its own safety nor for the safety of others. As a result of this policy every second or third year a new Act is passed to annihilate the existence of zamindars. We do not mean to say that sympathy should not be shown to the tenantry; our contention is that it is unjust to curtail the rights of the zamindars as this will have a bad effect on the stability of Government. It is these things which spread socialistic and Bolshevik ideas in the country and dishearten the real well-wishers of the Government.

Music before mosques.

In a lengthy article the Leader strongly criticises the policy of the authorities relating to Hindu processions and says:—In a word the Hindus lose, but the Government also sustain a bad moral defeat. If confidence cannot be reposed in their sense of impartiality, they have truly lost half their strength in the country, whatever may be the number of their military and police officers and men. To all appearances it has not been realized by the Government and their officers that there is another and a better way of dealing with the communal situation than for them virtually to identify themselves with one party to the controversy. That is for them to take up a strictly just and impartial attitude, and if either party disobeys orders informed by such unexceptionable and wholly commendable a spirit, to employ the Government's organized strength to vindicate these orders. . . . . We have been watching with grave concern the course of events in Bengal. On a minor scale we have been following with regret and disquiet the orders of the Magistrate of Allahabad on nearly every occasion of a Hindu religious procession beginning with the order which led the Hindus to abandon the Ramlila procession last year. . . . The present position cannot continue much longer. Let not excessive strain be imposed upon either community. Let neither of them be made to feel that it has not simply to be loyal to the Government by law established, but has perforce to live under the subordinate domination of the other community. In a letter to the paper the District Magistrate replies to its criticism of his action and says that the alternative to passing a restrictive order was a certain and bloody riot.

Political propaganda.

The Signal compares the character of British officers in the beginning of British rule in India with that of the present-day officers and says:—From the just and generous Englishman to the mail-fisted and iron-heeled despot is a sad change indeed. . . . It is not only the character of the British official that has changed for the worse, but also of the British ministers and statesmen who hold the reins of the Indian Government. The Vartman says that under foreign domination every institution leads to the moral degradation of the people. This applies to the Councils also. The moral downfall witnessed at present is unprecedented. It would be a political sin to say that through the Councils we have been able to exercise any influence over the administration. The voters should thoroughly consider these facts. It is true that the foreign Government has thrown a veil over their eyes, but it is their birth-right to act with discretion. Commenting on the Secretary of State's remarks that the British will not leave India because if they do so the country will be ruined the Hamdam says:—"Might is right" is the only argument on which the British can base their claim of ruling India, but in view of the changed political ideas of the present day it cannot be said how long a Government based on this principle can last. The Bir Hindu contains an article in the course of which the writer, Harbans Lal, says that the communists alone can do good to the country and that every child of India will soon become a communist.

Bakr-Id.

Commenting on the riot at Allahabad the Shakti strongly supports the view of the Abhyudaya that the Kotwal was mainly responsible for the riot and that he should be removed at once. Referring to the Sihali disturbances the Pratap says:—The treatment meted out by the district authorities to the Hindus of Sihali on the occasion of the Bakr-Id was despicable. It appears from the resolution passed at a meeting of the Hindus of the Bara Banki district that the local authorities acted in a partial manner. The Hindus of Bara Banki complain that the Local Government officials permitted the Muslims of Sihali to slaughter cows in an open place. Buck-shots and also a bullet were fired at the crowd of the Hindus. The United Provinces Government should institute another inquiry through an impartial committee. The Muslim officials of Sihali have prohibited the blowing of conches and ringing of bells in Hindu temples during the Muharram festival. This is a reprehensible abuse of section 144.

The Swaraj party.

Referring to the attitude of the United Provinces Swaraj party with regard to the Agra Tenancy Bill the Surya remarks:—The swarajists who are loud in their professions of "village organization", "kisan organization", "uplift of the masses" and the like have combined with the selfish zamindars in grinding down the tenantry! Nothing is impossible for the khaddar politicians and the Swaraj party blinded by selfishness. What is it if not the limit of shamelessness that the swarajists should have lent their support to the zamindars in their efforts to crush the tenants only in the hope of getting the help of zamindars in securing votes for the next elections. The Aj attributes the present highly deplorable condition of the Swaraj party to its lack of a definite policy in the Councils and points out that it is futile to try to put down discord dividing the swarajist ranks in almost all provinces. It urges swarajist leaders definitely to formulate their policy and to place it before a special session of the Congress for consideration.

Indianization of services.

Under the heading "an unwise utterance" the Leader again criticises the speech made by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales at the Indian Civil Service dinner held in London. It says:—The India Office, which must have supplied the material for the speech, may think that if British recruitment were to be stopped the services would be "starved," but we in India know that there are enough recruits available in India to feed the services. The India Office may be happy that India is a "good show" and a "fine field for British character", but Indian opinion demands that India should not be the happy hunting ground of the non-Indian, but must provide scope for her sons. We think that His Royal Highness should not have spoken with approval of the recommendations of the Lee Commission . . . . It was a very unwise speech which the Prince delivered. His Royal Highness was badly served by his advisers.

Indian candidates and Rockefeller Foundation.

Referring to the report that in response to the request of the managing committee of the Rockefeller Foundation of America to select six candidates on their behalf to specialize in medicine the Government of India have selected only four men the Leader writes:—Could not two more men be found in the whole country to go abroad for specialist training in medicine? The Government ought to have made, and ought still to make, an effort to find out two more suitable men so that all the scholarships offered may be availed of.

India's representation at the Imperial Conference.

Referring to the selection of Lord Birkenhead, Mr. Chadwick and the Maharaja of Burdwan as India's representatives to the Imperial Conference the Aj remarks that if India were not at all represented on the International and Imperial Conferences Indians would not feel so much aggrieved as they do at the sort of the representatives selected by the Government of India.

Bribery.

In the course of an article on bribery the Sainik says:—Although Mr. Paliwal's resolution regarding bribery was passed in the local Council more than a year ago, the Government has done nothing to give effect to it. The Government pays no heed to any complaints against any officer about bribery. It is said that the higher officers would themselves take steps to reduce corruption. But these very officers do all in their power and move heaven and earth to shield any Government servant charged with bribery.

Unemployment.

The Vartman calls attention to the serious state of unemployment in the country which, it says, has led to increase in crime and has sometimes driven men to commit suicide. The paper refers to the measures adopted in western countries to reduce unemployment and says that the Indian Government is not giving adequate attention to this question possibly because it is foreign and the officers are well-to-do.

Indians in Colonies.

In a letter to the Leader Benarsidas Chaturvedi warns Indians in South Africa against emigrating to British Guiana as according to one of his correspondents the country is not fit for emigration.

Communal representation.

Writing in the Agra Akhbar, Hafiz Hidayat Husain while acknowledging that separate communal representation is a blot on democracy, urges its extension in view of the present state of communal affairs in the country.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JULY 24, 1926.

Viceroy's speech.

The Pioneer welcomes the speech made by the Viceroy at the Chelmsford Club dinner "for it not only states with admirable lucidity the attitude of the Government of India and the British Government towards this great menace to the development of national ideals, but it also gives a clear lead to responsible members of the two communities chiefly concerned." The Leader says that the speech was in admirable literary form unlike many another viceregal and gubernatorial utterance reminiscent of resolutions and reports. The paper criticizes the policy of the United Provinces Government and the Bengal Government regarding communal questions and says:—Lord Irwin appears to have thought that he had in his possession facts which justified him in giving a certificate of superlative merit of almost universal application to Governments and officers. But we do not think that it can be claimed for all the officers of the Government, as Lord Irwin has done with something like assurance, that they uniformly follow a policy of combined fairness and firmness which can be appreciated as being morally right, politically sound and administratively sensible. If they did, we should think that the result would be far more agreeable than it has been from almost any point of view. In a subsequent article the paper writes:—Lord Irwin being a new Viceroy who means well and hopes to do good to India as the head of the Government, it will, we respectfully suggest, be worth his while to study the question why British rule has gradually become less popular and why today, notwithstanding the acknowledged work of England in and for India the people are less appreciative than critical: why their attitude towards England is more of indifference than of gratitude or admiration or hope. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—We must express our gratefulness to His Excellency for his denunciation of these communal riots, but we regret to observe that His Excellency was not quite right in describing the attitude of local Governments towards these unfortunate differences. While welcoming the sentiments expressed by the Viceroy the Vartman says that if communal representation is admitted to be an evil it should not be continued. To perpetuate an evil out of fear of the minority community would be to make the situation still more terrible. The Aj acknowledges that for some time past Government officials, particularly in the United Provinces, have been making efforts to stop communal dissensions, but points out that the orders issued by them cannot be said to be free from partiality. This is the most serious evil. Our charge is that the present policy of the Government has created an impression among Muslims in several places, specially in Bengal, that they can have their own way by means of threats or lawlessness. It is necessary that the Government should change its angle of vision. The question of music before mosques should be openly inquired into by an impartial commission and Government should frame its policy in the light of the results of this inquiry. The Hamdam regards the speech as wholly disappointing and says:—It is a living embodiment of bureaucratic traditions; it lacks in substance and has left the communal atmosphere of the country just as it was before. In trying to remove the "two misconceptions" regarding Government's policy His Excellency has only harped on the old tune of praising the Indian Civil Service officers and has expressed his helplessness in solving a petty problem. The Oudh Akhbar observes that the speech has disappointed the Hindus who expected the Viceroy to make an important announcement on the question of music before mosques and thus soothe their feelings. Al Khalil writes:—Though we do not agree with the Viceroy regarding the neutrality of Government servants in communal matters, yet on the whole, we heartily endorse his appeal.

The Calcutta riots.

The Leader writes:—One lesson that can safely be derived from the lamentable occurrence is that it was a sad blunder on the part of the Government to have yielded to the untenable Muslim demand for the compulsory stopping of music before mosques. Concessions to injustice are a weakness which peoples and Governments have to avoid or they will have to pay dearly for it. We hope that authorities nearer home will profit by this latest warning of Calcutta. The self-restraint of the Hindus in the Raj Rajeshwari procession is highly to be commended. In another article the paper says:—The Muslims have absolutely and indisputably placed themselves in the wrong. What is the duty of Government after this latest outrage and challenge to its authority? It should declare that it will not allow the legal rights of any community to the use of the King's highway to be interfered with by force or show of force with impunity and that it will uphold them with all the might of Government. If it does so, it will command respect and confidence. Peace cannot be secured by temporizing with demands which are ab initio unjust and unreasonable. The Indian Daily Telegraph takes Sir Abdur Rahim and Mr. Ghaznavi to task for not trying to prevent the riot and says:—Is it conceivable for a single moment that thousands of Muslims would conspire and yet these all-knowing leaders who have been rightly or wrongly described as the fomenters of communal strifes would be ignorant? In a subsequent article the paper writes:—Looking at the recent blood-thirsty outburst in Calcutta one cannot help asking the question whether the Government of Bengal has abdicated . . . . The Government can only defend itself by saying that it was not aware of this premeditated conspiracy. If this answer is to be accepted, then we say, in the name of all that is just and fair, disband your police and Criminal Investigation Department. Is the conduct of Government consistent with its professions of maintaining law and order impartially? Referring to Mr. A. K. Ghaznavi's message to Calcutta Muslims the Aj says that to describe the procession which was taken out in strict obedience to law and official orders as provocative and oppressive and yet to exhort the Muslims to keep quiet is an act which can be worthy of Haji Ghaznavi only. We want to invite the attention of the Calcutta authorities to the wording of this message. This action appears to be like that of a leader who while far away wants to put off a premeditated action at the eleventh hour for some special reasons. It adds:—The previous prohibition of the Raj Rajeshwari procession by the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, went to create the impression among the Muslims that they could have their own way by holding out threats. By supporting the demand for stopping music before mosques Government officials are fostering terrible and widespread lawlessness. But the last riot in Calcutta should serve to open their eyes. If the officials of Calcutta have not become totally blind they will realize that their pets have now begun to be less afraid of their guns and to learn to flout even Government orders and arms. The Surya remarks:—There are now only two courses open to the Government. Either it should strain every nerve to stop injustice and should not tolerate any violation of its orders or it should hand over the administration of Calcutta to Muslim hooligans. The Hamdam condemns the activities of those who take part in communal conflicts and says that as these people are really jeopardizing the rights for which they are fighting a day will come when those who attack religious processions or disturb prayers will cease to be regarded as Hindus or Muslims and their action will be viewed as a moral crime. The paper, however, refuses to believe that Muslims were aggressors during the latest disturbance and complains that the Indian news agencies, which are controlled by Hindus, always try to lay the blame on the shoulders of Muslims. The Haqiqat takes the Bengal Government to task for its inability to restore peace and says that the occurrence of a terrible disturbance for the third time shows that the Calcutta police is evincing extreme negligence in the discharge of its duties. The paper next invites the attention of Muslims to the condemnation of the conduct of their co-religionists in Calcutta even by neutral journals and asks why they have developed such a hatred for music that in their excitement they are not only ruining their hearth and home, but are also lowering themselves in the estimation of others. The wrong lead of Mr. Ghaznavi may do some good to him personally, but is sure to be detrimental to the cause of the Muslims. Is there no other wise Muslim left in Calcutta to give the right lead to his co-religionists? Al Khalil says that the action of the Statesman and the Englishman in fixing the responsibility for the riots on Muslims is a trick to justify the firing of the police on the unarmed crowd. It is in fact Muslims who have suffered most in these disturbances.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Abhyudaya remarks that the stoppage of Rath Yatra at Allahabad is a clear proof of administrative inefficiency. It is the duty of the Hindus to stand up in defence of their rights. To suffer patiently is to encourage others to do injustice. In another article the paper remarks:—We congratulate the Hindus on their wise decision not to take out the Rath Yatra procession at Daragunj, Muthigunj and Kydgunj in view of the restrictive orders passed by the district magistrate. We have, however, nothing to say to the authorities. There is no doubt that they are murdering reason and law. It is apparent that by their weakness and diplomacy they are digging up the roots of British rule. The Hindus have come to know that the authorities are afraid of Muslim lawlessness and that they support only those who disregard law and take it in their own hands. The Aj writes:—Blood begins to boil on reading the news from the Pabna district. It appears as if all sorts of hellish feelings have taken possession of the badmash Muslims of the locality and cowardice has taken hold of the local Hindus. It is surprising that while badmashes dishonour women, men should not be ready to kill and be killed. Those who dishonour Hindu women today will not hesitate to dishonour the women of their community tomorrow. Have the guardians of peace of Pabna left the task of maintaining law and order to the tender mercies of the badmashes of the district? In the course of a lengthy article in the Manorama Chatursen Vaidya Shastri discusses the genesis of the Hindu Maha Sabha and the Shuddhi movement and criticizes Mr. Gandhi for his partiality for Muslims. He goes on to say:—The Hindu Maha Sabha and the Shuddhi movement were not liked by the Muslims. Those who had destroyed crores of people because they did not like to become Muslims could not bear to see the reconversion of those Hindus whom they had deprived of their religion through atrocities. They, therefore, began to have recourse to hooliganism. The Hindus were beaten at Kohat, Saharanpur, Malabar and Delhi. Even while their women were being dishonoured they were studying the lesson of non-violence and bearing all this meekly. At last at Calcutta the Arya Samajists took the lead and a terrible fright was produced in the Muslim community. The playing of music before mosques was considered to be a sin as the accursed soul of Aurangzeb had said so in the ears of the Muslims. The Hindus will surely be victorious as they are non-violent and are fighting in self-defence and have borne the oppressions of generations of Muslims. India belongs to the Hindus who are alone entitled to her ownership. The Indian civilization is ours and we have made India rich and fertile. We have performed several great deeds on her soil which bears the marks of the footsteps of our Rishis. The Muslims can lay no claim to this country. I can prove that the Muslims in the beginning carried on pillage, arson and bloodshed on a vast scale. At the zenith of their rule they were sunk in immorality, partiality, injustice and diabolical deeds and what are they doing now when all their poisonous teeth have been uprooted? The Muslims can live in India only under the subjection of the Hindus as their younger brothers, and not as their masters. We advise the Aryas to sacrifice their lives in the Shuddhi work. The Kalwar Kshattriya Mitra publishes an article under the heading "worship" communicated to it by one Onkar Nath Gupta, Allahabad, in the course of which he remarks:—O Lord we worshipped thee in the form of a deity in human form and in the form of a stone, but thou didst not feel any compassion for us—nay, thou even forgot thy promise to reincarnate thyself in order to establish righteousness when unrighteousness prevailed in India. Dost thou wish that the Hindu nation should be effaced from the world? Today its intellect has become so perverse that it is worshipping as friends the enemies of thy sacred Vedas. This is to be found in the worship of Ghazi Mian and the five Pirs whose ancestors put to the gallows several jewels of the Hindu nation, dyed walls with the blood of innocent children and slaughtered and devoured numberless cows. But the Hindus have no sense. It was to bring them to their senses that Maharana Pratap sacrificed his life, Prithwiraj got his own eyes put out, Guru Govind Singh had his two sons walled up, Shivaji spent all his life in the jungles, Swami Dayanand drank a cup of poison, and one of his disciples had a dagger thrust into his stomach, but the eyes of the Hindus did not open. Al Khalil says:—The Government is being overawed by the demonstrations of strength made in communal disturbances. It might be rejoicing to find that with the increasing frequency of these riots the value of the British rises in the estimation of the people because those who suffer in these riots either seek the shelter of its hospitals or courts and police stations and demand that some Englishmen should decide their cases. The Government is, however, mistaken if it thinks so because those who flatter it on such occasions do so only to achieve their selfish ends and not because they really regard it as a goddess of power and justice. The Hamdam says :—The Muslims can have no objection to Sangathan if it is merely meant for the social reform of the Hindus. But, as it is, the movement is actuated by a spirit of opposition to the Muslims and the incitements, terrorism and oppression which are employed for Shuddhi are surely objectionable and mischievous. The Haqiqat extols the action of Dr. Ansari in announcing the severance of his connexion with all communal organizations and urges people to follow his lead and purge the country of the evil of Hindu-Muslim disturbances. The Sada-i-Muslim says that Dr. Ansari's declaration is a clear proof of the utmost desire of Muslims for union. Had the same spirit been found among the Hindus India would have been rescued from the fatal course which she is pursuing at present. The declaration reveals the strength of the passion for freedom animating the hearts of Muslims. Islam openly inculcates freedom at every step. Referring to the comments of the Leader on the orders of the Collector of Allahabad regulating Hindu religious processions the Hamdam remarks that as the Hindu leaders could not agree to the amicable proposals of the Muslim leaders, the authorities had no alternative but to have recourse to their legal powers.

Lord Olivier's views on communal tension.

Referring to Lord Olivier's letter to the Times on the communal tension the Pratap remarks that Lord Olivier's statement has proved to the hilt the charge levelled by the Congress workers against the Government of India that it follows a policy of partiality and invidious distinction in connexion with the Hindu-Muslim disputes. Though the Anglo-Indian press of Calcutta has taken Lord Olivier to task for his frank statement, yet its own comments go to confirm the statement of the ex-Secretary of State for India that the Bengal Government sides with the Muslims in order to discomfit the nationalist party. Will not the eyes of the Hindus and the Muslims of India open even now? The Aj agrees with Lord Olivier's view that the "bureaucracy" in India favours the Muslims as a make-weight against Hindu nationalism and remarks that it is for this reason that the disastrous system of separate electorates has been introduced and any proposal to abolish it is met with strenuous opposition in London. The independent Muslim party has come into existence in Bengal as a result of official encouragement and with its help efforts are being made to degrade the Hindus from the pedestal of nationalism and make them work out the reforms. In view of the growing influence of Muslims the Hindus too appear to be eager to fall into the snare of the bureaucracy. What more fearful example of the success of the policy of divide and rule can be met with than this? It has to be admitted with regret and shame that the immoral policy of the bureaucracy is praiseworthy so far as its own interests are concerned. In the course of an editorial note the Sainik says :—Lord Olivier has truly said that by favouring the Muslims the Indian bureaucracy is accentuating Hindu-Muslim enmity. The strongest proof of this is the Punjab Money-lenders Bill which was introduced to set the Hindus and Muslims by the ears . . . We are not at all surprised at this policy of Government. We are not so much surprised even at the fact that Sir Abdur Rahim and Mr. Ghaznavi are creating all these troubles at its beck and call. But what is most surprising and regrettable is that entangled in election tactics Pandit Malaviya is raising the cry of Hindu interests against nationalism and is thus helping in this bureaucratic policy. The Medina strongly criticizes Lord Olivier's remark that there is a predominant bias in British officialdom in India in favour of the Muslim community and says:—This remark is calculated to set the two communities against each other. To reply to this groundless and illogical statement it is necessary to examine the policy of Britain towards Muslims in India and the Muslim territories outside India. It can be shown that from Morocco to the walls of China the statesmen of Great Britain have left no stone unturned to acquire Muslim territories. Either they themselves usurped the territories or gave open permission to others to usurp them. The land-hunger of Britain has attacked and attacked successfully the property of Muslims. Although the Indian mutiny was begun by Hindus, the storm of revenge and oppression burst upon Muslims. Their estates were confiscated, their trade was wiped out, and every department of Government was dominated by Hindus. When in course of time the passion for revenge grew weaker and the Government found itself besieged by Hindus it began to think of Muslims. But the special favours thereafter shown to Muslims proved poisonous for them for they not only created ill-will between them and Hindus, but also produced estrangement and differences among Muslims themselves. At present the Muslims are in every way the greatest sufferers from the riots. They are arrested and punished for murder and rapine in much larger numbers. In these circumstances can it justly be said that the authorities are biased in favour of Muslims? There are causes which have made the lives of Muslims full of perils. Hindus are actuated by the strongest passion for gaining political and economic ascendency over Muslims. The Government is afraid of the Hindu majority. The charge of Lord Olivier is, in these circumstances, unjust and deplorable. All the forces of the world are bent on ruining Muslims. They are, however, a living and a strong race. Your unjust and inopportune statement and charges are all futile.

Political propaganda.

The Desh Bhagat publishes a letter from "Raja" Mahendra Pratap from Tibet regarding his activities in Afghanistan and Tibet and referring to the news of the expulsion of Englishmen and other Europeans from the latter, it says:—It appears that this is the result of the efforts of the Raja who is a jewel of India. Englishmen ask every country to surrender the Raja to them, but the Raja's influence and services are such that wherever he goes he is respected and a few days after Englishmen have to leave the country. Such has been the case in Afghanistan and Tibet. We are sure that the Raja will be successful in Nepal also where he is going. The Vartman prints a portrait of Kemal Pasha and an editorial article eulogizing his patriotism and commending his example and views to Indian Muslims. It says:—Kemal Pasha is the gate-keeper of Asia and is protecting us from the contaminated air of Europe. The spirit engendered by this angel has led Asiatic nations to hope for a union which will release the spirit of Asia from the satanic grip. Our Muslim brethren of India should ponder over the advice of this martyr. In Turkey too there are religious people. But these patriots realized the increasing danger from Europe and chalked out a path for themselves. Indian Muslims should also adopt that path. They should always have the portrait of Ghazi Kemal Pasha before them and should aspire after the freedom of their country.

Music before mosques.

The Haqiqat strongly condemns the demand of Muslims for stopping music before mosques and says:—It has already cost dozens of valuable lives and has caused loss of crores of rupees. We cannot for a moment support any demands of the Muslims that may make our religion the laughing-stock of others. Are Mr. Ghaznavi and those who think like him prepared to face obstructions that may be thrown in future by non-Muslims in the construction of mosques on public roads? If Muslims persist in their improper demand the inevitable result will be that it will not be possible to build mosques on public roads in big cities. Al-Bashir refers to the efforts made by the Governor of Bengal for a compromise between Muslims and Hindus on the question of music before mosques and says that it was the inevitable result of the obstinacy of the Hindu representatives that Muslim leaders insisted on music being stopped before mosques at all times. The paper approves the orders passed by the Governor of Bengal on the question and says that the Muslim leaders of Calcutta did not act wisely in holding protest meetings against the said order.

The Punjab Money-lenders Bill.

Commenting on the Money-lenders Bill passed by the Punjab Legislative Council the Surya remarks :—The Bill brings to light the divide and rule policy followed by the bureaucracy of the Punjab. Although it was moved by a Muslim non-official member of the Council, yet it cannot be denied that the Bill was inspired by the Government. Those who are aware of the relations which exist between the money-lenders and the borrowers do not require to be told that this Bill is detrimental to the interests of the former, eighty per cent. of whom in the Punjab are Hindus. The Oudh Akhbar urges Sir Malcolm Hailey to veto the Money-lenders Bill which, it says, has been passed in the face of the united opposition of the Hindus of the Punjab and observes :—Now those who are really needy will experience difficulty in getting money and those money-lenders who are really clever will make double profits. The object of this legislation is to transfer the business of money-lending to the hands of the landlords and thus enable them to squeeze out the blood of the tenantry still more.

Indians in colonies.

Referring to the deplorable condition in Calcutta of Indians returned from British Guiana the Desh Bhagat says:—The unjust and uncivil reply of the Government of India, Home Department, is reprehensible and shameful in every way. It is a political move of the British Government that at the time of its need it does not refrain from flattery, deceit and lies, but when questions of justice and humanity arise it turns a deaf ear to them. We are sorry to find that the Government of India which is responsible for the ruin of these poor Indians has now adopted an irresponsible attitude and is ignoring their request. What else can be expected of an alien Government? Has it the good of any Indian at heart? Does it sincerely feel sorry for the death of any Indian child? Not at all. This alien Government of India always remains anxious to keep us under subjection and to provide luxuries for itself at our expense. The Hamdam says that as these emigrants are British subjects it is the duty of the Government to arrange for their employment or to provide them with expenses and send them to the places whence they came.

Financial advisers to Ministers.

The Indian Daily Telegraph thinks that the proposed creation of a body of financial advisers is really meant to usurp part of the prerogatives of the Ministers. "Knowing as we do of the working of bureaucratic policies in India we can clearly see that these financial advisers attached to Ministerial departments with authorities from the Executive Government will command the purse of the transferred subjects and thus defeat the very object of the Montford Reforms by taking away part of the prerogatives that they have conferred upon popular Ministers." The Hamdam views the proposal with concern and says:—Though the proposal is apparently innocuous and even useful, it is to be seen whether the financial advisers will not curtail the powers of the Ministers.

Muslim affairs.

The Najat denounces as an unwarranted interference in religious matters the Bengal Government's action in fixing the times of namaz and urges the Muslims to realize the difficulties which they may have to encounter in future if they encourage the Government by their silence. The Dabir deprecates the social and economic principles of Muslims and their conferences held at Cairo and Mecca which in its opinion are responsible for their spiritual degeneration and points out that according to the Quran the secret of Muslim success lies in following in the footsteps of Imam Husain.

Indian jails.

In the course of an article on Indian jails the Republic writes:—Though we are living in the twentieth century and though we call ourselves civilized, our prison system and the treatment accorded to our prisoners, political or otherwise, are absolutely barbarous. Besides our laws and Penal Code are very harsh and inhuman. Nowhere on the face of the earth is the punishment for sedition so harsh, unkind and unjust as in India of today. The human element is at a discount in British administration. Our Indian Penal Code and prison system should be rewritten and improved.

Viceroy's speech.

The Republic congratulates the Viceroy on his speech at the Chelmsford Club and writes:—The bureaucratic robe of prejudices and pretensions has, for once it would seem, been changed for the humbler tunic of the itinerant humanitarian, and the result has been anything but discouraging. Healthiest sentiments, welling up from the innermost recesses of a true Christian heart, are a great help to those who are prepared to listen and reason. The Pratap remarks:—Lord Irwin's defence of the Government of India in regard to the communal tension is untenable. Our experience and incidents occurring every day unmistakably prove that the policy of the Government of India and the provincial Governments in this matter has been one of partiality. It was in order to weaken the influence of the Swaraj party in Bengal that the Bengal Government allowed Calcutta to be consumed by the fire of communal hatred. In the course of his speech at the Aligarh University the Governor of our province gave expression to British sympathy for Muslim culture. The undue partiality displayed by the District Magistrates of Allahabad and Fatehpur for the Muslims is known to everybody. In view of all this the Viceroy's eulogy of the policy of the Government and the impartiality of the authorities is altogether inopportune and misleading. It is possible that he may not have been acquainted with the real situation, yet it is ludicrous for a responsible officer like him to make a misleading statement. The Garhwali is "constrained" to assert that the short-sightedness of Government servants has contributed in no small measure to Hindu-Muslim tension and asks why communal tension has assumed the shape of Hindu-Muslim estrangement at one place, Brahman, and non-Brahman question at another, and Brahman-Rajput question at yet a third place. The Surya remarks:—The speech was undoubtedly thoughtful and impartial but whitewashing has been resorted to in attempting a defence of the Government. The Central Government has laid down no fixed policy in respect of communal matters. The Medina acknowledges that the sentiments expressed by the Viceroy are genuine, but challenges the statement that in dealing with the riots the authorities have been impartial. It says:—The talk of the impartiality of the authorities is meaningless. The claim that the Government has done its best to stop the riots also appears to be unfounded. The Government may indulge in self-laudation, but an impartial historian will assuredly proclaim its helplessness. The praise of the police and the army is nothing more than a piece of administrative chicanery. Writing in the same strain, the Haqiqat observes that His Excellency has not enunciated any measures which may be regarded as effective. The sum and substance of the speech is that Government is prepared to suppress communal disturbances by violent means, even at the risk of its popularity, but does not want to adopt peaceful measures likely to remove the very cause of the communal tension. The Desh Bhagat writes:—If the Government is really earnest there cannot be the slightest disturbance anywhere. Mere speeches, even of Lord Irwin himself, cannot efface the record that the British statesmen have always acted upon the policy of divide and rule in India. We declare it openly that the British Government is still following the same policy. The disturbances cannot be stopped so long as the British statesmen continue their policy of favouring the Muslims. We all know that at present the Government is trying to put an end to the Bolshevik movement in the world by pleasing the Muslims. It also wants to crush the religious and political spirit of the Hindus to such an extent that for generations to come there may not be one among them who may even mention the name of freedom. We hope that the self-respecting Indians will try to create an enthusiasm amongst themselves which will end their slavery and communal feelings for ever. The Najat remarks:—Lord Irwin has harped on the same old tune of which we have grown tired. It is astonishing that he has preferred silence to the adoption of some executive or constitutional measures for checking the riots. This indicates that Government will continue its old policy.

Calcutta riots.

Referring to the latest Calcutta riot, the Leader says:—Perhaps the grievance of the Muslims is that they did not get the better of the Hindus, who, against their expectations, not only held their own but showed here and there an aggressive spirit. They must realize that communalism breeds, and is apt to find an answering echo in communalism. They must face facts and instead of vainly trying to dominate over the Hindus, seek to act in friendly co-operation with them. If the forces behind the riots are not brought under control, they will cut the jugular vein of Bengal and of a large part of northern India. The growth of militant and aggressive communalism must be checked, as it is to-day the greatest and most sinister obstacle to the progress of the country. The Surya remarks:—The repetition of communal riots in quick succession demonstrates the hollowness of the assertion of Lord Irwin and the Earl of Winterton regarding the alertness of the authorities. The frequency of riots in Calcutta is undoubtedly attributable to the yielding of the Bengal Government to the Muslim demand regarding the stoppage of music before mosques. It is time that the Bengal Government set right the blunder committed by it. Referring to the attack upon the Raj Rajeshwari procession at Calcutta, the Bharat Jiwan urges the Muslims to think of the plight to which they will be reduced if 21 crores of the Hindus become completely alienated from them and become convinced of the need of adopting a policy of returning blow for blow. It adds:—The Muslims are at present perpetrating brutal outrages on women, killing children and innocent persons, and indulging in incendiarism and loot. If Hindus decide to adopt similar methods against them, then where will the Muslims be? At that time neither their supporter, the Government, nor their leaders who at present are serving their own ends by inciting them will come to their aid. It is yet time for the Muslims to beware and not to lay an axe at their own feet. In another article, referring to the repeated breaches of the peace at Calcutta, the paper says: Is it the rule of the British who boast of their culture and might or is it Nadirshahi? Are those detectives and officers of the Criminal Investigation Department of Bengal dead who come out like bugs at the smell of sedition and like vultures begin to hover over a poor patriot at the very sight of him? The Medina says:—The carnage which occurred at Calcutta on the occasion of the Hindu and the Muharram processions and the callousness with which the police fired at the Muslims cannot be a matter for pride to any Muslim or Hindu. The communal fire is being supplemented by the fire of police firearms. Cannot His Excellency the Viceroy do anything to stop this? The adoption of remedies that would please the soul of O'Dwyer and Dyer cannot be useful. Hindu friends may rejoice that the Muslims were fired at, but will not the time come when the pampered stomachs of the Hindus will also have to receive bullets? The Krishna holds the Muslims responsible for the outbreak of the riots and says:—In the Pabna district the Muslims gave a demonstration of Aurangzebi and Nadirshahi. The successors of Nadirshah indulged in outrages and oppression to the utmost. If such is the Muslim culture, God save India from it. This culture may be fit for the deserts of Arabia but India does not want that it should prosper here. The Parivartan says:—It is the firm belief of the public that Government does not want to stop the riots. But if this state of affairs is allowed to continue it may revive the martial spirit of the people and may at any time take the form of guerrilla warfare which may be the cause of anxiety to Government. Al Khalil says:—The recent Calcutta disturbances prove how the hands and feet of Government are being paralyzed. If the riots continue the day will soon come when the Muslim police will fire at Hindus and the Hindu police at Muslims against the instructions of their officers. Thus the Government will not only become unable to keep peace in India but its own arms will help to increase the disorder so much so that it will find itself like a disabled limb. While the police is preoccupied with these disturbances the anarchists will have a unique opportunity for subverting the Government. It is also possible that the party (Hindus) whose ambitions are being thwarted by Government may turn against it. The Government will then assuredly lose its ground, especially when the police and the army are thoroughly imbued with communal spirit.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Indian Daily Telegraph takes strong exception to the speeches made at the meeting of the Jamiat-ul-Ulema at Bombay and says:—Such flagrant provocation of hostilities deserves to be condemned unequivocally by every patriotic Indian and to be put down by the authorities. The Chand publishes an illustrated article showing how women may defend themselves if attacked. In the course of the introduction it is stated:—Almost every day reports are published of women being dishonoured. There are many cases which for various reasons remain unknown. Women will have to depend upon themselves for protection. In the course of an editorial article the Paliwal Brahmodaya remarks:—The atrocities perpetrated upon Hindu girls and women by "followers of other faiths" under British rule sound a note of warning to us that if Hindus do not cultivate the strength of undergoing self-sacrifice in the defence of their co-religionists the annihilation of Hinduism is very near. If need be the entire Hindu population of India should be ready to sacrifice itself in the defence of one Hindu. The Garhwali notes with satisfaction that Government has begun to realize its responsibility for checking communal dissensions and remarks:—It is our firm conviction that if the Government impartially exercises its great might to stop these strifes it can easily succeed and the thinking public also will co-operate with it in this. The Aj says that since Sir Abdur Rahim assumed the leadership of the Muslims the storm centre of Hindu-Muslim dissensions appears to have shifted from the Punjab to Calcutta and East Bengal. We do not assert that Sir Abdur Rahim is directing these activities but this must be admitted that they are the outcome of his policy of setting the Muslims against Hindus and forming a separate Muslim organization in Bengal. The Gramvasi refers to communal disturbances in the country and deplores that poor India is undergoing tribulations even under the mighty and civilized British rule such as it suffered during the invasions or the rule of tyrannical kings like Nadirshah. The present-day ruler is as much to blame for her present sufferings as the former rulers were for past atrocities. Hindus should develop the communal spirit like the Muslims and purge their community of its existing social evils if they are to exist in the world. Referring to Muslim atrocities on Hindus in Bengal, the Bharat says that one of the most serious problems confronting the Hindus at the present time is how to bring to the right path the bureaucracy which favours the Muslims. Proceeding, it remarks:—We see from the columns of the Forward (Calcutta) that Muslims have perpetrated such unjustifiable and inhuman atrocities on Hindus in several places in Bengal as put to the blush. Shame herself, but no trace of shame, grief or regret is to be found on the face of the bureaucracy. On the contrary, filled with arrogance, it proclaims its bravery from its own mouth. We want to know whether all the members of the bureaucracy are heartless asses from top to bottom or it includes human beings also. If there is a human being he is foolishly and blindly getting all this done or committing an unpardonable crime for which the bureaucracy or, for the matter of that, Great Britain is going to be punished by nature. In the course of an article in the Kshattriya Mittra Ram Chandra Singh Kaushik says that the Muslims are mad and in their madness they are lowering still more the sanctity of Islam. The world is making a fun of their bigotry and narrowmindedness. Can there be a more beastly and inhuman act than that of the unfaithful Muslim drivers who deserted their Hindu masters in an evil plight where they even lost their lives? Still the Muslim public is dancing in the garb of innocence. Have they got no heart? They may have, but it is cruel. Have they got no mothers and sisters? They may have, but we do not know what value they attach to their honour. Are there no gentlemen among them? There may be, but they are stained with partiality. What is the evil spirit which possesses them and blinds their eyes? Such oppression is to be found nowhere else. The Pratap insinuates that the permission accorded by the Bihar Government to the Hindus of Phulwari Sharif to take out their procession accompanied by music before mosques despite a previous agreement to the contrary is a move on the part of the Government to weaken the influence of Congressmen in Bihar, which is one of their strongholds, in the same way in which Bengal, another Congress stronghold, has been crushed by the guns of Sir Abdur Rahim and Mr. Ghaznavi. The paper adds that a few persons who are inciting the Hindus of Phulwari may be Government spies acting as agents provocateur and warns the people of Bihar to beware of those false champions of Hindu cause. The Arya Mitra regrets that a few officials of the Government continue to depart from its settled policy of religious neutrality and interfere in religious matters and throw obstacles in the way of Nagarkirtans. If the Government of India fails to take necessary action in the matter the only course left for the Arya Samajists will be to sacrifice their lives in defence of their religion. The Samajists will not allow their religion to die while they are alive. In the course of its editorial article the Bharat Dharma deplores that Hindu princes spend their money in the construction of tazias and says:—The desire of the Muslims to establish Muslim rule in India has become deep-rooted as a result of which they perpetrate atrocities with impunity. Hindus lack this longing for freedom and religious zeal. At least they should be satisfied with their own gods and should refrain from participation in the worship of gods of other religions. They should not expose the Hindu religion to ridicule by participating in the festivals of other religions. How can there be any religious unity between those whose religious beliefs are poles apart? The Maithil Prabha vehemently protests against the "height of aggression and meanness" of Muslims in demanding the stoppage of music before mosques and the fulfilment of their demand by Government. It says:—Muslims violate the chastity of hundreds of women every day, but no action is taken against them. The Hindus want justice. They should learn to sacrifice their lives for the sake of their rights. We are confident that our brethren will not obey the unjust orders regarding the stoppage of music but will organize an all-India agitation against it. It is now necessary that we should pay back the Muslims in their own coin. The session of the Khilafat conference held at Delhi has proved that educated Muslims are at the bottom of the communal tension. In this connexion our duties are to get a resolution passed by the Assembly prohibiting the construction of mosques along public roads and removing those already existing to sequestered places or Muslim localities, to strive for the stoppage of the jarring sound of drums during the Muharram before Hindu temples and to endeavour to stop the display of fireworks on the occasion of the Shaberat. The Melina says:—The loss of life and property of Indian Muslims and the bad name which their community has incurred are due to the hostility of Hindus and our intolerance. If the demands which are springing up among Hindus and Muslims were likely to lead to some good results we could have said: Let the Muslims be slaughtered and imprisoned; let their children become orphans and their wives widows and let them gain ascendancy and communal distinction. But for God's sake, O leaders of miserable and helpless Muslims! Say, what glorious future for Islam lies hidden in the frames of tazias, the sound of drums and flags that you become the targets of guns and inmates of prisons? Are all these tribulations, ignominies and servilities of yours, this selfishness of your place-hunting leaders and the sowing of seeds of troubles for your descendants meant simply for the sound of the drum and a few paper biers which are suggestive of idolatry? No, Islam is above these trifles and the object of its teachings is much higher. The Hamdam says:—The Basti and Sihali disturbances show that there is an organization among the Hindus of this province who are bent upon turning the Muslims out of India and with a view to discredit Muslim officials this organization engineers a riot in places where the district magistrates are Muslims. The Krishna says:—This country neither belongs to Englishmen nor to the Muslims; it belongs to the Hindus. With the help of their organization the Hindus should let the Government know that if it continues to spurn the sentiments and demands of the majority community it would undermine its own interests and would realize its mistake some day. There is, therefore, still time for it to change its policy and to govern this country with the co-operation of the Hindus who have always been and are still ready to co-operate with it on honourable terms.

Lord Winterton's speech.

The Leader writes:—Lord Winterton's oration in the House of Commons does not call for elaborate notice. It was the familiar string of platitudes, here and there in new language. The Indian Daily Telegraph says that the speech is a challenge to Indian leadership, Indian statesmanship and Indian capacity to manage their own affairs. The paper does not accept the view that the Government of India are doing their best to stop the riots and says:—If the Government were to give no quarter to the communal hooligan, the riot atmosphere would disappear in one month. If the Government had dealt with the communal hate-monger with half the seriousness with which they put down the non-violent non-co-operation the riots would have become a thing of the past. But the Government have not seriously tackled the communal problem and they will not do so, as one can easily conclude from Earl Winterton's confession. The Aj says that it is but natural that Earl Winterton should express satisfaction at the progress in India for the last four years when the nationalist party has become disintegrated and every other party is ready to co-operate with the Government. The eulogy of Lord Reading by Earl Winterton shows what conflict of interests exists between the rulers and the ruled. If the Swaraj party had carried out its pledge of persistent obstruction and prepared the people for mass civil disobedience, Earl Winterton would not have got this opportunity of expressing gratification at its approaching end. The Under-Secretary of State's remark regarding the need for the presence of the British to prevent communal hatred from assuming the form of a bloody massacre goes to show that the British are not dissatisfied at the communal dissensions. It is certain that the sword of the third party will not stop these disturbances. The Hamdam regards the speech as merely an echo of Lord Irwin's speech in Simla and says:—Apart from the verbose and smooth-tongued speeches of Lord Irwin and Earl Winterton not a finger has been raised to remove what the latter characterized as "the most formidable menace." Earl Winterton says that as in the next elections appeals will be made on communal lines a strong new party will come into being which will co-operate with the Government. This is the naked picture of the joy and composure which the Imperial Government feels on seeing the houses of Indians being sacked during the disturbances. Does not this frank statement show that this party which regards the union of the two communities as baneful to its interests is at the bottom of the present Hindu-Muslim disturbances in the country?

Muslim affairs.

The Medina complains of Reuter's niggardliness in sending news of the World Islamic Conference but is glad to learn from Arabic papers that the proceedings of the Conference are most encouraging. It is hoped that this grand and unique gathering of Muslims will turn out to be a divine guide in the cause of Muslim brotherhood. The honour which is being shown to our Indian representatives is a matter for pride for us. The Mashriq complains that Muslim pilgrims to Mecca were ill-treated by Ibn Saud's men. Those who went to see the demolished domes without permission were beaten. The calamity which has overtaken the holy places in the beginning of the Muslim year shows that the heart-rending incidents which took place at Karbala 120 years ago are still continuing. The Mansur says:—The statements of Hajis indicate that there was no mismanagement on the occasion of Haj this year, for at each stage the Najdi soldiers deputed to look after the general requirements and safety of the caravans discharged their duties honestly and arduously. One Maulana Saiyid Ibne Hasan Rizwi of Sindh, writing in the Sarfaraz, deplores the demolition of Jannatul Bakia and fervently appeals to Britain either to compel Ibn Saud to allow the reconstruction of the holy buildings in the Hedjaz and to abstain from committing such mischiefs in future or to permit Muslims to form a band of mourners to proceed to Mecca and Medina to sacrifice their lives in protecting them. It is confident that a just Government will respond to the call of an oppressed community. The Sada-i-Muslim complains that though educated and hardworking Muslims are available, their number in Government offices is much less in proportion to their population than that of the Hindus. It adds:—It is the foremost duty of the United Provinces Government to appoint Muslims in accordance with their rights. If it does not do so it would create an unrest which it would never be able to suppress. Al Bashir complains of the arbitrary powers exercised by district magistrates in disallowing all new cow-sacrifices on the occasion of Bakr Id and says that the United Provinces Government's communique instead of checking the irregularities committed by district magistrates has increased them. We want to know what rights we have got within British territories as British subjects and whether we have the same rights and privileges as are enjoyed by lakhs of Muslims in the Hindu states.

Lord Olivier's views on communal tension.

The Desh Bhagat says that Lord Olivier has thoroughly laid bare Lord Reading's policy of favouritism to the Muslims. Everyone knows that Government is at the bottom of the Hindu-Muslim tension in India and all the bloodshed and disturbances are due to its policy of favouritism. A Liberal writing in the Haqiqat says:—Lord Olivier is mistaken in thinking that Government accords preferential treatment to a particular community. The British Government is discharging its duties with great integrity and impartiality. Al Barid observes:—Either Lord Olivier is labouring under a serious delusion or he wishes to befool others. It is the Muslims who have been the sufferers everywhere in the recent riots as they neither possess wealth nor power of organization and propaganda. Is Lord Olivier's statement intended to accentuate the ignorance and bigotry which have taken hold of the Hindus and Muslims these days?

Indians in the colonies.

In the course of a lengthy letter to the Leader on the problem of the returned Indian emigrants in Calcutta from Fiji Benarsi Das Chaturvedi writes:—There are at present in Fiji about 30,000 Indians who will lose their right to get a free passage if they do not exercise their right till December 31, 1930. The repatriation of these people to India will cost the Fiji Government something like £450,000 and the Fiji Government do not want to lose this sum. It is lawful for these immigrants to commute their rights of passage on such terms as may be offered by the Fiji Government as an equivalent to such passages. But it appears that the Fiji Government are trying to evade their responsibility in this matter and this is certainly discreditable on their part. . . . I invite the attention of the Government of India to this matter and hope that they will take it up immediately. The Hamdam is glad to note that the official deputation to South Africa has really done a great service in inducing among the politicians of that country a spirit of reasonableness and conciliatoriness. It says that Mahatma Gandhi will be the most suitable president of the proposed round table conference to be held at Cape Town and that if he does not accept the presidentship it should be offered to Mrs. Sarojini Naidu. The Azad deplores the miserable condition of returned emigrants from the colonies now scattered all over Calcutta and says:—If for some inexplicable reason the Government of India cannot help these unfortunate persons it should ask the Governments of different colonies to make arrangements for their free return.

Amended Devolution Rules.

The Leader writes:—We hasten to express our dissatisfaction with the amended Devolution Rules which, in effect, do no more, according to our understanding of them, than to give to Ministers, if and when they want, a financial adviser in the place of a joint finance secretary as provided in the original rules. The new rules providing for joint deliberation between the two halves of the Government when there may be important proposals of new expenditure are an improvement. But the sum total of the amendments effects no improvement worthy of mention in the position of Ministers. If diarchy must be kept alive for a few years more, we think that at the least the position of Ministers should be strengthened, and out of the major subjects which are still reserved, not only Forests but Irrigation also should be made over to Ministers. But in conditions that exist there can be little hope of any forward step being taken by a Government so strongly entrenched in power as is the Indian Civil Service Government of India.

Indian States.

In the course of its editorial article the Rais remarks:—Reports which are being received from the various parts of the country lead to the conclusion that the Government is unfavourably disposed towards the Indian States and raises. The abdication of the Maharaja of Nabha and the Holkar of Indore, and the Udaipur and Hyderabad incidents have made the position of the raises and the States critical. The commission appointed to modify the treaties has aggravated the situation. It is our duty to frustrate all attempts at destroying the existence of the Indian chiefs. It is the duty of every well-wisher of the country to direct his attention to the means adopted by the Government and a few thoughtless people to weaken and render critical the position of the rajas and the raises.

Foreign Affairs.

The Sainik warmly supports the aims of the Pan-Asiatic Society and the Great Federation of the Asiatic Races and says that their success will greatly benefit the world and will prevent the apprehended colour war. Commenting on Lord Birkenhead's reference to Afghanistan in his speech in the House of Lords the Hamdam thinks that the Afghan Government is in every way justified in constructing roads and increasing its air force for purposes of self-defence and says :—The present Amir is too wise to court hostility with a mighty power like Britain or to afford the Bolsheviks any opportunity for making mischief. Lord Birkenhead's remarks can be construed as a threat and as such had better been avoided. The Medina criticises the remarks recently made by the Director of Military Intelligence about the danger from Russo-Afghan relations and says that Afghanistan can never dream of ruling over India or any portion of it. These remarks are intended either to put an end to the movement for Indian independence or to incite Hindus against Muslims. In former times India had intimate relations with Afghanistan but the selfishness of Western civilization and the deceitfulness of politics have severed these relations in a trice and made Afghanistan a stranger to India. The propagandist historical literature of the West has inflamed the majority population of India against Muslims and has represented the neighbouring Muslim countries as a bogey. The defensive policy has, moreover, compelled the present rulers to provide themselves with means, other than military, which can be used with the help of Hindus in emergencies.

Viceroy's speeches.

Referring to the Viceroy's speech in reply to an address of welcome from the Muslims of the Bombay Presidency, the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—Lord Irwin seems to think that the leaders must take the first step towards the restoration of peace and order. We have not heard of a more futile or perilous policy enunciated by the responsible head of a Government. What can the leaders do if the Government follows a policy of sitting on the fence and watching the fun? The Government stands thoroughly discredited in the eye of the public for having allowed riots to take place on such an extensive scale. Commenting on the Viceroy's speech at the Chelmsford Club the Shakti says :—It is surprising that the Viceroy should not find any need for abolishing the system of communal representation although he holds it to be disastrous. The Government may not encourage communal riots but our dissensions can, and do, prove beneficial to it and that is why it does not display that alertness in stopping the riots which it shows in the suppression of peace-loving patriots. The Sadaqat writes :—We do not say that Government incites Hindus against Muslims, but past experience shows that it has not taken adequate interest in suppressing communal riots, otherwise the evil would have been removed long ago. The Hamdam thinks that the address of welcome presented to the Viceroy in the name of the Muslims of Bombay was in fact presented only by a certain class of Muslims who have access to officials and the Muslims of Bombay in general had nothing to do with it. As the circumstances under which non-cooperation was resorted to have not altered, the Muslims consider it necessary to act according to the fatwas of their theologians so long as the wrong done to the sacred places of Islam is not rectified and the situation in the Jaziratul Arab does not improve.

The Secretary of State's speech.

Commenting on the Secretary of State's speech in the House of Lords, the Leader writes :—We will repeat what we said before, that the Hindus have no reason to be satisfied and are not in fact contented with the manner in which at more places than one, in more provinces than one, on more occasions than one, they have been treated on the question of music before mosques. At least to this extent we cannot endorse the superlative encomiums of officials uttered by Lords Birkenhead, Reading and Irwin. Recent administrative acts have left much to be desired, and we suggest that the Government may save a little time from the composing of stately passages in praise of themselves and their officers for the not less important object of examining the acts of some of their officers and revising them where necessary in order to fulfil the claim of the equal and impartial treatment of both communities. The leaders of the communities may easily be blamed for the failure of their efforts to induce a friendlier state of inter-communal relations. But no non-official efforts are likely to succeed for as long as either of the communities can feel that it need make no concession to the other as it can rely upon the support of authority to its extravagant demands. We particularly wish Lord Irwin will bear in mind this important consideration. The Aj finds no commendable feature in Lord Birkenhead's speech and says that it only goes to disappoint the advocates of the attainment of full responsible government within the Empire by means of constitutional agitation. Continuing its comments on the subject in another issue, the paper remarks:—Indeed, there has not been such a novel and courageous experiment in any empire as has been made by the British in India in granting reforms. Surely the rulers of other empires were not so expert as the British Imperialists are in the art of giving without giving anything in reality. Former Imperialists were cruel as well as wicked but were not so well versed in crooked diplomacy as the British. In spite of the reactionary character of the Reforms, Lord Birkenhead is surprised that some people want to render them futile and ridiculous. We wonder at such an expression of his surprise and pity those who hope to work them successfully and to secure further reforms. The Hamdam prefers Lord Birkenhead's speech in the House of Lords to that of Earl Winterton and says Lord Birkenhead has held communal leaders responsible for the present communal disturbances in India. In view of the presence of prominent leaders like Dr. Moonje, Bhai Parmanand, and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya our (Hindu) countrymen cannot refute this charge but, so far as Muslims are concerned, we very strongly repudiate it.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In the course of an editorial article the Sudharak remarks:—There is no room for doubt that the Government has not only an indirect hand in the communal tension but that it also derives satisfaction from it. The Abhyudaya publishes in its editorial columns an article communicated to it by Pandit Laxman Narain Garde, in the course of which he remarks:—No impartial person will deny that the communal disturbances at present rampant in India prove the unfitness of the British Imperialists for the good administration of India. It is equally indisputable that the more the Swaraj movement becomes vigorous the more is the impetus given to communal tension. If the Reforms Act had not introduced the disastrous system of separate electorates the country would not have witnessed the communal riots for the last three or four years. The Aj, while admitting that the "bureaucracy" is in earnest about putting down communal disturbances, holds that it is not equally anxious to remove the causes of communal tension. If it disapproves of communal disputes it should make a clear pronouncement that it will not encourage communal feelings in administration. It should make appointments to public services on the basis of merit and not on communal considerations. It should also abolish separate communal electorates and decide the questions of music before mosques and cow-sacrifice in the light of the recommendations of a commission which should be appointed to inquire into them. The Bharat remarks:—The incidents which are taking place these days are strengthening the impression of the Hindus that the Government cannot protect them, rather it strives to suppress them by siding with the Muslims. This has led them to the conclusion that if they do not retaliate upon the Muslims there is the danger of their being blotted out of existence. In another article the paper remarks that the Swaraj party of Bengal, its founder, its chief paper Forward and its present leader will ever be held responsible for all the crimes, wickedness, oppressions, meanness, and barbarism committed to-day against the Hindus in Bengal. With the exception of half-blooded Indian Muslim converts, there is none in the world who denies his ancestry. But these Muslim converts abuse the members of their own family and oppress them and are proud of Arabian blood. The swarajists cannot remove this ignorance by purchasing votes in Councils and by selling their religion to them. The Hindu world doubts if those Hindus are true Hindus who are opposed to sangathan, are afraid of becoming members of the Hindu sabha, do not like to die for the protection of Hindu honour and wish to carry on a futile fight in the Councils. If Britain does not wish to annihilate the Hindus through non-Hindus, she should change her policy and act upon Queen Victoria's Proclamation and impartially and adequately punish the officials responsible for each irregularity because this is the only means of restoring peace. If Government wishes that India should be cleared of Hindus, all Hindus should leave the Councils and protect their home by standing on their own legs. We are, however, sure that the public of Great Britain is not so mean as the bureaucracy and its British directors. The Sri Darpan publishes an article under the heading "Indian Women and Goondas" communicated to it by Shrimati Urmila Devi, in the course of which she writes:—At the present time the wealth and the honour and everything else of the Indian women are in danger. The goondas are determined to dishonour them. Heart-rending reports of the abduction of Hindu women are received every day. It is a common thing for the goondas to violate their chastity. The Hindus cannot do anything to prevent this. Perhaps they will rely on the Government of India. But have they not yet realized from the attitude of the Government that it takes no action whatsoever in such matters? Hindus should, therefore, stand on their own legs. The Bharat Jiwan complains of atrocities perpetrated upon the Hindus by the Muslims at Calcutta on the occasion of the Muharram, of encourgement given to the goondas by the police and of non-interference of the authorities with the Muslim procession armed with lathis and weapons in defiance of the orders of the Police Commissioner and remarks:—We inquire of Lord Irwin whether this is impartiality. Does he dare to refute the charge of official bias in favour of the Muslims in the face of such behaviour of the authorities? The Bhumihar Brahman remarks:—How regrettable and shameful it is for the Hindu community that, in spite of its 33 crores of deities its members should worship the tombs of other religions? At present hundreds of thousands of such blind devotees are found among the Hindus as have greater devotion for Pir, Shahid, Ghazi and Imam Saheb than for the Hindu deities. Hindu religious leaders should realize that until the blind devotion of the illiterate Hindu public is destroyed, the call for the propagation of Hindu religion will prove a mere cry in the wilderness. The Bharat Dharma reproduces extracts from the speeches delivered at the anniversary of the provincial Jamait-ul-Ulema at Bombay to show how the Muslim speakers tried to incite their co-religionists against the Hindus and remarks:—This shows that they have forgotten the existence of British rule in India. Muslims are ready to follow the example of Aurangzeb and are throwing out a challenge to Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, but they forget that along with Aurangzeb Shivaji is also born. We want to warn the Muslims that they will have to taste the bitter fruit of making such incitements. The Abhyudaya expresses its sympathy with the protest meetings held by the Arya Samajists all over the country on July 25, and remarks that by imposing restrictions upon Hindu processions accompanied by music as a result of Muslim threats or through fear of a disturbance the authorities are not only murdering Hindu rights but they are also proving themselves to be incapable of protecting the civic rights. The protest of the Arya Samaj constitutes a warning to the Government. If the authorities do not even now take a lesson they should not be surprised if the Hindus take recourse to such means for the protection of their rights as may not commend themselves to the authorities. In the course of a lengthy article discussing the attitude which the Muslims should adopt in view of the communal tension and disturbances the Medina writes:—Having acquired wealth and education and having organized their community the Hindus want to establish their political supremacy and with this end in view have thrown out a challenge to Muslims who are poor, uneducated, resourceless and disorganized. It is in order to overawe the Muslims that the Hindus have raised the questions relating to music, cows, language, representation, and government service. Hindus hope that these questions will lead to disintegration, poverty and cowardice among the Muslims and will help in the establishment of Hindu predominance, which means that the Muslims should remain in the country as Shudras. In these circumstances we exhort our co-religionists that instead of fighting over the question of music, breaking heads during Muharram, indulging in fights and bloodshed during festivals, creating disturbances during processions, wasting money in the law courts and rotting in jails and dying through gun-fire, they should act with patience and forbearance and devote themselves to the improvement of their internal condition. They should promote education, trade and industry and organization in their community. If this is done, the time will be near when Hindus and other Indian communities will seek Muslim sympathy and help and will consider themselves lucky in having a pact with Muslims. The Tohfa-i-Hind vehemently condemns the murder, arson, rapine, desecration of mosques and temples, and other detestable crimes perpetrated by Hindus and Muslims in the name of religion. It says that by the commission of these crimes they have given proof of their inhumanity and have secured titles and jagirs from the enemies of the freedom of India and the opponents of the national union. Lord Olivier's letter confirms the opinion held by our leaders. Had it not been so, the Muslims would never have fought for trifles against the teachings of their religion. Islam does not enjoin the wounding of the hearts of one's neighbours and the desecration of the places of worship of other religions. The Hind-i-Jadid says:—There are many instances of the interest which the bureaucrats take in setting Hindus and Muslims by the ears. Our conviction is that if a spirit of real unity, fellowship, true toleration, and patriotic enthusiasm is fostered between these two communities, the bureaucracy will not find it so easy to have its own way and to use its autocratic powers. It is the fruit of the policy of "divide and rule" that at the slightest hint the two communities begin to dance like puppets. Apparently the bureaucrats preach friendship and union as if they were the angels of peace. But in reality their diplomacy and dissension-breeding tactics have razed to the ground the structure of communal unity and the country has been left miles behind the path of liberty. Will not the eyes of bigoted Indian leaders open even now and will not they realize that by fighting among themselves at the instigation of England they only strengthen the power of bureaucrats? Referring to the communiqué issued by the Government of Bengal on the question of music before mosques and to the protest meetings held by Hindus at Calcutta in that connexion, the Najat asks liberal Bengalis and other Indians to say if the only way to attain independence for India is to foster hatred between the two big communities and to force Government to impose restrictions on the freedom of their respective religions. It says that the foolish persons who assert that India cannot be free till Hindu raj is established are responsible for the mischief and riots occurring in India. Instead of establishing Hindu raj this movement will strengthen the fetters of the slavery of India; for it is possible that being compelled by the mischiefs created by wily Hindus, Muslims may dissociate themselves from the movement for liberty and, going over to the side of Government, may enable it to trample the organized strength of the Hindus which it considers fatal to the proper administration of India. Al Bashir remarks that there has been an astonishing increase in the number of new processions of the Hindus during the last fifty years. All of them are accompanied by music, but no restriction is placed on them while passing by mosques, even at the time of prayer. On the other hand Muslims are not allowed to perform cow-sacrifices even in their homes. There is no law which prohibits Muslims from performing cow-sacrifices without the permission of district magistrates. It is unjust that one community should be free to take out new processions on roads and the other should not be allowed to perform cow-sacrifices even in its homes. As it is a question of principle, the Muslims should unite in requesting the Government to settle it. Commenting on the Hindu-Muslim dissensions and specially the recent Calcutta riots, the Rahnuma remarks:—Government has failed to establish peace and in the present circumstances no one can assert that life and property are safe. No action has yet been taken on the suggestions made in the Viceroy's speech. It is high time that prominent leaders formed a conciliation board and with impartiality and justice tried to remove the causes of communal tension. Aman Sabhas should be established in each district under the patronage of district officers. It may be hoped that if Aman Sabhas and conciliation boards are established the recurring communal riots will cease. The Hamdam opposes Mr. Amar Nath Datta's resolution regarding the abolition of communal representation, as it thinks that this will not remove communal tension. It says:—The communal disturbances have been going on in India for about three or four years, whereas separate representation has been in existence for the last twenty years. The responsibility for the communal disturbances therefore does not lie with communal representation but with the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements. Commenting on the demand of the Hindus that appointments to Government posts should be made on considerations of merit alone and that no preferential treatment should be accorded to Muslims, the Medina calls attention to the difficulties which Muslims have to face even in competitive examinations and in cases where merit is declared to be the only passport to service. It says:—A Muslim, however able he may be, cannot get a post in an office the head-clerk of which is a Hindu. Similarly, so long as the examiners are mostly Hindus, a Muslim candidate cannot get through a competitive examination. If a Muslim gets an appointment through the impartiality of some Englishman, he is so overwhelmed with fear that he proves a failure. Referring to the case of Asghari Begum of Delhi who was converted to Hinduism under the name of Shanti Devi, the paper says:—If Hindu widows unable to control their passions elope with Muslims, then the whole Muslim community is branded. But if Arya Samajists establish kidnapping centres under the guise of widows' homes, then this action is regarded not only as legal but also as a service to the cause of womanhood. It is now well-known that these widows' homes are a menace to the honour of Muslims. The case of Shanti Devi proclaims by the beat of drum that organized raids are being made on the honour of Islam. It is to be regretted that in this civilized kidnapping method big mahatmas, sanyasis, doctors, and professors are also taking part. The Sada-i-Muslim says that the object of the orphanages and homes for the widows controlled by the Arya Samajists is not merely to afford shelter to Hindu widows and children but also to shut up stray women and children of Muslims. It therefore urges the Government to keep an eye on these orphanages and homes for the widows so that the Arya Samajists may not get an opportunity to convert Muslim women and children. Commenting on Dr. Moonje's speech the Haqiqat says:—Dr. Moonje and the mischievous leaders of his calibre should realize that they are responsible for spreading communal fire in the country. The innocent blood of Hindu and Muslim victims to riots and disturbances will also lie on their heads. Dr. Moonje may escape punishment in this world for his misdeeds but he and his followers will surely be brought to book in the next world. Al Burid says that at such a critical time when one community is ready to break the head of another, provocative advice like that given by Dr. Moonje can produce no good result.

Political propaganda.

The Bharat says that perhaps in no free and civilized Government is justice being dragged to the mire as is being done in India at present. At times the Indian law courts present the scene of Andher Nagari (the city of injustices). Justice and truth have absolutely no value in the present administration of the law. In the course of an editorial note the Vivek says:—Indians only demand that the provincial administration and the central Government should be made responsible to the provincial Councils and the Assembly. We are told that we are wholly unfit even for this much and that it is only after many hundred years of training under the British that we can probably be fit for it. The reason is that we do not possess arms as other nations of the world do. In politics weakness means folly.

Ban on Malaviya and Dr. Moonje.

In the course of a lengthy editorial article on the order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta forbidding Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to enter or remain in the city, the Leader writes:—The order will be read with feelings of surprise and indignation because it was such an order and also because it was promulgated against such a man. That Mr. Malaviya's presence in Calcutta was likely to lead to a disturbance of public tranquillity is an astounding proposition, as everyone will say who knows Pandit Malaviya and who also knows what is likely to and what will not, produce a riot. The effects of the order will be deplorable. The Hindu community all over India will feel themselves gravely wronged. It will not draw the two communities nearer; it will not bring the Hindus nearer the Government. We protest against it with all our might. In the circumstances of the case we approve of Pandit Malaviya's decision, opposed generally as we are and as he himself is, to disobedience of the orders of lawful authority. The Pioneer writes:—The Government of Bengal have rightly decided to defer for two months the pleasure of permitting their capital to afford hospitality to the two doughty partisans who might now ponder over the possibility of ensuring communal peace in their own sphere of influence.

The Indian National Union.

Referring to the manifesto issued by Pandit Motilal Nehru and Maulana Abul Kalam Azad regarding the proposed Indian National Union, the Pioneer writes:—We give the scheme a warm welcome and wish its promoters the completest success which they desire and deserve. It represents a real attempt to give a lead for the two communities to set their houses in order, responsive to the impressive appeal made by Lord Irwin at Simla. The Leader, while pessimistic regarding the success of the Union, remarks:—We shall watch the work and the growth of the Union with the greatest sympathy and shall wish that the best success may attend its laudable efforts. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The manifesto reveals as by a flash of light what any Indian Government would have done if India were self-governing. Our sincere congratulations must go to Pandit Motilal Nehru, who has laid the foundation of a new and great movement. Ay, the Pandit has brought together forces which will shortly be at work driving the people from various points of the compass to a common fold, animating them with a common purpose and preparing the minds of the public to think and act nationally with a view to bring about the early deliverance of our common motherland. The Aj notes with satisfaction that these leaders have recognized the fact that the mixing up of religion with politics has rendered the communal situation worse and urges that in order to wean politics from religion and communalism, it is absolutely necessary that the Congress leaders should declare separate communal electorates to be serious obstacles to national progress and strive to get the Lucknow Pact cancelled. The paper welcomes the idea of the establishment of the Indian National Union with the object of combatting communalism and urges that no delay should be allowed in giving effect to the scheme.

Music before mosques.

The question of music before mosques continues to be widely discussed on communal lines with a good deal of bitterness. In the course of its editorial article the Hridaya remarks:—The Government can if it chooses easily solve the question of music before mosques. If justice is done everything will be set right but 150 years (of British rule) have passed away in the hope of justice and yet we have not even heard its name. The Government had not the least hesitation in stopping the Nagar-kirtan and marriage processions of the Hindus accompanied by music at various places which encourages the ferocious mullahs and maulvis to plunder Hindus, burn their houses, and insult their women. The Hindus should now wake up and realize that forbearance, loyalty, and sacrifice are proving injurious to them and that if the existing situation continues they will soon be blotted out of existence. If our religion is as dear to us as our lives, if the glory of the memories of brave Banda, Maharana Pratap and Shivaji is still to be found in us let us declare unanimously that if the Government persists in its policy of partiality we will give up our love of life and enter the battle-field for sacrificing our lives at the altar of freedom. We will be prepared to face the severest repression, lathis, daggers, spears, and swords but will never allow our religious freedom to be usurped so long as there is any life left in our bodies.

Report of Currency Commission.

Referring to the "far-reaching" recommendations made in the report of the Royal Commission on Indian Currency and Finance regarding the creation of a central bank, the Pioneer writes:—It is to be hoped that the significance of these changes will be generally recognized, for they involve in certain respects legislation which must be undertaken forthwith and it would be greatly to be regretted if so beneficial a measure were impaired or even destroyed by a lack of appreciation both of its reality and its wisdom.

Bribery.

In the course of the third instalment of a series of articles on bribery the Sainik says:—Of what use is the Government which cannot remove the corruption of its own servants? The most important cause of bribery is the present system of administration which is bad and vicious. How can bribery be stopped when the Government itself is bad? Government will do nothing to stop bribery. The people should, therefore, themselves take up the task of removing the evil by creating strong public opinion against those who offer and receive bribes.

Currency Commission's Report.

Commenting on the Report of the Royal Commission on Indian Currency the Leader writes:—We are not at all free from doubt, in spite of the arguments advanced by the Commission, if the stabilization of the exchange value of the rupee at 1*s.* 6*d.* will be advantageous to India. The arguments advanced by Sir Purshotamdas in favour of the 1*s.* 4*d.* rate are weighty and will appeal more to Indian public opinion than those of the majority. The recommendation for the issue of new notes to which no obligation for conversion into silver rupees should be attached, if accepted, is calculated to give rise to considerable misgiving among the people. Whatever practical and economic advantages there may be in this scheme, we have no doubt that its acceptance will shake the confidence of the public in the currency system. There will be neither gold currency nor silver currency, but virtually only paper currency. Silver will be only available for small change. We regard the recommendation about the establishment of a central bank as essentially sound. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The report of the Commission is as dull as the proverbial ditch water and will probably stagnate in some pit as has been the lot of the Fowler, Chamberlain, Smith and other currency commissions. Commissions and committees come and go, but India cannot get a sympathetic hearing for her apparently inarticulate voices and plaints either in Simla or in Downing Street. Quixotic schemes are hatched but no chickens come out of them. Now that the economic effects of the strike are beginning to be felt, there is a natural suspicion in India that the Currency Commission Report gives preponderant advantage to British interests. The Aj remarks that although the report is a thoughtful production it is disappointing for Indians. It has shown greater regard for the interests of Britain and Europe than those of India. On the whole, India would have benefited through the introduction of gold currency. The arrangements recommended by the Commission will result only in paper money being left in the country in critical times. It is doubtful whether the exchange rate of the rupee proposed by the Commission can be maintained in such times. The paper currency can be a sound currency only when the Government is national and is responsible to popular representatives, which is by no means the case in this country. In these circumstances we can never support the new policy which will only increase our helplessness and we trust that representatives of the people will vigorously oppose it in the Legislative Assembly. In another article the paper says: The public will lose faith in Government if the recommendations regarding the currency system are accepted. The best way to retain the confidence of the Indian public is to open a public mint either for gold or silver in this country. The Anand remarks: The increase in the exchange value of the rupee will hamper the development of the country's trade and commerce and multiply the difficulties of the public. It is, therefore, natural for the Indian public to share the view of Sir Purshotamdas that the Currency Commission has increased the exchange value of the rupee in the interests of Lancashire.

Ban on Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje.

The order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta against Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Dr. Moonje has evoked strong and bitter protests in the entire Hindu press. The papers call attention to the pacific disposition of Pandit Malaviya and refuse to believe that his presence or speeches could ever lead to breach of peace. A number of papers also regard the order as a fresh proof of Government's partiality towards Muslims in that no similar action has been taken against Muslim leaders like Sir Abdur Rahim and Mr. Ghaznavi. The Aj says: The Hindus cannot but interpret the order as partiality. It is a grave injustice to ban the Pandit's entry into a place where anti-Hindu Muslim leaders like Sir Abdur Rahim and Haji Ghaznavi incessantly embitter Muslim feeling against the Hindus. We hope that the whole of India with one voice will protest against this glaring partiality and terrible injustice. In another issue the paper writes: The attempt to interdict Pandit Malaviya's entry into Calcutta under the pretext of preventing the spread of communal hatred is an abuse of law, an insult to India, an attack on liberty of speech and an indisputable proof of the perplexity of the authorities. The Pratap remarks: This is the limit of petty-mindedness aud partiality. It is no wonder if the Bengal authorities who are partners of secondary rank in Abdur Rahim, Ghaznavi and Co. should see the possibility of Hindu-Muslim estrangement in the visit to Calcutta of a leader of a peaceful disposition like Pandit Malaviya. The Vartman congratulates Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya on violating section 144 and remarks that the laurels won by him represent the victory of the whole country. The Abhyudaya writes: The action of the Government shows that its madness is increasing day by day. Every thoughtful person will be of opinion that the imposition of a ban on Pandit Malaviya constitutes a blunder on the part of the Government. Not only every Hindu but every Indian considers the order to be insulting. We have no doubt that the Government will meet with discomfiture in this matter. The enforcement of section 144 in this manner amounts to the murder of law and justice. The Anand says that several Maulvis toured the whole of Bengal and incited the Muslim population and Muslim leaders too made venomous speeches against Hindus in Calcutta, but the Government did not raise its voice against them. On the other hand, it has interdicted the entry of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and of Dr. Moonje into Calcutta. Is this justice? Is this impartiality? The Bharat remarks: Those who are acquainted with Pandit Malaviya's political views and his peaceful disposition will declare that either the Government has gone mad or its bias in favour of the Muslims has reached the limit. If the Government suppresses the Hindus in this manner the responsibility for the terrible consequences of this action will be on the bureaucracy. The Garhwali remarks that the action of the Bengal Government supports the views expressed by Lord Olivier in the Times and will not lead to peace. There is no doubt that it betrays the partiality of the Bengal Government and proclaims the bankruptcy of its statesmanship. The Surya says: This action of the Bengal Government is absolutely foolish and furnishes a glaring example of partiality. The warning given to Pandit Malaviya not to disobey the order amounts to murder of courtesy and good manners.—So far very few Muslim papers have commented on the subject. While deploring the ban the Hamdam exhorts Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje to refrain from making such speeches as they recently delivered in Calcutta and which are sure to incite Hindus against Muslims. Some of Pandit Malaviya's recent speeches evince a spirit of peacefulness and tolerance, but it is a pity that whenever Dr. Moonje opens his lips he always incites the Hindus against Muslims. In another article the paper says:—If the Chief Presidency Magistrate exercises his legal powers against Pandit Malaviya excitement among the Hindus is bound to increase and the situation will grow worse. The Sada-i-Muslim deplores Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's action in refusing to obey the order forbidding his entry into Calcutta and says that the Government can itself judge the extent to which this action will lower its prestige in the eyes of Indians. If the Government of Bengal passed this order after deep deliberation it is its duty to punish adequately those who break it, otherwise the peace of the country will be endangered for ever. The Oudh Akhbar thinks that the Bengal Government's action will hinder the restoration of peace and order in the country, and says:—Pandit Malaviya's peaceful nature and speeches have been admired even by Muslims and the people of Calcutta have always welcomed him in these disturbed days as an apostle of peace. Dr. Moonje too only urged the Hindus and Muslims to organize themselves. Surely Government cannot take exception to this. The Krishna says that the application of section 144 against Pandit Malaviya really means the gagging of the entire Hindu community. The Haqiqat says:—By infringing the Government order Panditji has not only lowered the prestige of Government but displayed moral courage which has shed lustre on his popularity and reputation. Has not the Government realized its folly even after Panditji's visit to Calcutta and his bold speech there?

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Bharat Jiwan writes:—If a Hindu speaker or writer says anything to instil life into his lifeless brethren the Government forthwith gags him. But a Muslim leader or anybody else can say anything he likes with impunity. The other day a Muslim fakir stated at the meeting of the Jamiat-ul-Ulema in Bombay that Muslims were prepared to cross swords with Hindus, that if Malaviyaji wished he might ask five hundred Hindus to fight with five hundred Muslims and then see who left the field. We want to know what this means. Is this not likely to create racial hatred and blood-thirsty excitement? Is it because the speaker is a Muslim that he is not arrested? If this is not the "policy of partiality" of the Government what else is it? Commenting on the manifesto issued over the signatures of Mr. Zahur Ahmad and Maulana Vilayat Husain the Abhyudyaya remarks:—This manifesto can have only one object, namely, that the Collector of Allahabad may get frightened by the idle threat of the Muslims and may take it that if the Hindus play music before mosques the Muslims will oppose it at the risk of their lives. Let us see where Mr. Crosthwaite hides himself through fear of this threat. The Arya Mitra refers to the reports of the abduction, murder and the violation of the chastity of Hindu women by goondas and regrets that nothing is being done by the Hindus to counteract these atrocities. It exhorts Hindu women themselves to take steps in their self-defence and remarks:—If any goonda looks at you with an evil eye take his eyes out and if he extends his hand towards you cut it. In another article the paper remarks that the resolutions passed by the Arya Samajists at their meetings held on July 25, ought to have made it plain to the Government that its violation of the pledge of religious neutrality and impartiality by stopping nagarkirtan processions has caused grief to the Arya Samajists and to bring home to it that if justice is not done they will be prepared to undergo all kinds of sacrifices. Proceeding the paper says:—The entire Hindu population is with the Arya Samajists. However, passing of resolutions is not enough. They should even now devise means for the success of a non-violent movement if it is ever launched out. The Arya Samajists should be ready to translate into action every word of the resolutions passed by them and to sacrifice even their lives in the defence of their religion. The Arya Musafir says that the Government of India has furnished an indubitable proof of its partiality for Muslims by imposing restrictions on the Arya Samajist nagarkirtans and the playing of music before mosques. The Arya Samaj is a living community and so long as a single child of it is alive the Arya Samajist nagarkirtans cannot possibly be stopped while Muslims continue to observe their Moharram and Bakrid joyfully. The Aj heartily supports the protests of the Arya Samaj against the stoppage of their nagarkirtans at various places and condemns the official policy which countenances such unjustifiable actions. It points out that when the followers of all other creeds can propagate their teachings without let or hindrance it does not stand to reason that the Arya Samaj alone should be deprived of this right. Al-Bashir regards the attitude of the Hindu press as unreasonable and says:—Since the inauguration of the reforms scheme communal prejudice has been accentuated. After the failure of the non-cooperation movement the leaders who sought fame and honour found an easy means of winning eminence by fanning communal hatred. The question of music before mosques though ostensibly a religious one has in fact been raised to secure leadership and success at the elections.

The Land Revenue and Agra Tenancy Bills.

The Leader criticizes the attitude of the zamindars with regard to Land Revenue Bill and says:—By their unwise action the zamindars have injured none but themselves and have thrown away valuable rights which were being conceded to them. The concessions might possibly be regarded as too generous by a democratic section of Indian politicians. But the zamindars by their action showed that they would not look at them. We are sorry for them. The Sainik writes: The message which the Governor of the United Provinces sent on July 29 in connexion with the Agra Revenue Bill enable many of our brethren (zamindars) who live in fool's paradise to realize their helplessness. In dealing with the tenants they should act on the principle of "mutual aid" and not on the pernicious doctrine of "struggle for existence." We deplore the timorousness of the Government for in spite of its wish to grant occupancy rights to all tenants it could not do so for fear of zamindars. Is there any limit to such weakness? The Government could have carried out its wish with the help of Swarajists. It has given concessions to zamindars after cutting the throats of occupancy tenants. The Governor has displeased everybody. If he had the moral courage to act on his opinion he could have pleased at least the tenants and the Swarajists. The Governor's message has convinced the zamindars that the councils are a mere sham. By the use of his special powers the Government can set at naught the opinion of the whole council. The welfare of the rich and the poor, the kisans and the zamindars, princes and subjects lies in the establishment of Swaraj. The Aj says that a fresh example, if one was still needed, of the hollowness of reforms has been furnished by the action of the Governor of these provinces in sending messages to the Legislative Council recommending the passage of the Agra Tenancy Bill and the Land Revenue Bill on certain specified lines. "These orders" show that public opinion has no value and that the councils are mere toys to wheedle children. The action of the Governor implies that the Legislative Council has no more importance than that of a mere advisory body. The co-existence of an autocratic ruler and a representative body is an impossibility and the attempt to render it possible only proves to be an insult to the people and promotes discontent. Al Adl thinks that the Tenancy Bill will not help much in improving the relations of zamindars and tenants. In enforcing this Act the apparent aim of the Government is to stop ruinous litigation and frequent ejectment. If the Government succeeds in achieving this object the Act will prove to be an invaluable blessing to the country. The Aziz-i-Hind regrets that the policy of Government was consistently hostile to the zamindars and says:—A complete hold of the Swarajists over the tenants and destruction of the influence of the zamindars will have a bad effect on the next elections. Commenting on the Governor's message recommending reconsideration of certain amended sections of the Agra Tenancy Bill Al Khalil remarks:—At this stage of the council proceedings this message was altogether unconstitutional. It shows that the council and its discussions are a mere plaything, that constitutional reforms are a mere farce and that Government's proposals have to be carried out literally. Government may well take pride on the passage of this Bill, but the zamindars should take a lesson from it for the future.

Viceroy's speech.

Commenting on the speech delivered by Lord Irwin at the Chelmsford Club the Hridaya accuses Government of following a pro-Muslim policy and remarks: Lord Irwin has supported the authorities instead of warning them and condemning the inaction and negligence displayed by them. His Excellency may refute the charge that the Government derives satis faction from the communal riots, but we cannot help stating that British rule in India is based on communal riots and that the Government does not want that there should be unity between the Hindus and Muslims. The Mashriq commends Lord Irwin's speech at the Chelmsford Club to those who charge Britain with following a policy of "divide and rule" and says:—Does not the speech show that the accusation is wholly wrong? Even after hearing the words of Lord Irwin can any one say that religious disturbances are not a cause of trouble to Government?

Indian States.

The Muslim press is indignant over the news regarding the Government's communication to the Nizam as published in the Daily Mail of Bombay. The Hamdam says that if the news is correct it would appear that Lord Reading's repressive policy towards Indian states is still being followed. We wonder how His Excellency the Viceroy has been induced to make complaints regarding the internal affairs of Hyderabad when so far as treaties and agreements are concerned the relations between the Nizam and his Government and the British Government stand on the same footing as those between the latter and the rulers of Afghanistan and Nepal, who have full liberty and power to act as they like in their internal affairs. Charges of sale of offices, corruption of judicial officers, and ill-treatment of brothers, sisters, daughters, jagirdars and zamindars, are so vague that they can be levelled against any ruler. So far as the propagation of Islam is concerned the Government of India should not have any cause of complaint inasmuch as it itself spends lakhs of rupees over missionaries every year. The real cause of these charges is that the dismissal of the European officers one by one has annoyed the Government. The Medina sarcastically observes that the appointment of black-skinned men in place of white-skinned ones on high posts is certainly a sin for which every Indian state from one end to the other should be blown out with guns. If the ultimatum had ended only with this "white" demand it would have aroused suspicion in the minds of Indians and it is for this reason that concocted charges of taking presents, doing injustice to petty jagirdars, following a wrong system of administration and excesses of state servants have been tacked on to it. Lord Irwin has lost no time in gagging those who charge the Government of India with partiality for Muslims. We congratulate the Government of India on its prescribing the remedy of the appointment of English officials for the betterment of the Hyderabad state, but there are some perverse persons in India and probably in the majority who say :—Huzoor, better cure the ailments of the places under your control, the states will look after themselves. The Aj expresses the hope that the Government of India will not be frightened by the threat of the Muslim Outlook into abandoning the performance of its duty to get reforms effected in the administration of the Hyderabad State. Referring to the allegation that the Nizam has spent lakhs of rupees in the propagation of Islam the Vartman remarks :—The pecuniary help given by the Nizam to excitable mullahs and maulvis has spoilt them and they have tried by fair means or foul to propagate Islam. The Nizam should have withdrawn his hand when Hindu-Muslim tension was found to be increasing. The Anand remarks :—There is no doubt that the Nizam's administration is most irresponsible and that his Hindu subjects have to undergo great sufferings on account of his fanaticism. Barring the question of the employment of British officials we are of opinion that all other decisions of the Government are proper and the Nizam should reform his administration in the light of the orders of the Government of India. Otherwise the day will not be far off when the British Government will have to dethrone the Nizam in order to destroy fanaticism and despotism.

The Indian National Union.

Commenting on the proposal of Pandit Motilal Nehru for the establishment of the Indian National Union the Bharat remarks :—We also want that the Hindu-Muslim quarrels may soon be ended, but the object for which our Congress moderates and swarajists want to end them is not right. We think it is impossible to end the quarrels without sangathan and fear that by the establishment of this new union some other pact may come into existence to destroy the Hindus. All these schemes which have hitherto emanated from the swarajists' factory have proved foolish and useless. We request our countrymen to beware of swarajists schemes. The Medina warmly welcomes the manifesto issued by Pandit Motilal Nehru and Maulana Abul Kalam Azad but deplores that the bigoted and blind Arya Samajist press has not welcomed this auspicious movement with the same delight. It says :—The plight to which India has been reduced by the shuddhi movement of the Arya Samajists, the sangathan of Malaviya and the tanzim and tabligh movements is disgraceful for Indians and no self-respecting and sober man will ever like to live in a country where people can sacrifice their freedom, nationalism and humanity for the sake of the horns of cows, the branches of the peepal tree, the leaves of the tulsi plant, the sound of drums and pieces of bamboos used in making taziaz. The communal conflict has cost both Hindus and Muslims dearly. The Haqiqat warmly supports the Union but is sceptical about its success.

Political propaganda.

The Aj publishes "An appeal to the teachers of the country" over the signature of Babu Sitla Sahai, Secretary, United Provinces Khadi Board, who exhorts the teachers of primary and middle schools to instil patriotism into the minds of children in their charge and to persuade all people about them in view of their poverty to give up the use of foreign cloth and patronize khaddar so as to provide useful employment to the poor and the idle in the countryside. The Vivek publishes an article under the heading "A dream" by Srimati Uma Nehru in which "Mother India" is represented as deploring the exploitation of India by foreigners, which has resulted in the utter physical, economic, moral and social degradation of its inhabitants. "The Indians gladly tolerate the insults offered by their rulers and their kicks, the plunder of all material wealth, their moral ruin and the trampling of political rights, but consider the fulfilment of the wishes of their brethren as against their religion and prestige.....These eyes have witnessed the fall of many civilizations and the extinction of many great nations, but they have never beheld thirty crores of civilized, industrious and brave people dancing like puppets in this manner in the hands of a handful of foreigners. The foreign rule is destroying my children in the same manner in which moths enamoured of light are destroyed by it."

Agra University Bill.

The Leader strongly criticizes the Agra University Bill and says :—The needs of the country require the best type of modern universities—unitary and teaching universities—well staffed and well equipped. Three-quarters of a century ago, when Universities were first founded, the needs of the country were different. These institutions have long outgrown their days of usefulness. In our considered opinion the supporters of the Agra University Bill have done no service to the province. At this stage of advance in university education we regard the Agra University Bill as a retrograde measure. The Aj remarks that it is a mere waste of time and money to increase the number of universities at the present time. If even three-fourths of the money spent on higher education were devoted to primary and industrial education much real good could be done to the province and the country in these days of unemployment. It is surprising that both administrators and legislators are heedlessly making provisions to increase the number of the educated unemployed, but are making no earnest efforts to reduce unemployment.

Music before mosques.

The question of music before mosques continues to be discussed on communal lines. Referring to Sir Ali Imam's advice to the Muslims of Bihar not to insist on the stoppage of music before mosques the Hamdam says that it is not one of those who regard the Muslim demand for the stoppage of music before mosques at all times as justified. The Shariat does not enjoin Muslims to insist on the stoppage of music, but when the playing of music is intended as an insult to Islam the religious injunction of the Muslim on the subject also undergoes a change. Sir Ali Imam's advice is worthy of being followed by every Muslim, but it is not the question of music before mosques, but the offensive spirit of the Hindus which is really responsible for the present tension. Even if the Muslims give up this question there is no guarantee that the Hindus will not set up another claim with a view to assert their supremacy.

Reforms.

Commenting on Lord Birkenhead's reference to Reforms the Mashriq says:—To grant further reforms without giving equal rights to the Hindus and the Muslims will be to court disturbances and to furnish material for a mutiny. Both the communities are entitled to equal rights. Local bodies and Legislative Councils bear witness to the fact that the treatment which is being accorded to the Muslims is unjust and unholy. The Government should either revert to the constitution which was in force ten years back, or should grant equal rights to the two communities. It is of primary importance that no Indian should be put in charge of a district. Disturbances are created in the districts which are in charge of Muslims. Our opinion that this country does not deserve self-government is receiving confirmation from all quarters.

Lord Olivier's letter.

Commenting on Lord Olivier's letter the Najat remarks:—The unfortunate Indians do not understand that Government neither favours Hindus nor sympathises with Muslims for it shapes its policy in accordance with the exigencies of the situation. In current matters it favours and helps the community that serves its interests better. It is essential that sensible Hindus should understand this for if they believe in Lord Olivier's statement they are bound to be inclined towards Government.

Muslims affairs.

Commenting on the decision of the Shias of Lucknow to wait upon the Viceroy with a deputation to request him to warn Ibn Saud against perpetrating atrocities in the Hedjas the Najat says that excepting the Shias few Muslims of other denominations will agree with the decision which has been arrived at in the Lucknow meeting. This being the case it is nothing short of fraud and deception to make this request on behalf of the general Indian Muslim public. The majority of Muslims do not regard Ibn Saud as a slave of Englishmen like Amir Feisul and the Shah of Iraq and Karbala.

Viceroy's speech.

The Leader writes:—Lord Irwin's address to the Indian Legislature was a model of conciseness. He referred to the communal question in words which were marked by sincerity and which should appeal to the higher sensibilities of members of both the communities. The policy which he has more definitely announced in respect of communal claims and rights will be welcomed by all right-thinking Indians. With one exception, no Local Government appeared to have a policy which can be described as just, strong, and consistent . . . The demand for the stoppage of music before mosques is of recent origin and is a novel one. Several competent Muhammadans have declared that it has not the sanction of their religion. When such an unreasonable and untenable demand is sought to be enforced in some places by violence or threats of violence, it is the clear duty of the Administration to protect the law-abiding citizen in the unhampered pursuit of his lawful avocations and not to yield to threats of force or to follow what may appear to them to be the line of least resistance. The principles of action have been clearly laid down and it is for the local authorities courageously and impartially to enforce them. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The speech of His Excellency has a ring of sincerity about it. He speaks with the feeling of a man who approaches the Indian problem with a certain amount of reverence. There is, however, nothing new or original in the speech for lengthy discussion.

Ban on Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje.

The order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta against Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Dr. Moonje continues to be the chief topic of strong comments in the Hindu press, which generally regards it as evidence of bankruptcy of statesmanship of the Bengal Government and of its pro-Muslim bias. In the course of a note headed "The End of a Comedy" the Pioneer congratulates the Bengal Government on its withdrawal of the charges against Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and says: "It is sufficient that further material for the laughter of the impious has been withheld." The Republic writes:—Nobody could imagine the mild and inoffensive Pandit Malaviya falling a prey to official displeasure. We fail to understand what "blessed" law and order is maintained by gagging and restricting the movements of an accredited leader like Panditji. We appeal to our leaders to sink their trifling differences and liberate our motherland from the clutches of the bureaucracy. The Sainik is surprised that action should have been taken against a leader like Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya whose love of peace even his worst enemies cannot doubt. This action is bound to have an adverse effect on the communal tension. But how could this occur to the Government which resorts to tricks and whose interest lies in the increase of communal tension? These tricks cannot, however, prolong the lease of life of the bureaucracy. The Surya writes:—The efforts made by His Excellency the Viceroy and the Secretary of State to defend the Government against the charge of partiality for Muslims have been nullified by the Bengal Government. Either to please the Muslim members of the Councils or for some other reasons, no action is taken against Sir Abdur Rahim, Dr. Suhrawardy and Mr. Ghaznavi whose speeches and activities are obviously contributing to the growth of communal tension and riots. The Tohfa-i-Hind says:—It is to be regretted that the Bengal Government cannot distinguish between a friend and a foe. Mr. Malaviya is a well-wisher of Government and has always been trying to establish good relations between the rulers and the ruled. The Bengal Government has put an ugly blot on its statesmanship. The Najat says:—

Malaviyaji and his followers have found a good opportunity for the organization of their community and are utilizing their time in carrying on a misleading propaganda for the next Council elections. They call themselves responsivists, but in fact they are trying to lead the people at break-neck speed on the path of treachery to the country. In another article the paper says: The special treatment accorded to Malaviyaji's party clearly indicates that Malaviyaji's personality is above the jurisdiction of law, for he rendered meritorious services during the non-cooperation movement, created discord among Hindus and Muslims, and is expected to lead the votaries of Government at the next Council elections. In view of such a big advantage, why should Government care to respect the law itself and to have it respected by others? It would have been better if it had not applied section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, and saved itself from this humiliation. We can boldly assert that the policy of Government is behind all the activities of Pandit Malaviya and it is on the strength of Government that he is freely displaying his knowledge of law and independence of thought. The preferential treatment accorded to Mr. Malaviya will surely encourage others and increase the chances of Government being discredited. The Medina says that both Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje are sworn enemies of Muslims and prefer slavery under the British to liberty based on equitable relations with Muslims. In their efforts to provoke the Hindus and to defame Muslims they do not scruple to murder truth, fairness and justice. The effect of the action taken against these two leaders will, however, be to make them more popular among the Hindus and to increase the strength of the responsivists and to rout the swarajists at the next elections. The Bedar remarks that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is now in Calcutta carrying on a propaganda for throwing the residents of Arabia into the sea. If, following the example of other patriots, he is courting arrest and imprisonment, he should remember that incarceration for narrow-mindedness and bigotry is quite different from imprisonment for the sake of one's right and freedom. It is his object to create universal aggressive ill-feeling against the Muslims in the minds of the Hindus. Al Khalil remarks:—The bold and open defiance of the order under section 144 by Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje has revealed the true plight of the Government. Their conviction under section 188, Indian Penal Code, cannot remove its weakness. There will be agitation and Government will be faced with greater difficulties because it is not the non-violent non-cooperation movement but the sangathan movement which is backed up by mischief. The Sada-i-Muslim exhorts the Muslims to learn from Pandit Malaviya the way to uphold national honour and to cow down even the most tyrannical Government. By establishing Mahabir dals, akharas and Hindu sabhas the Pandit has been able to defy the most drastic measures of the Government. If Muslims want to bring down the Government to its knees and to acquire strength enough to infringe its laws, the best course for them would be to organize and strengthen themselves and develop a spirit of self-sacrifice for the sake of their community. Commenting on the remark of the Hindu that the Muslim press is jubilant over the ban on Pandit Madan Mohan Malviya, the Hamdam says that no important Muslim journal, except the Muslim Outlook, has viewed this order with approval. The Hindu will, however, have to admit that the sort of speeches which Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje have delivered at various places can be regarded as extremely detrimental to the peace and tranquillity of the country and as such officials could not shirk for any considerable length of time their duty to maintain public peace.

Currency Commission.

Indian papers generally view the recommendations of the Currency Commission with suspicion and express the fear that if given effect to they will benefit British manufacturers at the expense of Indian agriculture and industries and leave paper money alone in the country. The Daylight writes:—The Government of India have laid themselves open to the charge of siding more with the English manufacturers than with the Indian. They have handled the currency affairs in a manner which has raised a not unreasonable suspicion in the minds of the Indian manufacturers and the general public that Indian industrial interests do not receive the attention and sympathy at the hands of the British and Indian Governments that they deserve. This suspicion cannot but be strengthened by the commission not agreeing to fix the ratio at 1*s.* 4*d.* The Aj contends that the exchange value of the rupee proposed by the Currency Commission is not only unnatural but also prejudicial to the interests of India, as it will result in the Indian markets being glutted with foreign goods. The savings accruing to the Government by the adoption of the exchange rate at 1*s.* 6*d.* will be nothing as compared with the loss suffered by the indigenous industries and agriculture. The Surya expresses a similar view. The Hindi Kesari is of opinion that the report of the Commission will accentuate the discontent in India. The recommendation of the Commission regarding the conversion of the proposed new notes will result in the silver currency of the country being replaced by paper currency and all the gold in the country being transferred to foreign countries.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to Lord Birkenhead's remark that the Lucknow Pact had brought with it not peace but a sword and that the system of communal representation tends to stereotype the communal line of cleavage, the Leader writes:—Is it not the duty of British statesmen, as also of Indian nationalists, to strive for the abolition or modification of a system which has admittedly been a fruitful source of mischief? These communal riots, while they are a disgrace to both communities, also discredit the administration. In the course of an editorial article the Adarsha Hindu remarks:—To-day a great calamity has overtaken the Hindu religion. Even in this twentieth century quite a Nadirshahi or Aurangzebshahi (despotism) is rampant. A power is working among the Muslims from one end of the country to another which has kindled in their hearts a fire for the propagation of Islam, with the result that they are determined to destroy the Hindus. At some places riots break out, Hindu houses are burnt, the property of the Hindus is plundered and their villages are destroyed and, at others, Hindu women are abducted and dishonoured and innocent Hindu children are forcibly converted to Islam. Have the Muslims resolved to raise the flag of jehad, to annihilate twenty-two crores of Hindus, and to convert India into a Muslim stronghold? It appears to be so . . . If in the near future efforts are not made for the establishment of a big Hindu league, the Hindu community will only exist in the pages of history and it will be only the Muslims and the Christians who will be seen everywhere in this holy land of India. The Vivek refers to the communal tension in the country and opines that the suggestion of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru to remedy it by means of disenfranchisement will only go to place one more weapon of repression in the hands of the bureaucracy which is sure to abuse it for political purposes. The fresh effort of the Government to promote Hindu-Muslim unity has taken the form of the application of section 144 against Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. We fail to understand how anybody can hope to promote Hindu-Muslim unity by such orders. It can be no matter for wonder if we doubt the honesty of purpose of high and responsible officials who adopt such a course. If the Bengal Government is privy to it, we can only reach the conclusion that either the Government is not honest and does not want to establish harmonious relations between Hindus and Muslims or it does not know the right way to do it. In both the cases our duty is plain, namely, that we should hope for nothing from Government in this connexion and should ourselves strive to settle amicably our disputes. The Gyanshakti opines that although friendship can exist between a Hindu and a Muslim the two communities cannot have one common organization. The Indian National Congress is, therefore, incapable of doing any good to the Hindu community or the country. The Hindus should not waste their time in the Congress but should join the Hindu sabha. Referring to the Hindu allegation that Muslim intelligentia had a secret hand in the Bengal disturbances, the Sada-i-Muslim says that there can be no peace in the country so long as wicked Hindus carry on their propaganda in this way. It is really communities other than the Muslim that are working behind the scenes. Muslims ought to guard themselves against the foul propaganda of the non-Muslims.

Indian States.

The communication of the Government of India to the Nizam continues to be widely discussed, generally on communal lines. Muslim papers warn the Government that any strong action taken against the Nizam will cause serious discontent and agitation among Muslims. Hindu papers, on the other hand, say that in view of the reported mal-administration in the State and especially of the oppression to which Hindus are subjected there, the Government of India would be thoroughly justified in taking severe steps against the Nizam. Referring to the Government of India's statement that its previous communication to the Nizam did not include the charge of the utilization of public money for Islamic propaganda, the Pratap remarks:— The Government of India has been well-advised in making this explanatory statement. In its communication the Government may not have referred to the expenditure on Islamic propaganda but those who are acquainted with the methods of the Nizam are aware of his extravagance in this direction. The Arya Mitra remarks:—It will have to be admitted that the Nizam's administration at present is not satisfactory. The majority of his Hindu subjects are tired of his communal bigotry. The Bharat Jiwan remarks:—The majority of the Indian States are still living in the mediaeval age. They take pride in treating their subjects as brutes and in this respect the Muslim States have earned greater notoriety than the Hindu States. Bhopal, Hyderabad, and other Muslim States have become notorious for their misdeeds. There is no doubt that the Nizam has thoroughly betrayed his imprudence and administrative incapacity. But he has been administered the bitter pill which he needed. Other Indian Chiefs should take a lesson from this and beware. The Sada-i-Muslim contends that the Government of India cannot itself plead not guilty to the charge of the sale of offices, bribery and corruption and of the propagation of religion, which it has levelled against the Nizam. The only fault of the Nizam is that he has demanded the restoration of Berar. If the Government of India takes any action against the Nizam, it will raise to the highest pitch the sorrow and indignation of every Muslim. The Muslims of India should leave no stone unturned to help the Hyderabad State. Referring to the alleged demand for the appointment of Europeans to high posts in the Hyderabad State, the Haqiqat says:—It is evident that the pensioned civilians of British India cannot get better posts than the few prize posts of the State. The Government's object is to entrust the State to the care and management of European officers and thus gradually to deprive the Nizam of his powers. The Oudh Punch compares the Government of India to the monkey who gave a bag of gram to a hungry sepoy on condition that if he ever refused to obey his behests he would have a big piece of flesh from his throat as penalty and says that the only difference between the two is that the monkey's victim was a hungry man, while the victims of the Government of India are Indian States. The bag of gram in their case does not exist in reality, but only in words added before and after their names. At present the piece of flesh has been demanded from the Hyderabad State. The Mashriq tries to refute the charges against the Nizam's Government and says that as a well-wisher of the Government of India it would advise Lord Irwin not to darken his bright regime and to alienate seven crores of Muslims by following such a policy. The Aj remarks that it is the height of cruelty that the Princess of Bastar is not being allowed to marry according to her inclination and those of her mother. Such interference of the Government in the domestic affairs of a princely family is not only wholly improper but also inhuman. It is to be hoped, that Lord Irwin, who is said to be a God-fearing man, will not allow such an injustice.

Indian National Union.

The Bharat insinuates that the proposal of Pandit Motilal Nehru regarding the formation of the Indian National Union is a move, like the formation of the Bengal Pact, calculated to bring about the annihilation of the Hindus and warns the Hindus not to commit themselves to any pact or organization without weighing its pros and cons. The Pratap welcomes the National Union and believes that if it is conducted on the proposed lines it will allay the existing communal tension and promote feelings of nationalism. It is, however, sceptical about the success of the union, as the forthcoming elections are likely to be run on communal lines. Al Barid remarks :—There can be no doubt that this is the only remedy to cure the existing communal disease, but there are most serious difficulties in its way. The rules framed for the members of the proposed union are very useful and essential for promoting fellowship and unity between the two communities but care should be taken that justice is not made the target of bigotry and obstinacy.

Music before mosques.

The Dabir publishes a communication from Khwaja Hasan Nizami to the effect that the question of music before mosques has really no substance in it and that the Aryasamajists have involved the Muslims in it simply with a view to divert their attention from matters of greater importance. If Muslims do not object to the playing of music, all the designs of the Aryasamajists will be frustrated. The Haqiqat exhorts Muslims to prefer Khwaja Hasan Nizami's views to those of Mr. Ghaznavi and says:—It does not become true Muslims to narrow the outlook of Islam and to quarrel with non-Muslims over trifles. If the Muslims do not abandon their obduracy regarding the playing of music before mosques there will be difficulty in the construction of new mosques within the inhabited portions of cities; for it is obvious that in order to please Muslims no restrictions can be imposed on the passage of religious and non-religious processions of non-Muslims through public roads. While welcoming the change in Khwaja Hasan Nizami's views the Arya Musafir says:—There is surely something suspicious in the affair. This sudden change in the views of Hasan Nizami and other Muslim leaders has some significance. Have they received any orders from above that the demand for the stoppage of music before mosques cannot be entertained for long or is it that seeing the patience and forbearance of the Hindus at an end, Muslims have thought it advisable to beat a retreat? The Medina ridicules those Aryasamajists who seek to prove that Islamic scriptures do not prohibit music before mosques and says:—We wish that Hindus decided this matter in accordance with Islamic injunctions; for not to say anything about the jarring music it is laid down in the Shariat that while congregational prayers are going on in a mosque even the Quran should not be read aloud.

Political propaganda.

The Aj refers to the thinness of attendance in the House of Commons on the occasion of the recent debate on India and remarks:—What a fine use they make of their power who hold the destiny of thirty-two crores of people in their hands! Still they are not ashamed to talk of their trusteeship. The sacred duties of Parliament are surely discharged if they support the man on the spot in his arbitrary administration. The fact that Parliament paid greater attention to India during non-cooperation days shows that India will benefit really from non-cooperation and not from co-operation. Under the heading "The Condition of the Country" the Virek publishes sarcastic notes on the military, economic and civil administration and the communal question in the country and says:—The military administration is so efficient that our armies are posted from Egypt to China and are helping in the maintenance and expansion of the British Empire. They crushed the national agitation in Egypt and prevented that country from freeing itself from British suzerainty. What can be a greater glory to our armies than this, that they destroyed other nations and brought them under British domination? We spend about 78 crores of rupees overtly and 10 or 12 crores of rupees covertly over these armies. . . It is true that our armies do not protect our life, property, and honour from the injustices and atrocities of other countries. We are treated as untouchables in every country including England. No country could quietly bear the miserable position which we have within the British Empire itself. But when we are a part of the British Empire and our armies help it so much, why should we find it disagreeable to spend so much money on them and should not hold that the military arrangements of our country are incomparable? The English imperialists have made excellent economic arrangements too. This country has to arrange its industry and products in such a manner as not to injure other parts of the Empire. It can only produce raw material, while the other parts of the Empire turn it into finished products. There is nothing objectionable in this division of labour. It is only with a view to benefit other parts of the Empire that we suffer losses in our imports and exports, for are we not a partner of the Empire? . . . What can be greater disinterestedness than this, that though realizing that our mutual communal wrangles are the greatest source of strength to the foreign rule, Lord Irwin still desires to put an end to them?

The United Provinces municipalities.

Reviewing the United Provinces municipal report for 1924-25 the Aj says that the practice of provincial Government monopolizing the larger portion of the taxation and making grants out of it to the local bodies is undesirable for it seriously affects their position. They have to become dependent upon the provincial Government even for their ordinary needs and the consequent pressure of the bureaucracy upon them becomes so great that their evolution is checked. It would be more natural if the local bodies controlled all the local taxation, including land revenue, and assigned a fixed portion of it to the provincial Government. In another issue the paper holds that it is the Municipal department of the provincial Government which is mostly responsible for the deplorable condition of municipalities specially of their water-works. These water-works are constructed and run on such unbusiness-like lines that they are not only not self-supporting but absorb large amounts of money reserved for other works of public utility such as maintenance of roads. The condition of the municipalities can be improved only if the Government curtails its expenditure on administration, releases the municipalities from their monetary obligations and allows them to carry on their future works on business lines.

Muslim affairs.

The Medina appeals to all Muslims to sink their differences and to adopt a common programme with regard to the Hedjaz problems, as it is the religious duty of every Muslim to strive for the sanctification and freedom of that country. This is a question of life and death for Indian Muslims. The Mashriq complains that Muslims are being treated unjustly by Government. They do not get posts even in the proportion in which the Government professes to appoint them because Government itself does nothing but has to depend upon the reports of its subordinates who consider it their duty to create dissensions between the Hindus and the Muslims and who think that the Muslims and Christians have no right. The only remedy for all this is that the Muslims should agitate for equal rights. In view of their importance Muslims are entitled to more than what is their due on the basis of their proportion of population. The Medina deprecates the idea of Turkey joining the League of Nations, as in its opinion more reliance can be placed on the friendship of uncivilized Russia than on that of the civilized League of Nations. The paper characterizes the League as a band of shroud-stealers.

Election campaign.

The Aj urges that the motion of Mr. Ganesh Shanker Vidyarthi regarding the desirability of the Congress withdrawing itself from the Council elections should be accepted so that this national body may be saved from falling a victim to the communal wave and from arraying itself in opposition to the Hindus and the Muslims in the Councils. If the motion is not accepted, the majority of Hindus too like the Muslims will desert the Congress or it will become only a Hindu political body and its politics will be reduced to mere collecting of crumbs from the bureaucratic table. If the Congress is to be saved, it should be kept aloof from the dirty election squabbles.

Publication of obscene advertisements.

Commenting on the conviction of the Zamindar and the Siasat of Lahore for publishing obscene advertisements, the Hamdam says that as the editors are not responsible for the matter in the advertisement columns, it is unjust to hold them liable for an offence with which they have nothing to do. It is, therefore, necessary that the law should be amended in such a way as to ensure the correct fixing of responsibility.

Foreign affairs.

Commenting on the preliminary conference of the Asiatic League held at Nagasaki the Hindi Kesari remarks:—Although a few Asiatic countries were not represented in the Conference yet it goes without saying that a good beginning has been made. Any opportunity for a mutual exchange of ideas which subject nations may get is welcome. The western nations gaze at the eastern nations with the vulture's eye. They want to devour us. In these circumstances an organization which could bring all the Asiatic nations nearer to one another was a great desideratum. The Pratap publishes a translation of a letter in English sent by 'Raja' Mahendra Pratap from Tibet to Pandit Bhawani Dayal in the course of which he remarks:—I have come to know from a letter of the Dalai Lama that the Tibetan Government is much afraid of the British but it does not regard them to be its masters. It is possible that the Tibetans may have to suffer on account of their present weakness but they are very keen on keeping their freedom unimpaired. At Chando I found that the army was clad in uniforms of modern style and that its armaments were of British manufacture. This gave me an idea of the exploits and the diplomacy of Britain. I had an opportunity of talking to a few educated Tibetans who think that the little help which the British are giving to Tibet is not for its good but in the interests of Britain herself. Besides British demands are increasing day by day which has led the Tibetans to apprehend that one day they may have to pay a huge price for the trifling help given to them by Britain. It is yet time that Tibet was saved from the fate which overtook Burma and Ceylon whose ancient civilization and culture have been destroyed by Britain's selfish designs.

The Viceroy's speech.

Papers of all shades of opinion commend the Viceroy's address to the Legislature for its conciliatory and sympathetic tone but most of them regret that it does not offer any definite and practical solution of the communal problems. The Hindi Kesari remarks that the address must have been disappointing to many who had built great hopes on it. There is no mention in it of any new policy or new scheme. We cannot understand how the Viceroy has thought the 1*s.* 6*d.* rate to be in the interest of the country. Where British and Indian interests clash it is a mistake to expect the Viceroy to take the side of India. The Surya regrets that His Excellency did not indicate definitely his policy regarding reforms, the currency proposals and the conduct of irresponsible officials. His speech does not show that Government will follow a policy of firmness in regard to communal disturbances. The Pratap congratulates Lord Irwin on his remarks regarding new communal claims and says:—The Viceroy has arrived at a right decision on this point for the simple reason that further delay would have resulted in the exposure of the British Government, to discredit and the replacement of British rule by goonda raj. This attitude of the Viceroy has had some effect on a few orthodox Muslim organizations. The somersault taken by Khwaja Hasan Nizami as evidenced by his present advice to the Muslims to give up their obduracy on the question of music before mosques is indeed ascribable to Lord Irwin's attitude. The Bharat Jiwan remarks that the Viceroy's speech was as hollow as a drum. His Excellency appears to be an expert in the art of saying nothing of importance while delivering a lengthy speech. He carefully avoided reference to the real interests and questions of India. So long as Indians do not give up all hope of getting Swaraj as a gift and do not stand upon their own legs, they will continue to hear high-sounding but worthless speeches. Englishmen are ruling India in their own interests. They have come to make money and will continue to do so unless a finger is thrust into their eyes and they are shown the way whereby they may go back to their country. For this India needs unity and endurance. The scramble for crumbs will also have to be given up. The Vartman writes :— Lord Irwin tried to make out that the Government had acted impartially in dealing with communal disturbances and could not venture to say a word against the crooked policy of the British. He scatters flowers from his mouth but there is no trace of scent in them. The Vivek says that there was nothing in the Viceroy's speech which could be regarded as satisfactory from the Indian standpoint. God only knows how long Indians will take to learn that they should not be deluded by the phraseology and sentiments of western politicians but should look for substance in their speeches. His Excellency only reaffirmed the old policy of the Government in regard to various questions. The Aj finds nothing commendable in the Viceroy's speech which, it says, neither gives any clear indication of a policy nor holds out any hopes. " The love of justice " of Lord Reading did not do good to India and there is little likelihood that the God-fearing nature of Lord Irwin will prove more fruitful, the reason being that the country's administration is heartless and is a mere machine devoid of human element. The Viceroy made such observations as he was bound to make in the interests of the " steel frame." His Excellency only echoed the views of the civil service. It appears that the first " righteous " act of the Viceroy will be the raising of the exchange rate of the rupee which will be prejudicial to the interests of India. His Excellency's remarks regarding the communal questions are not free from ambiguity and are self-contradictory. Taken with the statement of the Home Member in the Legislative Assembly in reply to a question they go to show that the rights of citizens will not be considered and that the local usages and customs will continue to hold the supreme place. What these customs and usages are will be decided by local authorities or, in other words, by sub-inspectors who by no means remain uninfluenced by communal bias. This shows that there is little likelihood of communal dissensions coming to an end in the immediate future. The Oudh Akhbar is glad to find that Lord Irwin's address is full of sympathy and sincerity. A perusal of it shows that the noble Lord has the same regard for India's welfare as Indian leaders. This speech neither contains autocratic or soldierly threats of Lord Chelmsford nor the diplomacy and circumlocution of Lord Reading. The Haqiqat remarks :—No sensible man can disagree with the advice given by His Excellency regarding the settlement of communal quarrels. Though the speech is not encouraging it shows that Lord Irwin will try his best and in good faith for the welfare of India. The Hamdam says :—His Excellency's remarks about making India responsible for her destiny would have satisfied Indians if he had announced the visit of a statutory commission just now and had not reminded them of the fundamental duty of Parliament to assist India. The Medina writes :—The general tone of all the speeches which Lord Irwin has so far made is the same as that of the " steel frame," but there are also glimpses of his personal sincerity and open-heartedness. The speech also shows that he possesses zeal for work and earnest desire for serving India. His Excellency's proposals regarding communal tension deserve consideration but some of them will be found difficult to adopt. . . On the whole we find that in making the inaugural speech His Excellency has merely performed a customary function. He had to speak and therefore said something but did not prescribe any efficacious remedy for the ills from which India is suffering.

Ban on Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje.

The withdrawal of the case against Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Dr. Moonje has been hailed with jubilation by the entire Hindu press and is generally attributed to the statesmanship of His Excellency the Viceroy. Some extremist papers, however, remark that it was a deep move on the part of the Government to strengthen the Responsivists in order to ensure the defeat of the Swarajists at the next election. Muslim papers generally observe that this action of the Government will lower its prestige and encourage the sangathanists. Under the heading " End of a Farce " the Leader writes :—We think that the person who most deserves to be congratulated on the withdrawal of the intended prosecution of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Dr. Moonje is His Excellency Lord Irwin. For we do not believe that, left to themselves, the Government of Bengal, with the genius for muddling of which they have recently shown themselves capable, would have acted with such good sense. . . After this farce of abortive proceedings under section 144 we suggest that it is time for provincial Governments and their officers to make a wholesome revision of their notions of the purposes for which that section might be employed by them. The Anand remarks :—The prudence displayed by the Bengal Government in dropping the proceedings will bring satisfaction to the country and Indians of all classes will commend Lord Irwin's tactful handling of the situation. The Abhyudaya writes :—As we had anticipated the Government has suffered humiliation and discomfiture. The arguments advanced by the Government pleader for the withdrawal of the proceedings proclaim the hollowness of the prosecution case. The Aj says that the Bengal Government had committed a blunder under the influence of the enemies of Hindus and so it had to suffer discomfiture as a result of the firmness of the two gentlemen. By disobeying the unjust order these two leaders have infused a new spirit into the whole of the country. This is a very good example of individul civil disobedience. If India ever secures emancipation it will be through such a spirit. What Malaviya has done to-day as an individual, the whole of the country will have to do as a collective body and then swaraj will be attained. The Shakti remarks :—Malaviyaji's triumph constitutes a personal and sectional and not a national victory. It was a move on the part of the Government to coax the Responsive co-operation party and spurn the Swaraj Party. This is the mystery behind the whole conspiracy. The Government has already begun to encourage the party it favours. Let the Swarajists and public beware. Every vote cast in favour of a Responsivist will be a vote given to the Government. The Vivek says that the reason given for withdrawing the case against Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya shows how far incompetency and irresponsibility exist in the administration of the country. Many people wonder whether this affair was the outcome of folly or of diplomacy. Be that as it may there is no doubt that the Government has benefited in many ways from this affair. To increase the strength of communalism, to wreck the influence of the Congress and to bring the moderate members of the responsivist party into the councils are by no means inconsiderable gains. The Desh Bhagat says that the unique passive resistance resorted to by Malaviyaji to protect Hindu rights is a valuable asset for India of to-day. If the Hindu community follows his example whenever Government passes any illegal orders interfering with its religious and human rights no part of the Government machinery will dare to interfere with those rights. The Sadaqat expresses satisfaction over the courage evinced by Pandit Malaviya in successfully infringing the order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta and strongly refutes the charge that Muslim journals are jubilant over the ban. It says that no patriotic person can support orders restricting the movements of national leaders. Though the Muslim community has serious grievances against Hindu leaders of the type of Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje it does not mean that they want their liberty to be restricted. The Najat says that the Muslim press is never devoid of nationalistic feelings. Even its silence or support of the Magistrate's order is based on the same feeling because the Pandit's life never deserved to be called a national one. He cruelly demolished the edifice, the foundation of which was laid by the great national statesmen and which was built by Mahatma Gandhi himself. His speeches have been proved to be a direct incitement to communal dissensions. Any one who admits that the Pandit is to a great extent responsible for the Hindu-Muslim tension cannot protest against the order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate. The Rohilkhand Gazette says :—The Government understands its problems. When it likes it lets loose Malaviya and Moonje to kindle the fire of communal feelings and when its own interests require it, it issues prohibitory orders against them. The Oudh Akhbar says that by admitting its mistake the Government of Bengal has evinced its love of justice and fair play. The Hamdam regards the withdrawal of the case as a weakness of the Bengal Government which will lead people to believe that the Government has been overawed by Pandit Malaviya's personality and that all the tall talk about "law and order" is a mere sham. The Chief Presidency Magistrate's order against the Pandit was no doubt mistaken but the withdrawal of the proceedings before hearing him is a greater blunder for which the Government of Bengal will have to pay dearly. The Medina remarks :—The Government has laid down its arms, but it surely deserves to be congratulated on this course of action. It has realized the strength of Sangathan. The way in which it has eaten the humble pie will, no doubt, be a smart blow on its prestige, but the institution of a case for the violation of its orders would have created a series of difficulties and the Government has chosen the lesser evil. Al Khalil remarks :—Law has been trifled with in an unprecedented manner. It is however satisfactory that since the enforcement of section 144 riots have stopped.

Currency Commission.

The recommendations of the Currency Commission continue to be criticized vehemently, being generally regarded as a move to help British industries at the expense of India and to drain the country of gold and silver. The papers warn the Government that if the proposals regarding the exchange rate and currency notes are adopted it will incur public distrust and will have to face a serious agitation. The Aj emphasizes that the fixing of the exchange rate of the rupee at 1*s.* 6*d.* and the practical inconvertibility of the proposed currency notes are intended to benefit Britain at the expense of India. It urges that such an arrangement will have to be opposed vigorously in the interests of India. If the Viceroy exercises his special powers in its favour despite the opposition of the Legislative Assembly a widespread agitation will have to be organized to impress upon the people how they are being looted. The Bharat Jiwan says that the acceptance of the recommendations of the Currency Commission will result in the replacement of the existing silver currency by paper currency which will aggravate the economic condition of the country. The Indians demanded gold currency and are given the paper currency. This is how they are given stone when they ask for bread. The proposed exchange rate of the rupee will ruin the indigenous industries and will accelerate the process of the transfer of the wealth of India to England. There is not sufficient room in England, otherwise even the soil of India would have been sent there. The Pratap remarks:—We are convinced that the replacement of gold and silver currency by paper currency will remove what little confidence the people still have in the currency policy of the Government, and sooner or later the Government and the people will have to suffer the consequences of such a policy in an aggravated form. We think that the time is not far off when currency notes will be subjected to discount in rural areas and the roots of political discontent will be strengthened by this economic problem. The Vivek points out that the exchange rate of the rupee at 1*s.* 6*d.* will raise the prices of Indian goods and thereby restrict their consumption and that it will go a great deal towards counteracting the effects of the abolition of the cotton excise duty and the grant of subsidy to certain industries in the country. This will show how the Indian trade will be throttled with the chains of gold.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Shankar publishes a signed editorial article in which the writer, Pandit Durga Dutt Pande, says that the Hindus and Muslims are so absorbed in the communal game that they are not in the least aware of the entry of the thief into their house. The thief has stolen all the property and is about to set fire to the house but the owners of the house (Hindus and Muslims) are still quite indifferent to it . . . . The Muslim demand regarding music before mosques has destroyed nationalism in the country. To-day the third party is in high spirits. It scolds us and plumes itself on its success. The Bharat Dharma remarks that the Government which is an adept in the policy of creating divisions has a considerable hand in keeping up the Hindu-Muslim tension. Though this is denied by the Viceroy yet it is being established daily by direct proofs. As long as the Government was partial towards the Muslims they were ready to break the heads of the Hindus on any pretext whatsoever. Now finding a change in Government's attitude the Muslim leaders like Hasan Nizami and others have begun to talk of sympathy and humanity. Now the eyes of both Muslims and the Government have been opened and they are coming to their senses. This is all due to the Sangathan movement. Commenting on the manifesto of Maulana Vilayat Husain and Mr. Zahur Ahmad on the music question the Vivek says that it has now become a part of their religion for communalists to indulge in misrepresentation in connexion with communal questions, otherwise these two gentlemen would not have asserted that it was the custom at Allahabad to stop music before mosques. It points out that their attempt to impress upon the ignorant Muslim masses that the Hindus are trampling upon their rights and are trying to insult Islam is nothing short of deliberately sowing seeds of riots in the country. The Arya Musafir advises the Muslims not to take offence at the sacred exploits of the Prophet which have been described in the Hadises and by the Muslim commentators and says:—Now that the world cannot forget whatever the Prophet has done or what the firm believers like Abu Haraira have written about him it is proper for the Muslims either to bid adieu to their blind faith in him and embrace the Vedic dharma or cultivate the quality of toleration. The Mashriq deplores the indifference of the Government of India towards the grievance of the Muslims of Panipat regarding the stoppage of cow-sacrifice in that town and says:—The Government always does what it thinks proper. It neither cares for the shastras of the Hindus nor for the shariat of Muslims. In Calcutta it ordered the Hindus not to play music before certain mosques and in Panipat it stopped cow-sacrifice. The claim that it does not interfere in religious affairs is untenable. The policy of stopping cow-sacrifice is not sound and will have a bad effect on administration.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an explanation to a correspondent's query the Vivek says that the British Government has spent a very large amount of money in combating the growth of the ideal of nationalism in India. The most common method is to provoke communal feelings in the country. The Brahman and non-Brahman question in Southern India and the Hindu-Muslim question in Northern India have not arisen in their present form of themselves. The Aj says that the Finance Member's speech on the Todhunter Committee's Report shows that he will utilize this report only in increasing taxation and that people cannot hope for any decrease in taxes. It remarks:—It is idle to hope for good days under this administration. On the one hand high prices are being made stable by enhancing the exchange rate of the rupee and on the other the salaries of high officials are being raised and now the Finance Member is thinking of imposing fresh taxes. God alone can protect unfortunate India in these circumstances. The Swadhin writes:—On the one hand the foreigners are slapping us on the face, depriving us of our morsels of food and perpetuating our slavery and on the other mutual dissensions and animosities have developed to such an extent in the political, social and other spheres of our activities that the people scramble for immediate gains regardless of the fact that they are being trodden upon by the foreigners and that it is their duty to sink their mutual animosities and attain swaraj by their united efforts. The Medina commends to the Indian universities the speech delivered by the Earl of Balfour at the Empire Universities Conference and says: Had Indian universities imparted education on the right lines and from the right point of view India would have long ago occupied a position of distinction among the civilized nations. The fact, however, is that these universities are only a recruiting ground for service and as a result India occupies the first place among subject nations. Her existence depends entirely on the will of the foreigners and every department of life is helpless. Educational institutions have been made instruments for accomplishing the sinister designs of imperialism and propaganda in support of the trickery of administration is considered to be an essential part of the educational curriculum and educational methods aim at the waste of life and money.

Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill.

While recognizing the harm done by the dissemination of inflammatory communal publications and the need of adequately punishing their authors the Leader fears that the measure introduced by the Government for the forfeiture of such publications is liable to abuse. It says:—Let it be understood by the Government of India that there is not in this country a widely diffused confidence in the executive, the magistracy and the police such as would lead a publicist to take the view that as there is little risk of improper action by them he can give his assent to a measure of which he generally approves. In the second place it has not been possible for us and many others always to feel confident that both communities are treated equally and impartially by many officers. Therefore, we require to know what precautions will be taken against its abuse before we can support the new Bill. In a subsequent article the paper writes:—After the weighty support accorded by prominent non-official members to the principle of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill the Government were very ill-advised in not acceding to their reasonable and modest request that the Bill should be referred to a select committee. It is such autocratic procedure which irritates and gives a handle to the extremists who lose no opportunity of ridiculing the constitutionalists and making political capital out of such incidents. The Bill is an exceptional measure which vests wide discretionary powers in the executive and is presumably intended to meet an exceptional situation. The powers proposed to be vested in the executive should, therefore, not be of a permanent nature. And it ought to contain safeguards against abuse. The Aj is opposed to the proposed legislation on the ground that it is an encroachment on the freedom of writing and seeks to invest the executive with the powers of the judiciary. It holds that the existing law is sufficient for the purpose and need not be supplemented by special legislation. The Vivek says that the people who have seen how the power to proscribe seditious literature has been abused to put down patriotic literature and writings calculated to throw light on the real political and economic condition of the country can never agree to invest the Government with power to proscribe inflammatory communal writings. Any repressive legislation in a country where section 144 can be applied against an eminent and responsible leader like Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Babu Rajendra Prasad means only a fresh calamity on its people.

Indian States.

The Muslim Press continues to protest vehemently against the attitude of the Government of India towards the Nizam. The Haqiqat says:—Lord Reading's hostile attitude regarding the Berar question has further strengthened the deep conspiracies hatched against the Hyderabad state. Loyalty does not mean that H. E. H. the Nizam should consider himself to be a slave of the British bureaucrats and yield to their legal or illegal demands. It is a folly to expect a slavish attitude from a ruler in authority and thus to deprive him of his legal rights. The demand for the restoration of Berar was quite justified and the usurpation of that province is an open high-handedness on the part of the Government of India. Referring to the charge that the Nizam is spending money in Islamic propaganda the Medina wonders why Muslim states alone should be blamed for supporting religious propaganda when every Christian state in Europe helps missionary societies. The Maharaja of Mysore has appointed a commission regarding cow-slaughter. As the state is the cradle of bigoted Brahmans the findings of the commission may well be anticipated. Is this not religious propaganda? We strongly deprecate this action of the Maharaja and hope that he will not pass a law stopping cow-sacrifice which will hurt Muslim feelings in the extreme.

Indian National Union.

Devanarain Pande, Secretary, Indian Party, writing to the Bharat prophesies that the newly formed Indian National Union is doomed to failure as all the Hindu representatives in the Union are half-Muslims and says that no real work can be done in the country so long as the Swaraj Party continues to exist. The correspondent also reports the establishment of a small organization called the Indian Party by certain young men of Cawnpore and says that by the efforts of this party peace will be established throughout the whole of India within the next ten years and within fifty years the country will attain complete independence.

Indian delegation to the League of Nations Assembly.

The Leader writes: We are not convinced by the Hon'ble the Law Member's defence of the Government's selection of the personnel of the Indian delegation to the League of Nations Assembly. After considering what he has said, we retain the opinion that in that selection due regard was not paid to the self-respect of India which could only be satisfied by the appointment of an Indian as the head of the delegation and by the selection of the best available men as the Indian members.

Indians in the colonies.

In the course of a lengthy letter in the Leader Pandit Benarsi Das Chaturvedi criticizes the Government of India for not publishing the report of the Fiji deputation and says: It would be a hundred times better if the Government of India would plainly tell us that on account of interference from Downing Street the report of the Fiji deputation has been suppressed, than to lead us in that interminable labyrinth of questions and answers in the Legislative Assembly which lead us to nowhere.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the British anxiety owing to the growth of the Russian air force and the establishment of aerial communication between Moscow and Kabul the Najat says :—The growing influence of Russia at Kabul and her help to the Afghans in the shape of airships and airmen clearly show what the intentions of these two countries are. If in this connexion we take into account the British encroachment upon the Frontier territories and the resentment of the Afghans against it it would not be difficult to say that the clouds of danger are rapidly overcasting the horizon and that Russians are being helped by their allies in accomplishing their designs. The Hamdam, on the other hand, advises the British to banish the idea of Bolshevik bogey and the Afghan danger from their minds.

The Viceroy's speech.

Commenting on Lord Irwin's address to the Central Legislature the Bharat remarks :—Lord Irwin's speech does not satisfy us at all. We can admire his eloquence and his literary attainments, but we cannot give him credit for outspokenness. His speech is in the stereotyped bureaucratic fashion characterised by jugglery of words. Although he expressed his keenness for the solution of the communal problem, he could not prescribe an effective remedy for it. Perhaps the first prescription which was communicated to the Bengal Government for experiment was the subjecting of Hindu leaders to insult. The Haqiqat remarks :—The Viceroy is quite justified in saying that so long as communal tension goes on it will produce no good impression on the Reforms Inquiry Commission. We hope that the Hindu-Muslim leaders will heartily respond to the Viceroy's appeal and pass the next three years calmly and peacefully.

Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill.

The Aj says that the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill is a fresh attack on the freedom of writing. Its passage within two days was a farce. The most regrettable thing in this connexion was that those who pose as political leaders of the country accepted the principle underlying the Bill. The Swarajists did well in not attending the Assembly and in keeping aloof from those people who held it right to invest the bureaucracy with power to interfere with the freedom of writing and thereby make encroachments on the elementary rights of citizenship. Inflammatory communal literature could be adequately suppressed under the existing law. The Surya characterizes the Bill as a terrible measure, and says that in view of the fact that the Government already possessed power to inflict the severest punishment on fomenters of communal hatred, the fresh augmentation in its power means that it wants to revive the Press Act. The new measure will be a serious encroachment on the liberty of the press and will increase the high-handedness of irresponsible officials. The Hindi Kesari says that those who know how sections 144, Criminal Procedure Code, and 124A, Indian Penal Code, are being abused frequently can easily understand that the new law regarding the proscription of inflammatory communal publications will also be similarly misused. The Abhyudaya remarks :—Although the Press Act has been repealed, yet the Government is always doing something or other to encroach upon the freedom of the press. We do not think that the proposed legislation will serve any useful purpose. It is idle to expect that the forfeiture of communal literature will put an end to communal disturbances. Communal literature is not at the root of the prevailing tension. The Bill does not provide any guarantee against the misuse by the provincial Governments of the powers to be conferred on them. The Bharat remarks :—Seeing the attitude of the police the public is afraid of giving additional power to it. It is our duty as a matter of principle to protest strongly against an arbitrary law. It is a sin to support such autocracy. The Oudh Akhbar wonders why the Government did not wait for the result of His Excellency Lord Irwin's appeal to political leaders, but passed such a law hurriedly, taking advantage of the absence of Swarajists from the Assembly. It hopes that the officials will resort to this legislation only when warning proves fruitless. The Hamdam urges that the power to proscribe inflammatory communal literature should be exercised with great discretion, specially in cases when action is taken against a paper of one community on the complaint of another community. The Najat approves of the passage of the Bill in view of the present communal situation, but fears lest it should help the local authorities in feeding fat their personal grudges and accomplishing their autocratic designs. As the Government could combat the present evil with the existing laws, the object of the new legislation must be to put further restrictions on the freedom of the press. Al Khalil says :— The measure will strike at the freedom of the press, specially when local authorities are in the habit of doing injustice at the instance of their subordinates influenced by communal spirit. But as the Hindu-Muslim quarrels have developed to a terrible extent and some papers are carrying on communal propaganda, we heartily welcome this law in principle, though at the same time we fear that the powers given by it might be abused. The Arya Musafir says that though the Bill will have no effect on such teachings of the Bible and the Koran as retard the progress of mankind, it may some day be used against the Satyartha Prakash against which the Muslims have raised such a hue and cry.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In the course of an article headed "The Writing on the Wall" calling attention of Muslims to the danger to which Islamic countries are exposed the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—It is now fairly apparent to all that India cannot attain her freedom with this hateful communal jealousy raging within her own boundaries. It is precisely for this very reason that the Anglo-Indian Press and Anglo-Indian statesmen are playing the Muslims against the Hindus. They are siding with the Muslims only to prolong this racial animosity. They are playing this game in India as part of a world game. The Britishers are great imperialists endowed with all the shrewdness and tactics of despots. Their profession of sympathy is only skin-deep. They can, like all imperialists of history, strangle to death those very people whom they now pat on the back. There is nothing called "charity" or "mercy" in the vocabulary of the imperialistic statesmen. Now under these circumstances does it befit the Muslims of India to cross swords with the Hindus? With their interests jeopardised in Egypt, Arabia and Turkey, can they still withdraw the hand of fellowship from the Hindus, and thus retard the cause of India's Swaraj, upon which depends the political emancipation of Asia and Africa? Do they not perceive that they are becoming helpless instruments in the hands of wily foreigners for the furtherance of the latter's scheme of exploitation? In another article the paper takes strong exception to the Leader's article on the proposed Muslim paper to be started by the Maharaja Sahib of Mahmudabad and other Muslim leaders and says:—The proposed paper will, of course, agitate for the protection of the minorities in the Legislatures, Municipalities and District Boards and, perhaps, even the Public Services. If it does so, the dishonest (because thinly-veiled) anti-Muslim policy of the Leader school and the honestly aggressive policy of the Sangathanists will alone be to blame. When a majority organizes itself you cannot expect a minority to take things lying down. Even worms turn and the Muhammadans are far from worms. In the course of two editorial notes the Medina says :—Is there any Hindu newspaper which does not publish in every issue, under inflammatory headings, reports of the violation of the modesty of Hindu women? Although half of these reports are false and are published for propagandist purposes, yet we have to hang our head in shame seeing that Muslims are mixed up with these disgraceful events or reports. Islam ordains the severest punishment for adultery and Muslims should endeavour to put a stop to such cases. Unless such occurrences are necessary for Sangathanist propaganda, the Hindus too have a duty to perform. Outrages on the modesty of women are due to social evils in the Hindu community and the non-observance of purdah. "If you expose your gems in the open market there is nothing to be wondered at if some thief, be he a Hindu or a Muslim, tries to decamp with them. See how fallen is the moral condition of European countries? There such pious persons as content themselves with one wife will be found to be rare.

The want of purdah is also the root cause of the deplorable cases of abduction in India. These cases are increasing with the length of British rule. The first step should be to make the Hindu women observe purdah. If this suggestion is not acceptable, then inculcate shamelessness like that of Europe. Sangathan (organization) is not the remedy, for in spite of so much organization and regulations in Europe chastity does not possess the value of even a potsherd there." The Desh Bhagat says that the United Provinces Government's reply to the question regarding the order of Mr. Jafri to Mr. Ram Sarup to leave his bed and stand respectfully when the procession of Tazia passes before his house shows that the Government has surely a hand in all the communal disturbances which take place in the country; otherwise no responsible Government can dare to give such silly replies in such cases. Will Lord Irwin in one of his speeches throw some light on this reply of the United Provinces Government and show if there is any difference between his and the United Provinces Government's angle of vision?

Ban on Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Dr. Moonje.

The Shankar remarks that the withdrawal of proceedings against Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Dr. Moonje represents the victory of the doctrine of individual civil disobedience and that the path for Swaraj will have been paved the day the entire Indian population has understood the full significance of this doctrine. The Bir Hindu thanks the Government for withdrawing the cases against Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje and says that the Muslim League which passed a resolution expressing joy at the passing of the prohibitory orders against them must have observed mourning and felt somewhat crest-fallen at the withdrawal of the cases. In future bodies like the Muslim League ought to give proof of their weakness and meanness by supporting every proper and improper act of the Government. The Tohfa-i-Hind says:—The ban on Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje was an insult to "these revered personalities" and by rectifying the mistake of the Government of Bengal the Viceroy has enhanced the prestige of Government and the reputation of the Crown for justice. It is regrettable that Muslim members did not join the deputation that waited on His Excellency the Viceroy, and in so doing they were influenced by the Muslim Press. This shows that there has been a great change in the mentality of Muslims, although Islam does not deny freedom of speech to any one. The Sada-i-Muslim contends that Pandit Malaviya's civil disobedience and the withdrawal of the case against him constitute really the triumph and not the defeat of the Government of India because its action has strengthened the chances of the success of the Pandit's party at the next elections. It wants to make Pandit Malaviya the uncrowned king of India. It is, therefore, the duty of every Indian to support the Swarajists and not to let any member of Pandit Malaviya's party succeed at the next elections. The Sarfaraz says:—Encouraged by the bold attitude of Malaviyaji who was afraid of even mentioning the name of "civil disobedience" Mr. Gandhi has proclaimed that Malaviyaji's triumph is the triumph of the country. We hope that the Government will realize that the civil disobedience movement is still alive and when the time comes every citizen of this country will be forced to take part in it. But if such an opportunity ever comes Malaviyaji will not be prepared for the "civil disobedience" of which Mr. Gandhi is dreaming. If Malaviyaji had not disobeyed the order of the Chief Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta, the cowardice and degradation of the Hindu creed would have been exposed.

The Swaraj Party.

In the course of a lengthy article vehemently criticizing Lala Lajpat Rai's letter to Pandit Motilal Nehru the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The Lala leaves the Swaraj Party in the hour of its need, because he is not its friend. He joined the party at a time when he needed it more than it needed him . . . Apparently the Lala chose to exploit the party so long as it suited him. Young India expected something better from one of its veterans . . . The Lala will serve neither the Hindu community nor India by converting the Legislative Assembly into a fighting den of the Hindu Sabha-cum-Muslim League. If the Swarajists refuse to help the Lala to pursue this short-sighted policy, it is because they have the interests alike of the country and the community at heart. The Leader writes:—Pandit Motilal Nehru's reply to Lala Lajpat Rai is a characteristic outburst. Could anyone disagree with the great man without running the risk of being stigmatized, in effect if not in terms, a fool or a knave, if not both? The abuse by Pandit Motilal Nehru is the penalty which Lala Lajpat Rai has to pay for having walked into his parlour eight months ago. The lesson that emerges from the latest episode in the history of that wonderful party is that everyone should beware of it. India is not near Swaraj, she is farther away from it on account of the Swaraj Party. We dare not prophesy, but we should be surprised as well as saddened if the electors will renew their confidence in this party. The Aj remarks:—It passes our comprehension how the Lalaji will justify his secession from the Swaraj Party and joining the Independents when he has so often expressed his strong disapproval of "acceptance of offices." It was under his presidentship of the special session of the Congress held at Calcutta that the non-cooperation movement was launched out for the first time in the annals of Indian history and to-day he is becoming an advocate of full and whole-hearted cooperation. We are inclined to attribute the recent change in his views to his being overpowered by the desire to win for the Hindu community the favour of the bureaucracy. There is no doubt, however, that his secession will be a severe blow to the Swaraj Party. Despite our differences with this party, our sympathies spontaneously go to it seeing that it is being attacked by the bureaucracy and its coadjutors combined. Al Khalil remarks:—A man of even ordinary commonsense can say that Lala Lajpat Rai's severence from the Swaraj Party is due to Hindu-Muslim differences. His proposal will not only shake the very foundations of the Congress, but it is bound to transform the Legislative Assembly into a communal battle-field. This discloses the hollowness of Lala Sahib's patriotism. The Haqiqat says that the crushing reply given by Pandit Motilal Nehru to Lala Lajpat Rai regarding Council entry must have made him realize the weakness and mistake of his policy. Rapid change of views is Lala Lajpat Rai's old weakness. It will be advisable for the lion of the Punjab to lie hidden behind the bushes of the Hindu Sabha.

Political propaganda.

In the course of its editorial article written in honour of the birthday anniversary of Lord Krishna the Hitaishi remarks:—O Lord, to-day Mother India is devoutly invoking you and her eyes are eager to see you. She is no longer able to bear injustice and oppression and in her weak and decrepit condition she is anxiously awaiting the fulfilment of your pledge that whenever injustice and irreligion prevail in India you would reincarnate yourself and establish righteousness. O Lord, is there further delay in your incarnation? Has not the cup of immorality and sin been yet filled to the brim? Have not inequality and injustice replaced equality and justice? Come and bring the misguided and indolent Indians to the right path and once more convert India into a paradise. The Aj publishes an emotional article under the heading "the coming one" by an anonymous writer who says that all religions have promised the advent of a Messiah at some future time. He comes when a few "beings of clay" looking upon themselves as God destroy the children of God and adorn the bosom of the mother Earth with innumerable pillars of bones. He comes when man forgets himself and becomes a rakshas (demon) and destroys his own brethren. He has already appeared in the form of Christ, Muhammad and Krishna. He came when his votaries and devotees were encompassed with the darkness of utter despair as at the present day, when the poor and their rights were being "murdered" as at the present day, when the people had been deprived of every sort of liberty as at the present day ..... Tolstoy died waiting for him and Gandhi is eagerly awaiting his advent. Gandhi initiates with water. The coming one will initiate with fire. Gandhi prescribes peace. The coming one will prescribe war. He will come and with his advent will be humbled the pride of brute-force and then peace will reign supreme in the world.

The Election campaign.

The Abhyudaya remarks:—The interests of the country, society and the nation demand that the Congress should not contest the elections. Such of the Congressmen as want to contest the elections should do so as Independent and not Congress candidates, whereas those who are not themselves candidates for election to the legislatures should refrain from participating in the elections. This is the only means of saving the Congress and upholding its honour. The Shankar regrets that the Congress has involved itself in the elections and remarks that the strength of the Congress lies in keeping aloof from the bureaucracy. The nearer the Congress goes to the bureaucracy the weaker will it become. The best course for the Congress to follow is to devote itself to village organization, spinning and the propagation of khaddar and withdraw its candidates from the elections. The Aj also holds that the Congress should keep itself aloof from the elections. If the Congress itself does not participate in the elections, but allows the various parties composing it to contest them, it will deal a blow to its own organization.

The Bharat remarks that the lack of confidence of the Hindus in the Congress is attributable to the fact that it has always helped non-Hindu organizations and rendered the Hindus weak and worthless. Unless the Congress abandons this policy it will be incapable of doing any good to the Indian nation. The situation demands that the unholy Lucknow and Bengal pacts should be burnt. Hindu-Muslim unity is impossible so long as the system of communal representation continues to exist. It is improper that the interests of 23 crores of Hindus should be sacrificed for the protection of the Congress edifice built on a sandy foundation. The best course for the Congress to follow in the existing circumstances is to leave the election of the Hindu constituencies to the Hindus. Hindu Sabhas should be properly organized and Hindu-Muslim questions should be discussed freely inside and outside the legislatures. A permanent solution of the existing communal and sectarian quarrels should be found out. If in the fulfilment of this task communal disturbances break out resulting in the death of ten or even twenty thousand persons, they will not cause so much harm as will be caused by closing the door of nationalism.

Currency Commission.

The Rozana Akhbar supports the recommendations of the Currency Commission and says :—The reasons advanced by Sir Purshottam Das Thakur Das against fixing the rate of exchange at 18*d*. are unsound and unconvincing. If his proposal is acted upon the purchasing power of the rupee will diminish. Referring to the recommendation regarding the reintroduction of the one-rupee note in India the Zulqarnain urges that Indians should use paper money in their every day business transactions. This will have the advantage that a rise in the value of the silver will have no effect on the value of the rupee and there will be no deficit in the silver reserve. Decision about fixing the rate of exchange at 18*d*. should be taken after due deliberation.

Communal representation.

While admitting that communal representation is prejudicial to nationalism the Medina points out that the system has become imperative for safeguarding Muslim interests against the selfishness and aggressiveness of the Hindus. It says :—The Hindus seem determined to put an end to communal representation. If their efforts in this direction had commenced at a time when there was inter-communal trust, a large section of Muslims would perhaps have supported the demand. But this clamour is the inevitable outcome of that selfishness, sycophancy, narrow-mindedness and bigotry which for centuries has deprived the Aryan nation of liberty. The Hindus want to regain the monopoly in the various departments of life which they enjoyed for fifty years after the mutiny. If there were no communal representation Sir Fazl-i-Hussain, Umar Hayat, Raza Ali, Raja Mahmudabad, Abdur Rahim and some others who are to be found here and there in Government departments would not have been seen and like the depressed classes, the Muslims would have fallen victims to the selfish mentality of Hindus and would have suffered disgrace and humiliation. In these circumstances how can Muslims abandon communal representation and thereby hand over to the bigoted Hindus weapons for ruining Muslims. How is it possible for Muslims to help Malaviya & Co. in scattering poison for their (Muslim) destruction? "Why do you not turn out the Government, which has no connexion with India, in the way in which you are turning out Muslims who have after all some connexion with the country. If your intentions were honest you would have at first fought with the Government and would have laid the axe at the root of communal representation. But in your cowardice you have forgotton true liberty and for the fulfilment of a few objects you want to rob the Muslims of their remaining possessions."

Music before mosques.

Referring to the question of music before mosques the Agra Akhbar says :—The attitude of the Hindu papers on this point compels us to change our opinion and we are not inclined to entertain favourably the obstinate requests of the infidels in the matter. The accidental passing of music by mosques is quite different from the deliberate beating of a drum before them. The venomous demands of the Sangathanists are puzzling the Muslims. If the present demand is satisfied to-day a new one may be put forward. The Hindus have become devoid of tolerance. Why then should Muslims show toleration towards them? All this is due to Muslims' weakness. If they non-cooperate with the Hindus and cut off all connexion with them they will not only raise their communal status, but also improve their economic condition. The Muslims should tolerate the accidental passing of music by a mosque, but should strongly oppose the new demands of Sangathanists. They should declare plainly that no tumultuous marriage procession can pass by mosques during the azan and the nimaz. Commenting on the letter of Maulana Vilayat Husain and Mr. Zahur Ahmad of Allahabad regarding music before mosques the Haqiqat remarks :—At a time when Hindu-Muslim feelings are running so high Muslims are bound to be provoked if out of sheer obstinacy the Allahabad Hindu Sabha wishes to take out its Dasehra procession before mosques just at the time of congregational prayers. Pandit Malaviya, who delivers eloquent lectures on Hindus-Muslim unity, does not prohibit his co-religionists even at Allahabad from deliberately disturbing the Muslims in their prayers. If Hindus persist in taking out their procession before mosques at prayer time conciliation will be possible only when they act upon the old custom and stop music for a short distance near mosques.

The Andamans as a Penal Settlement.

The Vartman strongly criticizes the reply of the Home Member to the debate in the Legislative Assembly on the question of the abandonment of the Andamans as a Penal Settlement and says :—How alluring are the words of the Home Member? But an effective reply to his blandishments can be given by those who have a knowledge of the real conditions, who have returned after vomiting blood in the solitary cells of the Andamans, who have seen innumerable consumptive and malaria patients dying like animals, who have returned after being reduced to mere skeletons owing to mosquito bites, who under lashes have metalled the roads of the new Government colony and who cannot become proprietors of fields which have been prepared by them after levelling up rugged lands. The Hamdam deplores the action of the Assembly in rejecting the demand for the transfer of the Moplahs from the Andamans. Referring to the remarks of Colonels Gidney and Crawford that the Andamans are heaven itself compared to Indian jails it says :—In our opinion it would be better to reserve the Andamans for Europeans only and send Indian prisoners back to Indian jails, for if it is really such a fine place the Europeans have a stronger claim to enjoy it.

The Taxation Committee.

The Hindi Kesari says that there is no likelihood of taxation being reduced as a result of the recommendations of the Taxation Committee as they suggest further taxation. It points out that if the burden of taxation is not lightened unrest will be accentuated in the country and urges voters to return only such members to the Assembly as will support the popular cause there vigorously and not side with the Government.

Foreign affairs.

The Aj infers from the conclusion of the Russo-Afghan treaty that the statesmen of Kabul do not believe the reports that Russia wants to swallow up the states of Central Asia and says that this treaty places the peace of Central Asia on a much surer footing. A "Kumaunese Friend" writes to the paper:—Mr. Rutledge, the Deputy Commissioner, has just returned to Almora from Tibet. Since "Raja" Mahendra Pratap's letters have been published saying that he is doing Congress work on his own lines in Afghanistan, Tibet and Nepal various reports have been circulating in Almora. There is a strong rumour of a road to Tibet being constructed and one or two cantonments being established in the neighbourhood of Almora. It is also reported that the Deputy Commissioner will go next year with forces; for this year the provincial governor of Tibet did not go to interview him although he waited for the latter for twenty one days. If Nepal and Tibet also become independent and well-organized like Afghanistan it will surely be a matter for alarm to the British Government for it remains suspicious even in the ordinary course of things and now it has got quite a sufficient excuse in the Bolshevik bogey. Referring to the "dream" of the Indian Muslims regarding the establishment of a Pan-Islamic organization and with its help to acquire domination over Asia at least the Bharat complains of the maltreatment of the coloured races by white men who, it says, are trying hard everywhere to keep them as beasts of burden. The protection of the coloured races depends upon the co-operation of Japan, Asiatic Russia, Turkey, Afghanistan and China. The Asiatics should be on their guard and independent powers of Asia should seriously consider what their duty is.

Election campaign.

The election campaign is receiving increasing attention in the Press. The Swaraj party is being strongly criticized by Liberal papers and Hindu papers of the sangathan school. The Leader writes:—That Mr. Motilal Nehru is not after unity with the responsivists should be made clear to those who read the speech he delivered at the opening of his party's election campaign at Meerut. Unless Pandit Malaviya and others who are opposed to the policy of this party concentrate their efforts in organizing their own following and stop wasting time in the pursuit of elusive unity, they will find themselves at a serious disadvantage. It is more than time that they made up their minds. The cause of unity can best be promoted by the defeat of the Swaraj party at the polls. In the course of his election manifesto published in the Aj Mr. Sri Prakash says:—"If the rights of the Hindus have been trampled upon it is the Government and not the Congress which has done so. If the Hindu processions have been interfered with, the Government and not the Congress is responsible for it. An alien Government can be based only on partiality and it is for ensuring even-handed justice for all that we want to attain Swaraj. We stand for the rights of citizenship and shall by every means oppose injustice and partiality." Commenting on the remark in the Forward that the ensuing elections will be on communal lines, the Bharat says:—Elections have always been on such lines as the Muslims and Sikhs have been sending their own representatives to the legislatures. The right of the Hindus alone had been usurped by the Congress. Now the Hindus being dissatisfied with the Congress are nominating their own candidates. This dissatisfaction with the Congress is chiefly due to the Lucknow and the Bengal pact and to the doings of the Swarajists during the past three years. Vehemently denouncing the "Nehru Party," the Bharat Dharma writes:—These impostors have always injured the Hindu interests by showing undue indulgence to Muslims. How can they refrain from opposing the Hindu interests, licking the sputum of the bureaucracy and cleaning its boots when they place their daughters at the service of Muslims and side with them even though they abduct them. Discussing the question of political leadership at the present juncture the Vartman pays an eloquent tribute to the services rendered to the country by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and calls upon the people to follow his lead. The Hindi Kesari exhorts the electors to vote for the Congress candidates and warns them against returning such selfish people as flatter the officials. It was the Swaraj party which opposed the Government in the United Provinces Council. No member of this party can be charged with flattering the officials. The Swarajists have always striven to expose the Police, the Jail and the Registration departments in their true colours. The Anand remarks :—Lala Lajpat Rai's unequivocal indictment of the Swaraj party should open the eyes of Indians and make them realize the harm which is being done to the country and the Hindu community by its unwise policy. It is the duty of the Hindus to act upon the advice of Lala Lajpat Rai and return to the legislatures able persons irrespective of party affiliations. The Sainik says that as a result of the emphasis laid by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya on the protection of communal interests, even the various sects of the Hindu community like the Jats and the Sanatandharmists are setting up their own sectarian candidates for the legislatures. The fire which Pandit Malaviya is kindling will soon consume the nation and the various communities together with those very persons who are kindling it. The Haqiqat fears that in spite of their careful selection of candidates the Swarajists will be much hampered by the Hindu Sabha. Referring to the efforts of Pandit Malaviya to set up his candidates against the Congress and the Swarajist party the paper remarks:—Panditji thinks that the pleasure of his friends is more important than national welfare. This open opposition of the Congress, backed up by false pretensions of nationalism and patriotism reminds us of the merry days of the Pandit of Allahabad when at Simla he used to accompany Lord Reading in his morning walks. The Rohilkhand Gazette acknowledges that the Swarajists played a prominent part in the legislatures but cannot help remarking that the party did fail in its object of bringing the Government to its knees. Expediency demands that the Swarajists should now reconsider their programme and, in co-operation with Government, should adopt a middle course which may be really beneficial to the country.

The Swaraj party.

The controversy between Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Motilal Nehru continues to receive prominent attention. The Leader writes :—Lala Lajpat Rai has scored a distinct victory over Mr. Nehru by his crushing, though dignified, reply to the latter's unedifying outburst . . . Lalaji has shown by his moderation of language that he can be above party pettiness. His suggestion that the best men should be put forward as candidates at the next elections without regard for party considerations is worthy of a patriot of his record. If Mr. Nehru could raise himself to his level the chances of united action among progressive politicians would be more hopeful . . . The greatest service that those who on public grounds are opposed to the Swaraj party can do to the country is not to waste their time in trying to arrive at a compromise with it but to organize their own forces to the best of their ability and put forward capable and self-respecting candidates at the next elections against the pledge-bound automatons of the Swaraj party. Referring to the opposition which is being offered to the Swaraj party from various quarters the Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—Judged by the cloud of malicious witnesses, the Swaraj party stands for certain progressive principles which it would be dangerous to sacrifice in the quest of compromise. They have pressed for political reform, undeterred by the temptations of supine office, and they have kept themselves above the surging tide of venomous, pseudo-religious rancour in the country. Their services constitute an asset that should not be lightly bargained away. In another article the paper says :—If Pandit Madan Mohan, Mr. Jayakar, and others of that persuasion are really in earnest about unity, instead of haggling over the question of offices and emoluments in the absence of power and responsibility, they should decide to present a united front to a united enemy. The Aj regrets that Lala Lajpat Rai has administered a blow to nationalism by resigning membership of the Swaraj party. It contends that despite its defects the Swaraj party has proved itself superior to and done greater service to the country than all other political parties. It is, however, satisfactory that Pandit Motilal Nehru has given a crushing reply to all his attacks. In another issue it says :—In order to secure emancipation a subject country cannot do anything beyond non-cooperating with its alien Government. If this be impossible in the existing circumstances, the next best course for it is to follow the policy of obstruction. To cooperate with the alien Government is nothing short of suicide. Self-respect demands that if non-cooperation is impossible, at least the ideal for which it stands should be steadily kept in view. The country should not be hurled into the abyss of despair by cooperation. Commenting on Lajpat Rai-Nehru controversy the Bharat Jiwan contends that the ultimate object of both the leaders is to attain Swaraj by bringing about Hindu-Muslim unity. Sangathan is really a movement for putting an end to communal quarrels, because the root cause of these quarrels is the weakness of the Hindus and the religious fanaticism of Muslims. Ten or twenty Muslims beat hundreds of Hindus and the latter cannot do anything. But as soon as the latter become organized the Muslims will realize the futility and the danger of quarrelling with them. Our opponents too who resort to secret wire-pulling to set Hindus and Muslims by the ears will, on seeing them uniting and realizing the force of their united demands, also find that it is no longer possible to make the two communities fight with each other. The Medina says that while Dr. Ansari has given up his connexion with communal organizations with a view to concentrate his energies on the attainment of Swaraj, Lala Lajpat Rai has resigned the membership of the Swaraj party on the ground that the policy of the Swarajists is prejudicial to Hindu interests, This means that the Lala Saheb can sacrifice Swaraj for the sake of Hindus. One of the leaders is a Muslim and the other a Hindu. Discerning persons should notice the difference between their attitude and say which community is more advanced in the matter of patriotism and love of freedom. It is the Hindu leaders who have rebelled against the Congress and have introduced Sangathan, Shuddhi, responsive cooperation and other movements which are calculated to crush the Congress It is an acknowledged fact that the right method for the attainment of true liberty was non-cooperation and we are confident that the country will have to resort to it once more. But we find that every prominent Hindu is trying his level best to oppose the non-cooperation movement, whereas Muslim leaders continue to stand by it and the fatwa of the Ullema still holds good. In another article the paper says that the Congress is a dead body now and has lost its influence not only among Hindus and Muslims, but also among peoples of other races and creeds. Matters have come to such a pass that the Congress has now become synonymous with the Swaraj Party. The Sangathan movement has aggravated the Hindu-Muslim tension and has clouded the political horizon. While the moderate Muslims have re-adopted the Muslim League policy, the more timid among the Hindus have engineered Sangathan and these two movements together have weaned away a considerable proportion of Hindus and Muslims from the Congress. The Sangathanists now believe that responsive cooperation is the only political creed which can be accepted by the Congress. There will be no place for Muslims among them and Malaviyaji will be the leader. It will become the haunt of place-hunters and an instrument for flattering the powers that be. It will no longer be the powerful organization for fighting the battle of freedom. Referring to the various changes in the political views of Lala Lajpat Rai Al Barid says :—These changes clearly indicate that Lalaji's intention is to increase the influence of the Hindus in the legislatures so that they may be able to humiliate the Muslims on every question even at the risk of shattering the Congress to pieces and dealing a death-blow to the Swarajist party. They want to turn the legislatures into communal battle-fields and to accentuate the communal tension. The Hamdam is surprised to find that Lalaji is insisting on Hindu representatives paying particular attention to Hindu interests, while he has always been pleading for joint electorates. If Lalaji's statements are to be accepted at their face value, they fully establish the need for separate electorates and separate representation for Muslims. The Sadaqat remarks :—Lala Lajpat Rai wants to work the Congress or Swaraj party on the lines of the Hindu Sabha and as he has not achieved any success so far he has given out that the Swaraj party is opposed to the interests of Hindus. We pity Lalaji's mentality which shows that India will have to remain in serfdom for a long time to come.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Aj remarks that the debate on the communal situation in the Legislative Assembly shows that though the bureaucracy professes to dislike communal dissensions it does not want to take any step beyond allowing every liberty of action to the local authorities to stop quarrels. We agree with Lala Lajpat Rai that Swaraj alone will put an end to communal disturbances. If the next elections take place with the communal question in view the third Legislative Assembly will only resound with Hindu-Muslim dissensions, Swaraj will recede further and the bureaucracy will be the only gainer in the end. Referring to the resolution regarding the slaughter of cows, bullocks and buffaloes passed by the municipal board of Etawah the Mashriq remarks :—It appears from this that the first step of Swaraj is to stop cow-slaughter under the influence of the Hindu Sabha. Al Bashir has suggested that the management of slaughter-houses should be removed from the hands of municipal boards. If the Government accepts the suggestion and places slaughter-houses in the charge of tahsils not only will the difficulties experienced by Muslims and Christians be removed but all future disturbances will also be stopped. Referring to the recent disturbances at Delhi Al Khalil says that Government has committed a serious mistake in not detecting and punishing those who initiated the riots. Government should carefully watch and restrain the activities of the Sangathan movement among Hindus and any similar movement among Muslims and then alone will the real causes of discontent be removed. Commenting on the report of the recovery of two Muslim children from the Arya Samaj Orphanage, Bareilly, the paper remarks :—If Shuddhi consists in the kidnapping of children there can be nothing worse. Such deeds are not only the worst instances of immorality but are also inhuman. It is disgraceful that British law and justice take no satisfactory action against the activities of institutions which harbour kidnapped children. The Masur condemns the sentiments expressed in Swami Satya Deva's Hindi book entitled Sangathan ka Bigul and asks whether any responsible Hindu leader in any part of India has ever cared to repudiate these views which are gaining popularity among the Hindus as is evidenced by the enormous sale of the book. The Krishna remarks that Hindu-Muslim union can be effected only if the Muslims stop Tabligh or recognize the Shuddhi movement as legitimate. If this is not to be and men of the type of the editor of the Sada-i-Muslim while carrying on Tabligh do not recognize the legitimacy of the Shuddhi movement they have no concern with India and the proper place for them is Arabia.

Political propaganda.

Referring to Earl Winterton's statement in the Sheffield Chamber of Commerce that India is England's greatest market the Aj remarks that this fact is the greatest obstacle to the freedom of India. Her purchases of English goods are so large that British authorities dare not remove their control over her. So long as we do not reduce this British trade by our self-sacrifice, Britain will not grant freedom to us of her own accord. But as soon as she finds that it is impossible to maintain her trade without keeping India contented she will be willing to listen to the demand for liberty. The Hridaya publishes an article headed "O Krishna," in the course of which the writer, who signs himself as Pashan (a pseudonym), writes :—O Krishna, if at that time India needed you or you thought it necessary to come to India, O Lord, why do you not come to-day? O Lord, one Draupadi alone is not being oppressed and unjustly treated to-day. O Lord, to-day Mother India is being disrobed and her children are without clothes. Now do you want to see her completely disrobed before the spring of your compassion will flow? O Gopal (protector of cows), to-day self-willed butchers are placing the knife on the necks of lakhs of cows. Even responsible rulers who bear the burden of the protection of the people do not to-day consider the slaughter of cows to be a sin and the eating of beef to be one of the major sins. At that time, O Lord, in order to kill Kansa (name of a tyrant) you assumed the human form and came (here) all in a hurry. And what about to-day when Kansas are seen at every step? Their atrocities are interfering with the freedom of speech, movement, reading and writing, worship and religious practices . . . O Bearer of the flute (Krishna), come. Destroy the wicked race of Kansa and sanctify the land of India with the tunes of your sweet flute. These days rakshasas are oppressing us by land, water and sky. Not only in four directions but in all the ten directions they reign supreme. Votaries are invoking you. Cows are in tears awaiting you. Come and remove the sufferings of all. The Vivek publishes a contributed article under the heading "Theft," in which the writer states that of all kinds of thefts political theft is the worst and insinuates that the government of India by the British is of the nature of such theft. He goes on to say :—Political theft is to take away the trade and all business of the inhabitants of a country, all their powers, all their laws, their civilization, their valour and ability, their self-respect; their right to manage their affairs, their right to defend themselves; their right to make progress and their right to learn to advance their culture, language and industries . . . In return it has given them the right to drink, to eat opium, to starve and to bear beating and oppression. What else do they want? The beauty of this theft is indescribable. The obligations done to a country by a Government which has forced itself upon it are as innumerable as the stars in the sky.

Music before mosques.

The Leader writes:—What are things coming to? The district magistrate of Etawah is reported to have prohibited, under section 144, Criminal Procedure Code, music in a private house because it is situated in the neighbourhood of a mosque, in connexion with the Janamashtami celebration, at certain specified hours in the evening, on the ground that there would be a danger of the breach of the peace if music were played or the conch sounded. Are Hindus not to be allowed to celebrate without interference their most important festivals with music even inside their houses if they happen to adjoin a mosque? Is this how the unexceptionable principles laid down by Lord Irwin for protecting individual rights are to be enforced by some of the local officials? . . . Do the United Provinces Government approve of the Etawah lord's action as being a reasonable or just exercise of power? The Surya also strongly protests against the aforesaid order of the district magistrate and says that if the United Provinces Government does not approve of his action it should punish him adequately. The Aligarh Mail writes:—It is impossible to understand the mentality of a certain section of Hindu politicians who, while loudly claiming the right of conducting their religious ceremonies and festivals unhampered by any sort of restrictions, refuse to grant the right of other communities to similar privileges. They wish to take their processions with music amidst the noise of "jaikaras" at all hours of night and day without the least regard being paid to the convenience and feelings of others. These same gentlemen will never allow Muslims to perform their cow-sacrifice even in the quietest possible way. Referring to Khwaja Hasan Nizami's advice to Muslims not to insist on the stoppage of music before mosques, the Hridaya says that if the Khwaja really wants to settle this question he should request the Government to frame a law which may totally stop the agitation against the playing of music before mosques and should at the same time urge the Muslims to get the system of communal representation abolished. It is imperative that Muslims should give up their wicked policy, purify their hearts, regard India as their motherland and Hindus as their brothers. The Hamdam refutes Maulana Muhammad Ali's contention that the movement for the stoppage of music before mosques has been started by Muslims as a counter-measure against the Hindu agitation for the prevention of cow-sacrifice and says that this movement owes its origin to the Hindu claim regarding the right of the public to the free use of the King's highways.

Indian States.

The Bharat Jiwan writes:—After all the Nizam had to yield to the firman of the Government. His system of administration, rife with oppressions, high-handednesses and prejudices had so much undermined the edifice of his State that if he had in the least hesitated to do so it would have tumbled down. May we hope that the Nizam will take lesson from this incident? The Aj says that the fact that the Government of India should insist upon the appointment of Europeans and the Nizam should quietly acquiesce in the demand shows to what miserable plight Indian States have been reduced. Indian chiefs have indeed become mere puppets. Provided they keep their masters pleased they can waste the money of their subjects and even oppress them most wantonly. Their will is the only law in their States. Corruption, bribery, serious crimes like dacoities and murders are much more prevalent there than in British India. It is for this reason that the Indian chiefs command no public sympathy when the Government of India takes them to task. The fate of the Nizam will not prove an unmixed evil if it teaches the rulers of Indian States to keep their subjects pleased. The Medina wonders how far the treaties and agreements concluded between the British and the Nizam from 1740 up to date justify the Government's demand for the employment of European experts in the various departments of the Hyderabad State. When the principle of the Indianization of services has been accepted for British India there is no reason why it should not be extended to the Nizam's dominions also. The Government of India should bear in mind that seven crores of Indian Muslims are devoted to the ruler of Hyderabad and any innovation of the kind proposed will stir up agitation among them. Writing in the Haqiqat Hakim Saiyed Ali Qummi, a journalist, complains of Lord Reading's dealings towards the Nizam and says that the policy of His Lordship has produced a bad impression not only on the Muslims but also on other ruling chiefs. If Lord Irwin solves the complicated question wisely, his name will deserve to be written in letters of gold in the annals of India.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the treatment accorded to Dr. Ansari and Maulana Muhammad Ali in Arabia, the Sewak remarks:—The Indian Muslims must have realized their real importance by this time. They should in future give up their increasing love for Mecca and Medina and should make up their mind to go to Haj only as free Muslims. Exhorting Muslims to attend the proposed Hedjaz Conference at Lucknow to devise means for the expulsion of Ibn Saud and the reconstruction of holy tombs, the Aziz-i-Hind contends that Ibn Saud will yield only when either the British Government exerts pressure or forty or fifty thousand volunteers from India are sent to protect the holy places. The threat to cause economic loss to his country by abandoning Haj for some time will not suffice to make him mend his ways.

Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill.

The Sadaqat apprehends that the passage of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill in its present form will be a source of danger for the press and exhorts the papers to stop the publication of mischievous communal articles. The Haqiqat remarks:—Every sensible man who wants to improve the present situation will acknowledge the need for such a law but will not like to see magistrates and the police abusing the measure to harass the editors and publishers of papers. Al-Barid says:—Though this amendment which was passed hastily seems to be incompatible with the liberty of the press yet considering the fact that the attitude adopted by certain papers has been accentuating the communal tension the Bill does not deserve adverse criticism.

Communal representation.

The Leader writes:—The suggestion of Mr. Srinivas Sastri for the modification of the existing system of communal representation with a view to its gradual abolition is deserving of serious consideration. The continuance of the system is likely to drag in the Government in the communal whirlpool. When in the legislatures there are two strong communal groups it will find it extremely difficult to maintain a position of aloofness. From all points of view the modification or abolition of the system appears to us to be desirable in the interests of peace, constitutional progress and good government. The Aligarh Mail says:—Any premature experiment to do away with communal representation is bound to prove disastrous not only to the Muslims but to India in general and to the cause of Indian democracy in particular. If our Hindu brethren have the good of the country at heart let them try to conciliate the opinion of the weaker and smaller communities and as soon as confidence is restored and Muslims are brought into line with the Hindu community they would of their own accord give up the privilege of communal representation.

Currency Commission.

The Indian Daily Telegraph vehemently criticizes the proposed exchange ratio and says:—"The whole scheme is meant to be one of illicit taxation and the payment of a bounty to the foreign manufacturer. No wonder that Lancashire is gloating over Sir Basil Blacket's patriotic prescience and the assertion of the 18*d*. ratio."

Ban on Pandit Malaviya.

Referring to the withdrawal of cases against Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje the Bedar remarks:—O Muslims, feel ashamed of yourselves and witness the strength of union which has made even a mighty power like Government bow its head before a man of poor physique like Pandit Malaviya. Neither will Government sympathize with you, O Muslims, nor will you be able to lead honourable lives so long as you are not guided by the teachings of Islam.

Foreign affairs.

The Medina thinks that the object of the treaty among Russia, Persia and Turkey is to form a combination against the European powers, which have tied down the East with the chain of imperialism, and also to help one another when the spirit of liberty prevails in the East. It says that every Asiatic will welcome such alliances as are calculated to defend the East against European imperialism. The Najat remarks:—This union will deal a fatal blow to the imperialistic governments of Europe and as Britain has relations with other powers she will have to encounter the most serious difficulties. The desire of the Bolsheviks has been fulfilled and they have succeeded in spreading a huge net over Asia which will bring all the Asiatic powers together, diminish the British prestige in the East and alienate Persian sympathy from the British. The Mansur opines that the new treaty between Afghanistan and Russia demonstrates the matchless statesmanship and unrivalled tact of His Majesty the King of Afghanistan. The fear of the Government of India is baseless for this new treaty is only one of the items in the scheme of the King of Afghanistan for the progress and uplift of his country.

The Allahabad disturbance.

The attack on the Dadhikando procession at Allahabad has evoked strong and bitter comments in the Hindu papers. With the exception of the Haqiqat no Muslim paper has so far commented on the subject. In the course of an article under the heading "The latest scandal" the Leader writes:—The Muslims' attack on the Hindu procession, which was unarmed and depended for its safety entirely on police protection, was premeditated, organized and unprovoked. No prayer was going on at the time, nor was there music in front of the mosque. The police seemed to have looked helplessly on at the time. Why were not the assailants caught red-handed? Why were no arrests made in the mosque? Did the authorities rely upon assurances given by any of the Muslim leaders? The District Magistrate has been very good to the Muhammadans, but he has been so repaid for his kindness and consideration which indeed might have been thought by some to amount to partiality. How can the Hindus hereafter have confidence in the capacity of the police to protect their processions against similar assaults? The authorities owe it to themselves—never mind the Hindus—to take steps to find out the real culprits and enforce respect for law and order. Either the officers responsible for the administration of Allahabad will even now open their eyes to the realities of the situation and act henceforth as efficient, impartial and responsible officials are expected to do, or it will be the duty of the Government to make other and proper arrangements. In a subsequent note the paper says:—In the light of the incidents of Sunday it would be an aggravation of injustice if anybody sought to cast upon the Hindus even fractional responsibility for what happened. In the course of an interview given to a representative of the paper Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru says:—I sometimes ask myself whether the Government has ceased to function or whether it has abdicated its powers and responsibilities in favour of "leaders" who are and should be expected to be partisans, some of whom are mischievous fomenters of strife and conspirators against public peace. To my mind if these riots can be treated as evidence of the perversity of the Hindus and Muhammadans, they can be fairly treated as evidence of a breakdown of the local administration. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The ugly outbreak at Allahabad shows as by a flash of light the wretched position in which our communal propagandists have placed the innocent people. among them. Writing in the Haqiqat Hakim Saiyed Ali Qummi, a journalist, complains of Lord Reading's dealings towards the Nizam and says that the policy of His Lordship has produced a bad impression not only on the Muslims but also on other ruling chiefs. If Lord Irwin solves the complicated question wisely, his name will deserve to be written in letters of gold in the annals of India.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the treatment accorded to Dr. Ansari and Maulana Muhammad Ali in Arabia, the Sewak remarks:—The Indian Muslims must have realized their real importance by this time. They should in future give up their increasing love for Mecca and Medina and should make up their mind to go to Haj only as free Muslims. Exhorting Muslims to attend the proposed Hedjaz Conference at Lucknow to devise means for the expulsion of Ibn Saud and the reconstruction of holy tombs, the Aziz-i-Hind contends that Ibn Saud will yield only when either the British Government exerts pressure or forty or fifty thousand volunteers from India are sent to protect the holy places. The threat to cause economic loss to his country by abandoning Haj for some time will not suffice to make him mend his ways.

Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill.

The Sadaqat apprehends that the passage of the Criminal Procedure Code Amendment Bill in its present form will be a source of danger for the press and exhorts the papers to stop the publication of mischievous communal articles. The Haqiqat remarks:—Every sensible man who wants to improve the present situation will acknowledge the need for such a law but will not like to see magistrates and the police abusing the measure to harass the editors and publishers of papers. Al-Barid says:—Though this amendment which was passed hastily seems to be incompatible with the liberty of the press yet considering the fact that the attitude adopted by certain papers has been accentuating the communal tension the Bill does not deserve adverse criticism.

Communal representation.

The Leader writes:—The suggestion of Mr. Srinivas Sastri for the modification of the existing system of communal representation with a view to its gradual abolition is deserving of serious consideration. The continuance of the system is likely to drag in the Government in the communal whirlpool. When in the legislatures there are two strong communal groups it will find it extremely difficult to maintain a position of aloofness. From all points of view the modification or abolition of the system appears to us to be desirable in the interests of peace, constitutional progress and good government. The Aligarh Mail says:—Any premature experiment to do away with communal representation is bound to prove disastrous not only to the Muslims but to India in general and to the cause of Indian democracy in particular. If our Hindu brethren have the good of the country at heart let them try to conciliate the opinion of the weaker and smaller communities and as soon as confidence is restored and Muslims are brought into line with the Hindu community they would of their own accord give up the privilege of communal representation.

Currency Commission.

The Indian Daily Telegraph vehemently criticizes the proposed exchange ratio and says:—"The whole scheme is meant to be one of illicit taxation and the payment of a bounty to the foreign manufacturer. No wonder that Lancashire is gloating over Sir Basil Blacket's patriotic prescience and the assertion of the 18*d*. ratio."

Ban on Pandit Malaviya.

Referring to the withdrawal of cases against Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje the Bedar remarks:—O Muslims, feel ashamed of yourselves and witness the strength of union which has made even a mighty power like Government bow its head before a man of poor physique like Pandit Malaviya. Neither will Government sympathize with you, O Muslims, nor will you be able to lead honourable lives so long as you are not guided by the teachings of Islam.

Rahim and Pandit Malaviya have possessed the public mind. Their speeches are listened to by an impressionable audience who think the most godly and h eroic thing in the world is to give a good hammering to the other side . . . . Allahabad is a Hindu centre. No wonder the Muslims have chosen Prayag as a suitable place to make a demonstration of their puissance. The mild Hindus in some other place might decide to retaliate. That is the summum bonum of Malaviya-cum-Abdur Rahim politics. The Aj says that the Muslim attack on the Dadhikando procession was unprovoked and was made in the presence of Muslim leaders. The procession was attacked under the very nose of the police which neither prevented the attack nor made any arrests on the spot. Such conduct of the local authorities is surprising and makes one incline to remark that if the authorities cannot protect the citizens, they should not prevent the latter from concerting measures for self-protection. When the police permitted the procession and disallowed the carrying of lathis by the processionists, was it not its duty to make adequate arrangements for their protection against the attacks of badmashes. The Vivek says that the attack on the Dadhikando procession was most brutal and was disgraceful to the Muslims. The District Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police and the police guard were present, but could not protect the people. This being the case, can anybody expect preservation of peace at the hands of the police? The Vartman blames the police for dereliction of duty at the time of the disturbance and regrets that in spite of the repeated complaints of the Hindus against the City Kotwal the Government continues to keep him in a place where his presence is declared to be dangerous and prejudicial to public peace. The Muslims rely a great deal on the Kotwal. By committing breach of faith with Hindus the Muslims have again demonstrated their animosity. The Hindus should not allow themselves to be depressed and cowed down. If they organize and strengthen themselves the Muslims will be forced to make true peace with them. The Haqiqat remarks that the account of the riot shows that the Muslims were aggressors. It is regrettable that the disturbance took place in the presence of leaders of both the parties. When the parties are determined not to mind any disturbances and to show no toleration to each other disturbances are bound to occur daily and it is useless to rue them.

Music before mosques.

Hindu papers strongly protest against the order of the District Magistrate of Etawah forbidding the playing of music in a Hindu house near a mosque in that city. The Anand deplores that in spite of the claims of Lords Birkenhead and Irwin and Sir Alexander Muddiman that Government officials do not show partiality in communal matters there are officials in the country who do not attach any importance to religious liberty. Up till now the religious liberty of the Hindus was crushed by applying section 144 forbidding them to play music before mosques on roads, but the District Magistrate of Etawah has gone a step further and has prohibited the celebration of a religious festival even indoors. Do Lords Birkenhead and Irwin regard this action as a specimen of Government's impartiality? The Hindus of the United Provinces are eager to know to what extent the Governor of the province regards this action as justified. The Abhyudaya says:—The pets of the bureaucracy in this country have put a strange interpretation on law. The Hindus have the same right to celebrate their religious festivals in their houses as the Muslims have to say their prayers in mosques. It is the Collector's duty to protect the rights of both the communities. The Collector apprehended breach of peace. But from whom? If from Muslims, he ought to have taken steps against Muslims. What sort of justice is this that the innocent should be punished? We want to tell the Collector and the Government frankly that their encouragement of bigotry and submission to brute force is responsible for the present working of the Muslim mind, and if the Government continues to encourage it in this way some day it would also have to suffer serious loss along with the nation. The Aj says that such interference with religious functions in private houses lays an axe at the very root of citizenship. In another article the paper writes:—The absolute authority given to local officers to decide the question of music before mosques is producing very deplorable results. The authorities have begun to interfere with all-India festivals like Janmashtami. Have the Provincial and the Central authorities considered what terrible consequences this can produce? To leave the decision of such an all-India question to the option of local authorities argues bankruptcy of statesmanship, administrative ability and tact among higher authorities. Referring to the abandonment of the Dasehra celebration at Allahabad last year the Abhyudaya deplores the breakdown of negotiations between the communal leaders of the town on the question of music before mosques this year and urges the Collector to permit the Hindus to take out their processions unconditionally. It says:—The Hindus do not want any innovation. They want to do the same thing which they have been doing for the last several centuries. If Muslims have any objection and they want to stop music they ought to get an order to this effect passed by a court of law. So long as such an order is not passed every effort of the Collector to stop music will be unjustified. Commenting on the remarks of the Leader on the order of the District Magistrate of Etawah Al Khalil says:—Bigotry has rendered the Leader so senseless that in criticizing the action of the District Magistrate it fails to see that the Queen's Proclamation promised the protection of law to the Muslims as well. The Leader sees the mote in others' eyes, but does not see the beam in its own. Cow-slaughter is forbidden throughout Rajputana and the Sikh States, but this encroachment on the birth-right of Muslims and Islamic injunction does not seem to have vexed the Leader. The Leader refers to the singing of the French National Anthem on the occasion of the inauguration of the Paris mosque. This is no justification for the playing of music before mosques elsewhere. In England most of the Hindus take beef under the influence of local custom. If the Muslims bring this argument before the Legislative Councils of India to prove that Hindus are beef-eaters, will the Leader support these Muslim members?

Election campaign.

The Leader strongly criticizes Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya for "wasting his time in trying to set up another party with a new nomenclature, but with practically the same objects as those of the responsive co-operation party in the fond hope of bringing together on one common platform the Swarajists and other Congressmen who have not joined the party." It adds:—If Pandit Malaviya wants to help the Swaraj Party and through it the bureaucracy he cannot do better than persist in his morbid pursuit of sham unity. The Aligarh Mail deprecates the formation of the Independent Congress Party and says:—In spite of all the disguises that the party may choose to adopt it cannot be anything but communal in its policy and outlook. Its composition and the leadership that it is going to receive clearly foreshadow the nature of the programme that it is bound to follow. The name of the party should be "Knights of the Order of Lathi" or the "Sangathan Party." The Sainik exhorts the people to vote for the candidates of the Swaraj Party only and says that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Lala Lajpat Rai are advising the nation to lay down arms before the enemy. Exhorting the Hindus of the seven cities not to vote for Pandit Motilal Nehru, the Bharat says:—The fact that Mr. Nehru and Mrs. Sarojini Naidu are extremely dangerous for Hindu interests is not concealed from any Hindu child. The Hindu public is fully acquainted with Mr. Nehru's ideas, ways and manners, and if the Hindu electors still return him it would be their misfortune. Referring to the negotiations for compromise among political parties in India, the Medina says that Lala Lajpat Rai and other reactionaries of his way of thinking have been won over by the enchanting eloquence of the Benares wizard (Pandit Malaviya) and have become a source of embarrassment to the Swaraj Party in connexion with the coming elections. The Hindu Sabha and Responsive co-operation leaders are out to defeat the Swaraj Party simply because that party has so far steered clear of the communal quagmire. Pandit Malaviya & Co. are trying to win over the Swaraj Party because they are afraid lest their wranglings should weaken them and strengthen the position of the third party which would take away the game like the fox of the fable in the suicidal fight of the bear and the lion.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Discussing in a series of articles the causes of communal tension and its remedies the Aligarh Mail says that the abolition of separate electorates and ban on cow-killing would not prove very effective in bringing about better relations between the two important communities. On the contrary they might work positive harm to the best interests of India. The only just solution is toleration towards the practices and beliefs of other people who differ with us. A Hindu should not bother himself if a few more cows are sacrificed on Bakr-Id day just as he does not usually bother himself about cows being slaughtered on other days of the year. Similarly a Muslim should not insist that music should be stopped when passing a mosque just as he does not ask the din and the noise of traffic to cease when the time for prayers approaches. Of course care should be taken that nothing is done to wound wantonly the feelings of any community. Muslims should not make a special show of cows that are to be sacrificed, nor should Hindus make it a point to stop before mosques to give an exhibition of the strength of their lungs by shouting "jai, jai" or the melodiousness of their musical instruments. The Medina takes the Arya Samajist propagandists to task for kidnapping Muslim and Christian children and hiding them in orphanages and says:—Kidnapping of minors is highly objectionable and tyrannical. Nothing can be more shameful and degrading than these incidents which are calculated to foster communal hatred in the country. It is, however, gratifying to note that Islamic missionaries are free from such blots. It is to be regretted that educated and respectable Arya Samajists are doing those very things for which they reproach ignorant and profligate Muslims. The Government must take steps to stop such movements. Under the heading "A dreadful conspiracy" the Sada-i-Muslim writes:—It appears that some mischievous Hindus of Cawnpore have established an association which is day and night engaged in tracing the whereabouts of newly-converted Muslim women, and whenever it is found that such women are under the protection of some weak Muslims they are forcibly kidnapped and after reconversion are sent to some other place. We also learn that Muslim children are missing these days. It is the duty of local officials to stop all this. Otherwise these incidents will destroy peace and order. It is the duty of Muslims also to organize an association of volunteers to check such mischievous activities and to look after the children more carefully. In the course of an editorial note the Medina says:—The unjustified effusions of Lord Olivier are bearing fruit. In order to remove the charge (of pro-Muslim bias) the saw of law and order has been set apart for the heart of Muslims. In Rewari poor Muslim labourers and agriculturists are being sent to jail. In Calcutta while Hindus are being released Muslims are being inconsiderately imprisoned. Now Muslim papers are also falling victims. The fatwa for the publication of which the editor of Al Aman is being prosecuted was only a harmless document and was not in any way calculated to foster hatred or animosity between the two communities. On the other hand, Government has shown its impartiality by withdrawing the cases against Dr. Moonje and Pandit Malaviya.

Kakori dacoity case.

A number of papers are vehemently protesting against the treatment accorded to the accused in the Kakori dacoity case. The Bharat says:—Such incidents cast a blot on the British justice and give rise to the suspicion that the Government wants to harass and ruin Indian patriots in every way. The Vartman compares the treatment meted out to the under-trial prisoners in the Kakori dacoity case with that accorded to Europeans in jail whose guilt has been fully established and says:—The Government is mistaken if it expects co-operation while following such a policy. Its deeds are not such as to deserve the co-operation of Indians. Referring to the hunger strike the Medina says that the accused have enhanced their self-respect by having recourse to this dignified method of ventilating their grievances. They have also exposed the blots on the morality and administration of Government officials. The extreme step taken by the accused shows that the harsh treatment accorded by officials was beyond human endurance. The Haqiqat remarks:—Those prisoners who have not yet been declared guilty should be treated like gentlemen. Although they are all educated persons they are treated like thieves and bad characters.

Political propaganda.

The Republic deplores that many extremist leaders have gone over to the Responsive Party and says:—The political emancipation of India can be effected only by extremist leaders who do not believe in moderatism which is nothing but begging in disguise. Rejoicing at the abolition of slavery in Nepal the Shanker says:—Nepal is an independent country. The slaves there were the slaves of their own people, but the thirty-two crores of slaves in India are the slaves of others. They hanker after the favours of others and are under the subjection of a people living across the seven seas. A handful of Englishmen drive these thirty-two crores of slaves like sheep. On account of their slavery Indians are not valued even like beasts. The Aj writes:—Under the present bureaucratic Government the manhood of the people has been seriously undermined. They have become short-lived and are always a prey to recurring epidemics. The condition of the people is simply deplorable now. For this the administration is responsible. It is possible that the administration may improve their condition, but it cannot restore their manhood which can be done only if villages again become the pillars of the administrative edifice and cultivators themselves learn the art of administration. This reform cannot be effected by co-operation or responsive co-operation. It is possible only when we cease to co-operate with the irresponsible administration and prevent it from masquerading under the guise of democracy on the one hand, and fit the people for self-administration on the other. In another article the paper says that the agitation against Lord Olivier for his statement that there was a predominant bias in British officialdom in India in favour of Muslims is a good example of hushing up truth by howling and making a truth appear to be a falsehood. Events which are taking place today in India go to confirm Lord Olivier's statement. In view of the interference in the name of law and order with the celebration of an important Hindu festival, the refusal of Allahabad Hindus to take out processions owing to the unjust orders of local officers and the stoppage of Arya Samaj nagarkirtan it is impossible to prove Lord Olivier to be untruthful. It is the Muslims who are mostly responsible for the present communal wave in the country. By establishing the Muslim League they encouraged the growth of separate communal organizations in the country. They are the creators of the system of separate representation and special privileges. The authorities too, like the Muslims, are responsible for the communal feeling. Had they not supported the unjust demands of the Muslims this feeling would not have become so acute. Today the bureaucracy is following Lord Minto's policy of favouritism to Muslims and of separatism. The Sach reproduces a lengthy article published in Al Islah (Germany) written by Maulvi Barkat Ullah of Bhopal, now in exile. In the course of the article the writer says that India which was formerly rich and prosperous has been reduced to penury during British rule as the following four leeches have been sucking its blood:—(1) Foreign articles which take away millions of pounds from India and do not let Indian industries thrive. (2) Excessive and unbearable rent. (3) Foreign traders who purchase raw materials from India at cheap rates and sell them in the markets of the world at high prices. (4) The payment of interest on public debt to British capitalists. Agriculture, industries and trade, the three sources of income, are in the hands of foreigners. How can the people prosper in such circumstances? It is not surprising that 80 per cent. of the population does not get two full meals daily. The national leaders whether they be Hindus, Sikhs or Muslims are to blame as they do not take any advantage of the new movements going on in the world. The leaders should take up the cause of 250 millions of people who produce vast wealth by agriculture and labour, but are being robbed of the fruits of their work by foreign robbers. The world war made several small nations free, but Indian leaders having been deceived by the sweet words of the foreigners gave help to them and did not only strengthen the bonds of the slavery of their own country, but enslaved many new nations also. The agriculturists and the labourers should follow in the footsteps of the British labour and should send their own representatives to municipal and legislative bodies. The students should also in co-operation with peasants and labourers establish a league for the complete political and economic freedom of India. Its economic aim should be socialistic. It should also aim at the boycott of the service, both civil and military, of foreign rulers. If educated patriots in India make agriculture, industry and trade their vocation they will be able to explain political and economic matters to villagers and labourers. Once these men understand how they are defrauded of the fruit of their labour they will demand their rights in the way the British labourers are doing.

Indian States.

The Indian Daily Telegraph publishes in its editoral article "the broad outlines" of "an atrocious case of mutilation and torture" in the territory of one of the ruling chiefs in the Punjab. The victim is said to be a young man named Onkarnath, a clerk in one of the offices of the State. The Oudh Akhbar remarks:—If the account given by Onkarnath's relations is true it is a big blot on humanity. It is highly desirable that the Chief Minister of Jind should direct his attention to this matter.

The problem of unemployment.

Referring to the report that the Government of India has by means of a circular letter invited the attention of local Governments to the question of unemployment the Najat says that those who are aware of the ways of the Government and the opposition offered by it to the proposal made by a non-official member of the Legislative Assembly for tackling this problem cannot regard the circular letter as an effective remedy. The fact is that the Government of India does not deem it its duty to redress our grievances and like a foreign government has got accustomed to neglect our welfare. Otherwise it would not have rest content with issuing a letter regarding a problem which has rendered two-thirds of the population half-dead.

Hindus in police service.

Quoting figures from official replies to Babu Vikramajit Singh's question in the United Provinces Legislative Council regarding the percentage of Hindus in the United Provinces police service the Leader writes:—Do the figures show that the Hindus who form nearly 86 per cent. of the population of the province are fairly represented in the police service? What is the reason that from the ranks of the constabulary upwards they are so inadequately represented in the service? Is there a policy behind it? If there is, let the Government have the courage and the candour to avow it publicly.

Indians in Berlin Zoo.

The Leader writes:—The news that a number of Indians are being exhibited in a Berlin Zoo by a European has naturally caused a sensation in this country. The Government of India ought to make inquiries and if the allegations prove true, act promptly and decisively in vindication of the self-respect of Indians.

Foreign affairs.

THE Vivek remarks that since the establishment of the system of mandates by the League of Nations the imperialistic countries of Europe can commit atrocities in the name of peace and benevolence which they formerly used to commit on the strength of their brute force and on their own responsibility. This system has been introduced in places where the major powers of Europe had interests but which they could not occupy in any other way. The system has deprived the weak countries of the protection which was formerly afforded by the political rivalries of European nations. Referring to the news published in Jarida Shafaq Surkh that the Iraq Government and the British Government are responsible for the disturbances in Persia the Sarfaraz says:—The British policy against Persia is condemnable and cannot be successful in the Middle East by creating a hostile spirit in the hearts of Persians. The history of the last few years shows what losses Britain has had to suffer through this policy. British statesmen should think over this delicate question and should try to change into love the hatred which is being created against Britain in the Islamic world. The British policy towards the Hedjaz and Persia is shocking to those who are loyal to Government and an early change in it is needed, otherwise the consequences will be deplorable. The Hamdam says that without the support of Britain it would have been almost impossible for Ibn Saud to conquer the Hedjaz. Under the impression that he would prove a fit person to safeguard British interests in the Middle East Britain gave him moral and material support in every way, but his friendly negotiations with France have now opened her eyes. Referring to Bolshevik activities in China, Persia, Turkey and Afghanistan the Najat wonders if Britain can face the Bolshevik danger and says:—Britain's condition within her own territories does not show that she is fully ready to face the danger because owing to her suspicions against her subjects she cannot be prepared to take any steps towards reforms. Along with the external danger she fears lest her own subjects should prove troublesome to her. It may, therefore, be said that this spirit of distrust on the part of Britain increases the gravity of the external danger and the Bolshevik bogey is in reality an indescribable danger for her.

The Allahabad disturbance.

The disturbance at Allahabad during the Dadhikando procession continues to receive prominent attention in the Press. While the Hindu papers lay the entire blame on the Muslims, the Muslim papers, with the exception of the Haqiqat, hold that the trouble was wholly due to the generally aggressive, uncompromising and provoking attitude of the Hindus and their insistence on playing music before mosques just at prayer time. The Aligarh Mail writes:—The Muslims, in spite of the daily pin-pricks and deadlier thrusts that they receive every day, usually keep up their balance of mind. During the last riot too nothing serious would have happened were it not for the fact that perhaps some boy, provoked beyond endurance, threw something on the mob—it could have hardly been called anything else—that was, because of its noise making it absolutely impossible to offer prayers. This was just what the Hindu processionists wanted and the rioting started. They threw the whole blame upon the Muslims and as the Hindus through their intense agitation on the previous occasion had already made the authorities dread them, they got the officials on their side. The authorities have succeeded in pleasing the Hindus, but have they gained anything in self-respect? Their show of this weakness deserves strong condemnation and it is hoped that the Government would take strong measures to prevent the example from becoming contagious. In the course of a series of articles the Abhyudaya seeks to show that the Muslims were entirely responsible for the breach of peace and vehemently criticizes the authorities for not arresting on the spot the Muslims who attacked the procession. It says :—The Hindus were unarmed. Through the kindness of the Joint Magistrate the Hindu Sabha volunteers had been deprived even of their three-foot long staffs which were allowed by law. What protection did the authorities give to the Hindus after disarming them in every way? We do not think the authorities to be so mean nor do we charge them with this, but what would be their reply if one were to say that they got the Hindus beaten by first disarming them? If Mr. Zahur Ahmad's statement in the Leader that the authorities had assured Muslim leaders that they would not allow the Hindus to play music before mosques at the time of namaz is correct, then it must be said that Mr. Crosthwaite had already determined to create trouble in every way. Luckily, however, for him and the Hindus the Muslims committed folly, created trouble without any justification and thus took the whole responsibility on their own shoulders. They were not afraid of the authorities because they knew that the authorities were their helpers in every way. Mr. Zahur Ahmad's statement also shows that the police was stationed in order to prevent Hindus from playing music before mosques. It was for this reason that when there was aggression on the part of Muslims the police could not do anything and remained motionless like wooden statues. The Hindus did not entreat the Collector to permit them to take out the procession. The Collector himself wanted that it should be taken out. We ask whether in such circumstances the arrangement which Mr. Crosthwaite made did not amount to treachery against the Hindus. The Hindi Kesari says:—The reports which have so far been received show that the riot was caused through the carelessness of the authorities. Mr. Zahur Ahmad's statement, published in the Leader, shows that the authorities resorted to a policy of double-dealing. The Surya says that the Muslim attack on the Hindu procession at Allahabad in the very presence of the district authorities is a strong commentary on the administrative ability of these authorities. The Government should hold an inquiry into the conduct of the officials of Allahabad and punish them if they are found guilty of dereliction of duty. Justice demands that the Government should now give up the policy of supporting the Collector of Allahabad at all costs. The Vivek says that it is quite possible that the Allahabad disturbance may favourably change the attitude of local officials towards the Hindus, who may be able to celebrate their festivals in future under the protection of Government bayonets and machine-guns. But they should bear in mind that the celebration of their festivals in this manner will render the task of the establishment of real communal unity impossible and will always compel them "to rub their foreheads against the feet of the rulers." They can welcome such a change of attitude only if they banish from their minds all thought of freeing their country. They should know that the rulers favour one community or the other only to serve their ends. The Sainik supports the Leader's criticism of the attitude of the Allahabad authorities and says :—There is no doubt that if Government wants the disturbances can be stopped to a considerable extent. But this cannot be expected of a Government which is based on the policy of divide and rule. It knows very well that the day the Hindus and the Muslims unite that very day its administration will come to an end. The Pratap writes :—It is clear that the authorities fear the Muslims and could not protect the Hindus. If the Hindus merely seek the assistance of the authorities for the protection of their ordinary rights as they are doing now they will commit a great mistake and will weaken themselves still more. They should learn to stand up and die for their ordinary rights. The Muslims are fanatical, foolish and lawless, but the authorities deserve to be placed in a worse category. If they cannot protect common citizens and are unable to suppress those who are bent upon making mischief they have no legal right to levy taxes and to regard their courts and police as custodians of justice and peace respectively. Now the question before the country is whether, when the authorities either do not or cannot protect the people anybody, who in self-defence or in order to keep his community on the alert does something which is culpable in ordinary times, can be regarded as a delinquent morally. The authorities do not protect the people and at the same time when people happen to do anything in self-defence they are ready to punish them. This is the height of high-handedness and deserves the severest moral condemnation. The Vartman insinuates that Government officials encourage the communal disturbances in order to weaken the Congress party in the election campaign. It says:—The new Viceroy is either so simple or is so kept in the dark by the bureaucracy that he could not yet be convinced that Government officials can have a hand in the communal disturbances. If those officials deliberately allow the disturbances to take place what is their object? We have not forgotten those incidents of Bengal which have led us strongly to suspect that behind the Hindu-Muslim disturbances there was, in league with the Government party, a secret communal group which spread the communal fire to destroy the influence of the Congress and that this group received rupees fifty thousand from certain Europeans of Calcutta . . . At the Dadhikando procession at Allahabad the police did not restrain the rioters. It must, therefore, be said that the authorities might not have deputed the police to stop the disturbance. In order to remove the doubts of Lord Irwin we wish to inquire if the Allahabad disturbance was also a fortuitous event and had not at the bottom the desire to influence the Council elections. The Hamdam says that if the Dadhikando procession had passed by the mosque before the time of the prayer as intended by the local authorities there would have been no disturbance. It is said that some mischievous persons in the rear of the procession threw brickbats and blew a conch before the mosque. It is strange how so many Hindus received lathi blows when there is no mention anywhere of Muslims coming down from the mosque. Perhaps the Hindus were wounded by their own men. The disturbance demonstrates the folly and imprudence of the residents of Allahabad and establishes the advisability of processions being taken out before maghrib prayer as was formerly done. The Sada-i-Muslim says that it is difficult to imagine the depth of the grief with which the Muslims have received the news of the arrest of Maulana Vilayat Husain and Maulana Fakhir and a large number of other Muslims at Allahabad. It says that as no disturbance is possible without the participation of two parties it is impossible to understand why Muslims alone are being arrested and the arrested Hindus are being released. The Government is not unaware of the way in which arrests are made after a disturbance and therefore we urge upon it to act with caution. Any carelessness on its part at such a time will prove ruinous to thousands of Muslims. The Haqiqat condemns the action of the Allahabad Muslims in attacking the Hindu procession without any provocation. Al Khalil remarks:—The mischief-makers do not deserve any sympathy whatever whether they be Muslims or Hindus. So long as the causes of these riots are not removed and the mischievous spirit continues to prevail it will be difficult to stop the riots. In the present atmosphere insistence on music before mosques and the arrival of huge processions there just at prayer time are likely to lead to riots. Al Aziz seeks to throw the entire responsibility for the disturbance on the Hindus and the local authorities and contends that no riot would have taken place if the usual time had been observed. It says:--For the last few years the number of processions at Allahabad has multiplied and the Dadhikando procession was given undue importance. Possibly the Magistrate was influenced by the fact that the Hindus had abandoned their processions on account of the imposition of restrictions and decided that this procession must be taken out at all costs. If this is true there can be no stronger proof of the weakness of a responsible district officer. Muslims had no desire to cause a riot, otherwise it would have been impossible to quell it so soon. We believe that some bad character was tempted to enter the mosque. It is very difficult to distinguish between a Hindu and a Muslim on such occasions. The Muslims were not fools to do what they are reported to have done in the presence of the authorities. In these circumstances if the Muslims are blamed for causing the riot it is murdering justice openly and encouraging violence. Sadhus had been brought before the mosque to practise satyagraha. The procession was hurriedly taken before Shubrati's mosque where it became distinctly slow and the processionists intentionally and loudly shouted "jaikaras," lifting their hands towards the mosque where Muslims had assembled before the appointed time to protect it from outrages. The sadhus came round the mosque again and again. One of them did an indecent act which provoked the Muslims. It is just possible that in religious frenzy some boy or mischievous Muslim did a thing which he ought not to have done, but the statement that the Muslims took the initiative is incorrect. The Superintendent of Police had no right to enter the mosque with shoes on. He could have arrested the criminal and got him severely punished, but this illegal action for recovering lost popularity is an ugly blot on the impartiality of a British officer. It is reported that a certain person was arrested on the stairs of the mosque and handed over to the armed police who cowardly belaboured him with the butts of the gun. The riot had not yet become widespread when the sadhus who were present in the vicinity of the mosque commenced attacks with their tongs which were duly returned. The Hindu sepoys of the armed police cruelly beat the Muslim ekkawalas who were there to earn their livelihood. Are not the District Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police responsible for this? We believed that as His Majesty's subjects Hindus and Muslims were equal in the eyes of a British official but now we shall have to hold the opinion that Britain has entrusted the responsibility of administration in such weak hands as do not hesitate in being influenced by some party or personality. In another article the paper vehemently protests against the arrests of Maulana Vilayat Husain and Maulana Shah Muhammad Fakhir and says:—If such cruelty had been done to Muslims in the barbaric kingdom of Russia or under the blood-sucking Government of Germany we would have had no cause for complaint. But in this case an officer of a constitutional Government, either through his weakness or perturbed state of mind, has got the Muslim leaders arrested in order that the Muslims may be taught a lesson.

Election campaign.

Condemning the "electioneering tricks" of the various parties the Republic writes:—We never believe that the work in the Councils, however sincerely undertaken by the moderates or however indifferently undertaken by the Swarajists will hasten the days of Swaraj. The Congress by entangling itself with the Council problem has committed a great blunder . . . Pandit Motilal Nehru made a denationalizing statement utterly unworthy of the great leader and completely antagonistic to the interests of the premier national institution which he represents. The Sainik severely criticizes the action of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in forming the Independent Congress party and says:—During the last eight months Pandit Malaviya has changed colour like a chameleon. Like a political mimic he has appeared before the people at least in four colours. Whatever Lala Lajpat Rai and Malaviyaji and the motley army of traitors relying on them will do will serve to increase the power of Government and those who want to secure their selfish ends by cringing to it will find a unique opportunity. They will strengthen the chain of our slavery and ruin the country. The Aj condemns the formation of the Independent Congress party when its objects do not differ at all from those of the responsive co-operation party and says that Pandit Motilal Nehru is justified in maintaining the obstructionist policy and refusing to work out the reforms so long as the Government takes no further step in the constitutional advance and does not release the political detenus. The comparative effectiveness of the obstructionist policy is proved by the bureaucracy's fear of it and the official jubilation at the strength of the forces now arrayed against the Swaraj party. Pleading for union among the various parties the Vartman exhorts the people to forgive the sin committed by the Liberals in helping the Government in crushing the non-cooperation movement and suggests that they should now be taken within the fold of the union. The Hamdam is surprised that the Independent Congress party wishes to work in the name of the Congress, although it does not act upon the Congress programme and thinks that there is not much difference between this new party and the old moderate party. In another article the paper wonders why Hindus are opposing the Swarajists and how the latter have injured the interests of the former. It is the Muslims who have cause for complaint against the Swarajists in the matter of the grant of reforms to the Frontier province. Referring to the secession of some prominent Muslim Swarajists of Bengal from the Congress the Medina writes:—The Muslims of Bengal had most earnestly and sincerely cooperated with Mr. C. R. Das in making the Congress a success, but owing to the communal bigotry of the Bengal Hindus they have been constrained to sever their connexion with it and to form a separate party for safeguarding their interests. To ruin the Congress by opposing the Bengal pact is a shameful demonstration of Hindu mentality. The Hindus themselves are responsible for the attitude which the Muslims of Bengal have been forced to adopt.

Political propaganda.

The Hindi Kesari contends that with a view to make the Empire stable Englishmen act in collusion with Muslims. It quotes some passages from the account of Lord Reading's administration, as given by the correspondent of a Paris journal who visited India in 1925 and interviewed Lord Reading, to show that "Hindus and Muslims were so skilfully worked upon that they began to suspect each other and national unity was brought to an end" and that "Lord Reading did not even attempt to conceal the partiality he felt for Muslims." Proceeding it invites the attention of the present Viceroy to the alleged statement of Lord Reading, "Our bad days are over: Hindu-Muslim unity is no more," and says:—Before asking us to regard the statement of both the ex-Viceroy and the ex-Secretary of State for India as incorrect, irrefutable proof of the impartiality of the Government should be furnished; mere assertions would not do. The Abhyudaya remarks that the conviction of the people that the Government being a foreign one depends much upon the "divide and rule" policy has been confirmed by the recent speech of Lord Olivier and Lord Reading's conversation reproduced in the Kesari of Poona from a French monthly magazine. So long as a policy calculated to end Hindu-Muslim and Brahman-non-Brahman quarrels is not adopted Government cannot be exonerated of the charge of following the policy of divide and rule. Referring to an article of an English publicist contending that owing to the Hindu-Muslim quarrels it is impossible for British Parliament to grant at once India's demand for self-government the Hamdam writes:—This argument confirms the view held by some persons that English officers are responsible for the Hindu-Muslim quarrels as they seek to impress Parliament with the necessity of the existence of the British Government in India in order to prevent the various communities from flying at one another's throats. If the relations between the Hindus and the Muslims had been cordial it would not have been impossible for our masters to find out some other excuse. When India gets self-government the Hindus and the Muslims will themselves develop a sense of joint civic responsibility like the people of north and south Ireland who have been living in peace since the severance of their connexion with England. In the course of a lengthy article under the heading "Our knives at our throats" the Desh Bhagat says:—The foreign Government and its poisonous policy is the chief cause of our present adversity but this cannot absolve us of our own responsibility. If a sufficient proportion of the community were determined to put an end to this slavery and to live like free nations it is certain that their endeavours would prove fruitful. Reviewing the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly during the three years of its existence the Medina says:—The object of the Reforms was merely to cool down the political agitation by deluding the people and not to confer any benefits. Every transaction of the Assembly and every Bill passed by it during the years 1925 and 1926 have made the condition of India go from bad to worse.

Indian States.

The Aligarh Mail says that the Government of India's "ultimatum" to the Nizam is ultra vires and that its claims are based on sheer force. It adds:—In what way does the treatment of the British to her allies (Indian Princes) differ from that accorded by Germany to Belgium? To a layman, with no pretence to statesmanship there is no material difference between the two. The note to the Nizam was an insult to Indian princes and may lead to serious consequences. In another article reviewing the administration of the state the paper tries to establish that there has been an all-round general improvement in all departments and that "the charge of inefficiency against the state administration is a mere hallucination or a concoction of certain rather imaginative brains and cannot be supported by actual facts." Concluding, it says:—The fact of the matter is that the real reasons for the notorious note to the Nizam were never given out because it did not suit the policy of the Indian Government. The effects of this note are very far-reaching and the issues raised by it quite grave. A number of other Muslim papers have also written in a similar strain on the attitude of the Government of India towards the Nizam.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the comment of the Leader on the reply of His Excellency the Governor of Bombay to the address presented to him by the Anjuman Islamia of West Khandesh regarding the appointment of Muslims in the services of the province the Hamdam says that the injustice done to the Muslims for a long time in the past can be remedied only by giving special preference to qualified Muslim candidates in future appointments as long as their recognized proportion in the public service is not made good. We do not say that the Bombay Government was ever partial to the Hindus but there is no doubt that the claims of qualified Muslims used to be overlooked there as in other provinces because the Hindu heads of offices do not allow the applications of the Muslims to reach the Government The Sarfaraz is sceptical about the success of the proposed Hedjaz Conference at Lucknow on the ground that it will consist of persons having divergent aims and objects.

Kakori dacoity case.

In the course of an editorial article under the heading "Bureaucratic sophistry" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The statement which the Governor in Council has chosen to publish in regard to the Kakori under-trials on hunger-strike is a fine essay in sophistry. The communiqué, instead of explaining the position of the Government or extenuating the action of the officers concerned who have been punishing the under-trials by putting fetters on their bodies, only shows how jails are surcharged with that evil which, the poet says, "is wrought by want of thought as well as want of heart." The communiqué has made confusion worse confounded. It makes us doubt the honest anxiety of the Government to come to a fair and reasonable settlement of this wretched affair. A number of vernacular papers have also commented more or less on similar lines.

Communal representation.

Referring to Bhai Parmanand's opposition to Mr. Asaf Ali's nomination to the Assembly on the Congress ticket from the Delhi mixed constituency and to his remark that it would be a suicidal policy if the Hindus voted for a Muslim the Aligarh Mail says:—After this clear announcement of policy on the part of a responsible Hindu leader, the last vestige of any illusion that some misguided Muslims might have entertained regarding the attitude of the Hindus if separate electorates were abolished, ought to disappear. The deplorable fact about the matter is that this morbid communalism is not confined to a mere handful of the so-called Hindu leaders but is generally shared by the Hindu public. Commenting on the statement of Pandit Motilal Nehru regarding separate Muslim representation the Hamdam regrets that a responsible and popular leader like Pandit Motilal Nehru should have opened the question of communal representation at this juncture as it will give to the enemies of the Swaraj party an opportunity of injuring it and will create distrust in the minds of the Muslims against that party. The present Hindu-Muslim quarrels are in no way due to communal representation. It is the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements which are responsible for them, for they have created an aggressive spirit in the Hindus and have incited them to commit all sorts of high-handedness on the Muslims. Thoughtful Muslims do not look upon the system of communal representation as a permanent arrangement, but in view of the present mentality of the Hindus it is impossible for the Muslims to give it up.

Jhusi riot.

Commenting on the sentences passed in the Jhusi riot case the Leader writes:—Without meaning any disrespect to the learned judge who pronounced the sentences, we are constrained to say that six capital sentences and thirty transportations for life do appear to us to be far heavier sentences than should have been imposed.

SUPPORTING Sir C. P. Ramaswami Aiyer in pressing the claims of Indians for larger employment in the office of the League of Nations the Leader says:—We greatly desire that Indians should take more interest in the affairs of the League than they do at present. The League has great potentialities for the good of the world. But as Sir Ramaswami pointed out the employment of Indians will be one of the means of creating such interest. Referring to the treaty between France and Ibn Saud the Haqiqat says:—The parties had lost their confidence in British officials and this was the reason for their keenness about this treaty. The London papers apprehend a dangerous war as a result of a dispute between France and Britain in this connexion.

The Allahabad disturbance.

In the course of an article under the heading "Justice wanted" the Aligarh Mail attributes the disturbance at Allahabad to the "provocative gestures" of the processionists and to the throwing on them of something by "some one in the mosque, a Muslim or Hindu disguised as Muslim." It charges the authorities of Allahabad with showing partiality to the Hindus and says:—Any talk about fairness and justice to the Muslims of Allahabad is useless. The authorities have been cowed down by the intense propaganda and lies that have been regularly and systematically conducted by the Hindu Press for some time in the past. They have, therefore, resolved to please them at any cost. Maulanas Vilayat Husain and Fakhir, who had done all in their power to avert a disturbance of public peace, were arrested simply to please Hindus and to insult and wound Muslim feelings. These gentlemen, as is known to everybody, are not the kind of men who go about preaching rowdyism and making threatening demonstrations before a place of worship. The Superintendent of Police entered the mosque booted and spurred and quite indiscriminately administered kicks and blows to the occupants of the Masjid. The Muslims exercised wonderful restraint otherwise the Superintendent had furnished them with more than enough provocation to make an assault on him. The Bharat Jiwan says that after Calcutta and Dacca, Allahabad has now made it perfectly clear that the Government has become powerless to protect the lives and property of the innocent. A handful of riff-raffs can themselves do and by means of threats make the Government do whatever they like and the Government cannot make the least protest. All this shows that the Government is acting treacherously towards the Hindus. We cannot congratulate the Government on this policy because by following this it may achieve temporary gains but when the peace-loving Hindus realize that everything lies in hooliganism and rowdyism the Government will find itself in hot waters. The Anand writes:—The fact that the authorities did not arrest the hooligans and the police did not raise its hand even though it saw people being belaboured will make the Hindus think that the Government does not care to protect them. Can the Allahabad authorities support this action of theirs in any way? Is this a specimen of the firmness which the Government communiqué issued in June last stated would be shown in suppressing disturbances? The Arya Mitra says that the recent riots at Dacca and Allahabad have enabled the authorities to see with their own eyes the extent to which the Muslims oppress the peace-loving Hindus. Those who always blame the Hindus and teach them the lesson of peace should peruse such painful accounts carefully. It is due to the want of self-reliance among the Hindus that the goonda party does not allow them to sit with ease. Al Khalil takes strong exception to the attitude adopted by the Leader in publishing reports of the Allahabad riot and says:—The duty of an editor is to describe the facts and not to beat the breast like women. Had the editor of the Leader been a police officer, he would have demolished the mosque and shot the Muslims indiscriminately. When an ex-Minister and the distinguished editor of a well-known paper like the Leader turns mad on the occasion of Hindu-Muslim riots who can expect other leaders to think over these problems coolly ? How can India attain Swaraj when such is the mentality of the over whelming majority of the educated Hindus? In another article the paper says:—Government should take steps for removing the causes of the riots and to check the activities of the leaders who are at the bottom of these disturbances, who have trampled under foot the law of the Government and dealt a death-blow to its prestige. Al Aziz says that every one at Allahabad is anxious to know what the attitude of the authorities towards the revered Ulema will be and wonders why the securities taken from them have not been cancelled. The paper tries to show that Maulanas Vilayat Husain and Muhammad Fakhir are innocent and says that perhaps the district authorities have not yet realized the mistake they made in treating the Ulema contemptuously and thereby incurring a grave responsibility. The Muslims of India are carefully watching the activities of the district authorities. Mr. Crosthwaite should now adopt a policy which will remove the Muslim complaints which are the results of the measures adopted by him through inexperience.

Had the editor of the Leader been a police officer, he would have

Dasehra at Allahabad.

Under the heading " A confession and a warning " the Leader criticizes the telegram of the District Magistrate of Allahabad that " procession will be allowed subject to such restriction regarding music and time as necessary to prevent riot " and says :— Is the conclusion to be drawn that Mr. Crosthwaite does not hope to be able to make such arrangements as may be calculated to prevent a riot, that he can only maintain " law and order " by depriving one community of its ancient right? The telegram very probably is a message of despair for the Hindus and also a warning to them that they may abandon all hope under the present régime of this district. In the circumstances it appears to us that few things are more probable than that for the second time in two consecutive years Allahabad will have to go without the grand and imposing Ramlila celebration which has delighted the hearts of generations of people. We could wish that at least some of the officers clothed with power had the imagination to realize what deep resentment such a policy as is being followed is bound to produce in the minds of a very large section of the population and what bad policy it is which has such a deplorable effect. The Abhyudaya says that the Hindus of Allahabad will accept no restrictions regarding music, time and the carrying of sticks. So long as the administration of the town remains in the hands of the present authorities it would be a great mistake for the Hindus to lay down their sticks. We can never advise the Hindus to unarm themselves completely and rely for their protection on the wooden police and be beaten. It would be better for them to abandon their Ramlila and other processions. They can resort to Satyagraha, but they must understand that during the time of Mr. Crosthwaite they will never be able to carry it through inasmuch as they will be exposed to the blows of both the police and the Muslims. After their experience on the occasion of the Dadhikando procession Hindus cannot place their necks in the hands of the District Magistrate and relying on his protection lay down their sticks. In another article the paper writes :—The correspondence between the President, Ramlila Committee, and the Collector and the Joint Magistrate of Allahabad, shows that certain restrictions regarding music and time will surely be imposed on the Ramlila procession. This means that the peace of the town lies at the mercy of the goondas, that the British power has been cowed down by them and that it has surrendered its functions to them. These processions have been taken out for centuries past, but now it has been found necessary to impose certain restrictions on them. In view of all this, we urge that Mr. Crosthwaite should go. Allahabad does not want him. The situation in the town has never been so bad as in his time. It has been proved that he has no administrative capacity. What sort of justice is it that the Hindus should not be allowed to celebrate their festivals because the Collector cannot restrain the hooligans. Al Aziz apprehends that on the occassion of the coming Dasehra the procession will be deliberately brought before the mosque just at prayer time and therefore asks the authorities what their attitude in future will be.

Election campaign.

Supporting the formation of the Muslim party in Bengal the Aligarh Mail exhorts the Muslims of other provinces to form similar parties and says :—The cow-protection party and the Sangathan Maha Sabha party, otherwise known as the Congress

Independent Party, are in the field to put up candidates not by any means friendly to Muslim interests. It is, therefore, absolutely necessary that Muslims of these provinces should elect to the councils only those who are best able to safeguard the interests of the community and to serve the country. In the course of an article explaining the reasons which have led it to appear as a daily paper the Sainik says:—The paper will strive to protect the Congress which the officials, their flatterers, the Liberals, and the Independent Congress Party are out to destroy. The Sainik would rather die than throw down arms before, and become part of, the foreign bureaucracy whose jubilation at present knows no bounds. The paper is vehemently attacking the leaders of the Liberal and the Independent Congress Party and championing the cause of the Swarajists. The Vivek deplores that new political parties like the Responsivists, the Indian National Party and the Independent Congress Party want to drag down the country from its high ideal of non-cooperation and make it follow the path of constitutional agitation. Referring to the rescission by the Jamiat-ul-ulema of the Fatwa relating to non-cooperation with Government the Hamdam says:—Perhaps like the Hindu Maha Sabha the Jamiat also wants to return such candidates to Legislatures as may care more for the interests of their community than of the country. We disapprove of the elections being fought on communal lines and we consider it as a great misfortune for the country, but we cannot blame the Jamiat, because after the activities of the Hindu Sabha the Jamiat had no alternative but to cancel the Fatwa and thus protect Muslim interests in the council. We would, however, advise the Muslims to send only their best men to the councils. The Medina supports the action of the Jamiat-ul-ulema and writes:—We still regard the councils as children's playground and the Reforms Scheme as a toy. But when a section of Hindus is bent on making the councils arenas for exhibiting their hostility towards Islam it is the duty of Muslims to go forward to protect their interests. Condemning Pandit Malaviya's sangathanist activities in the Assembly and council elections Al Khalil says:—It is now essential that Muslims should also turn their attention towards the protection of their rights. If Muslims lag behind in pressing their claims before the Royal Commission which is expected to visit India in 1929 it is probable that India may get freedom without the Muslims having any share in it. Muslims have, therefore, decided to organize a Muslim Liberal party in each province which will protect their rights in and outside the councils and while supporting the Congress in its demand for the freedom of India will also protect Muslim rights and compel Hindus to let the Muslims share the benefits of Swaraj. In another article the paper writes:—The election campaign carried on by Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is an open political war against the Muslims. It is clear that when an attack is made by an opponent the other party, howsoever peaceful it may be, has no alternative but to try to ward it off. When Hindus having a large majority cannot allow a few members of their community to keep off from communal questions how far would it be proper for Muslims to stand aloof from places where a war is carried on against their community, on which their life and death depends in India. The suggestions made by Sir Abdur Rahim on the point in his manifesto are commendable. The Zulqarnain says:—The bitter experiences of the past have led to political awakening in our countrymen who have decided to derive advantage by making a proper use of their franchise. So long as we do not start constructive work for making the present constitution a success our political progress will remain at a standstill. The fixed policy of British Parliament cannot be changed by resorting to unconstitutional methods. If we had sincerely cooperated with the Government during the last six years in order to render the present constitution successful, there would have been a hundred openings for our advancement and prosperity.

Political propaganda.

The Aj publishes a contributed article in which the writer, B. Sampurnanand, says that though the Government issues communiqués to repudiate charges of its connexion with communal tension, yet the divergence between its professions and practice cannot be concealed for long. The Government can never welcome freedom for India and it is therefore no matter for surprise if it considers the Brahman and non-Brahman question, the conflict between the higher and the depressed classes and the Hindu-Muslim dissensions as advantageous to itself. The Government disavows its hand in these dissensions. Even if this be admitted that it does not foment trouble, we cannot concede that it does not strive to take advantage of it and that it maintains an attitude of neutrality with regard to it. The Allahabad riot and the Muslim attack on the Rajrajeshwari procession in Calcutta fully bear out this contention. When the Hindus took out the processions unarmed with the permission of the authorities, why did not the latter protect them? If they cannot do so they had better leave the country at once. If in these circumstances the people charge them with partiality they are not in the wrong. If Government wanted to get the Hindus beaten under a delusion what other course could it follow? If these riots are to continue till the advent of the next Reforms Commission to prove the unfitness of Indians for further reforms the Government should bear in mind that it is easy to raise a spectre, but very difficult to quieten it. If the riots continue a few days more the Government will find it impossible to control the resultant anarchy and lawlessness and it will have no alternative but to leave the country. If it likes to do so, the Government may well commit suicide, but the Hindus should beware. Muslims may well cooperate with the Government but we Hindus cannot do so. The Government does not trust us. It cannot, therefore, side with us. The cry of responsive cooperation in these circumstances only provokes laughter. If our religious rights are interfered with, we should reply with Sangathan and Satyagraha. Both Hindu dharma and Aryan culture demand that whatever may happen we should not cooperate with the Government, but should make the country free. The Pratap warns the Hindus of the consequences of the decline of nationalism among them and says that no community can gain by cooperating with the Government. It is said that the Muslims have gained and their number has increased in services. History will, however, curse the community which for the sake of its temporary gains cooperated with the rulers and in doing so hampered the liberation of not only its own country or Asia, but of the whole world. The policy of divide and rule is a part of the system of the Government of India. The day the Hindus thought of cooperating with the bureaucracy and benefiting thereby like Muslims there was jubilation in the bureaucratic circles. The magic wand of the bureaucracy has manifestly affected us. After winning over the Muslims they are trying to captivate the nationalistic but weak hearts of the Hindus. The nation should beware of this. We will not allow the Government to gain victory over our hearts. The Government cannot protect our communal interests, it is we who shall have to protect them. The Aj says that Muslims may well regard their communal interests to be different from those of the country, but the Hindus as the original inhabitants of the country cannot do so. It is a most heart-rending and shameful spectacle that the Hindus, bidding good-bye to patriotism and nationalism, should for the protection of their imaginary communal interests seek shelter with those who hold the reins of autocratic government over the country. From considerations of self-interest Muslims are opposing the Congress and are supporting the bureaucracy. The astute rulers have won them over to their side to seduce the Hindus also from their path of duty and it is most deplorable that a section of the Hindus is playing into their hands and thereby postponing the day of the attainment of Swaraj.

The Hedjaz conference.

The Indian Daily Telegraph regards the Hedjaz conference as a success. It recognizes that "there is a strong feeling against Sultan Ibn Saud, and there can be no idea of a truce, let alone peace, with him and his intractable councillors," but is "left in a state of harrowing suspense as to the adjustment of means and ends to achieve a common purpose." The Aligarh Mail recognizes that the conference has done some good by bringing together some elements that were considered to be irreconcilable but thinks that the promoters of the conference can do very little in finding a solution to the Hedjaz problem. It thinks that they could have done much more good if they had directed their attention to a consideration and formulation of a common programme with regard to Indian problems. The Hamdam writes:—The Indian Hedjaz conference was a greater success than its organizers and supporters had expected, but now it is the duty of Muslims to carry out its proposals and thereby regain the freedom of offering their prayers in the centre of Islam, assure themselves regarding the protection of the green dome and completely remove the danger of non-Muslim interference with it. The Haq draws attention to the difficulties of Indian Muslims in adopting some effective programme for rescuing the Hedjaz from the domination and excesses of Ibn Saud and says:—The Muslims of India are unarmed while their adversary with the help of his supporters is equipped with the best of weapons and has a trained army at his command. A war with Ibn Saud is bound to create difficulties for the Indians on account of the distance and the obstructions which can and are likely to be thrown by others. Affairs will go from bad to worse if we seek the help of those who while posing as embodiments of innocence are gloating over the whole affair. The Sarfaraz suggests that the first thing the conference should do is to send deputations to all Islamic countries to impress upon them that no good can be expected from the so-called Motmar and that active steps are needed for the expulsion of Ibn Saud from the Hedjaz. Effective measures should be taken for the postponement of the next Haj and in this way a complete non-cooperation with Ibn Saud should be observed all over the Islamic world.

Indian States.

The Hamdam publishes the proceedings of a meeting held at Kabul to protest against the attitude of the British Government towards the Indian princes in general, and the Nizam in particular. During the presidential address, it is stated, " frontier brethren" in general excitement exclaimed " We are ready for every service. Khan Sahib Muhammad Zakria Khan Popalzai is our representative. We are ready to sacrifice our lives and property in the path of God." The president said:—" Muslims should bear in mind that the weakening of the Nizam is the weakening of Islam in India." While moving a resolution Agha Syed Ali Wajid Bukhari said:—" In pursuance of its old policy the English Government wants to weaken all the Native States situated in India or on the border and to divide the free border tribes into small batches. We want to say in clear terms that if the Government does not discard its policy of interfering in the internal affairs of the Nizam the frontier tribes will not mind even sacrificing their lives and property in support of the Nizam."

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the order said to have been issued by the Patiala Darbar prohibiting instruction in the Quran and Hadis throughout the state the Aligarh Mail writes:—If the report that has reached this office is correct, then this order covers religious lectures, as well as the instructions given in mosques. No administration, even if it attempted, could have issued a more foolish order than the one issued by the Darbar. The Medina regards the institution of the case against the editor of Al Aman (Delhi) for publishing a Fatwa as extremely imprudent and as an undue interference with religious liberty and says:—If it was intended to punish some one for the religious Fatwa and thereby put fetters on the publication of Islamic injunctions the authors of the Fatwa and not the poor editor should have been arrested. Does the Government think that its past actions were insufficient to bring home to the Muslims that their religion is not safe under British Government and that the infliction of a fresh wound was necessary? Al Barid takes strong exception to the pamphlet entitled " Din Islam aur Uski ishaat " (Islam and its propagation), published by an Arya preacher named Lakshman and printed at the Star Press, Delhi. The paper says that it contains very insolent and objectionable passages against the prophet Muhammad and is bound to wound the feelings of Muslims and to enrage them and therefore it urges the Government to take proper steps against the author and to stop its publication.

The Najibabad disturbances.

The Medina admits that the Najibabad disturbance was initiated by Muslims but attributes it to the aggressive, intolerant and retaliatory spirit engendered by the Shuddhi and Sangathan movements and the local boards elections. It goes on to say:—Najibabad is the cradle of these movements. Seeing the activities of the Hindus the Muslims also inaugurated tabligh and tanzim. These communal activities produced extreme tension between the two communities and left no room for forbearance, tolerance and sobriety. There are in both communities people whose aims and aspirations can be fulfilled only through disturbances. The disturbance in question was as sudden as it was unexpected. It is a matter for pride for us that the Muslims did not allow the fair name of their community to be sullied by making cowardly attacks on women, old persons and isolated pedestrians. The attacks on Muslims were cowardly, so much so that a Muslim municipal servant who was lighting lamps in the streets of a Hindu muhalla was cruelly beaten to death by a few sangathanist heroes and thrown into the river. On the other hand Muslims suffered injury in their efforts to save helpless and innocent Hindus. In this way Muslims gained a decisive moral victory. It is for fair-minded persons to judge which community has a monopoly of cowardice, aggressiveness, hatred and enmity. We cannot say whether Malaviyaji and Company's Sangathan has been successful or not, but if success can be achieved only through the blood of innocent people we say the murder of the municipal servant has rendered the life of Malaviyaji successful and he can boast of it throughout his long life.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Emphasizing the need of organizing a Muslim party the Aligarh Mail says that the disorganization of Muslim forces and the disintegration of their collective life has, time and again, resulted in their just and legitimate claims being ignored and their rights trampled on by other aggressive and dominant communities of India. What was it if not organized protest that scared the Bengal Government into not arresting Pandit Malaviya and Dr. Moonje when they entered Calcutta in spite of the ban put on them by the Calcutta authorities? Why did the authorities at Allahabad dare arrest two such leading Muslim religious leaders as Maulana Vilayat Husain and Maulana Rashid? In the course of an editorial article the Abhyudaya attributes the present growth of communal hooliganism in the country to the policy of divide and rule and says that in its foreign policy towards Muslim states the British Government also seeks to meet the demands of communal hooliganism in India. All that is being done has rendered the position of the Hindus very critical. On the one hand the Government is displeased with them because they take part in Swaraj agitation and on the other the Muslims are angry with them because they neither yield to Islamic communal prejudices nor take part in the pan-Islamic movement for handing over India to other foreigners after liberating her from the British.

Music before mosques.

Referring to the comments of Hindu papers on the remarks made by Miss Zakia Sulaiman, the Egyptian educationalist, that there were no "such silly question" in Egypt as music before mosques the Aligarh Mail remarks:—No people in the world are possessed with such an inordinate desire of disturbing others while at prayer as our Hindu friends appear to be and, therefore, there is naturally "no such silly question in Egypt." It is not "political Maulanas" but thoroughly communal Pandits, morbid Lalas and reactionary Swamis and biased journalists who have indefatigably worked to give the utmost prominence to the question so as to consolidate Hindu forces for aggression against Muslims.

The Kakori dacoity case.

Referring to the Government communiqué on the hunger-strike of the accused in the Kakori dacoity case the Pratab wants to know why special treatment cannot be meted out to them and says:—The points dealt with in the communiqué are so weak, hollow and silly that it is useless to comment on them. We know that the jail diet is worthless. All the vegetables grown in jails are in the first instance supplied to European officers in dalis and the residue is consumed by the jail employees. The prisoners get only grass and leaves. The flour can be called flour only by courtesy. However, all that we want is that those educated youths who are of good character should be accorded at least the same treatment as is meted out to Europeans and Anglo-Indians convicted of robbery, theft, bad-livelihood, deception and adultery. Everybody knows that the Government holds them to be political prisoners. It should, therefore, treat them according to their status.

Jhusi riot case.

The Sainik holds the sentence passed in the Jhusi riot case as extremely harsh and asks if the award of capital punishment to six Hindus for the life of one Muslim is of the nature of a remedy for the Hindu-Muslim disturbances. The Anand regards the sentences as unprecedented in their severity and asks whether all rioters will henceforth be dealt with very severely or that this severity was meant only for the Hindus of Jhusi?

Indians in Berlin Zoo.

The Vivek says that it is on account of their subjection that a hundred Indians are being exhibited in a zoo in Germany. We have not the strength to adopt practical measures against this disgrace. Liberty is the only means to put a stop to this shameful insult.

Foreign ghee.

The Arya Patra says that if it is correct that the foreign ghee which is sold as vegetable ghee in the market is an admixture of paraffin and nickel the Government should take immediate steps to stop its import. The Oudh Akhbar also makes a similar complaint and suggestion.

Foreign affairs.

The Hamdam strongly protests against the treatment accorded by Japan to her "distinguished guest" Raja Mahendra Pratap and attributes it to her desire to please the "Foreign Power" which considers him to be its enemy. In another article, denouncing the massacre of even non-combatant peaceful citizens in the Syrian war, it remarks: Has the life of an Asiatic Muslim no value at all? The callousness evinced by the French in Syria is an ugly blot on the entire civilization of the West. After such attitude of France and the silence of other European Powers can feelings of love and sincerity exist in the hearts of the Asiatic people for the standard-bearers of Western civilization? Condemning the attitude of British mine-owners in rejecting the "most reasonable and just" demands of the workers the Mansur writes: The oppressions of the capitalists are exceeding all bounds and it is therefore incumbent on the Administration to nationalise the mines.

Dasehra at Allahabad.

The orders of the district authorities regarding the Dasehra procession at Allahabad have evoked strong comments in the Hindu press. The Pioneer writes: Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya has received from the Government of the United Provinces the only reply which he could reasonably expect.... It is difficult for the impartial observer to understand why the Hindu leaders should suggest that the people should again rob themselves of the joys and happiness of the festival because of the simple conditions that have been laid down. Supporting the resolution passed at the public meeting held at Allahabad to protest against the attitude of the district authorities regarding the Dasehra procession, the Leader writes: There is no evidence that the Local Government have done anything to impress upon these authorities the necessity of regulating their actions in accordance with the sound principles enunciated by Lord Irwin. It is the duty of the Viceroy to see that the policy laid down by him is faithfully followed in the interests of just, strong and impartial administration and consequently of peace. Not only at Allahabad but at a number of other places the local authorities have been, in the name of law and order, placing unprecedented restrictions on Hindu processions because of the fear of the breach of the peace by a rowdy section of a community which feels emboldened, as is but natural, by every concession to unreasonable and untenable demands. The demand of the Hindus is just and reasonable. It is a demand which no self-respecting Government which wants to govern should ignore. The mere fact that a section of a community has shown proneness to take the law into its hands in several places to establish novel and untenable rights can furnish no justification for restricting the legitimate rights of a law-abiding community. The clear duty of the authorities in such cases is to restrain the would-be law-breakers, vindicate the majesty of law and uphold the rights of citizenship. If they fail to do so, they will be encouraging, however unwittingly, the lawless and forfeiting the confidence of the law-abiding. The Abhyudaya says that far from punishing the offenders Mr. Crosthwaite "hangs" justice. He thinks that if the Ramlila procession is taken out and music is played before mosques, the hooligans will certainly commit breach of peace. If a man possessing common-sense had been in authority he would have either arrested or bound over to keep the peace those from whom breach of peace was apprehended or he would have made some special arrangements to keep them in check. Riots take place through the incapacity and weakness of officials and especially when they yield to the demand of the ruffians and thus encourage injustice. Now the goondas have become so emboldened that the authorities cannot do anything without propitiating them. This is why we say that Mr. Crosthwaite is "hanging" justice. In another article the paper contends that the reply given by the Superintendent of Police, Allahabad, to the President, Ramlila Committee of the town, is an admission of the former's inability to manage the affairs and says that there would have been no harm if Mr. Hollins had said in plain words that if the Hindus wanted to take out the Ramlila procession they should obey the orders of the Muslims. Mr. Hollins asks the Hindus to act according to the advice of the authorities. We ask whether after the Dadhikando experience the authorities still deserve the confidence of the people. The paper regards Mr. R. N. Basu's reply to the superintendent of police as irrefutable and says that Mr. Basu is right in declaring that the Hindus have begun to think that the reign of law has ceased and that of intimidation has taken its place. The reason why the Hindus have not yet taken the law into their own hands is that they are peace-loving and are afraid of even killing an ant and that their leaders prevent them from doing so. At present the Hindus of Allahabad are very excited. Voices are being raised on all sides that the Ramlila procession should be taken out in the usual manner whether the authorities permit the Hindus to do so or not. The Hindus also say that they should take out the Ramlila procession even if it costs them two or four thousand men in dead and injured. But even then they are quiet and the only change that has come over them is that they have lost all confidence in the local authorities and have begun to think that they will not be able to celebrate Ramlila so long as the present collector and the kotwal remain here. The replies of the collector and the superintendent of police show that the Government is unable to prevent the mischief and the excesses of the ruffians and therefore it wants to maintain peace by coercing peaceful citizens. The Aj says that every citizen in general, and every Hindu citizen in particular, will be grieved to read the contents of the correspondence between the President of the Ramlila Committee and the district authorities of Allahabad. There is no doubt that a breach of peace is very likely in case no restrictions are imposed. But neither the collector nor the superintendent of police states who is likely to commit breach of peace and trample upon the law and the rights of citizenship. The authorities are preventing the Hindus from performing a religious observance which is not unlawful. This is a triumph of badmashes. This is a victory of those who take the law into their hands and trample upon the rights of citizens and the authorities are siding with them. This is a terrible situation and it is the duty of every citizen and not only of Hindus to protest and take measures against it. This can be accomplished only by peaceful and non-violent satyagrah. The Deshbandhu writes: We want to tell Mr. Crosthwaite that the Hindus of Allahabad are not timid. They can offer satyagraha for asserting their rights. If the Hindu Sabha has been established really with a view to protect the rights of the Hindus and not only to secure seats in Councils for its members, why does it hesitate to take out its religious and sacred processions? The Government is foreign. It only wants to strengthen its hold and does not care about the Hindus taking out the Ramlila procession or the Muslims saying their prayers. We fail to understand why the Hindu sabha is supplicating for the help of the authorities. One's religion can be protected only by one's own strength and it loses its greatness if it is protected with the help of others. The Vartman writes: No one is prepared to believe that the Government has really become so weak as to be obliged to bow down before a handful of persons throwing brick-bats. We ought to ponder over the question why the Government is not as anxious to protect Hindu interests as it is to protect the religious liberty of other communities. It has become evident that the Government does not hesitate to ignore the sentiments of lakhs of Hindus in favour of those of a few hundred non-Hindus. Why have Hindus become so hollow and yielding that it has become easy to ignore them? They ought to make it clear that there can be no compromise in their religious matters and that they cannot tolerate a blow on their religion. Their religion is in danger. In another article the paper says: Through their short-sightedness or negligence or weakness of policy the local authorities allow such a situation to be created as to lead to a riot when none would have taken place. The administration of the District Magistrate of Allahabad has been proved to be full of gross partiality and injustice. If the collector is thus bent on trampling upon the civic rights of Allahabad the Hindus should also make up their mind that they will not allow the unjust policy of the authorities and the arbitrariness of some Muslim goondas to have their way. It is useless to take out the Ramlila procession or to celebrate any other festival of this kind so long as officers like Mr. Crosthwaite are at Allahabad. All Hindu sabhas of the province should help the Hindus of Allahabad by holding meetings and should not sit quiet until the question of music before mosques is dropped altogether. Al Bashir complains of the obstinacy of the Hindus of Allahabad regarding the playing of music before mosques during the Dasehra procession but advises the "helpless Muslims who have no organizer, no wealth and no protector and who have already suffered enough from these riots," to try their best to keep aloof from all quarrels. It says that Muslims will be provoked in every way but they should calmly represent their just grievances to the authorities and carry out the orders passed by Government.

The Allahabad disturbances.

The Medina writes: We are convinced that the Government's autocratic officials can never do justice to Muslims in connexion with the disturbances and that the Government will always remain afraid of the majority, the propaganda and the wealth of the Hindus. In reply to the excesses committed by the Hindus on Muslims at Allahabad, Farrukhabad, Najibabad and other places even the Muslim theologians have been arrested. This shows conclusively that far from expecting any concession or help the Muslims should not hope for even bare justice at the hands of the Government and should never initiate a riot. If the Hindus give vent to their brutal propensities on the strength of ephemeral powers you should watch it quietly and patiently and get your claims adjudicated on by the so-called courts of law. How is it that fiery speakers like Pandit Malaviya and Moonje should be released in spite of their breaking the law and an old and aged theologian like Maulana Fakhir should be arrested? Fie on this justice! The Mashriq says: The arrest of Maulanas Fakhir and Vilayat Husain is a disgrace to the Muslim community, as unfortunately it does not command the power enjoyed by the Hindus which humiliated the Presidency Magistrate of Calcutta and the Government of Bengal in Pandit Malaviya's case. These are inauspicious signs for the Government. The riots at Fatehpur, Shahabad, Saharanpur, Lucknow, Allahabad, Jhusi, etc., conclusively prove that the Hindus and the authorities are more to blame than the Muslims. Things are becoming more and more intolerable. Protesting against the proposed expulsion of vegetable-sellers from the Municipal market of Allahabad Al Aziz says:—The Hindus are for the third time making the experiment of opening a new sabzi mandi and are making their co-religionists take an oath that they would not purchase vegetables from any other mandi. We cannot imagine the seriousness of the trouble which will befall the city if, being overawed, the Commissioner accepts the resolution passed by the Municipal Board.

Election campaign.

The election campaign has suddenly brought into being a number of new papers. The Abhyudaya, the Sainik, and Haq have become daily and the Vartman of Cawnpore is being issued in Urdu also. The Deshbandhu has been started to champion the cause of the Swaraj party. The Indian Daily Telegraph, the Sainik, and the Aj are vigorously supporting the Swarajists and carrying on an incessant and vehement campaign against the Liberal and the Independent Congress Party. The Leader, the Abhyudaya, the Surya, and the Anand are among the most powerful opponents of the Swaraj party. The Abhyudaya is the chief organ of the Independent Congress Party. Muslim papers have begun to advocate the formation of a solid Muslim party to safeguard Muslim interests in the Legislature. Many of them regard the Independent Congress party as a tool of the Sangathanists. The party organs are indulging in a good deal of recrimination. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes: Co-operation does not appeal to the Swarajist because he is not concerned with the crumbs which fall to the few. "Nations by themselves are made" and, thanks to the Swarajist propaganda, the dry bones in the open valley are becoming instinct with life. What attracts the forward school in Indian politics to the electors is not the results but the opportunity for campaigning. The Anand says that the Congress by falling into the clutches of the Swaraj party has been drifting into a deplorable condition and the members of the Independent Congress Party who have determined to effect reforms in the Congress from within are the true servants of the country. All well-wishers of the country will do well to join the new party, if they are anxious to purge the Congress of party divisions and make it a really national body fit to lead the country in the struggle for Swaraj. Commenting on the formation of the Independent Congress Party in the United Provinces and on the manifesto recently issued by it the j says that it is impossible to find another instance in which the name of an institution has been prostituted to nullify its objects and discredit it in the public eye.

The aims and the programme of this new party which abuses the name of the Congress are those which were followed by the Liberals. The name of the Congress has been added to the party only to take advantage of its prestige and to secure entry into the Councils by throwing dust in the eyes of the people. For ourselves we think that swaraj will be attained only through the efforts of the people, through their sacrifices, and sufferings and not through work and speeches in Councils. The Medina takes Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to task for utilizing the Independent Congress Party for furthering the aims of the Hindu Sabha and says: If the Muslims are convinced that the Congress has become a Hindu organization and that their interests cannot be safeguarded by remaining in it, they should organize a solid Muslim party striving whole-heartedly for the freedom of India and their religion. They should also send to the Legislatures representatives who while fighting for the liberty of India will also strive to safeguard the rights of Muslims. In another article the paper supports the action of the Jamiat-ul-ulema in rescinding the fatwa against Council entry and appeals to Maulanas Muhammad Ali and Shaukat Ali, Dr. Kitchlew, and other Muslim leaders to move with the times and serve the country and their religion through Councils. It says that as the place of Legislatures in politics has become inevitable there is no reason why they should not be utilized. Referring to Lala Lajpat Rai's address to the Muslims at Patna in which he appealed to the Muslims to draw up a programme and then ask for the support of Hindus, the Hamdam says: We also believe that if the Muslims organize themselves and lead a truly religious life they can achieve success in their efforts to attain swaraj, but during the last century the policy of the Government and the callousness and selfishness of their Hindu brethren have so much weakened the Muslims that it is difficult for them to traverse alone the thorny path of swaraj. Muslims should respond to Lala Lajpat Rai's appeal and along with communal reform they should draw up a vigorous and effective programme for the freedom of their country and invite the Hindu disciples of the Lala Sahib to co-operate with them. The Azad regrets that as an adverse result of the recent political awakening a considerable number of inefficient and selfish men have the audacity to oppose the best men. The Swaraj party has already acquired notoriety for preferring, out of party feeling, ordinary men to able and honest persons. These defects are to be seen even in the new Independent Congress Party.

The Hedjaz Conference.

The Aligarh Mail supports the resolution passed by the Hedjaz Conference regarding the postponement of the Haj and suggests that strong and organized efforts should be made to persuade the Muslims to postpone their pilgrimage until some settlement is reached on the Hedjaz question. It also suggests that all the Muslim bodies that have been formed to watch over the extra-territorial interests of the Indian Musalmans should at once be amalgamated and the Khilafatists and Harmainites should put forth their united efforts if they have any wish to achieve their end. The Medina ridicules the proceedings of the conference and remarks that its promoters were quite indifferent when during the Great War the holy places of Islam were being subjected to the tyrannies of the foreigners. The reason was, says the paper, that then it was dangerous to do anything in the matter as they would have been deported or otherwise summarily punished by the British Government. Now, however, they can indulge in lamentations with impunity. The major portion of the presidential address was devoted to impracticable propositions and has rendered the solution of the Hedjaz problem more complex. There are no doubt certain innocent proposals which would have deserved the practical support of Muslims if they had no other work in view. But the problems relating to Indian independence, the efforts of the Hindus to gain supremacy, and the disorganization among Muslims call for all the powers and resources which Muslims can command. Al Bashir remarks that it is wiser to set one's own house in order before meddling in the affairs of others. The Sada-i-Muslim says: Everyone in touch with current politics understands what Faisal's visit to London and the grand reception accorded to him mean. The fact is that both Britain and France are anxious to increase their influence in the Hedjaz and so they are always ready to help Ibn Saud. In these circumstances it seems almost impossible to establish an independent Government in the country unless its financial condition is very much improved. Therefore the best thing to do would be to establish an organization which the Muslims all over the world could join. Every member of this organization should be a servant of Harmain and should devote a portion of his income to the protection and safety of the Hedjaz. This is the only means by which Britain and France can be compelled to abandon their machinations in the holy land. The Sadaqat is gratified at the representative character and success of the conference and hopes that if India utilizes all her resources in giving effect to the resolutions, its object will be fulfilled.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In the course of an article contributed to the Hindi Punch the writer, Kshemanand Rahat, writes: There are two ugly wounds in the body-politic of India, namely, Muslim hooliganism and Hindu cowardice. This hooliganism is not much to be condemned as it shows that there is life in hooligans though it follows wrong channels. If it is diverted in right channels it can become a force in the country. But, alas! in what terms is that shameless cowardice to be condemned which impels people to leave their children, mothers, and sisters to the mercy of cruel goondas and conceal themselves in latrines. Such a man is a disgrace not only to the Hindu community but to the whole country. Owing to centuries of slavery the Hindu community has lost altogether its manliness for the sake of false peace. Even under Muslim rule the Hindus were not so cowardly. Hindus are only wanting in manliness. They will have to be taught to die. We shall have to love death. The day the Hindus imbibe manliness all evils, all sorts of hooliganism will disappear. The Aziz Hind remarks that some of the Hindu leaders taking advantage of H. E. the Viceroy's anxiety regarding communal tension are trying to impress upon the Government that the riots are due to the system of separate communal representation and are thus seeking to deprive the Muslims of their rights. The Muslims, having no good leaders, look up to H. E. Lord Irwin for the preservation of their rights and request him to adopt the reassuring and pacific policy of Lord Minto regarding Indian States and Muslim claims. The Agra Akhbar exhorts the Muslims not to join the Dasehra or similar Hindu processions. The Medina commends the action of the Bengal Government in providing that eighteen of the candidates for the competitive examination held by the Department of Revenue and Trade should be Muslims and says: The experiences of Muslim students under non-Muslim teachers in Government schools are painful. The paucity of Muslim boys in Government schools is mostly due to the narrow-mindedness, inattention, bigotry, and callousness of Hindu teachers at the time of examinations. The difficulties which Muslim candidates have to encounter in departmental examinations or securing employment, on account of the array of Hindu officials, are indescribable. If the examiners are Muslims the Muslims will have no complaint regarding the holding of competitive examinations.

Indian States.

In the course of a letter to the Himalayan Times on the alleged suicide by Tika Raghunath Singh of Patiala State the Maharaja of Nabha writes: Undoubtedly a great mystery surrounds this tragic occurrence and in view of the fact that several other well-known prisoners are also rotting in Patiala jail, would it be too much to hope and expect that H. E. Lord Irwin will see that full justice is done? The Trishul contains a letter in which the writer, who signs himself as "A Resident of Gwalior," complains that the condition of the Hindus of the State is getting worse every day. As the Regent-Maharani acts according to the advice of Hashmatullah Khan the administration of the State is being virtually carried on in accordance with his wishes. We want to ask the Government of India whether it has tested the qualifications of Hashmatullah Khan for the post of "Membership"? The people of Gwalior are greatly pained at the doings of the Maharani. The Medina takes the News of the World severely to task for circulating false reports against the Nizam, especially the one that he is not popular even among the Muslims of India. It says: The real fact is that by his intelligence, love of Islam and of his subjects, justice and benevolence, the Nizam has won over the heart of every Muslim. There is no Muslim in India who does not regard the Nizam as a relic of their past glory. To-day the question of the relations between the Nizam and the Government of India is being commented upon even in Afghanistan and Turkey. As a matter of fact the entire Muslim world stands by him.

Political propaganda.

The Hamdam deplores the absence of nationalism among Indians and urging them to unite together says: If Indians, inspired by patriotism, adopt a national or political creed there will be an end of Hindu-Muslim riots and the slavery of the mother country. To achieve this end it is not any "pact" but self-sacrifice which is needed. Commenting on the news published in the Bhishma (Punjab) that on medical examination about one-third of the students of a certain girls' school in Lahore were found to be pregnant. Al Khalil says that if the report is correct it will produce a very bad effect on the spread of female education in India and regrets that in the departments controlled by Government no attention is paid to morality. Proceeding, the paper refers to the corruption in Government offices and courts and says that the Government is directly responsible for the brazen-faced bribery which is rampant in Government departments, as it deliberately connives at it and does not accord any recognition to the man who does not take bribes. The general effect of the present constitutional Government has been that respect for elders, regard for religion, and fear of God have been destroyed.

Music before mosques.

The Aligarh Mail complains that by their noise and jaikaras, always made at the time of evening prayer and just in front of the mosques, the Hindus make it practically impossible for the Muslims to offer their prayers in peace. Their insistence on playing even louder music and making more noise just when they reach a mosque, has no other meaning but that the Muslims should either change their time of evening prayers, or shift their mosques outside the limits of a city. Both these demands the Muslims are unable to accept.

Indians in the colonies.

The Haqiqat welcomes the assurance given by the South African deputation regarding the treatment of Indians in South Africa and exhorts Indians to render all possible help to the deputation in studying this intricate problem. The Medina wonders why Mr. Gandhi, Pandit Motilal Nehru, Mr. Andrews, and Mrs. Naidu, who are the true representatives of India, are not being included in the Indian deputation which will visit South Africa in connexion with the Round Table Conference. It adds: Does not this show that the Government of India does not want to put any pressure on the Government of South Africa? Indifference towards the tale of the woes of Indians has characterized the attitude of the Government of India from the very beginning. It has always betrayed partiality to the white-skinned people. We have to say with regret that this indifference and apathy of the Government of India will tax the patience of Indians in the extreme.

Translation of the Agra Tenancy Bill.

A good deal of animated controversy is going on about the Hindi translation of the Agra Tenancy Bill. Muslim papers complain that the translation contains difficult Sanskrit words and expressions and regard this as a move against the Urdu language. The Hindu papers refute this criticism and say that the translation is quite suitable for the Hindi-knowing tenants and contend that Muslim papers are not competent and have no business to criticize the translation.

Foreign Affairs.

Advising Turkey not to join the League of Nations, the Aligarh Mail writes:—There is little doubt that after entering the League, Turkey would find herself forced to follow the League policy, which is decidedly and quite naturally anti-Russian. The question that should be considered in this connexion is, who would prove a better friend to Turkey, the League or Russia? The lords of the League are incapable of giving Turkey a better treatment than that already granted to other nations of Asia. Why should Turkey reject Russian friendship for the doubtful advantage that she would receive by her League membership? From a review of the census of religious belief conducted by the Nation and Atheneum the Aligarh Mail comes to the conclusion that Christianity is no longer a factor in the every-day life of the millions of so-called Christians and writes:—The Church dignitaries want them to subscribe to a religion which is not only inconsistent with every dictate of nature and reason, but the acceptance of which is simply an insult to one's intelligence. They want them to believe in dogmas which are on the face of them ridiculous . . . We hope our Muslim brethren will avail themselves of this psychological wave pervading throughout the length and breadth of Christendom, and try to bring them one and all into the fold of Islam and thus carry out the dying injunction of our beloved Prophet who enjoined upon us to spread the "word of God all the world over." The Aj says that the admission of Germany to the permanent council of the League of Nations has made it clear that the League has now openly become a clique of European imperialists aiming at world-wide domination. Indians will do well to keep an eye on international affairs so that they may be ready for self-defence when necessary. Commenting on the disputes between Arabs and Jews the Vivek writes:—The internal conditions in Palestine show how the snare of the mandate has been spread there to promote the interests of Britain. There was no racial animosity there formerly, but it was desirable in the interests of British trade to create the racial question so that the British might strengthen their hold over the country. This shows what devices European countries adopt to promote their commercial interests.

Dasehra at Allahabad.

Hindu papers of all shades of opinion are vehemently protesting against the restrictions imposed with regard to the Dasehra procession at Allahabad and the extremists among them are exhorting the Hindus to resort to civil disobedience. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—One need not be a Hindu deeply to sympathise with the Hindus of Allahabad whose Ramlila rituals have been frustrated by the bungling of the authorities. We wonder if the authorities realize the gravity of the situation. If fanatical or hooligan demands threatened to disturb a usage gratuitously, it was the duty of the Government to use the provisions of the law and check the menace. The authorities have in these circumstances committed a blunder in truckling to a section that threatened encroachments on existing rights. How can the Government dare frivol with established practices to please new-bred sentiments of communalism? By their blunder the Government have set the two communities at loggerheads. If the machiavellian policy of "divide and rule" were their motive, the Government could not have done better. Civic status consists of the sum of claims and forbearances, and by interfering with established relationships the Government have sown the seeds of trouble. The Leader writes:—The reply of His Excellency the Governor to the message of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya conveying the resolution passed at the protest meeting of the Hindus held at Allahabad on October 5 amounts to nothing less than a support of the policy which the local authorities have been pursuing and of the untenable Muslim claim and to a declaration that the position taken up by the Hindus is unjustifiable and unreasonable. Such a reply cannot but intensify their resentment and deepen their sense of dissatisfaction. "The Hindus will be betraying their rights of citizenship if they yield to novel demands which have been sought to be backed up in several places by force, and which, it now appears, have also the support of Government. The fight for an important principle which affects the every-day life of the Hindus and a surrender of which must lead to endless trouble must continue along constitutional lines until Government come to realize their mistake. The policy which the Government are upholding is indefensible, short-sighted and unjust, and cannot, therefore, be accepted by the Hindus." The paper says that the Hindus of Allahabad do not admit the correctness of the record said to have been prepared in 1912, and adds that those responsible for organizing the Ramlila processions and many old and respectable citizens who have witnessed them deny that there was stoppage of music before mosques at prayer time. In a subsequent issue the paper writes :—The reply of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya on behalf of the Ramlila committees to the Chief Secretary to the United Provinces Government effectively exposes the hollowness of the plea urged in defence of the attitude of the local authorities. It ought to convince any impartial judge that custom, law, justice and reason are on the side of the Hindus. If a section of a community seeks to curtail or interfere with this valued right by resort to undesirable and barbarous methods, it is the clear duty of a Government which claims to be civilized to take strong measures to check it and not to take shelter behind pleas of law and order, and to plead its helplessness to prevent a breach of the peace if it allowed the exercise of this right in contravention of the will and pleasure of the rowdy section. The issue is plain, but it is very regrettable that instead of facing it boldly Government have supported a policy which is essentially unsound, unjust, and one not calculated to enhance the prestige of the administration. Sooner or later, in their own interest, if not those of the Hindus, the Government will have to abandon their policy of drift and to assert the authority over the forces of lawlessness. Commenting on the suggestion of the Superintendent of Police of Allahabad regarding the Dasehra procession the Aligarh Mail writes :--No suggestion can be more reasonable or can better serve the cause of public peace in Allahabad on the occasion of the coming Ramlila, but Hindu communalism is unbending and does not appear to listen to reason. Mr. Basu's reply to the Police Superintendent reveals the typical mentality of the Hindu communalist whose creed it has become to create as much musical nuisance as possible before mosques just when prayers are being said. Hindu musical processions have often been made to pass mosques with a view deliberately to annoy the Muslims, disturb their prayers and, above all, to manifest that Sangathanized Hindus are a power to reckon with. Such is the criminality of our Hindu communalist countrymen. In another article the paper writes:—The Governor of the United Provinces has sent a crushing reply to Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in answer to the resolution passed by the Sangathanist meeting at Allahabad. As every reasonable and sane man would see, it was the only answer that could have been given, but in their religious frenzy and intolerance and blinded with their lust for political domination the Sangathanist press and public are absolutely incapable of taking a sane and rational view of anything. Their real aim is to cow down the Government and to break the spirit of the Musalmans so that in future they may usurp all the political power without meeting any protests from the Muslims or any check from the Government. This is their game and who can say that they are not playing for high stakes? Commenting on the abandonment of Ramlila celebrations at Allahabad, Aligarh and Etawah and referring to the telegrams which have been sent to His Excellency the Governor, Sir Alexander Muddiman and the Viceroy, the Pratap deplores that the assistance of Government bayonets is being sought for the protection of Hindu rights, and says :--The order of the Superintendent of Police of Allahabad shows that the right of the Hindus to play music at all times has been trampled under foot. But the leaders of the Hindus of Allahabad say that they will not do anything this year, but if the authorities do not change their attitude next year they shall see. There can be no more striking instance of impotent rage than this. It is vain to expect anything from constitutional agitation. Hindu interests can be safeguarded by self-help and suffering alone. We appeal to all the Hindu leaders to adopt some such policy of direct action as may enable them to prevent the repetition of the infringement of their rights on such occasions. They should turn the sacred city of Prayag into a field of fighting for their rights. These orders of the Government will have to be infringed. The welfare of the Hindus and non-Hindus does not lie in worshipping the officials but in organizing themselves and cultivating soul force. In the course of an impassioned article the Vartman takes the Hindus of Allahabad and specially Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to task for submitting to the orders of the local authorities regarding the Dasehra procession and not resorting to satyagraha at once. It says :—Although the lives of unarmed Hindus were twice exposed to danger Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya still expects something from the bureaucracy. Had the Government meant to do justice and to protect the rights of Hindus who out of respect for law allow their heads to be broken, it would have dismissed the Collector and other officials of Allahabad the very day the Dadhikando procession was attacked in their presence . . . The action of the Government on this occasion clearly shows that in future it will not discharge the duty of making and enforcing laws and that it will be a few goondas who will make and violate them. The Government which defeated Germany cannot have the Ramlila procession taken out for fear of three or four hundred goondas! Do the Hindus of Allahabad attach any value to the laws of such a weak Government? The British bureaucracy does not grant rights through mendicancy. Hindus of Allahabad! Can't you think of the weapon of satyagraha in order to remove the obstinacy of the Collector of Allahabad? Today the whole province is with you. Young men of Allahabad! Standing at the banks of the Ganges think of the ascetics of Jhusi and of their self-sacrifice. In the name of the protection of religion, in the name of the Hindu community, in the name of the Motherland, raising the cry of " Har Har Mahadeva," relieve the authorities of Allahabad of the fear inspired by a few goondas by holding out the threat of creating disturbances. First purge the law and then obey it. The honour of three crores of Hindus of these provinces is in your keeping. Commenting on the reply received from the Local Government to the resolutions protesting against the orders of the district authorities of Allahabad in connexion with Ramlila, the Aj remarks that no sensible man can now doubt that the Hindus have no course left for them but to resort to peaceful non-violent satyagraha, and to complete non-cooperation with the authorities. It is impossible to describe the shock which the action of the authorities has caused to the Hindus. The duty of the officials is to restrain those who create disturbances during lawful and customary celebrations. But here things are quite the other way. The bureaucracy siding with rioters, restrains those who wish peacefully to perform their time-honoured religious functions. This policy cannot be countered by mere resolutions. By stopping their religious functions the Hindus can never compel the bureaucracy to discharge its duty. The only remedy is peaceful and non-violent satyagraha. The Hindus should be ready to suffer and if need be even to sacrifice their lives for the sake of their religion and their civic rights. The Abhyudaya challenges the accuracy of the official record prepared in 1911 regarding the practice of stopping music before mosques at prayer time and says:—Hundreds of thousands of people used to witness the playing of music before mosques at prayer time. Thousands of respectable Hindus and Muslims can give evidence to this effect. Secondly, if the Kotwali diary says this, what do the records of Katra and Daraganj police stations say? No one can object to the Governor supporting his officials, but the world will surely say that he is not upholding justice and that he has regard only for the record of the Kotwali and not for the country's voice. In another article it says that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's reply to the Government's telegram regarding the Dasehra processsion at Allahabad is unanswerable. It is incomprehensible to us, says the paper, why the administration has become so weak that the rowdies have ceased to fear it and peace can now be maintained only by fearing the hooligans. What the authorities have said and done so far has instead of restraining the rowdies and the Muslims only encouraged them. By displaying so much zeal for stopping music the authorities have proclaimed that the new Muslim demand is just. We repeat that the Hindus may be repressed now, but some day the authorities will themselves have to bear the consequences of the growing anarchy. It will, however, be too late when their eyes open. The playing of music before mosques will not lead us to heaven. What the Hindus contend is that they will not bow down to high-handedness, as its results will be most dangerous and there is no knowing where this will end. The Vartman writes:—Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's reply to the Government's letter is an object of pride for Hindus. We warmly thank him for administering a smart slap on the face of the crooked policy of the authorities. The Vivek says that as the Government thinks that its stability lies in communal quarrels, it is altogether futile to look up to it for help or to create trouble by offering satyagraha. The people should remember that there is an enemy in their midst who stands to gain by the communal fire being kept up. They should, therefore, not think of mutual head-breaking, but should make up their minds to extinguish this fire. It is no real victory or glorious thing to get the Ramlila procession taken out under the protection of British bayonets or by means of satyagraha. This will not only keep the thorn in its own place, but spread its poison throughout the body. The Surya remarks that if the authorities of Allahabad cannot make such arrangements as to enable the people to exercise their rights of citizenship without accepting restrictions or if no procession can be taken out there without a riot, they had better resign to make room for other officials who can make such arrangements. The Anand says :—The Hindus of all strata of society should raise their united voice for removing this injustice and should let the Government know that they cannot allow their religious rights to be trampled in this way. The Sainik writes :—If anyone has profited by our mutual quarrels it is the bureaucracy. As the cat lies in ambush for the mouse, so does the bureaucracy lie in wait for Hindu-Muslim disturbances in order to take undue advantage of them. . . When Muslim leaders like Khwaja Hasan Nizami and Maulana Mahomed Ali have declared that Islam does not enjoin the compulsory stopping of music before mosques, why do bureaucrats like Mr. Crosthwaite wish to compel the Hindus to stop music? We think it is not Hindus and Muslims but the limbs of the bureaucracy who are wholly to blame in the matter. The officials have some ulterior object in view. The Hamdam regards the Government's reply to Pandit Malaviya as tactful and reasonable, and regrets that in spite of the sufferings of the last two years the Allahabad public has not yet been able to settle the dispute and the Hindus remain bent on hurting the feelings of Muslims. Pandit Malaviya should have tried for a compromise by asking the Hindus to abandon their imprudent and mischievous attitude, but far from doing so he has patted them on the back. Is there any harm if the procession reaches the bank of the Jamna before sunset? Are there religious injunctions regarding time for the Dasehra procession as there are for the Maghrib prayers? Deploring the decision of the Hindus of Allahabad to abandon the Dasehra celebrations the Khadim remarks :—The abandonment of the procession will continue to agitate the feelings of the public and will have a bad effect even outside the district. Pandit Malaviya's conduct has led some men doubt his sincerity and to suspect that he and his party wish to keep the struggle going in order to ensure success at the coming elections. In another article the papers says :—Our apprehensions regarding Panditji's mistaken policy have been confirmed. We are confident that if instead of challenging the Government to arms Panditji had extended his hand towards the Muslim public, particularly towards Maulana Vilayat Husain, Dasehra would have been celebrated through compromise. We apprehend that the postponement of the Dasehra will have dangerous consequences and hence we are still anxious for a compromise. While deprecating the obstinacy of both the communities the Haqiqat says that Pandit Malaviya's speech at the Hindu public meeting has made the situation worse and has rendered the solution of the problem more difficult. The Sada-i-Muslim warmly commends the reply of the Local Government to Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya' s letter and says :—The Government has proved that the demands of the Hindus are actuated by obstinacy, malice and animosity. The Government's decision is just and must command the support of all fair-minded persons of every community.

The Allahabad disturbances.

The resolution of the Allahabad Municipal Board regarding the expulsion of Muslim vegetable-sellers from the municipal market has evoked angry protests in the Muslim press, and is regarded by some papers as a step towards the gradual expulsion of other sections of the Muslim community as well. In the course of an article the Sada-i-Muslim says :—We cannot find in India any parallel to the troubles with which the Muslims are faced at present on account of mischievous Hindus. Those Hindus who used to consider it a privilege to take part in Muslim functions are to-day, as a result of the activities of a few mischievious Sangathanists, thirsting for the blood of Muslims. Muslims, however, while strengthening their unity should act cautiously so that the feelings of the Hindus may not be hurt. They should not give way to despair owing to the attitude of the Hindus in general, for they are the victims of their mischievous leaders. It is the duty of the Government to watch the conduct of the Sangathanist Hindus so that the Muslims may not be driven to feel that India is under the rule of Sangathanist Hindus and not of the British Government. Are not the evil intentions of mischievous Hindus of Allahabad more than sufficient to show that they wish to shake the prestige of the Government? Does not the resolution of the Municipal Board regarding the expulsion of Muslim vegetable-sellers from the municipal market show that the Municipality is solely under the sway of Sangathanist Hindus and that they have the power to expel Muslims from any part of the city they like. If this resolution is not vetoed by the authorities the Muslims are bound to come to the conclusion that the Muslims have been removed from the aegis of the British Government which was the protector of their lives, property and religion and that they are now under the rule of the Hindu Sangathanists. The Government should know that the Muslims cannot willingly tolerate this and at the risk of their lives they will oppose this tyrannical resolution of the Hindus. We would, therefore, warn the Government that before the Muslims having lost all hopes from it are driven to the last resort, it should realize its responsibility and throw the resolution into the waste-paper basket and bring home to the Hindus that the British are still ruling over India. The Mashriq exhorts the Allahabad Muslims to act with extreme care and caution in the critical and trying situation in which they find themselves at present and says:—The unanimous resolution of the Hindu members of the Municipal Board for the expulsion of the Kunjras from the municipal market has endangered the Muslim interests in that Municipality, and it is now high time for the Commissioner of the division to direct his attention to this state of misrule. The Muslim members did well in walking out of the Board. They should now resign their seats and should carry on a propaganda throughout the province to persuade Muslims of every district to come out of the Boards and not to return to them unless the Government provides for the equal representation of the two communities. This is the only remedy which can bring the Malaviya family to its senses. The Khadim says:—Next to the Moplahs, Frontier tribes and the goondas of Calcutta, the body of the Muslim vegetable-sellers of Allahabad is being looked upon as barbarous and blood-thirsty and their punishment and banishment are considered indispensable for maintaining public peace. It is quite possible that after the vegetable-sellers, the turn of butchers and ekkawalas may come and gradually the expulsion of the entire Muslim community may be regarded as necessary for preserving public peace. Deploring the Allahabad riot the paper says:—Are these riots not a disgrace to India and an ugly blot on its distinguished citizens like Pandit Malaviya, Pandit Motilal, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Mr. Chintamani and others? It will be unjust to blame the authorities and connive at the mean and selfish tactics of the so-called leaders who are really responsible for the Allahabad riots.

Election campaign.

The press is pre-occupied with electioneering propaganda which in most cases is degenerating into personal controversies and recriminations. The Vivek compares the policies of the Swaraj and the Independent Congress parties and says that the policy of the latter party is calculated to weaken the country and lead the national political agitation into wrong and fatal channels. It urges that the people should vote in favour of the candidates of the Swaraj party which inculcates honourable principles for the attainment of freedom. The Vartman vehemently condemns the principles and policy of the Independent Congress party and says that the party has acquired such a bad reputation in the United Provinces that the success of the Swarajists is assured. That party contains moderates and taluqdars who cannot stand up for Congress principles. We do not think it will do any good to the country. The Sainik warns the electors against voting for candidates belonging to the Independent Congress and Hindu Sabha parties which are led by men like Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, who was all his life an opponent of Mr. Tilak, and by Raja Narendra Nath, who was one of those who presented a farewell address to Sir Michael O'Dwyer. The Hindu Sabha has among its members other title-holders also like Raja Narendra Nath. The Government will serve its selfish objects by setting them against other communities. It is waiting with open arms to receive them because in order to win popular applause they will fight over trifles, but in important problems relating to Swaraj they will most loyally support the bureaucracy. The electors should, therefore, vote for Swarajists only who while protecting the communal interests of the Hindus will help in cutting the fetters of subjection. The Desh Bhagat compares Pandit Motilal Nehru to General Hindenburg, and recalling his patriotic services and sacrifices during the martial law régimé in the Punjab and the non-cooperation movement in United Provinces says:—In order to save the country from big official toadies, Rai Bahadurs and nationed traitors who take shelter behind Lala Lajpat Rai and Mr. Malaviya people should do their best to help the Indian Hindenburg in every way and return Congress candidates to the legislatures. Al Bashir remarks that the nomination of the Hon'ble Rai Rajeshwar Bali and the Hon'ble Kunwar Rajendra Singh by the Hindu Sabha as its candidates for the Council shows what sort of views these gentlemen possess. To put such persons in charge of important departments of the province means that Government is placing the Muslims at the mercy of such persons as are anti-Muslim. This is why we have always cursed the Reforms scheme and considered it to be fatal for the country and especially for the Muslims. If these gentlemen are elected as members of the Council on the Hindu Sabha tickets, would they be eligible for the post of Ministers? No person elected on the tickets of the Hindu Sabha is suitable for the post, as it has amply been demonstrated that the Sabha is extremely bigoted and anti-Muslim. The Sada-i-Muslim thanks Maulana Hasrat Mohani for forming the Independent Muslim party and says:—The greatest benefit from the party will be that it will stop the waste of Muslim money and will secure the return of candidates of firm character only who will not echo the voice of other communities while disregarding their own communal interests.

The Hedjaz Conference.

The Medina vehemently criticizes the resolutions passed by the Hedjaz Conference and says that they are calculated to expose the entire Muslim community and religion to ridicule and disgrace. When foreigners see these resolutions they will laugh at our arrogance and selfishness and gloat over our disorganization. If Ibn Saud is sought to be coerced by means of economic boycott, he will be compelled to seek and is sure to secure the help of some of the European Powers. Ibn Saud, no doubt, has done certain things which he ought not to have done, but the best way to deal with him is to create public opinion in Islamic countries in favour of compelling him to hand over the administration of the Hedjaz to the Hedjazis themselves and to serve them as their true servant. Referring to the uneasiness felt among the Muslims of India at Ibn Saud's excesses in the Hedjaz the Sarfaraz urges the Shias of India to establish closer relations with Persia and exchange views with their Persian brethren as now the pointed dagger of Wahabism is cutting the arteries of Islam and Shiaism.

Political propaganda.

The Aj takes the Abhyudaya to task for placing the Congress and the Councils on an equal footing and says that the former is a national institution, while the latter owe their existence to foreigners. Proceeding it says:—The Reforms Act is not merely useless but also detrimental to the interests of India. We, therefore, want that the children of the soil should blacken its face and carry on their struggle for Swaraj with the help of labour, tenantry, the youth and the educated class of the country. We do not want that by vainly striving to make these Reforms a success our revered leaders should present themselves for test before the coming Royal Commission and thus humiliate India in the eyes of the world. We cannot bear to see in these legislatures the fat-salaried servants of the bureaucracy, who eat our salt treating our elected representatives like children or servants.

Dasehra at Allahabad.

THE Hindu press continues to protest vehemently against the restrictions imposed with regard to the Dasehra procession and in the extremist section of it appeals for resort to civil disobedience are becoming insistent. Very few Muslim papers have commented on the subject this week. The Aligarh Mail says that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's letter to the Government of the United Provinces in reply to the communication sent to him by the Government furnishes ample grounds for the study of the Sangathanist mentality. The paper justifies the action of the authorities in imposing restrictions and says: "There is a grave danger to the public peace of Allahabad if the Hindu processionists are given unrestricted permission to take out their processions. Drunk with their double victory against the Government and the Muslims these processionists are bound to commit excesses that would surpass even their own record of the past." The paper deprecates the suggestion for a further inquiry about the timing of the Dasehra procession and says: "The report prepared in 1912 was compiled after due and thorough investigation by impartial people. The contention that the investigation should be re-started is unwise and inopportune. The tension of feelings that now exists at Allahabad makes it practically impossible to get at the truth of the matter just now." Concluding, the paper says: "The shrewd Pandit offers a thousand volunteers to the Government to maintain peace. In other words, he wants to establish a Hindu Raj immediately." Commenting on the hartal observed in Allahabad on the occasion of Dasehra the Abhyudaya says: Today every home will be cursing the Collector and the Government and saying that the Government's policy has so changed that the Hindus cannot enjoy even their ordinary rights. The Chief Secretary to the local Government thinks that it is easy to suppress the Hindus as they are forbearing, docile and peace-loving. The present policy of the Government seems to be to crush the public opposition in such a way as to render the people incapable of raising their heads again. Now the question is whether the Hindus are prepared to abandon their Ramlila for good and to allow their human rights to be murdered. The celebration of Ramlila does not depend upon the will of the Government. If you want to celebrate it no power on earth can stand in your way. The article concludes with an impassioned appeal to the Hindus to prepare for offering satyagraha like the Akalis. The Sainik says: The reply which the local Government has given in connexion with the Allahabad Ramlila is full of injustice and partiality. A number of big Muslim leaders have characterized the demand for stopping music before mosques as foolish. It was, therefore, the duty of Government to restrain those who continue to break law and order over this frivolous question. But it has betrayed its utter shamelessness by depriving the law-abiding persons of their civic rights. The decision of the Hindus of Allahabad to sit quiet after abandoning the Ramlila cannot be commended either. Such cowardly protests can have no effect on Government nor can they protect Hindu interests. If the Hindus want to protect their interests they should be prepared for the greatest sacrifice. The Aj commends the reply of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to the telegram of the Chief Secretary to the United Provinces Government and says: Every word of the letter shows how the Hindu heart has felt lacerated at the attitude of the authorities who are wounding the religious susceptibilities of the Hindus, If the Governor of these provinces had followed the example of Lord Lytton the Hindus of Allahabad and of other cities in these provinces would not have been in mourning on the joyful occasion of the Dasehra festival. . . . . Lord Irwin had pledged himself in his Chelmsford Club speech to protect the rights of citizenship. All see how this pledge is being kept. This being the case, will it not be proper for the Hindus of the whole of the province to take a vow not to welcome the Viceroy in their province and in their respective cities. At any rate Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya should not welcome the Viceroy in the Hindu University, Benares. The Abhyudaya disapproves of this suggestion and says that a boycott of the Viceroy's reception will afford the provincial and local officials an opportunity of prejudicing him against the Hindus. The Vartman takes the Hindu leaders of Allahabad severely to task for not inaugurating satyagraha against restrictions imposed on the Dasehra procession and says: The hearts of the Hindus of the whole country have been agitated on account of the fact that the Ramlila could not be celebrated at Allahabad. Such a popular demand for satyagraha was not witnessed even during the days of non-cooperation. How meanly and cunningly the bureaucracy is taking advantage of Hindu-Muslim bigotry is known to every one . . . Even seeing all this the Hindu leaders do not act like human beings. The Vivek expresses surprise that the Government which could send thousands of non-cooperation workers to jail in 1921-22 under the ordinary law of the country on the plea of preserving public peace has not been able to control law-breakers effectively for some time despite the enactment of special measures. It says: The Ramlila procession cannot be taken out at Allahabad because in that event Government will not be able to preserve peace. For what purpose does the Government exist if it cannot protect the lawful rights of the people and check the tyranny of hooligans? The Deshbandhu takes Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya to task for not appealing to the people of Allahabad to offer satyagraha and urging Indians to make all possible sacrifices for the sake of religion and the country in the name of Rama says: We know what a large number of Hindus have laid down their lives in the name of Rama and what a large number of them are ready to do so even now. Still God only knows what has become of us that for taking out Rama's procession we are thinking of seeking the support of a foreign Government which does not have the least respect for Rama. What can be a greater proof than this of our slavery? Up till now we were in subjection, but now our religion is also going to meet the same fate. The celebration of Ramlila will now depend on the sweet will of the Government and we shall continue to lick its feet. Should we not die of shame over this? It is difficult to find a more striking instance of cowardice than to pray to Government to protect Rama who overthrew a mighty enemy like Ravana. Commenting on the Ramlila controversy at Allahabad the Shankar remarks: Neither protest meetings nor correspondence with the provincial Government can avail the Hindus. So long as the country is not free, all their representations will be useless. They have, however, enough material in the Ramlila itself to console them. How did Ravan interfere with the religious observances of rishis and munis (sages)? If our bureaucracy, too, has begun to follow the footsteps of Ravan it will meet the same fate as befell him. Hindus, cheer up and learn to endure sufferings. Sita, the root cause of the destruction of Ravan, was born out of the blood exacted by him from the sages. It will be no wonder if some such good for you may lie concealed in your not celebrating the Ramlila. The Medina says that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's reply to the Chief Secretary's telegram exposes in its true colours the mentality and intentions of the chief promoter of sangathan. It is to be seen how the Government views this ultimatum which is incidentally calculated to incite the Hindus. The prestige of the Government will suffer if it murders justice through fear of the violent and aggressive activities of the Hindus. Commenting on the Abhyudaya's challenge to Government to prove that music was stopped before mosques or that the Dasehra procession reached the Jumna before sunset the Khadim remarks: Showering curses on Mr. Crosthwaite the Abhyudaya advises him to look for guidance to the papers of the times of Messrs. Munro and Porter, but it is not willing to acknowledge that twenty years ago the number of Hindus who joined the tazia celebrations exceeded that of Muslims. It should be borne in mind that times have now changed and toleration has disappeared.

Election campaign.

Opinion in favour of the Swarajists is gaining strength in the vernacular press and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is being attacked by the extremist papers for setting up even "loyalists" and moderates as candidates for elections. The Leader writes: The Congress election manifesto contains nothing but platitudes and political puerilities mixed up with familiar bombast. A careful perusal of it will show that the Congress has no constructive policy of work in the legislatures and that it contains an admission of the failure of the policy of obstruction. And yet the electors are asked to vote for the Swarajists who still adhere to the policy of wrecking diarchy . . . The Swaraj Party has not injured the bureaucracy, but it has injured in numerous ways the vital interests of the country. Instead of developing a spirit of resistance and self-help, it has had a demoralising effect on the popular mind. If such men who intend to pursue a negative policy inside the legislatures and who, in spite of their loud professions, have shown that they are incapable of doing any constructive work outside, are returned in large numbers, the only result of it will be the triumph of the bureaucracy. The greater the success of the Swarajists at the polls, the greater will be the victory of reaction. Emphasizing the importance of protecting the Congress from the Independent Congress Party the Indian Daily Telegraph remarks: Say what they will, the conduct of Responsivists is meant as much to divide and degrade the Congress as to exacerbate communalism for the sake of transient gains. Once the electors grasp the trend of these two evils, they will know how to treat the destructive heresies of anti-Congress politicians. The Vivek says: Only those men should go to the Councils who can show to Government that they can have nothing to do with it and will have no rest until they have secured their full rights; those who think that they must undergo the necessary training for self-government should not be elected. In appealing to the electors to vote for the right sort of candidates the Medina writes: It has been established that these reforms are not meant for the progress and welfare of India, but are a hallucination and a hypnotic spell cast by imperialism and capitalism. The gifts, motives and intentions of the lords of India cannot be relied upon; they are a mirage and full of deceit. These lords will not give even a shell unless they are forced to give something. The foreign rulers can be compelled to give only when India acquires the necessary strength. The reforms have a poisonous effect in that they breed the slavish spirit. The Zulqarnain writes: The Swarajists who entered the Provincial Councils and the Legislative Assembly in 1923 did nothing but harm to the country. It is a good omen for the country that with the exception of a handful of Swarajists all the parties in the country are ready for co-operation. The electors should, therefore, vote for those candidates who are desirous of doing good to the country by working the reforms.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an invocation to Goddess Durga the Bharat Jiwan writes: Mother, you have again and again incarnated yourself and destroyed the wicked. But, mother, this time it seems that your sword which felled Mahishasur has either rusted or broken and this is why you are sitting quietly even though you are witnessing the naked dances of the demons in your play-ground. Mother, when you accompany us for offering worship and blows are showered on you, when you accompany us for performing your daily rituals and earthen jars and flasks are thrown on you, when together with us you will also be ordered to stop the celebration of your festivals and to weep with those who are already weeping, then, mother, you will realize what suffering is and how all-consuming is the fire of the heart. When you see with your own eyes temples being pulled down and your children writhing in agony under the knives of the assassins, then you will realize what pain is. Mother, for thousands and lakhs of years we welcomed you smilingly, blowing conches, ringing bells and playing upon musical instruments, taking out processions and shouting jais. Today we welcome you weeping. Today we will demand some reward for our services to you. What is that? Only this that you may lend us your sword and strength for some time. In the course of an article on the Vijayadashmi festival in the Shankar Durga Dat Pant says: Every year we see Ramlila and read the story of Ram, but now there are no heroes amongst us, otherwise efforts would surely have been made to recover the goddess of liberty who leaving us had gone away beyond the seven seas. One Ravan who lived far away from India had oppressed her. Now there are hundreds of Ravans here who want to commit outrages on the women of this land, destroy the religion of the people of this land and fatten themselves by sucking the blood of the inhabitants of this country. O traitors to the country's cause, O selfish ji huzoors, O unworthy sons of India, who look upon slavery as happiness, take pity on mother India and bring back the goddess of liberty. You should conquer the Lanka of bureaucracy by means of non-violent struggle for swaraj. Then alone can you celebrate Vijayadashmi. The Desh Bandhu says that it is useless to celebrate the victory day (Dasehra) at present. We have yet to know who our enemy is and who it is who has taken away our liberty and whose injustice and crookedness have evoked cries of distress. We have yet to carry on our struggle, to awaken 31 crores of slumbering Indians, to strike terror into the heart of the enemy and to assure our true national generals that if they lead us on to the right path we shall sacrifice all we have for them, shall put out the eye of the one who casts angry looks at them and shall make rivers of blood flow where a drop of their sweat falls to the ground. We will celebrate our "victory day" on the day when our leaders are ready to sacrifice themselves at the altar of freedom and all Indians, knit together in the bonds of unity and filled with the excitement of war, move forward resounding the sky with the national anthem Bandemataram and striking terror into the hearts of the enemy. Concluding his statement in the Aj in support of the candidature of Mr. Sri Prakash, Babu Shiva Prasad Gupta of Benares attributes the economic distress in India to foreign rule and says: It is for the people to decide whether they want swaraj or like to remain under foreign rule. As for myself I tell them to arouse that spirit in their hearts which made Rana Pratap wander about in the Aravalli hills and caused foreign historians call Shivaji a robber. I tell them that I do not want the rule even of Ram if he is re-born in a foreign country and comes to rule over us. The Vartman draws a highly coloured picture of the luxuries indulged in by the rich and the oppressions committed by them on the poor and says: All the pomp and luxury enjoyed by the rich is derived from the labour, from the sweat and from the blood of the poor. The luxuries of the rich are extending in such a manner as to leave no room for the poor on the surface of the earth. A day will come when the rich will hate the very sight of the poor and will not bear to see them live above the earth. The poor will accordingly be housed underground where they will live and work like worms, while the rich will be indulging above in fairy dances and wine. Referring to an article of the Chinese representative at Geneva in the Daily News in which he complained of the oppressions of the foreigners in China and said that the Chinese could no longer bear the foreign yoke, the Medina asks if all this cannot be said on behalf of India as well. Calling attention to the large number of cases of drunkenness in Britain the same paper says: Such is the condition of the country which posing as the standard-bearer of Western civilization calls the East uncivilized, and for the propagation of its civilization considers it to be its natural right to enslave crores of people. But can a country which is so much addicted to drink justly claim to be the teacher and guardian of others? Such a claim can be based on force alone and not on any logical, philosophical or legal arguments.

Agricultural Commission.

Referring to the proceedings of the Commission and to the restrictions laid down in the terms of reference regarding the existing systems of "land irrigation charges" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes: With such a restriction to exclude the real grievances of the tenantry, we may expect the Commission to load the ryot with prosaic wisdom regarding the purchase of improved machinery. English manufacturers seem, by the evidence of their trade circulars, agog about the prospect of selling agricultural implements in India according to the predilections of the new Viceroy's policy. The Aj contends that an Englishman cannot be a suitable president of the Agricultural Commission seeing that England is not an agricultural country and opines that an American agricultural expert should have been invited to preside over the Commission. It suspects that the proposed agricultural improvement is not solely inspired by the desire of benefiting Indian cultivators, but has been designed to serve political ends also by countering the village organization scheme of Indian politicians and thereby strengthening the foundation of the existing Government. It urges that educated Indians should meet this propaganda by a counter-propaganda impressing upon the Indian cultivators that this official agitation is intended to wheedle them and to postpone the day of the attainment of swaraj, and that they should not be satisfied with small reforms but should press their demand for swaraj with redoubled force. Educated Indians should themselves refuse to support this agitation by declining to accept ministership. The Pratap expresses a similar view regarding the object of the Commission.

The Naiyar-i-Azam has very high expectations of the Commission in view of its select membership and excellent programme and deprecates the scoffing and sneering attitude that has been adopted by certain short-sighted and irresponsible individuals towards that body. It is confident that its labours will conduce to the development of Indian agriculture along scientific lines. Lord Irwin has hit upon the right method to make India rank among the wealthiest countries of the world, and instead of indulging in carping criticism the public everywhere should co-operate to the fullest extent with the Commission in its forthcoming tour. The Hamdam writes: The sympathies of Lord Reading with the agriculturists were based on conspicuous diplomacy and were devoid of sincerity. His anxiety to suppress the activities of the Congress Party was greater than his solicitude for the prosperity of the peasants. We are compelled to say that India can derive no benefit from a Commission founded on diplomacy.

Allahabad riots.

Under the heading "Miscarriage of justice" the Aligarh Mail strongly protests against the decision of the United Provinces Government in allowing the cost of the increase in the punitive police force of Allahabad to fall on its Muslim citizens. It contends that Muslims alone cannot be responsible for the riot and says: 'Sangathanist rowdies', though guilty, succeeded by their shrewdness to make a show of their innocence. "It is a double misfortune which Muslims have to face. They are being forced not only to bear the whole brunt of the cost of the increased punitive police force, but they are also subjected by its payment to the inevitable necessity of being branded as criminals or as the guilty party which started the riot. That such an inferential guilt can be imputed to the Allahabad Muslims by the above mentioned decision of the United Provinces Government and is sure to be trumpetted as a strong point in defence by the Sangathanist riot-mongers of Allahabad is highly deplorable in view of the fact that the Dadhikando riot cases are still sub-judice." Al Aziz says: The announcement that the Muslims only will have to pay the cost of the additional punitive police at Allahabad shows that the authorities hold Muslims alone responsible for the Dadhikando disturbances. We can, therefore, expect no justice for the Muslims during the time of Mr. Crosthwaite. It is admitted by all that a Muslim was murdered near Gur ki mandi. Why should then the residents of the place be exempted from the tax? The announcement will produce a bad effect on the public and the officers trying Muslim cases. The Khadim urges that at least the residents of Daryabad, Malacca, Rajruppur and Kasaria should be exempted from the punitive police tax as they have taken no part in the last riot. Justice demands that the special constables who have rendered valuable services in helping the authorities to check the riot should also be exempted.

Muslim affairs.

The Aligarh Mail strongly criticises the Moplah colonization scheme and is surprised to find that the Government of India should be anxious to colonise the Andamans with the Moplahs after the islands being declared as unfit for habitation owing to their uncongenial climate. The Hamdam points out that however criminal the acts of the Moplahs might have been in the eyes of the law, there is no denying the fact that they acted under the influence of a wave of religious revival and surely their courage ought to ensure for them better treatment. The Aziz-i-Hind and the Haqiqat urge that at least one of the seven settlement officers to be appointed in these provinces should be a Muslim. The Medina complains that although the author of the Vichitrajivan is being prosecuted by Government the book continues to be openly sold in the market and the Tej of Delhi is boldly urging people to buy the book. It asks whether there is no provision in law by which the further sale of this book can be stopped. Or is such a course against the policy of the Government? Al Aziz takes strong exception to the publication of a book entitled Bhajan Sangraha published at the Rajpali Press, Mutthiganj, Allahabad, in which the Arya Samajists have abused the Muslims and their religious heads and urges Government to take steps to proscribe such a blasphemous book which is sure to wound the religious susceptibilities of the Muslims and fan the prevailing communal fire. The Hamdam wonders why Sir Muhammad Habibullah's locum tenens is now going to be a non-Muslim when so many capable Muslims are available for the post. The Muslim element in the Government of India was already negligible, and by the appointment of a non-Muslim to Sir Habibullah's place it will altogether disappear. Such a situation would be highly undesirable and would be fraught with possibilities of grave injury to Muslim interests.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Vartman publishes a poem contributed by one "Rasikendra" in which the following lines occur: 'Tabligh' is doing its work and spreading fresh nets for taking in the Hindus. It mocks at Hinduism and puts you to shame. It is every day taking away the modesty of our sisters and daughters. Does not a sense of shame come over you at the sight of this downfall of your community? What a pity that the descendents of lions should now become cowards and be called jackals? The Sainik concedes the need for the protection of Hindu interests at a time when on the one hand "the foreign Government is using all its power to crush Hindu ambitions and aspirations" and on the other Muslims "actuated by foolishness, bigotry and selfishness are adopting all lawful and unlawful methods" to overpower the Hindus; but it contends that Hindu interests cannot be protected through Councils and says: It is a mistake to think that with the help of the authorities we can safeguard our interests from Muslim encroachments. The Hindu Maha Sabha must change its policy of seeking the help of the bureaucracy. The Sabha should come into the field with a few really brave men and prepare the country for satyagraha.

The Currency Commission.

Supporting the educative campaign inaugurated by the Currency League the Leader writes: The public has not forgotten that Government's attempt to stabilize the rupee at 2*s*. cost the country nearly 54 crores of rupees. With the memory of this colossal loss fresh in its mind it cannot repose any confidence in the superior wisdom of Government when it is declared that the stabilization of the rupee at 1*s*. 6*d*. is in the interests of the masses. The 1*s*. 4*d*. rate had stood the test of time and it would have been perhaps a sounder policy to have come to decision after more experience had been gained and avoided artificial methods to prop up the exchange at a new and higher level which, on the face of it, must lower the prices of imports and raise those of exports and thus prejudicially affect the Indian producers in the disposal in foreign markets of their surplus produce. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes that the campaign inaugurated by the Currency League is far more vital to the redemption of India's agricultural industry than the hackneyed discussions conducted before the Linlithgow Commission.

The Calcutta riots.

Quoting from the reports of the latest Calcutta disturbances published in Anglo-Indian papers the Aligarh Mail writes: After the perusal of these reports from impartial sources one would have thought that the Government would take steps to check the aggression of the Hindus, which is becoming more and more intolerable every day, but he would see much to his surprise that even the police is persecuting the poor Muslims of Calcutta who have already suffered a great deal at the hands of Sangathanists. It transpires that on Sunday last 40 persons had already been arrested, but strangely enough not a single Hindu was included in the number . . If the Government want to establish law and order and if they wish to see normal civic activities being pursued without disturbances, let them give up showing favouritism to the Hindu community. They should not fear the strong agitation that may be set on foot if this policy of favouritism is given up.

Music before mosques.

Referring to the controversy about music before mosques the Khadim says: If the Leader has gone mad to such an extent that it cannot appreciate our conciliatory words we would like to tell it that the opinion of Amir Faisal, the action of the Amir of Afghanistan or the verdict of a few Ulema and Muslim leaders cannot be binding on all the Muslims. The short-sightedness of Pandit Malaviya and his party is responsible for the conduct of the Muslims and the day is not far when disgusted with such an attitude the Muslims will put aside their national sentiments and national interests for good.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the "capitalistic high-handedness" of Japan and Britain in China and to the possibility of an international conflagration over the Chinese affairs the Hamdam writes:—If Britain initiates military action Indian troops might be despatched there, as has been done in previous Chinese wars. But Indians will never brook that their country's troops should be utilized to deprive an ancient and honoured Asiatic nation of its natural right of freedom. The only honourable course therefore open to Britain is to restrain its imperialistic lust. Instead of meddling in the internal quarrels of China she should help Chinese nationalists to establish a stable national Government.

Election campaign.

The election campaign continues to absorb the attention of the Press which appears to be dominated by the Swaraj Party. The candidates set up by the Independent Congress Party are sought to be discredited as "office seekers" and "ji-huzoors." The chief anxiety of the Swarajist Press is to refute the charge that the Swaraj Party has betrayed Hindu interests. Commenting on the Congress manifesto the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The manifesto contains a sound exposition of nationalist principles and a full defence for the support of Congressmen in the elections. It abjures the exploiting of inter-communal rivalry for electioneering success. That alone ought to commend their case to patriotic voters. The spirit of the Swaraj Party is the key to domestic conciliation and through it to a combined fight against the forces of reaction. In the course of an article criticising the Independent Congress Party for supporting the policy of accepting office the paper tries to make out that with a few exceptions all public men, beginning from Lord Sinha, became corrupt as a result of holding office. It says:—They join office in the hope of fighting from within, but partnership in Executive Government does not permit of dual allegiance. Office does corrupt and no nationalist can willingly dream of countenancing Tambeism after this nightmare of experiences. The record of Ministers is an emphatic endorsement of the proposition. They professed consuming zeal for the welfare of the country, but the lesson of deterioration is terrible and irrefutable. The Aj says that though the opponents of the Swaraj Party stand for constitutional agitation, yet they do not see that there is no constitution at all in this country. If there had been a constitution in the country encroachments on individual liberty as evidenced by the imprisonment of political prisoners in Bengal without trial and the Jallianwalabagh tragedy and the utter disregard of public opinion as established by the colossal military expenditure, Lee loot, the enhancement in the salt tax and the wasteful exchange policy would never have been possible under any circumstances. All that goes by the name of constitution here is a farce of constitution, a mere toy to coax children, a mere instrument to make us serve the ends of the bureaucracy itself. When we have no constitution constitutional agitation is meaningless. The advocates of constitutional agitation really have their eye only on offices and on slight concessions which can be had only through the bureaucratic patronage, and this is why they want to co-operate with the officials. In the absence of a constitution the advocacy of constitutional agitation means nothing more than humiliating submission. The Deshbandhu exhorts the youth of the country to stand by the decision of the Congress, which is their mother's temple, even if their personal views may differ from it and says:—Young men, arise. You are wanted in your mother's temple. To-day some of your mother's children are bent upon pulling it down. You will have to fight with them. You will have to worship your revered gurus (who oppose you) with arrows in the same way in which Arjun worshipped his guru 5,000 years ago. The Vartman draws a highly coloured picture of the tyrannies perpetrated upon the poor by the rich and warning the former against voting for wealthy candidates in the coming elections says:—For once give up fear and vote for those who are real well-wishers of the poor. The rich will be struck dumb. Officials and the Government will come to their senses in a trice. How long can these calamitous laws, these dissension-breeding regulations and these methods which make men dance like animals continue? They will vanish. All the pomp and vanity will be reduced to dust . . . Vote for those who are going to fight against the evils of the time, who feel for the poor, who are going to the Councils to destroy the strongholds of the rich and ji-huzoors. Warning the electors against voting for the candidates set up by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya on behalf of the Independent Congress Party the paper says:—The candidates of this ji-huzoor party include secretaries of Aman Sabhas, officers who suppressed the non-cooperation movement and loyal zamindars. These are the men whose hearts begin to palpitate on the very mention of satyagraha and who begin to faint on hearing the talk of breaking laws. The tactics of the moderates have begun to fail while popular confidence in the Swaraj party is growing, for this is the only party which, carrying the life in the hollow of the hand, can serve the country and the Hindu community. The Sainik hopes that swarajist leaders will soon be able to overcome the opposition of their enemies—the liberals and flatterers of Government—and will soon carry the national flag to the very centre of the bureaucracy—the Councils—and offer strong opposition to it there with a view either to make it yield to the national demand or to break this Council toy. The paper has written a series of articles to show that far from betraying Hindu interests the swarajists have fought for them in the Councils. In the course of an article under the heading "Have regard for the voice of the Congress: Will you allow the lamp of ghee to burn in the palace of the bureaucracy?" the Desh Bhagat espousing the cause of swarajists writes:—Now the time has arrived when every child of India should be on the alert. It seems the magic of our enemy—the bureaucracy—has begun to take effect. The Hindus themselves were the first to lay the foundation of swaraj in India. Now the same Hindu community which had watered it with its blood and hard labour is ready to uproot it. It is an admitted fact that no person or society can do good to the nation by co-operating with Government. It should be remembered that by co-operating at present with the bureaucracy and by being proud of ordinary Government posts not only are the chains of slavery of mother India being tightened, but the axe is being applied to the freedom of all Asiatic kingdoms and their inhabitants. "Divide and rule" is the old policy of the British Government. Seeing Muslims raised to the skies the Hindu leaders have begun to covet the position. With a view to make the Hindus remiss with regard to the freedom of the country the bureaucracy spread nets several times, but the Hindu community never became so badly entangled as it is now. Owing to this change in the ideas of our Hindu leaders the bureaucracy is having a sound sleep to-day. Such a change in ideas is sufficient for the fall of a conquered country. It is only by entertaining feelings of distrust towards a foreign ruler that a conquered nation can dream of its freedom. Worthy sons of India! Be careful and do not allow this false and unholy charm to have its effect on you. The bureaucracy has come to rob your country and to enrich England and not to make India prosperous at the cost of England and America. The Medina deprecates the animosity that is being engendered among the various political parties and communities over the election campaign and tries to make out that the Legislatures have done no good whatever to the country. It says that if representatives are at all sent to these bodies they should be such as would wreck them instead of trying to make them successful. The Legislatures are a camouflage of British Imperialism where snares have been spread at every point. The Reforms are intended to further the imperialistic and militarist aims of Whitehall. So, if you really want to generate an atmosphere of freedom in the country you should break the hypnotic spell cast by these Reforms and work for winning true liberty. Commenting on Lord Birkenhead's references to the Swaraj Party the same paper says: The fear of the Secretary of State of the Swaraj Party is a feather in its cap. It is clear that this is the only party which is looked upon with fear in official circles and the new Independent Congress party is verily regarded as a guardian angel for Government. It is regrettable that overwhelmed by personal animosity, vindictiveness and communal bigotry Pandit Malaviya and Lajpat Rai are bent on wrecking a party which is the only true representative of the feelings of the country and which has shaken the lofty mansion of the Secretary of State for India.

Dasehra at Allahabad.

The abandonment of Ramlila at Allahabad is being utilized by swarajist papers for carrying on a vigorous propaganda against the Independent Congress Party. They urge that by contenting themselves with the submission of memorials to the Government and not leading a campaign of civil disobedience the leader of the party, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, and the Abhyudaya, its chief organ, have betrayed Hindu interests, and that this may be taken as a sample of what the country might expect from that party in other matters. The Aj and the Deshbandhu are also opposing the reception of the Viceroy at Allahabad on the plea that His Excellency did not protect Hindu interests in the matter of Ramlila in the city. Referring to Government's refusal of Pandit Malaviya's offer of a thousand volunteers in connexion with the Daschra procession the Aligarh Mail writes :— Perhaps the Government wanted to protect the Muslims against the aggression of the Hindu volunteers whom Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya wanted to use at the time of the Dasehra procession. The intention of the Government, if our guess is correct, was a laudable one, but the method adopted to carry out the intention is singularly objectionable. If the Hindu aggression has necessitated an addition in the punitive police, the cost ought to have been borne by the Hindus and not by the Muslims. The Deshbandhu takes Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya severely to task for his appeal to the people to welcome the Viceroy and says that Pandit Malaviya assured the Hindus of Allahabad that the Governor and the Viceroy would do justice to them. But what happened? The Governor replied that music had never been played at Allahabad in the evening. This reply lacerated our hearts still more and was in fact a challenge to Pandit Malaviya and the Hindus of Allahabad. We ought to have accepted it. Pandit Malaviya ought to have come out with a drum and insisted on playing music and we the people of Allahabad would have followed him. But far from doing this, he is doing his best to get us humiliated more and more. He is sprinkling salt over our wounds and is asking us to welcome the Viceroy. We say :—With what heart should we welcome the Viceroy ?—We insult our religion and Rama by co-operating with the Government under which we cannot celebrate our Ramlila. The people of Allahabad should not forget that Rama is greater than the Viceroy. Why should one who has not been allowed to welcome Rama welcome the Viceroy ? The Aj writes :—This year too Ramlila was not celebrated at Allahabad. So the day of rejoicing was converted into a day of mourning in every home. Possibly in other cities also of the provinces mourning will be observed on the Vijayadashmi day. This is the bitter fruit of our subjection. It is, therefore, necessary that we should propagate sentiments of liberty and thereby teach the people the lesson of self-help. It will be of no avail to send representations to the Viceroy and the Governor. The only means whereby the Hindus can protect their religious rights is to offer Satyagraha, and they should make preparations for it even now. In another article the paper argues that the authorities themselves should have opposed the untenable and unjustifiable demand for the stoppage of music before mosques, but that they are to-day betraying lack of a sense of duty owing to partiality. The Government which cannot protect the just and lawful rights of citizens and put down law-breakers has no moral right to govern. It is nothing but a travesty of government to rule over peaceful citizens by propitiating the strong section of hooligans. How are the Hindus to ensure the exercise of their religious rights ? Surely by means of satyagraha. But it is not practicable just now. The Hindus should therefore have recourse to non-cooperation or vigorous opposition. They should boycott the Viceroy's visit in these provinces. If they welcome His Excellency this will prove to the world that they have no manhood and are not prepared to non-cooperate with high-placed authorities even for the vindication of their religious rights. The Abhyudaya publishes a signed article in which the editor, Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya, proposes to establish a Ramlila satyagraha home and Ramlila satyagraha board at Allahabad in order to prepare the people for satyagraha and thereby to ensure the celebration of Ramlila in the town as usual, and urges people to offer their suggestions with regard to its working and to send in their donations and names. He wants that subscriptions should be raised in all cities of these provinces for this satyagraha. The Medina writes:—The Government of the United Provinces has given a decisive and extremely smart reply to the demands of Pandit Malaviya. It is to be hoped that the Pandit will swallow this, regarding it as a bitter quinine pill. The fact is that all unreasonable demands meet with a similar fate. Mr. Malaviya should therefore thank his own mentality for this. He wanted that there should be a disturbance in the country, that Hindu-Muslims should come to blows, and that hundreds of innocent persons should go to jail. The magician of Benares wanted to quench his thirst with the blood of the martyrs; he wanted that the goddess of sangathan should have an opportunity of moving her bloody eyes. May we hope that the United Provinces Government will maintain peace in other cities also in the way it has done at Allahabad. The Khadim condemns the suggestion that the Allahabad Ramlila Committee should wait on the Viceroy to request His Excellency to reverse the orders of the local authorities regarding the Dasehra and says that any such action will further strain the relations between the two communities and poison the atmosphere of the city. The Viceroy's reply whether it favours one community or the other will open up old sores which are healing and it is to be hoped that wise Hindus will restrain their community from adopting such a wrong course. The paper deprecates the suggestion made by the Aj that the Viceroy should be boycotted during his visit to these provinces and says:—As this suggestion has been offered in connexion with the Allahabad Dasehra, it specially concerns the Hindus of Allahabad and we strongly oppose it as we believe that such a boycott will further intensify the tension between the two communities. The more the Hindus seek to boycott the Viceroy, the more cordially and enthusiastically will the Muslims try to welcome him. Boycott will only add to our disgrace and degradation.

Communal representation.

Referring to the Hindu opposition to the candidature of Mr. Asaf Ali to the Legislative Assembly from Delhi the Aligarh Mail writes:—Delhi is a joint constituency, but Hindu leaders are frankly trying to oppose him because he is a Muslim. Would there be any chance for a Muslim to get elected to Legislatures if all the constituencies were thrown open to mixed electorates? If not, then our self-constituted advisers must be simpletons to believe that Muslims would give up what little safeguard they possess and would throw themselves entirely at the mercy of Hindu communalists. If they, our advisers, are really sincere in their protestations of nationalism, let them first ask Hindus to be more fair to Muslims and to give them their legitimate share in the government of the country. If they succeed in persuading the Hindus to take this course, Muslims would guarantee that communal representation would be abolished. Strongly supporting the claims of Mr. Asaf Ali on personal merits the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Mr. Asaf Ali and none other deserves to be elected from the Delhi-Ajmer constituency. We are amazed at the hardihood of Pandit Malaviya in sponsoring a rival for the pleasure of testing his strength and demonstrating his communalist supremacy in scorn of the Congress. While we inveigh against the intrinsic evils of communal representation, we have in the Delhi arena an opportunity of proving the claim that a minority need not distrust the catholic instincts of a majority in the land. The Hamdam attributes the persistence of inter-communal tension to the exaggeration of petty differences for political purposes. Communities which have lived side by side in peace and amity for centuries can easily respect each other's religious sentiments, but the real struggle is for political rights and elective offices. Some protagonists of Hindu sangathan even go so far as to say that the quarrel would cease as soon as Muslims give up cow-killing and separate representation. The Tribune actually suggested on the occasion of the Viceroy's visit to Lahore that His Excellency should withdraw separate representation to bridge the communal gulf. We would, however, point out that it is Hindu narrow-mindedness that is responsible for separate representation, and as a matter of fact during a third of a century the Hindus never elected a Muslim to the Councils. So it is not by taking deputations and making appeals to the Viceroy, but by cultivating a wider and more equitable outlook that the communal question can be solved. In fact, if Hindu exclusiveness in the matter of paid posts continues, Muslims might be constrained to demand separate representation in regard to them also. Only trust can beget trust and the Hindus should set an example to Muslims before moralising to them.

Agricultural Commission.

Comments impugning the real aims of the Royal Agricultural Commission have been revived in the Vernacular Press. The Vartman says that the real object of the Commission is to benefit England by increasing the agricultural produce of India. Agricultural operations on a large scale on western methods are unsuitable for India, and if they are introduced in the country the condition of cultivators will become worse as the land which they cultivate as tenants will pass out of their hands and they will be reduced to the position of mere labourers. If Government really wishes to do good to Indians it should permit the export of grain or raw materials only after Indian requirements have been fully met. The Khadim advises Indians to ignore any underlying political motives that Government may have in appointing the Commission and co-operate with it to the fullest extent so that it may be able to arrive at correct conclusions. Helpful suggestions for the improvement of the lot of the Indian peasants should be sent to the Commission and it should be enlightened as to the causes which have so far been impoverishing them. The Najat on the other hand opines that the Commission is only a diplomatic device to wean the peasants from the Gandhian movement for creating a political awakening among them through the charkha. It is inspired by the fear that Indian politicians might make the peasants the vanguards of the national army against Government and can therefore be said to be based only on patent selfishness.

Lord Birkenhead's speech.

The Leader writes:—Lord Birkenhead's Guildhall speech has, of course, been well received by the Anglo-Indian Press; any utterance which does not give promise of an early advance is sure to be applauded. It is true references have been made to India's ancient civilization and her services to the Empire, but what is wanted is a sympathetic pronouncement in respect of the demand for a further instalment of reforms. The Aj says:—His Lordship has once again held out a threat to Indians . . . If it had been possible for India to attain swaraj through co-operation she would have got it before the partition of Bengal. Non-cooperation is the product of the deceit and hypocrisy of the bureaucracy and its masters. It is wholly wrong to say that the rulers of India do not give us further rights only on account of non-cooperation. What did India get for co-operation during the war? Jallianwalabagh, a moving Black Hole, the Black Act and these so-called reforms which have caused disunion among Indians, increased the cost of administration and while enlarging the powers of civilians have sought to humiliate Indians by making them Ministers without powers. Only fools can have the ambition to co-operate after receiving such a reward. Have we become so foolish as not to perceive that Lord Birkenhead who has described India as the greatest support of the British Empire would so easily allow such a pillar to be lost? It is an utter impossibility to get swaraj through co-operation even after a hundred years. Lord Birkenhead will never give us swaraj willingly. We should not lose our all by accepting Ministerships and making the Reforms a success. If it is not possible to boycott the Councils, we should enter them only to continue to obstruct the bureaucratic administration, the discord-breeding reforms, and outside them should teach the people to advance forward along non-violent lines.

Imperial Conference.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Lord Birkenhead's speech at the Imperial Conference was an essay in flatulent bombast, plus a minatory lecture for the benefit of India on the subject of renewed co-operation. As compared with the days when India was represented by Mr. Montagu and Lord Sinha, the joint vociferation of Lord Birkenhead and the Maharaja of Burdwan looks a bad performance and a sad anti-climax. The Aj remarks that only the representatives of unfortunate India go to the Imperial Conference as slaves. They are the representatives of the Government of India and the latter is the slave girl of the British authorities. Even a school boy knows that the slave of the slave girl cannot be the representative of public opinion. It amounts to nothing less than an insult to India and her semi-independent chiefs that the Government of India should select their representatives to the Imperial Conference. India is undergoing the sufferings of subjection. She is groaning under various injustices and atrocities. Why then is this insult offered to her? Is it manliness to crush a fallen one and to sprinkle salt over a burnt person? If England cannot do justice to India she should at least not subject her to such inhuman disgrace.

Muslim affairs.

Complaining of the paucity of Muslims in the Railway Medical Service the Aligarh Mail writes:—We trust the authorities will consider the matter fully and see that justice is meted out to the claims of competent and qualified Muslims in filling up the future vacancies in the Medical department of the Indian State Railways. Vacancies in future should be fully advertised and the names should be obtained from medical institutions of such Muslims as have successfully qualified themselves for the medical profession. In the course of a lengthy article emphasizing the need for sustained activity on the part of the Khilafat Committee, the Medina says :—The holy places are still groaning under the grip of foreigners and the Jazirat-ul Arab has not yet become completely free from the tyrannies of the strangers. Islamic countries are still undergoing the same trials and tribulations. From Morocco to Syria the mandatory chains of western capitalists and tyrants continue to stifle the spirit of freedom. The destinies of the Muslims of India are closely bound up with the re-instatement of the Khilafat. If the Kemalist Turks were the sole custodians of Islam and Islamic teachings, we should have acquiesced in the abolition of the Khilafat. But the re-instatement of the Khilafat will remain a duty for Muslims till doomsday, Referring to the Viceroy's reply to Sir Abdur Rahim's telegram urging the appointment of a Muslim as successor of Sir Muhammad Habib Ullah, the Hamdam points out that in view of the tainted atmosphere prevailing in the country it is essential that there should be a Muslim in the Government of India and His Excellency should not fail to appoint one if he can do so consistently with public interest. Vehemently protesting against the Moplah colonization scheme the Medina writes:—The callous and tyrannical manner in which the Government has tried to blot out the Moplahs from the surface of India needs no demonstration. Jails have been filled with a large number of innocent persons and a number of their leaders have been hanged. They have been killed by being suffocated in railway carriages. Not content with all this, tyrannical vindictiveness has assumed the form of the colonization scheme. The Khadim appeals to the Government to reconsider its decision and to give up the intention of settling Moplahs in the Andamans as the inevitable result of the scheme will be that this brave race will be gradually blotted out from India.

Indian States.

The Najat deplores the baseless propaganda being pursued by the Hindu Press against the Hyderabad State and says that if it does not cease the atmosphere in the Indian States will become as much tainted as it is in British India. Will the Government of India look into the matter? The Medina says that the latest budget of the Hyderabad State thoroughly exposes the hollowness of the propaganda of the Hindu Press which sought to create the impression that the affairs of the State were in such a chaotic condition that they could not be improved without the interference of the Government of India. The budget also shows that the administrative and the financial conditions of the State are better and more sympathetic than those of the Government of India. The savings of the Government of India are wasted in useless schemes, but those of the Hyderabad State have been utilized in railway expansion, famine relief, educational grants and the like. The encouraging and gratifying facts revealed in the budget should stop all agitation carried on to discredit the Nizam.

Allahabad disturbance.

Al Aziz warns the Commissioner against accepting the resolution of the Allahabad municipal board regarding the expulsion of the kunjras from Chowk Sabzimandi and says that the city fathers are now avenging themselves upon the poor kunjras for their refusal to close their shops during Lord Reading's visit to the city in 1924. Since then no subterfuge has been left unemployed to harass the kunjras. Sometimes the Hindu fruit-sellers have been set against them and sometimes they have been sought to be evicted under the pretext of enhancing rents. When these methods failed a well-organized attack was made on the vegetable sellers in 1924 and rival vegetable markets were set up but to no purpose. The municipal board's scheme for acquiring Allahabanda's Phatak, the abode of the kunjras, also failed and now they are being ejected from Chowk so that the rival Hindu vegetable market in Mirganj may prosper. Will the Commissioner allow the kunjras to be victimised for their loyal welcome to the Viceroy?

U. P. Labour Federation.

The Bharat contains a letter from one Anant Ram Shukla of the Cawnpore Mazdoor Sabha who urges the labour workers all over the province to establish labour organizations in their towns and districts and to communicate for the necessary help in this connexion with the sabha which has decided to establish a United Provinces Labour Federation to organize and strengthen the labourers and thereby secure for them their lost rights, and appeals to them to represent their deplorable condition before the delegates of the International Labour Conference who are about to visit India.

Election campaign.

The papers continue feverishly to carry on propaganda on behalf of the candidates belonging to their respective parties. Reviewing the present position of the election campaign the Leader writes: The outstanding feature of the situation is acute dissensions in the Congress organization, evidence of which has recently been furnished by the squabble between the secretaries of the Provincial Congress Committee, the progressive disintegration of the Swaraj Party and the growing strength and influence of the party led by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Lala Lajpat Rai. The electors should without the least hesitation support candidates who are seeking election on a constructive ticket, namely, of making the fullest possible use of the opportunities offered by the present constitution of developing the activities of the nation-building departments and of carrying on a strenuous constitutional fight inside the legislatures for safe-guarding the rights of the people and securing a larger measure of national freedom, and not those who have espoused a negative policy, who have declared that the councils are a sham and who have made it clear that wherever possible they will resort to wrecking tactics. The paper holds Pandit Motilal Nehru responsible for setting up Raizada Hansraj as a candidate for the Assembly against Lala Lajpat Rai and says: Mr. Nehru's public services, mostly of a negative nature, pale into insignificance before those of the great fighter of the Punjab. By setting up opposition to the election of such a towering personality Mr. Nehru has not only proclaimed his own petulence but also his nervousness. If Mr. Nehru had not been in a very desperate plight he would not have probably sanctioned the taking of a step which is likely to intensify the prejudice against the Swaraj party among large sections of the Hindus. Commenting on the defeat of Mr. Asaf Ali in the election from the Delhi constituency the paper writes: The defeat of the Swarajist candidate in the Imperial capital is of happy augury and is likely to cause depression in Swarajist ranks. Coming events cast their shadow before. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes: Nationalists throughout the country will be disappointed, though by no means dismayed, over the outcome of the Delhi election. To have represented support for the Lala-Malaviya nominee as a virtuous obligation of piety and to have represented the support of Mr. Asaf Ali as a betrayal of Hindu Dharma was a criminal fraud, and the sponsors of the measure are intelligent enough to know it. In the course of an article headed "Murder of joint electorate" the Aligarh Mail writes: It is gratifying to note that the Muslims have been saved the danger of being once more duped by dishonest Hindu politicians who profess what they do not mean. Much more pleasing is the fact that Mr. Asaf Ali's defeat has nailed to the counter their dirty lie that they are enamoured of common representation and common electorates because of their inherent spirit of nationalism. Mr. Rang Beharilal's success should serve as a reminder to the Musalmans of the fact, which has become an axiomatic truth, that in common electorate where the number of Hindu voters is preponderating as is the case in the Ajmer-Delhi constituency, there is not the ghost of a chance for the success of a Muslim candidate. Hindu voters of Delhi may feel elated at Mr. Rang Beharilal's success. Little do they realize that it is a death-knell to the existence of the Delhi joint electorate. In an interview granted to a representative of the Aj Babu Bhagavan Das of Benares said that he preferred the Swarajists to the Malaviya party. Swaraj could come only by Mahatma Gandhi's method, but Swarajists were better than the Malaviya party because they were nearer Mahatmaji. Swaraj would not come for ages by the Malaviya methods. Whatever the faults of the Swarajists might be they stood for the non-acceptance of ministries and so they vindicated the manhood and the self-respect of the nation against an unheeding and alien bureaucracy. The Abhyudaya takes Pandit Motilal Nehru severely to task for setting up Raizada Hansraj as a rival candidate against Lala Lajpat Rai and says that this action of the Pandit is nothing short of deception inasmuch as he always assured his friends that he had no mind to oppose the Lala. The only reply which the country can give to this is that it should not vote for a single Swarajist candidate and thus show to Pandit Motilal Nehru how it can rectify the wrong done to its revered leader. The Aj expresses surprise that candidates seeking election to the councils, especially in the United Provinces, are not utilizing their election campaigns to educate public opinion with regard to the new currency policy of the Government, which is calculated to injure seriously the agriculturists of the country and which is indeed an attack on them in the dark. The bureaucracy is helping foreign manufacturers by throttling cultivators and Indian industries. Is it not the duty of those who ask votes from cultivators on the basis of co-operation with such bureaucracy to explain to them the real significance of the currency policy? In another article the paper says that although 99 per cent. of the questions dealt with in the councils are political, yet efforts are made to enter the legislatures by inciting communal feelings and passions. A scramble for a larger number of Government posts in place of efforts to attain liberty has become the sole politics of India. By committing suicide in this manner the people are helping the foreign rulers. Exhorting the electors not to vote for the Independent Congress party the Deshbandhu says that this party is really going to fight with those who are struggling for the country's freedom. It ought to have given battle to the bureaucracy which has fettered India in the chains of subjection but it is going to co-operate with it and is thus stabbing the Congress in the back. There is no difference between this party and those who lick the feet of the Government. It knows that if non-cooperation with the Government is abandoned to-day even this flickering lamp of the reforms will go out but still it is going to co-operate with it because it is a party of cowards who always keep their head bent before the enemy. It has given out that it would get the Hindu interests protected by flattering the Government. But we want to tell it that the notion that the Government shows partiality to the Muslims because they flatter it is mistaken. The Government would have shown partiality to them even if they had not done so because it is ruling India with the help of the policy of "divide and rule." The Independent party is a fictitious Congress party. It has the name of God on its lips but has a knife concealed in its armpit with which it is seeking to stab our nationalism. The Bharat says that in spite of his failure Mahatma Gandhi's creed cannot be said to be unreasonable but the views and actions of Swarajists are altogether misleading and no votes should therefore be given to them. The Medina says that the obstinacy of Malaviyaji is an unmitigated curse for the country and when he cannot have his way he sets about wrecking the national programme. The country knows how he strained every nerve to destroy the non-cooperation movement and how he took the Prince of Wales to Benares when everybody was busy organizing a boycott against him. In the Assembly also after a time he deserted the Swaraj party and it had to abandon its policy of damaging the prestige of Government and the effect of its walk-out was nullified. Still the Swaraj party can proudly claim that in spite of such adverse circumstances it had tried to serve the country and had vigorously put forward the united demand of the nation in the Assembly. The policy of obstruction was strictly adhered to and public interest was always kept in view. Still to the jaundiced eyes of Malaviyaji the Swaraj party could accomplish no good. The paper welcomes the formation of Muslim parties in various provinces and says that it is only by organization and joint action that the Muslims can make their voice felt. Muslim voters should vote only for members of these parties as sheep which stray from the fold fall a prey to the wolf and Muslim candidates who do not join the general body are sure to be influenced by the non-Muslim wolf. We hope the Muslims of the United Provinces will strongly support the provincial Muslim party. A number of papers strongly protest against the rejection of the nomination paper of the Maharaja of Nabha and show warm sympathy with him.

Lord Birkenhead's speech.

The Pratap writes: Lord Birkenhead spoke and spoke well. "We are the trustees. We realize our responsibility." Well said. He realizes his responsibility. He also realizes the glory of ruling over India. He realizes how wide the field is which India offers for providing English lads with livelihood. He also realizes all the advantages which he derives from Indian armies and he realizes the value of the jingling of sovereigns acquired by huge commercial contracts and exploitation of India because he is the custodian of his trust. . . How long shall we tolerate such mean and insulting remarks? Can any self-respecting nation quietly put up with these taunts of the Secretary of State and other arrogant and foolish politicians like him? If the almost cold and lifeless blood of our body does not boil it is our misfortune and the height of our degradation. The Anand says that the speech will not satisfy any Indian. After the resignation of Mr. Montagu did not the bureaucracy itself throw obstacles in the way of those Indian leaders who wanted to utilize the reforms, and is it not, therefore, unjust to throw the blame for their failure on Indians? Did not the British Government grant self-government to those countries which openly took up arms against it? Why then in the case of India alone should co-operation be made an indispensable condition for the grant of self-government? Vehemently criticizing the speech, the Medina writes: What shall we say about these haughty remarks except this that relying on your strength you can make any statements you like? Through the kindness of Malaviya and Company you are at liberty to make such haughty speeches. The remark that further reforms cannot be granted as Indians have shown no disposition to co-operate is merely a lame excuse. Your life depends upon India. Why should you willingly relinquish her? All this tall talk is merely political deceit. Throw the bait to the moderates; Indians in general cannot be taken in. The Hamdam says: The highest recognition of partnership which Indians have got is that new laws are always passed against them in the colonies, they are precluded from living there and are deported to India and are at all times sent to be sacrified at the altar of British Imperialism. The Swaraj party cannot be influenced by the threat of withholding further instalments of reforms if co-operation with Government is refused. . . Even after one hundred and fifty years of British rule India is still poor and the daily average income of her inhabitants is not more than one anna per head and crores of men do not get two full meals. Keeping in view what good has been done to India by the first instalment of the reforms and how the bait of ministership has shaken the footsteps even of the greatest servants of the country Indians will request Lord Birkenhead to keep back the second instalment.

Imperial Conference.

Strongly protesting against the exclusion of the Indian delegation from the meeting of the conference in which the question of Imperial foreign policy was discussed the Aligarh Mail writes: If India has no right to participate in the discussion of the Imperial foreign policy, why are her delegates invited to the League of Nations? What is discussed in the League if not the regulation of foreign relations between states and states? If India is there simply to register British vote, why should the cost of the Indian delegation to Geneva and India's contributions to the League of Nations be not borne by the British Exchequer? Referring to the demand of General Hertzog in the Imperial Conference for liberty to South Africa in international affairs the Aj fears lest the sacrifice of India should be one of the means whereby it may be sought to conciliate the General. The Shankar wonders whether India's representation in the Imperial Conference is representation or merely an exhibition of slavery and says: Every Indian will be grieved at the status of Indian representatives in the Conference. These representatives take part in the conference as slaves. The Vivek expresses surprise that though the colonial premiers are discussing in the Imperial Conference the best means of utilising the resources of India for strengthening the British empire there are men in this country who dream of good being done to it by that body. It remarks that the fact that Indian representatives were not allowed to participate in the deliberations of the conference regarding certain questions of the foreign policy of the empire disposes of the impression that equality of treatment is accorded to Indian representatives in the conference. Is such a treatment not the height of the disgrace and distrust of Indians?

The Calcutta Riots.

The Abhyudaya refers to the preparations made by certain Muslims of Calcutta to burn some Hindu houses in Kalabaghan (Calcutta) and says: This was a terrible and diabolical deed and was done in the name of religion. Surely God does not recognize this religion otherwise the affair would have been more serious than that of Kohat. It is a matter of great shame for the police that it could not trace the miscreants. There is yet time for the Government to beware and save India from becoming another Kohat or Malabar on a bigger scale. The Aj contends that the Police Commissioner's report on the Calcutta riots confirms the view that the riots in that city were not caused by sudden provocation but were preconcerted and that there were brains behind this conspiracy which was sought to be carried out through the agency of ignorant and fanatical Muslims. It is to be regretted that the authorities in most of the places are not doing their duty in connexion with the question of music before mosques. Their attitude serves to encourage those who want to prevent forcibly the followers of other religions from performing their religious rituals. The Vivek says that the shameful inability of the police to detect the miscreants engaged in this conspiracy is a matter of no little surprise specially when the police officials had taken precautions against such contingencies. All this has taken place under the Government which declares it to be its sacred duty to maintain peace among the people and is never tired of proclaming that its withdrawal from the country would lead to utter anarchy in the country. This is a living example of the success of British rule in the task of the preservation of peace. Referring to the reports of a bomb being thrown on persons coming out of the Nakhuda mosque in Calcutta after prayers the Hamdam says: So far the anarchists used to throw bombs on Government officials only but now apparently as a result of Hindu Sangathan, the Muslims also have begun to be made their targets. The bomb is probably a spark of the peace-consuming flames of Hindu Sangathan. The Sada-i-Muslim writes: We have repeatedly drawn the attention of the Government and Indian Muslims to the mentality which the wicked Hindus are now-a-days displaying towards Muslims simply on account of spite and animosity. In pursuance of the teachings of Pandit Malaviya Muslims were so far being honoured only with bricks and stones but the latest report from Calcutta shows that the bodies and lives of Muslims are now going to be exposed to bomb attacks. The attack must have been the work of a non-Muslim Bengali as Bengalis alone have been cultivating the cult of the bomb for a long time. Muslims should ponder seriously how to protect their lives and property if such attacks persist and while maintaining restraint and patience they should remain watchful. Of Government we would inquire whether if it does not put a stop to such dastardly and violent attacks the bombs which are at present being thrown on weak Muslims will not in the future be levelled against high officials? Every peace-loving person will then live in fear and there will neither be the British Government nor tranquillity in India. It is the bounden duty of the Government of India to utilize all its resources to get at the bottom of the affair and to reassure the Muslims by meting out adequate punishment to the guilty.

Political Propaganda.

The Aj says that there is no reason why Indians should support the Empire film movement. Help is given to a friend. To-day India receives proof of British friendship in the Black Act and in insults offered to her at every step. In these circumstances Indian support of the movement for the use of British goods in this country cannot be held to be anything better than selfish sycophancy and jihuzoorism. It will be a suicidal policy for Indians to import films only from Britain and not from America. Their well-being lies in enlisting the sympathy of all the influential and progressive countries of the world. Then alone can they break the chains of subjection. The Trishul publishes a poem which means: Organization, valour, love of one's community are required to remove the unrighteous arrogance of the enemy from the country. Efforts should joyfully be made to remove the blot of cowardice from the forehead. Women have been dishonoured. (We) have been robbed. (We) have been beaten. What worse treatment remained undone? By merely repeating the formula of peace we shall never get peaceful sleep. The Najat asserts that it was British diplomacy and not the sword which conquered India. The hidden hand of the British was always active and one by one the chiefs were set at loggerheads and their alliances broken up. When the chiefs had been thoroughly emasculated by internecine strife, the British completed the economic and cultural subjection of India by flooding her markets with Lancashire cottons. After capturing the cloth trade, the British adopted other methods of loot. Luxuries were imported in sufficiently large quantities into India and wines of various sorts dulled the discrimination of Indians and within a very short time they became confirmed drunkards and the joint family system became affected. Their hearts and minds not set at rest by these methods of draining wealth, the British adopted still other devices to continue their civilized loot and this sapped the physical strength also of Indians and they were rendered nerveless and helpless by various diseases. They began to suffer from debility and diseases of the liver and the weakness of their spleens increased to such an extent that injuries to it have yielded hundreds of lives to foreign attacks every year. We have now plumbed the deepest depths of mental and physical deterioration. In short we are faced with ruin on all sides. In these circumstances we should take stock of our past and present state and taking our stand on the mighty principles of universal brotherhood should remedy our weaknesses and shortcomings by mutual aid. Referring to the proposed aerial passenger service between England and India the Medina writes: The pilots of the west coming by the sea long ago sank the ship of the freedom and prosperity of India into the Bay of Bengal, the coastal waters of Madras and the Arabian sea and it has to be seen what property has now been left to India that these aeronauts of England are going to cast to the winds.

Dasehra at Allahabad

The Hindi press is grievously disappointed at the Viceroy's reply to Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's letter regarding Ramlila at Allahabad and opines that he has only followed the customary policy of supporting the man on the spot. The Abhyudaya says that the Viceroy produced a good impression on the country by his speeches on the communal question but two of his recent acts—the praise of the work of the Punjab Council despite its communalism, and the unjust support of the local officialdom and the provincial Government on the question of Allahabad Ramlila—are disappointing. Now that blows after blows are being dealt to the Hindu community it was a good opportunity for the Viceroy to do something which would have cleared the horizon of the clouds of communal politics and the policy of divide and rule. The Vartman strongly criticizes the action of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya in making further representations to the Viceroy and says that the question should now be taken up by the people themselves and not left to the leaders alone. The question affects the entire Hindu community and not the Hindus of Allahabad only. If the Hindus wish to live as a community they should make the bureaucracy recognize the importance of protecting their religious rights. It is a matter for serious consideration for the Hindus why the bureaucracy which shows regard for the sentiments of minorities tramples upon Hindu interests. The Hindus should move forward like true Hindus and should not yield till the bureaucracy is forced to recognize the dangers of trifling with their religious sentiments. The Desh Bandhu takes the district board and the municipal board of Allahabad to task for their decision to present addresses to the Viceroy even though he is visiting the city after supporting the action of the United Provinces Government in connexion with the local Ramlila. If to-day these boards did not have a majority of jeehuzurs and Pandit Malaviya had felt in the least the insult offered to the town by the stoppage of Ramlila the situation in the town would have been different. If the electors of Allahabad do not awaken to their sense of duty even now and vote for the Independent party Ramlila will never be celebrated in their town and even if it is ever celebrated it would be on conditions not acceptable to us.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the appeal by M. Shaukat Ali for four crores of rupees for the Khilafat committee, the Khadim agrees with the Muslim Standard that the Khilafat does not now exist and this is only a device to waste public money. It was for Tripoli, the Balkans and the Khilafat that Indian Muslims spent crores of rupees, went in their hundreds and thousands to jail, closed hundreds of Muslim schools and courted war with Government. But what did all this avail the Turks or how far did they appreciate these sacrifices? We injured our national and political movements but the Turks did not even care to consult us before abolishing the Khilafat. How did Afghanistan treat the handful of Indian Mahajirs that sought refuge within her territories. India must be strong herself before she can think of helping others and it is only by winning freedom that Indian Muslims can best serve Islam. Al-Khalil has a communicated article in which the writer contends that progress is impossible in India unless Muslims are given equal representation with Hindus in all departments. How can separate representation be done away with or representation accorded on the strength of numerical proportion when one community regards it as its religious duty to interfere with the other in offering prayers or goes to the length of breaking heads over that community's taking meat or sacrificing animals. The Mashriq complains of the low percentage of Muslim clerks in various Government offices in these provinces and urges Muslim leaders to place statistics in this connexion before the local Government and to appeal to it to reserve posts for minority communities just as has been recently done by the Government of India. The Hamdam contends that when Sir Fazle Hasan was called in from the Punjab during Sir Muhammad Habibullah's previous absence and when Sir Bhupendra Nath Mitra was brought from the Military Finance department to officiate for Sir A. C. Chatterjee, Sir Abdur Rahim is quite justified in demanding that Sir Muhammad Habibullah's present vacancy should be filled by a Muslim. The Medina deprecates the official toying with the Punjab Money-lenders' Bill and says that though it has been altered out of all recognition and has lost most of its utility Sir Malcolm Hailey has refused to give his assent even to this shadowy measure of reform. The fact is that the officials have thoroughly fooled the Hindu and Muslim members of the Council for two years. Rather they have played a detestable joke with the people of the Punjab and now this bone of contention will again be cast into the next Council.

Communal representation.

Discussing the question of communal representation the Aligarh Mail contends that it is the Hindus and not Muslims who are communal in outlook and says: Those people whose social organization is based on caste and untouchability, the most undemocratic and separatist institutions that mankind has yet conceived, are the last to be non-communal in their outlook. Our Hindu countrymen are sectarians first, then they are castemen, then they are communalist Hindus and last of all they are Indians. It is all humbug and sickening cant for our Hindu brethren to assert that they oppose the principle and practice of separate representation simply because it is subversive of a national and democratic evolution of the Motherland. Referring to Mr. Shastri's recent speech decrying communal representation the Hamdam points out that Mr. Shastri must be aware of the reasons which have forced Muslims to demand separate representation. The truth is that the Hindus are much more communal and narrow-minded than the Muslims and if the former were to develop large-heartedness and toleration and view political questions not from the narrow communal but purely national standpoint, an atmosphere would very soon be created in India which would compel Government to concede the Indian demand for freedom. Anyway, it would be better to gain the confidence of Muslims than to knock at the doors of Government in order to do away with communal representation. If Muslims become convinced that Hindus as a whole have developed sufficient large-heartedness and toleration they will themselves give up separate representation.

Council rules.

The Indian Daily Telegraph strongly criticizes the rules framed by the Government of India for the legislatures, and says: The rules have been framed by the Executive to cripple the paltry powers of the legislatures to a still greater extent. Turning our attention to the orders restricting the provincial councils, we find that the power, responsibility and initiative on which the seekers of office speculate, are a stupendous sham derogatory to the power, responsibility and initiative of the Legislature. The Ministers are ensconsed in the bureaucratic bosom . . . The officials will be able to shield an unpopular ministry from even a token censure in the form of a debate. It is an utter travesty of democratic principle and a sure guarantee for jo hukmi ministerships. We would earnestly ask Responsive Co-operators if it was not time for them to cease their disruptive propaganda and realize the resolve of the bureaucracy to employ them on the most humiliating terms for the purpose of reaction.

Foreign affairs.

The Hamdam writes:—The persistent encroachments of European nations in the name of the spread of modern civilization have opened the eyes of all Asiatic Governments to their plight. They have realized how the League of Nations is being used as a screen to promote imperialistic designs and are now going to organize means for their protection. It is a very happy augury for the future of Asia if the Times' report about the initiation of an Asiatic League at Constantinople is true. May God grant success to this League and may it become so powerful with the co-operation of Japan that the European powers may be frustrated in their policy of annexation. The Najat sees in the growth of Bolshevik influence in China the materialization of the Bolshevik peril on the north-east frontier also. The Government of India's attitude in regard to the Punjab Money-lenders' Bill and its solicitude for Hindu good-will as further evidenced by the pardoning of the Hindu accused of Dera Ismail Khan and their indifference towards Frontier Reforms show that the danger is being fully realized by the authorities. The authorities are very nervous about Afghanistan and are persistently trying to cultivate Hindu friendship.

Election campaign.

The elections continue to be the chief topic of discussion in the Press and with the approach of the polling dates the tone of the party organs is increasing in vehemence and virulence. The names of the favoured candidates are being displayed prominently and considerable space is being taken up by recriminations which in some cases have led to the institution of defamation suits. The protection of Hindu interests has become the main issue. The supporters of the Independent Congress Party are trying their best to convince the electors that Hindu interests have badly suffered at the hands of the Swaraj Party and the swarajist organs are equally assiduous in their efforts to refute that charge. The majority of the important papers are the protagonists of the swarajist cause. Muslim papers are emphasizing the need of electing only such members as would be able to protect the interests of their community against the attacks of the candidates of the Independent Congress Party who are represented as radical sangathanists. The Leader believes that Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya have a majority of the Hindus on their side. "They do not command large election funds and are therefore considerably handicapped, but their strength lies in the advocacy of the Hindu cause and opposition to a barren and injurious policy. If they succeed in dishing the swarajists they will have rendered a great public service to the country. We wish all strength to their elbow." In another article, reviewing the election campaign in the United Provinces, the same paper writes:—Out of the total number of seats open to election less than half are being contested by the swarajists. Thus even if all of them are returned they cannot form a majority. But the likelihood is that a good number of them will be defeated . . . What did the swarajists achieve in the last Council? With a few exceptions they played the part of dummies. They created a new heaven and earth for the bureaucracy which was left free to follow its reactionary policy. The Ministers and Executive Councillors had a happy time. The swarajists have succeeded in setting back the hands of progress. . . For whom should the electors then record their votes? They should vote for those who are prepared and qualified to make the best use of the present constitution, who hold progressive views and who may be expected to fight to the best of their ability for safeguarding public rights, opposing unjust and reactionary measures and enlarging the bounds of constitutional freedom. Among candidates seeking election who can come in this category are those who formed the progressive party in the first reformed Council and a number of those who have been adopted by the Independent Congress Party and a few others. The Indian Daily Telegraph challenges Lala Lajpat Rai to substantiate the allegation made by him in one of his speeches at Lahore that there was a conspiracy of several swarajist leaders who wanted to turn out the British from India, even if they had to replace the British Government by Afghan rule. It says:—When a citizen knows of the existence of such conspiracy, the option does not rest with him to talk like a fluent mountebank and reserve to himself the time and place of disclosure. A man who cannot prove allegations so serious volunteered by himself must be treated as a moral assassin and an imbecile wretch dead to all sense of reason and truth. Let Lalaji repel the reproach by behaving like a man. But then the present business is the elections, the elections. In the course of a letter in the Vartman addressed from Kabul to Indians "Raja" Mahendra Pratap pleads the cause of the swarajists and writes:—The Swaraj Party alone is serving or wishes to serve India. I am convinced that God wishes to make India free. This is why Englishmen are withering like a plant without water and India is moving forward like a healthy boy. The Desh Bandhu keenly regrets the defeat of Mr. Asaf Ali in the Delhi joint electorate and says:—Pandit Malaviya and the Lala have scored this victory by deception and as such deserve no praise for it. Like Abhimanyu's defeat in the Mahabharata Mr. Asaf Ali's defeat is in fact the harbinger of the triumph of the Congress. The Aj says that the victory secured by the Independent Congress Party against the Congress candidate at Delhi lays an axe at the root of nationalism. This is neither a victory of the Independent Congress Party nor of the Hindus. It is indeed a triumph of communal passions, of the misfortune of India and of the good fortune of the unbridled bureaucracy. Exhorting the voters to vote for Babu Sri Prakash, the swarajist candidate, and not for Mr. Birla, the Independent Congress Party nominee, the Sainik says that while the Swaraj Party stands for self-respect, the Independent Congress Party is for kissing the feet of the bureaucracy; on one side there is principle and on the other money; one way lies swaraj and the other slavery. The Hindi Kesri writes:—On behalf of the party known as the Independent Congress Party efforts are being made to secure votes in the name of Hindu interests, but if Hindu interests could be protected by begging and sending telegrams to the Governor Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya would have been able to get the Dusehra procession taken out. It is neither a party of the Congress, nor is it independent. It is in fact an organization of candidates having slavish mentality. The Bharat Jiwan says that the fact that the Viceroy will be accorded a grand and hearty reception at Allahabad despite his upholding the decision of the provincial Government with regard to the local Ramlila shows that the Independent Congress Party which has undertaken to protect Hindu interests holds that the Hindu interests will be furthered by kissing the feet which spurn it. If it had not the strength to launch Satyagraha as a protest against the stoppage of the Ramlila procession, it could at least practise non-cooperation and demonstrate by the boycott of the Viceroy's reception that Hindus too have a heart susceptible of injury. What hopes can the country have from a party which has no self-respect? If the Independent Congress Party enters the Councils through such policy it will observe only jeehuzoorism there. It will be striking at the very root of self-respect to return such a party to the Councils. Refuting the allegation that the Hindus of Delhi voted on communal grounds during the recent election to the Assembly the Abhyudaya writes:—The fact is that out of the one thousand Muslim voters not one voted for the Hindu candidate, whereas a sufficient number of Hindus voted for Mr. Asaf Ali. It is possible to find Hindus who are opposed to their community, but not a single Muslim who does not stand by his co-religionists. The Bharat virulently denounces the Swarajists and says:—A Muslim, a Christian or any other non-Hindu who apparently opposes the Hindu interests cannot do so much harm to Hindus as a non-Hindu traitor in the disguise of a Hindu. It is, therefore, the duty of all those in whose veins pure Hindu blood flows to crush the head of all such snakes. The Medina writes:—The Independent Congress Party wants to send Hindus who do not believe that India's salvation lies in opposition to Government or that they should make sacrifices for the sake of freedom. It does not matter whether every moment of their past lives has been passed in rubbing foreheads on the threshold of the Government, whether their hands are dyed with the blood of the youthful sons of the nation and whether their expectant eyes are always watchful to act at a sign from the white-skinned gods. The only qualification requisite is that their hearts and minds should be possessed of the evil spirit of animosity towards Muslims. They should have this lesson of the professor of Sangathan at their fingers' tips that this foreign race (Muslims) should not be allowed to live in peace. . . . . Brethren of Islam; such are the designs of the gods of Sangathan in regard to the coming Councils and unfortunately for the country they are succeeding to some extent in them. There are three parties at present in the Council—the Government, the Hindus and the Muslims. The Government is out to gain money and to maintain its domination and prestige. So long as these interests are not involved Government remains neutral. It cares little whether any law is injurious to Hindus or Muslims. So the Muslims will have to watch the Hindus next to Government. The Muslim representative should, therefore, be capable and possessed of a clean past. Such men can be only those trusted and tried soldiers who have fought against Government and can therefore easily combat the Hindus also. The voters should always prefer the Muslim party's candidates to nondescript gentlemen. The local Muslim Press, particularly the Khadim, has been strongly protesting against the inaccuracies in the electoral roll of Allahabad for the Allahabad-cum-Benares Muslim constituency and has been urging Government either to correct the roll forthwith or to postpone the elections. It is being openly insinuated that the electoral roll has been manipulated in the interests of certain candidates.

Communal representation.

The Muslim Press is unanimously and vehemently denouncing the narrow-mindedness shown by the Hindu Sabha leaders in securing the defeat of Mr. Asaf Ali in the Delhi mixed electorate, and says that by this action they have rung the death-knell of joint representation. Most of the papers are urging the Delhi Muslims to demand separate representation as they are helpless against the Hindu majority when it is guided by narrow-minded leaders. The Aligarh Mail writes:—Our Hindu brethren are now carrying on a regular propaganda against separate electorates. It is therefore the bounden duty of every Musalman, and particularly of those gentlemen who are going up for Council election, that they should safeguard the interests of the minorities by strongly advocating, among other things, the present method of separate electorates. No Muslim should be elected as member of the local Council or Assembly who does not clearly express in the manifesto that he is in favour of separate electorates. In another issue referring to the report that the Muslims of Delhi are going to move the Government of India to grant them separate representation for the Legislative Assembly the same paper writes:—The demand of the Delhi Muslims is a just one because it is the only means by which they can guard against the political greed of the Hindus. We hope that the Delhi Muslims will rise to the occasion and through an intensive propaganda in the Press and on the platform will bring home to the Government of India the injustice which they have suffered in the common electorate of the Ajmer-Delhi constituency. The Haqiqat says that the defeat of a national veteran of the standing of Mr. Asaf Ali against a political nonentity like Mr. Rang Bihari Lal simply because the former was a Muslim shows that Muslim interests cannot be safeguarded in India in mixed electorates. In the presence of enemies of unity like Malaviyaji and Lalaji no Muslims could succeed against Hindus. The Muslims should, therefore, take heed from the Delhi incident and organize a vigorous agitation against joint electorates before the coming Royal Commission. The result of the Delhi election will also enable the Government to realize that it is not safe to leave the fate of Muslims in the hands of the Hindus. The Hamdam writes:—The opposition to Mr. Asaf Ali was not due to his being a swarajist candidate, but to his being a Muslim. Muslims of course want to work in co-operation with the Hindus, but it is futile to make any attempts towards Hindu-Muslim unity in the presence of sangathanist leaders like Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Lala Lajpat Rai as they control the ignorant public. The Khadim says that the defeat of Mr. Asaf Ali should open the eyes of those Muslims who had of late begun to favour the abolition of separate representation. When the Hindus treated a swarajist Muslim in this fashion, what would be the fate of Muslims if separate electorates were done away with throughout India? Not a single Muslim would be able to enter the legislatures, and if any one was perchance sent up he would be of the type of M. Liaqat Husain of Bengal. Muslims should now realize that the Hindu agitation for joint representation is a political move which would prove fatal to Muslim interests. The Hamdam says that every just-minded person will urge Government to pay attention to the reasonable demand of the Adi-Hindu Mahasabha, Cawnpore, in regard to their representation in the Council and to allow them to elect a certain fixed number of representatives for each legislative body. Meanwhile only persons enjoying their confidence should be nominated.

Political propaganda.

The Manorama expresses surprise that despite the ever-growing number of outrages on Indian women for some time past the Government takes no measures to stop them. It refers to the provision of death penalty for criminal assaults on white women in East Africa and China and says that a similar penalty is not provided for outrages on Indian or Asiatic women by whites. So far the value of the life of an Indian or Asiatic was nothing as compared with that of a European, but now there is also a world of disparity between the honour of a white and a coloured woman. Is there any nation which can survive even after suffering such disgrace? The Vibhuti publishes a poem on Dasehra in which after describing the atrocities perpetrated by Ravan and his subsequent fall the writer invokes God to protect India by destroying Ravan's dynasty. He says: The progeny of Ravan has multiplied, the country is being ruined and atrocities upon atrocities are being perpetrated. The Vir Sandesh publishes an article on "Ideal valour" by Pandit Brij Mohan Tewari, M A., which concludes with a poem meant to be read to the Kshattriyas. It contains, among others, the following lines: Rise up, sword in hand, be like the God of Death. Evil-doers may be decimated through massacre; leniency towards the wicked may come to an end. In a leading article on the Diwali the Vartman remarks that the country cannot properly celebrate the festival as the wealth, the goddess of which is worshipped on the occasion, has passed into the hands of foreigners. The paper deprecates indulgence in gambling and calls upon the people to devote themselves to the task of removing the yoke which has been placed on the necks of thirty crores of Indians. The Bharat Jiwan says that Indians can celebrate the Diwali festival in its true spirit only when they improve the economic condition of the country. This can be done only by the development of indigenous industries through the propagation of the Swadeshi cult and the boycott of foreign goods, specially cloth. The Aj publishes a communication from "Raja" Mahendra Pratap from Kabul in the course of which he says that Islam is not responsible for the Hindu-Muslim dissensions in India and that it is the foreign rulers of India who foment them and pleads with Hindus for just and charitable treatment of Muslims who are sure to reciprocate it. Continuing, he remarks that it is the foreign rulers of the country who teach obstinacy to Hindus and publish writings sometimes in favour of the Hindus and at others in that of the Muslims. No act of Englishmen is free from some deep design and Indians are taken in by it. It is all a lie spread by foreigners that on their withdrawal Hindus and Muslims will oppress each other. It is only on the British leaving India that government on truly Indian lines will be established in the country. Hindu or Muslim favouritism will then become unknown and all business will be conducted on principles of justice and charity. The Pratap publishes an open letter addressed to Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya by "Raja" Mahendra Pratap from Kabul in which he says: "I am the same well-wisher of yours who, while in India, regarded you as a respected guide. You too used to say that if you had a hundred co-workers like myself India would become free in a day. You used to point out one special defect in me, viz, that I sounded the trumpet of war without preparation. You were engaged in preparations and used to say that you would declare war when preparations were complete." Proceeding, the writer deprecates the present activities of Pandit Malaviya and says that the Sangathan and the Tanzim movements are only helping the enemy. Complete success can be achieved only through Hindu-Muslim unity. Those who have been born in Indian soil are not foreigners. Foreigners are they who are pulling the wires from London and who sometimes make Indians dance and at others utilize them for their gain. Referring to the fire which broke out at Peshawar during the Viceroy's visit the Medina writes:—When the Viceroy heard of the fire he went to witness the spectacle of the burning of the houses of his subjects. We are certain that the residents of Peshawar will not for long forget this auspicious visit of the Viceroy. There was a time when the passage of emperors converted wildernesses into habitations and forests into gardens. Now things have come to such a pass that where the august representative of the King-Emperor stays prosperous towns are laid waste through fire.

Indian States.

While the appointment of Maharaja Sir Kishen Prasad as Prime Minister of Hyderabad has been so far favourably received, the entire Muslim Press has been vehemently protesting against what it regards as the attempt of the Government of India to interfere in the internal administration of the State by introducing the British element into its public services. The attitude of the Hindu Press is resented and appeals are being made for a vigorous Muslim agitation against the action of Government. A number of papers allege that in many respects the administration of the Hyderabad State is much better than that of British India and that the Government of India are actuated by vindictiveness and want to punish the Nizam for his spirit of independence, especially for his demand for the restoration of Berar. In the course of an article headed "The Hidden Hand" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—By all accounts the Nizam of Hyderabad has been coerced into accepting the conditions laid down by the Political department for the peaceful possession of his title. The situation as it stands does not redound to the credit of Lord Irwin's Government, and the least they can do is to declare without prevarication their reasons for so drastic, and apparently so undeserved, a case of suzerain interference for the humiliation of Hyderabad. The Medina writes:—The evil disposition of the Government is bent upon humiliating the independence and sense of self-respect of the Nizam, and for this various excuses are being resorted to. If the Government's object was merely to introduce reforms in the State, it ought to have been satisfied as the Nizam had accepted most of its demands but its heart is aflame with rage and vindictiveness. This is undoubtedly the worst kind of joke with morality and humanity. The Government has forgotten all the help which the Nizam has rendered to it during emergencies. Gratitude is a meaningless word in British traditions. It is the old policy of the Government of India to impart such education to Ruling Chiefs as would make them half British and their states sources of unrestricted income for the British unemployed. Where this is not possible wire-pulling and intrigues are resorted to, so that the Chiefs may become mere toys and the Government may find opportunities for undue interference. The Chiefs are placed amidst luxurious and sensual surroundings so that under the influence of a cup of wine or the smile of a captivating beauty they may make over their States into the hands of foreigners. Such wire-pullings and artful intrigues were resorted to to the greatest extent in the Nizam's State. The fact is that no self-respecting ruler of a State can tolerate such tyrannies and injustices. We appeal to Indian leaders without any distinction of caste and community to take effective steps to redress this deplorable state of things. The Hamdam writes:—It is said that the Government of India has again written insisting on changes in the staff and demanding a reply by November 5. We would inform the Government of India that His Exalted Highness the Nizam deservedly enjoys great popularity not only in his own dominions but throughout British India, and if owing to the exercise of undue pressure he is compelled to abdicate the feelings not only of his subjects but of British Indians also and specially Muslims, will be greatly pained. The Najat observes that if in spite of the past and present treaties Government interferes in the internal affairs of the State on the basis of its superior strength, it would not only be violating the principles of right and justice but also disgracing itself. The impartiality, simplicity, industry and sound judgement of the Nizam are well-known and the reforms and progress initiated by him in various departments of the State during his regime are well in advance of anything achieved in British India. From the administrative standpoint too Hyderabad is far superior to other States and also to British India in many respects, and that is why the Nizam is so very popular among all other Indians except a few sangathanist hotheads who are being consumed with the fire of prejudice. If Government is really bent on interference it should know that this matter is not like that of Nabha and Muslims will not be able to submit easily. When the Muslims of India and other countries realize that the British Government is bent on undermining their foundations they will surely resort to reprisals, and then their excitement will not be easily calmed. Government should, therefore, before adopting any such misguided course consider all its consequences, whether at home or abroad, as the question concerns not only Hyderabad but Muslims all the world over. The Bedar writes:—The Nizam who was the first to fix a pension for the dethroned Caliph, who revived the ancient learning of the Muslims is to-day prepared to free himself from the grip of autocracy and to perform hijrat to the court of the Prophet to bewail the helplessness of Muslims. The honour of the Nizam is the honour of seven crores of Muslims, and at a sign from him we are prepared to sacrifice all. Muslims, this is the moment of your trial. If during the Khilafat movement you presented your lives and property as sacrifice for the Turkish patriots, then to-day you should show that each drop of blood of every Muslim is tied up with the only Islamic State in India.

The Viceroy's visit to the United Provinces.

The Bharat Jiwan writes :—It is our absolute duty to refuse to welcome the Viceroy on the occasion of his forthcoming visit to Benares as he is the representative of the very bureaucracy which tramples upon the interests of India at every step and which has begun to accord a very objectionable treatment to Hindus as evidenced by its crooked policy in regard to the stoppage of Ramlila at Allahabad. The Aj urges the municipal board of Benares not to offer welcome to the Viceroy on the occasion of his forthcoming visit to that city and thus to proclaim to the world that being the centre of Hinduism Benares cannot brook the suppression of the religious rights of the Hindus. In a subsequent issue the paper says that the decision of the Benares municipal board to welcome the Viceroy was an indication of degrading slave mentality, and points out that it has been possible to offer welcome to the Viceroy at Benares only through the votes of the two nominated or, in other words, Government members of the board. The Khadim offers a number of suggestions for according a really grand and impressive welcome to the Viceroy.

The Imperial Conference.

Referring to the Maharaja of Burdwan's remark that India was proud of her position in the British Empire the Leader writes :—If the Maharaja had screwed up courage to state that India was feeling a sense of humiliation at her position of dependence he would have been nearer the truth. How can Indians be satisfied with such a "representative?" The Abhyudaya publishes an article by one K. B. Dixit who says that the Maharaja of Burdwan holds the same position in the Imperial Conference as is natural for a Government nominee. His speech shows that India's real status in the Empire is that of a slave, and that her representative is a mere sycophant.

United Provinces Indian Christian Conference.

The Indian Daily Telegraph strongly criticises the proceedings of the United Provinces Indian Christian Conference held at Allahabad and regrets that the Indian Christian community in this province has not acquired a greater degree of national consciousness and political wisdom than what has been exhibited in some of the resolutions passed at the present session. The paper specially deprecates the resolution asking for special representation and says that the "stiff communal fight for the loaves and fishes of office is distressing." The Hamdam hopes that the Government will have no hesitation in granting the demand of Indian Christians for separate representation as they are an important part of the population of the country and should be given a chance of representation in the Legislative Councils. Protesting against the demand the Oudh Akhbar says :—We consider the demand for separate representation to be detrimental to national unity. The Government of India and the Secretary of State for India realize that they have committed a great mistake in granting separate representation to Muslims. They should not, therefore, repeat it in the case of Indian Christians. If this policy is accepted to be right in the case of one community, there will be no end to the demand as there are numerous communities and castes in India. After the demands of Parsis, Jains and Buddhists different castes of Hindus will begin to demand the right of separate representation.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

In the course of an article headed "Rama ! come ! come !" after describing in brief the life and adventures of Rama the Vibhuti says :—Lord Rama, behold the demons in human form who like the Ravan of that age make people weep at every step. Far greater injustice is being done. Atrocities are being perpetrated in the country in broad daylight. At that time only one Sita was kidnapped, but now thousands of Sitas are being kidnapped daily from our houses; our children are being stolen; our temples pulled to the ground and our religion is being defiled by those belonging to other religions.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the British representative's opposition to the suggestion of the Mandates Commission that the inhabitants of mandated countries should be allowed to represent their grievances to it the Vivek writes:—If the mandatory powers are discharging their responsibilities as a sacred trust why do they fight shy of a thorough inquiry into their deeds? Imperialists may well suck the blood of others but why do they make the fruitless attempt of convincing the world that they are inspired by benevolence towards helpless countries? How long will this loot by the League of Nations continue in the name of justice and peace? The Medina writes:—Now the capitalistic governments of Europe do not find means for the satisfaction of their land-hunger anywhere except in Asia. So Asiatic nations are sought to be enslaved with the help of the League of Nations. Britain is the greatest champion of this policy of enslaving other nations. All free and subject countries of Asia are realizing this danger. The only means of defence is the formation of an Asiatic League of Nations. The meeting of Russian, Persian, Afghan and Turkish ambassadors at Angora is probably the first step in this direction.

Election campaign.

Most of the papers are now almost exclusively devoted to the election campaign and a number of them are freely indulging in vituperation. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya, Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Motilal Nehru are being bitterly attacked by the organs of the opposite party. The election results are being interpreted by each party in its own favour. The Abhyudaya is supporting Mr. Chintamani with the same assiduity with which it opposed him during the last elections. Muslim papers generally find little to choose between the Independent Congress party and the Swaraj party and regard both as essentially Hindu organizations bent upon injuring Muslim interests. They accordingly emphasize the need of voting for candidates of Muslim organizations alone. Exhorting the voters not to vote for Swarajist candidates, the Leader writes:—The Swarajists have failed to raise their voice in condemnation of excesses committed by Muslims against Hindus in several cases. They have condemned those who have been trying to organize the Hindus for self-protection. A section of Muslims has been trying by force to deprive the Hindus of one of their fundamental rights of citizenship, namely, the freedom to carry their processions with music on public thoroughfares. The whole Hindu community has been agitated over this question. But the Swaraj party has not thought fit or expedient to support the Hindus in the matter and to condemn those who have been making preposterous claims in this behalf. This is only one instance of the indifference shown by the party to legitimate Hindu interests. We want men in the councils who are not obsessed with a false or perverse sense of nationalism and we venture to say that the Hindus ought not to rely upon the representatives of the party to act as fair and fearless champions of their legal and traditional rights. The Indian Daily Telegraph publishes a series of articles to make a "surprising revelation of how a small but heroic contingent of thirty Swarajists in the total council of 123 fought and accomplished so much for the people of the United Provinces." Commenting on these the Leader writes:—The articles only establish the superiority and the fruitful nature of the policy which the Swarajists have been denouncing and how completely they repudiated in practice their election pledges. The Advocate writes:—It is a plain truth that our progress can be rendered safe and secure by using the Reforms. The voters should vote for those who would utilize the Reforms for the purpose of securing national progress and advancement. The Swarajists have dug their own grave by adopting an attitude which was most dangerous for the Hindu cause in particular. The masses are disgusted with them and they are no more likely to be entrapped in the net. Commenting on the election results in the Central Provinces the Leader writes:—The Swarajist citadel in the Central Provinces has fallen before the assault of constitutionalists who have practically captured the legislative machinery. The plight of the Swarajists there conveys a lesson to the whole country and is indicative of the enormous change in the situation which has taken place since the last general election. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes: If the Madras and Bombay election results constitute any reliable indication as to the political mood of the country then Pandit Malaviya, Lala Lajpat Rai and Mr. Jayakar have occasion to feel greatly chagrined . . . . If the Malaviya-Lala group thinks that North India is their stronghold they will have a rude awakening on the polling day. Indications are not wanting to show that despite the most unscrupulous attempts to exploit religious bigotry and communal animosity, the unquestionable record of work and selfless patriotism of the Swarajists will enable them to triumph over the opportunism of the Independents. Quoting from the election speeches of Pandit Motilal Nehru the Aligarh Mail says that the Pandit has given a certificate to the Congress in regard to the fact that practically it functions as the Hindu Maha Sabha. It goes on to say: "We are not concerned whether or not the Hindus vote for the Swarajists. But to the Muslims our advice is: Don't vote for the Swarajists. We venture to give—and we give it most seriously—the above advice to the Muslims because on Pandit Nehru's own testimony the Swarajists are like Hindu Mahasabhaists . . . A Hindu is after all a Hindu, whether you call him a Mahasabhaist or a Swarajist. It makes little difference." The Gyanshakti of Gorakhpur which has hitherto been an advocate of the Hindu Sabha contesting the elections has now taken a somersault and expresses the opinion that if the Hindu Sabha wants to thrive it should cease to participate in the elections and forthwith withdraw its candidates from the field. The Surya warns the voters that to return the Swarajists to the legislatures would lead to the ruin of the Hindus and the strengthening of the bureaucracy. The Sainik tries to make out that the new rules framed by the Government for legislatures have curtailed the powers of the Ministers to such an extent as to render them practically negligible. They have also made the Ministers less amenable to the control of the councils. The Reforms were already inadequate but these rules have rendered them still more unsatisfactory. Will the members of the Independent Congress party who have set their eyes upon offices see if the crumbs for the sake of which they are engaged in ruining their own brethren are capable of satisfying hunger? They should see if these crumbs are not a mixture of putrid and poisonous matter likely to endanger the life of those taking them. The Aj publishes an open letter from Chatursen Vaidya Shastri to Seth Ghanshyam Das Birla in which he dissuades the latter from seeking election to the Assembly on the ground that it will be humiliating for him, a man of independent means, to bow before Englishmen and to take the oath of allegiance. He says: How will you take the oath of allegiance before the power which has crushed the ancient culture and civilization of millions of men under its iron hand, which even today stands airily on its steel frame with the determined bloody intention to squeeze out the last drop from it, which even in this twentieth century—the century of the destruction of crowns—says that it has conquered India with the sword, that it will rule over her for ever with the help of the same weapon and that it will crush him whoever comes in its way. . . . It is heard that you have spent 3 lakhs of rupees for securing membership of the council. Are you doing this to demolish the satanic steel edifice or to strengthen it? Do you not realize that even the good works of the English, like education and agricultural development are proving sweet poison for our originality? The naked sword of the Moghals did not swerve us for seven hundred years so much from Hinduism as a hundred years of British rule have done. Do we not see through the achievements of British jugglers? Have the wounds caused by the showering of bullets in the Punjab healed up? Have you forgotten your crawling there? Your sisters were made naked there. They were dishonoured and beaten. Have you forgotten all this? The Vivek takes Lala Lajpat Rai to task for raising the cry of Hindu interests in danger and thereby fomenting communal feeling in the country and says:—He has surrendered his arms to the enemy. He has become a reactionary. It is to be hoped that the country will save itself from the miserable plight into which he in conjunction with Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is going to place it by his present policy. If the Independent Congress party comes out successful in the next elections, Government's hopes will rise by leaps and bounds. It is for the voters to decide whether in the next elections they are to furnish material for the Government's jubilation or for its opposition. The Deshbandhu condemns the election tactics pursued by the Independent Congress party in general and Messrs. Krishnakant Malaviya and Satyabrat in particular and remarks :—Perhaps these two gentlemen have cause to repent that they were not sent as exhibits to the German zoo in which human beings were recently exhibited as beasts for no other Indian can truly represent the savagery which exists in India. The Mauji calls names to Pandit Motilal Nehru for putting up Raizada Hansraj in opposition to Lala Lajpat Rai and urges that no votes should be given to the Swarajists as they are the very personification of deceit, treachery and crooked policy and form a satanic party against the interests of the country. Addressing young men the Vartman remarks : How insulting it is that the leaders of the moderate party are out to uproot, in the name of Hindu interests, the plant of Swaraj reared by you. You have not one or two but scores of instances before you which demonstrate that the Government never conceded anything through prayers or entreaties. These moderate leaders want to drive you backwards and abuse your resources by presenting a false and spurious ideal. Those who work against the Congress are rebels and those who worship personalities are traitors. Consider the rebels and the traitors to be the enemies of the nation and liberty and punish them. They are going to spoil the battle of Swaraj by allying themselves with the bureaucracy. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's statement that 'non-co-operation was dead' amounts to an insult of the nation and the murder of its soul and is a slur on the Indian youths. You should, therefore, as true soldiers of the national army come out of your houses and shatter the conspiracies of the rebels who are determined to attack the Congress, who are aspirants of official favour and who have allied themselves with the enemy. "War ! Conflict !! Slaughter !!!" these are the mottoes of the battle of freedom. You should die with him who dies for the country. Votaries of the country ! you should turn down the false banners of the rebels. In another issue, condemning the support of the candidature of Lala Chunnilal by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Lala Lajpat Rai the paper remarks : It has now become clear in the eyes of the world that the Independent Congress party is a caucus of unprincipled and unthinking persons devoid of political wisdom. Exhorting the labourers of Cawnpore to vote for Pandit Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi "the true representative of the poor" the paper says : The Bolsheviks will not come from Europe. You yourselves are the Bolsheviks, the communists and even the socialists. If you summon courage these capitalists and their Governments will kneel down to some extent at least. The Hamdam invites attention to Lala Lajpat Rai's silence in spite of Pandit Motilal's challenge to him to publish his information about the Swarajist conspiracy to bring about Afghan domination in India and says that there was really no meaning in the roaring of the Punjab lion and this tale of a conspiracy was concocted only to prejudice Hindu voters against the Swarajists and to pack the legislatures with anti-Muslim candidates. Recounting instances of elected representatives who are easily influenced by officials the Khadim writes :—All elected representatives are of course not of such low calibre but they are sufficient in numbers to justify the remark often heard from the lips of foreigners that India is not yet ripe for self-government. The only remedy for this is that the franchise should be confined to educated persons.

Communal representation.

The Muslim press continues to refer to Mr. Asaf Ali's defeat as showing the need for the continuance of separate representation. The Rahnuma regrets that by their attitude towards Mr. Asaf Ali at Delhi the Hindus have given a fresh lease of life to separate representation. Unity can be secured only if the majority behaves generously towards the minority and thus wins its confidence. Referring to the campaign against the election of Mr. Asaf Ali from the Delhi electorate Al Adl writes :—Will Muslims shake off their indifference after such instances or will they still be caught in the net of deceit of their compatriots and favour joint representation ? Muslims, do you still hope that Hindus will work in unison with you ? Gandhiji strikes the tune of unity to serve his purpose but at the same time Malaviyaji is putting an end to Muslims with the poisoned knife of Shuddhi and Sangathan. Muslims, open your eyes even now. Al Khalil says that neither has Mr. Asaf Ali been defeated at Delhi nor has the Hindu Sabha, as the Hindustan Times says, scored its first victory there, but it is the first and the greatest success of separate representation. Our Hindu brethren used to attribute all communal tension to separate electorates. In a way this was true as when no Muslim would be elected from the mixed electorates the Hindus would have naturally no cause for grievance but no sensible person would say that the Muslims also would always remain satisfied with their exclusion from the elective bodies. What can we expect from the general run of Hindus when such chosen leaders of theirs as Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Malaviya betray such a narrow mentality. Delhi Muslims would now be quite justified in demanding separate representation. The Khurshed points out that while Hindu leaders always declare separate representation to be responsible for all communal troubles they themselves try to make Muslims helpless and to deprive them of all representation in Government and the legislatures. They are always in search of prey for their sangathanist lathis and when there is trouble they put all the blame on the Muslims and separate representation and always turn everything to their own advantage. Muslims should beware of their untrustworthy compatriots and should redouble their agitation in favour of separate representation in view of the impending Royal Commission of 1929.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Bharat Dharma publishes a letter from one Sri Narayan Shukla of Bareilly who says that in the whole world and especially in India the Muslims have established an association for the destruction of Hindus and are carrying on a vigorous propaganda in their community to this effect by means of a secret conspiracy to circulate books, pamphlets and notices etc. From 1920 to 1927 there will be severe fighting between Hindus and Muslims. Temples and places of pilgrimage will be demolished and defiled and will fall into the hands of mlechchas. Cow-sacrifice will be carried on vigorously. Blood and bones will be showered on the occasion of festivals, the Vedas and the Purans will be burnt; the sacrificial pits and idols will be broken and burnt, the top-knots and sacred threads will be broken; Muslim raj will be established; the councils and the District and Municipal boards will pass into the hands of Muslims; Hindu religion will be destroyed; Hindu girls and women will be stolen, they will be led astray by being seduced or threatened with lathis, knives etc., in fairs, in bazars etc., men, women, boys, girls and old men will be murdered and the blood of cows, Brahmans and Sadhus will be shed. The Hindus should therefore take heed and practise satyagraha. The Arya Mitra says that if any Hindu publishes any book on Islam containing criticism supported even by authorities Muslims raise a hue and cry and legal action is taken against them but no Moulvi or Maulana speaks even a word against the indecent books which are published against the Hindus. Even the Government which boasts of impartiality and justice does not think it proper to pay any attention to this. Muslims have published a number of very filthy books. It is our intention to produce extracts from these heart-rending books and to ask Government why it does not do its duty in this connexion. Is it not the Government's duty to protect the religious susceptibilities of the Hindus from the indecent attacks of those belonging to other religions? Referring to Lord Olivier's statements that the Government of India favours Muslims Al Khalil inquires whether this is established by the numerous instances of its attitude that it has recently furnished. Compare the treatment accorded to the Maharaja of Kashmir (Mr. A) with that dealt out to one of its most loyal allies, the Nizam. Does the insult to which the Khairpur State is being subjected betoken a pro-Muslim attitude? The vetoing of the Punjab Money-lenders' Bill, the postponement of the Frontier reforms, the refusal to prosecute Dr. Moonje and Pandit Malaviya for their inflammatory speeches and the recent pardoning of the Hindu accused in the Frontier arson cases with the simultaneous conviction of the Muslim accused in the Saidpur, Ramkund and Rawalpindi cases all tell a different tale. Is this a pro-Muslim or a pro-Hindu attitude? Will Lord Olivier or his apologists answer this question? The Najat says that the systematic frequency with which news of Hindu-Muslim riots is being received from all corners of India shows that sooner or later there will be a general war between the two communities. The discord-breeding attitude of the Hindu sangathanist leaders has created an impassable gulf between the two communities and in spite of caste divisions and sharp differences they all unite against Muslims whenever occasion arises and all their camouflage about a united nationality and patriotism is exposed in its true colours. Lala Lajpat Rai, Pandit Malaviya and Messrs. Jayakar, Kelkar and Moonje are busy with their anti-Muslim campaign.

and there is hardly any town in India to-day where a magazine is not being stored against Muslims. But with all this, the trumpet of Hindu-Muslim unity is also always sounded so that Muslims may remain negligent and may not be able to concert measures of defence. Will Muslim leaders close up their scattered ranks? Muslims, ponder and see how the Hindus are working for a "Hindu Raj" under the aegis of "British Raj" and all their actions tend towards the subjugation of the Muslims so that they may be removed from the ranks of living nations like the Jews. Even if in spite of this, the Muslims stay in India they will be subject to two governments i.e. "British Raj" and "Hindu Raj". The Hindu peril is a very live danger for Muslims and has placed the question of life and death before them.

Indian States.

The entire Muslim Press continues to be exercised over reports of Government interference in the internal affairs of the Hyderabad State. The general comment is that in many respects the administration of the State is much better than that of British India and that the Government action is actuated by vindictiveness on account of the Nizam's demand for the restoration of Berar. The Aligarh Mail takes strong exception to the attitude of a section of the Indian press with regard to the Nizam and says:—The Government of India appears to have taken these papers into confidence for it is through them and not a Government communique that the general public is allowed to learn anything about the Hyderabad affairs. Because of this unwillingness on the part of the Government of India to allay the rumours, all sorts of stories, false as well as true, are gaining currency which are causing unnecessary amount of suspense leading to general discontent .... Rumours that are afloat are so disquieting and so diverse that the Government of India should at least now issue a communique explaining the so-called "friendly advice" that they have given to His Exalted Highness the Nizam. Maulana Fazlullah Khan, late editor of the Risalat of Bombay, writing in the Haqiqat appeals for the formation of a body of volunteers who would employ all peaceful means for the defence of Hyderabad if Government proposes to harm it. The Medina takes strong exception to the attacks made on the Nizam in Hindu papers and meetings and says:—Communal enmity has so permeated the Hindus that they cannot view with toleration anything connected with Muslims. Today there is no sangathanist newspaper from Madras to Lahore which is not behaving impertinently towards the Nizam and is not gloating over the tyrannical interference of the Government of India in the affairs of his State. We know that the Government of India is at present bent on humiliating the Nizam and in this the Hindus have found a rare opportunity. It is possible that in future the Muslims may feel the necessity of inaugurating a strong agitation and this trouble may spread in Hindu States. The tyrannies which have been perpetrated on the Muslims in Kashmir and Poonch and the insult which has been offered to the mosques in Bharatpur cannot be forgotten.

Music before mosques.

Referring to the resolution of the Sikh Gurudwara Prabandhak Committee regarding music before mosques the Aligarh Mail writes:—The Sikhs have seldom been mischievous in the sangathanist sense, but the way in which Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya has wooed them by posing as their well-wisher leads us to believe that they are being used as tools by the sangathanists for the purpose of annoying and humiliating the Musalmans. Let our Sikh brethren note that it cannot be called a patriotic course of action to make foes of the Musalmans in order to befriend the sangathanists who are duping the Sikh community and using it as a shield against the so-called and imaginary aggression of the Musalmans. In another issue the paper takes the Hindustan Times to task for endeavouring to "excite the Sikhs against the Muslims and win over their support on the side of the sangathanist forces" on the question of music before mosques and says:—All this means that an alliance of the sangathanists with the Sikhs is being established in order to cow down the Government and show to them that they have to face the combined opposition of the Hindus and the Sikhs on the question of music before mosques. Let the Hindustan Times note that the Muslims are not afraid of any Hindu-Sikh alliance on this question.

Premier's speech.

Referring to the Premier's speech at the Guildhall the Leader writes:—The Premier is mistaken if he thinks that "no people" can help us in our difficulties. By discouraging those who create divisions for their own selfish ends, the Government can do much to promote unity. This much, however, can be said that even in the country's present condition, we in India are better situated to deserve a further instalment of reforms than some other countries which obtained more than what we are asking.

Indian Church Measure.

Commenting on the Government of India's letter to the local Governments in connexion with the Indian Church Measure the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—A close examination of the measure will show that the gift of autonomy so ostentatiously paraded is to a large extent illusory and that in the desire for protecting the vested interests of the British Congregation the freedom of the Indian church is considerably curtailed by legislative restrictions. . . After the passing of the measure it is still proposed to keep up the huge body of chaplains to be maintained at the cost of the Indian tax-payer, while further disbursements will be made to the Bishops under the convenient heading of "Episcopal supervision." It has long been urged that the total expenditure incurred on this behalf which amounts to about Rs. 30 lakhs is inconsistent with the secular basis of a Government which is pledged to strict religious neutrality and grossly unfair to the non-Christian tax-payer.

Muslim affairs.

The Hamdam says that the fact that a Hindu has not been appointed in Sir Muhammad Habib-ul-lah's vacancy can afford no satisfaction to Muslims as their demand was that the Viceregal cabinet should not be denuded of its Muslim element during any period of time. The situation in India at present is such that important questions may crop up at any moment and if wrong decisions are arrived at in the absence of effective Muslim advice the consequences to that community may be very serious.

The Patuakhali Satyagrah.

The Vartman takes the Hindu Maha Sabha severely to task for not helping those who are carrying on satyagraha at Patuakhali and says:—The satyagraha at Patuakhali is in every respect a battle for the protection of Hindu rights. The Hindu Maha Sabha should remember that religious rights cannot be protected without strenuous resistance and this will have to be offered not only at Patuakhali but all over the country. The Maha Sabha should explain why it has not taken part in this satyagraha-campaign.

Election campaign.

Elections continue to be the absorbing topic in the press. Party organs are, as before, engaged in running down the candidates of the rival party. Recriminations are increasing in vehemence and in many cases are touching a very low level. Exhorting the voters not to vote for the candidates of the Independent Congress Party the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Do they want as their representatives in the legislature full-blooded Swarajists who, standing four-square to the winds, will put up a straight fight against the bureaucracy, or do they want men with myopic vision, political chameleons and perpetual understrappers of officialdom? When the issue is between robust nationalism and narrow communalism, the voter can ill afford any room for the play of sentimentalism. It is the sacred duty of every one who places national interests before sectional interests to defeat the mischievous and ignoble campaign of unabashed communalism sponsored by Pandit Malaviya and Lala Lajpat Rai. In the course of another article replying to the various charges against the Swaraj Party the paper writes:—Among lies to disgrace Congressmen there has been nothing more infamous than the one coined by Lala Lajpat Rai about their implication in the so-called Kabul conspiracy. Lalaji is the president of a party that wants to accept office. The representatives of that party when in office will of course—indeed they are bound to—communicate the secret to the Government. When treason is afoot, Lalaji cannot suppress the information he professes to hold. Knowing the treacherous untruth of the allegation Pandit Nehru has voiced the demand of the Congress to name the culprits. Like the informer who is usually also a coward, Lalaji has been evading the challange. A number of other Swarajist papers also indignantly protest against the allegation made by Lala Lajpat Rai. The Vartman exhorts the voters of the Cawnpore district not to side with jee hazoors, but to vote for the Congress candidate who on entering the Council would roar like a lion and make those diplomats tremble who are imposing taxes after taxes, cesses after cesses and enacting one law after another. More than half of the hard earnings of the poor villagers are swallowed up by laws, taxes and courts .... Do not put up with tyranny when it becomes intolerable. Otherwise you will be wiped out and others will erect bungalows in the place of your cottages. In another article the paper condemns the campaign of misrepresentation and calumny carried on by the agents and hirelings of Lala Chunni Lal against his Swarajist opponent Pandit Ganesh Shanker Vidyarthi and remarks:—The elections have polluted the atmosphere all over India, but Cawnpore represents the height of this pollution where the atmosphere is surcharged with falsehood, trickery, petty-mindedness and incivility. We ask Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya what good he has done to Cawnpore by creating such a vitiated atmosphere? Has not his visit to Cawnpore sown those poisonous seeds which will ultimately ruin the Independent Congress Party itself? His betrayal of the country at the present critical juncture may be excused, but the people of Cawnpore will never forgive him for setting up a candidate against Vidyarthiji. His political bankruptcy and obduracy are leading the country along with him to a deep abyss. The voters of Cawnpore have to choose between an apostle of truth on the one side and a mountain of falsehood on the other. The Abhyudaya contends that in his recent speeches Pandit Motilal Nehru has been talking of satyagrah merely for election purposes and says:—If he really believes in it, he should not only profess it, but practise it. At present there is a good opportunity for him. People of Allahabad are thinking of offering Satyagrah. If he comes they will readily flock under his banner and offer satyagrah. Having known the Pandit so well we would never have asked him to do so if he had not been talking of keeping satyagrah alive. In another article the paper states that the Swarajists' refusal to accept ministerships has led to the growth of Hindu-Muslim tension in the north and of the Brahman and non-Brahman controversy in the south, inasmuch as on account of this refusal the ministerships passed into the hands of the communalists. It says that had Muslims possessed patriotism there would have been no harm if the Swarajists had not accepted ministerships, but the kind of pact which Muslims want with the object of maintaining Islamic hold over India destroys nationalism itself. The Vijaya publishes a message from "Raja" Mahendra Pratap in the course of which he appeals to the Indian people to work for the success of the Swarajists in the elections and declares that the country cannot benefit by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's programme. He says that he regards them as enemies who forsake the country and support the Government whether directly or indirectly, and expresses the conviction that India will soon become free. The Aj contends that the persons who are to-day attacking the Congress under the cloak of Hindu interests are reactionaries who want to drag the country backward in the political field. Their views are identical with those of the Liberals, but finding that these views were impossible of acceptance by the people, Swarajist deserters, old Liberals and Aman Sabha jee hazoors have joined hands to attack the Congress in the name of the protection of Hindu interests. In another article the paper says that reports of the election results so far received constitute a happy augury for the Congress, the country and its future liberty. It remarks that the enemies of the Congress do not really want to attain Swaraj. They know that the people have not yet lost self-respect to such an extent as to be ready to co-operate with the bureaucracy. It is for this reason that they make so much of the protection of Hindu interests and try to represent the Congress as being opposed to those interests. They only want to enter the Councils to kneel down before the bureaucracy, to co-operate with it. The Najat attaches great importance to the forthcoming elections in view of the constitutional changes that might come up for consideration in 1929 and urges that only the best and most trusted representatives must be sent up. If our tried representatives enter the Councils they would force Government to concede our rights and its servants would not be able to make capital out of the incapacity of the popular representatives. Government would also be unable to say that as their elected representatives are satisfied with the present system, further rights should not be granted to Indians. The electors should not therefore prejudice the interests of their progeny to please the administration and its officials. Only Congress candidates can be expected to put up a stiff fight for the country. All others appearing under variegated names and quaint labels are traitors who have sworn to ally themselves with the bureaucracy. Many among them are Rai Bahadurs and Khan Bahadurs. These are the cowards who had proved our inveterate enemies in our war for freedom. How can those who place the interests of the administration above those of their brethren prove of any use to us? Their only concern is for their own honour and the advantage of Government. So do not vote for such traitors. No one knows what considerations are to-day influencing Malaviyaji and Lalaji to do exactly what Government has been doing. The only difference is that while Government works for its own benefit, Malaviyaji and Lalaji are getting their noses cut for the advantage of others. In short, it must be understood, that every vote cast for Lalaji and Malaviyaji would be a vote cast for the Secretary of State for India. The Sarfaraz complains that the Sunnis are showing the same intolerance towards Shias in the elections as the Hindus have been showing towards Muslims and their depressed classes and Shia-Sunni propaganda is so mercilessly pursued that Shia candidates now hardly dare to stand for election, being sure of defeat at the hands of the unscrupulous Sunni majority. Shias form about one-third of the Muslim population of these provinces. How can they be satisfied with one seat out of the 36 reserved for Muslims? Exorting the electors of the Meerut division to return the Congress candidates to the legislatures the Desh Bhagat says:—

Your future welfare greatly depends upon this decision of yours. Englishmen came here as traders from beyond the seven seas. Our forefathers received them hospitably, but these clever capitalists practised dishonesty, took possession of our country and brought us under their complete control. Now we are neither the masters of our houses nor of our land, and the Government can forcibly deprive us of our property whenever it so desires. Englishmen drain away to their country all that we produce by our hard labour. We neither get sufficient good grain to eat nor clothes to hide our nudity in winter, but Englishmen live in bungalows and enjoy their life in every way. Pandit Motilal Nehru has decided to enter the Council with a host of Congressmen and to tell Englishmen that if they do not act according to the wishes of the people Indians, even though dying themselves, will not allow Englishmen to rest in peace. People should now decide whether they should vote for the brave people of the Congress or for those who talk of wheedling and cringing before Englishmen and are supported by Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya.

Communal representation.

The entire Muslim press continues to emphasize the need for separate Muslim representation, especially in view of the defeat of Mr. Asaf Ali from the Delhi joint electorate. The Aligarh Mail writes:—Malaviya-Lajpat Rai and company have rendered a distinct service, inadvertently of course, to the minorities, more particularly to the Musalmans by curing them of the last vestige of illusions that they were foolishly entertaining about getting a "fair deal" from the dominant Hindu majority that has for a long time enjoyed the monopoly of political power and privilege. By their attitude they have brought home to minorities in India that they will have to fight if they want to enjoy the rights and privileges that rightfully belong to them. To the coming generations Lalaji shall go down as the champion of minorities, for to him alone is due the end of joint electorates. To carry this fight to a successful conclusion separate communal electorates must be retained at all costs. If the minorities give these up they are sure to go down in the struggle that they will have to make if they do not wish to share the fate of the pariahs in the south. Al Bashir says that the Hindus in spite of all their deluding talk of a united nationality have been persistently trying to exclude Muslims from all places within their power. However undesirable separate representation may be on principle, educated Hindus have unfortunately shown themselves to be so short-sighted, narrow-minded, selfish and bigoted that it is inevitable in India, not only in the elective bodies but in the services also, and the time is not distant when the depressed classes also will have to be conceded separate representation and then, thanks to the policy of Malaviyaji and Lala Lajpat Rai, the question of Council representation will become as complicated as the Hindu caste system. In another article, referring to the emphasis laid by Hindu "National" leaders in their election campaign on the protection of Hindu interests, the paper writes:—It should be the first duty of the Muslim members of the United Provinces Council to raise the question of separate representation in the Allahabad and Lucknow Universities and the Intermediate and High School Examination Board and to produce the election speeches of the leaders of the Independent and Liberal Parties and their posters and manifestoes in support of their claim. Al Barid says that the defeat of Mr. Asaf Ali at Delhi by the Hindu majority has rung the death-knell of joint representation and given the lie to the Hindu contention that separate representation was responsible for communal tension. Muslims should be warned to safeguard their rights. The Sada-i-Muslim says that the majority of Hindus are not prepared for co-operation with Muslims and want to crush Muslims with the aid of Government. High-caste Hindus are so intolerant that they are not prepared to concede equal rights even to their own depressed classes, and though joint representation is ever so desirable, the difference between the professions and practices of the Hindus is so great that Muslims cannot entrust their interests to the former and must elect their own representatives.

Political propaganda.

Exhorting the voters to return the Congress candidates to the legislatures the Vijaya says:—Subjection has paralysed the nation and made it lifeless. The country has lost all power, wealth and prosperity as well as all human qualities. The sons of India are starving for a morsel and they have to look up to England for their clothing. Subjection is the sole cause of all this. Demoniacal subjection! Perdition may catch thee. Thou hast converted the holy land of India into a coolie manufacturing factory. The Pratap urges the need for the production of a large number of political preachers in the country who may purge the political atmosphere of the contamination caused by the present growth of party politics and unfasten the bonds of the motherland. It says that these political preachers should be such as cannot be bought over by gold or honour and do not feel despondent even in adverse circumstances. When India is able to produce such brave men Mahatma Gandhi will come forward to guide them. The Bharat Dharma writes:—India is for Indians. Every work here should be done by Indians. There is no need to appoint a fat—salaried alien to a post which can be held creditably by Indians. It is desirable that the Indian element should preponderate at least in the department in charge of the defence of the country for no self-respecting nation can like the idea of its defence being undertaken by foreigners. In another article commenting on the proposed establishment of an aerial base in India the paper remarks :—It is for its own selfish ends that the Imperial Government is saddling India with the expenditure involved in the establishment of the aerial base. The Imperial Government is omnipotent. Its scheme may or may not suit us, but we, subject people, are unable to reject it. However, we cannot help remarking that it is injustice. Like the maritime fleet the Government will establish the aerial base as well, with the result that the poor people of India will be unnecessarily sucked. Referring to the report of the killing of an Indian by a European fireman of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway the Desh Bhagat says :—The haughtiness of the white men is gradually rising to its highest point and like the killing of mosquitoes and gnats they regard the killing of Indians with kicks as an ordinary affair. Indian youths should devise some suitable antidote for this, because British justice is pledged not to prevent this oppression. Referring to the erection of Lenin's statue in Petrograd on the occasion of the ninth anniversary of Russian independence the paper says that the anniversaries of independence always infuse young men with a new spirit of self-sacrifice. For the sake of India's emancipation Mahatma Gandhi also suggested that a national week should be observed every year in the memory of the martyrs of Jallianwala Bagh, but how could the Government bear to see this? It fanned the flame of Hindu-Muslim tension in the country which consumed both the communities and now the number of those who talk of liberty is very small. The lovers of India's liberty have still time to take lesson from the anniversary of Russian independence.

Music before mosques.

The Aligarh Mail strongly criticizes the opinion said to have been expressed by Pandit Motilal Nehru that "custom or no custom, music could always be played before mosques." We unhesitatingly condemn the opinion as it is closely allied to that held by those Hindu communalists whose views are, unlike those of the Swarajists, not masked by the cult of Swarajism. The non-Swarajist Muslims should speak out because they have to save their community from falling into the snare of Swarajist politics which is based on deception and deceit. It is because the playing of music before mosques generally creates bad blood among the two great communities of this country that the authorities are forced to uphold the cause of law and order by legally prohibiting music before mosques which always leads to disorder. The Aj says that as the Bengal Government has not contradicted the report regarding the drafting of a Bill for the stoppage of music before all mosques at all times it is to be held as correct. The result of such a legislation is likely to be so fatal and terrible that the bureaucracy should take a warning in time and refuse to sow the seeds of ideas of revolution and disturbance in the minds of the two-thirds of the inhabitants of the country. There is no doubt that the Hindus, despite the passing of the Bill in the Bengal Legislative Council, will not accept it and bloodshed is bound to take place in Bengal. It will be impossible even for the leaders to control the people inflamed by religious bigotry. It is a question not only of Bengal but of the whole of India. The fire fanned by it in Bengal will spread thoughout the country and the bureaucracy will find it very difficult, if not impossible, to maintain public peace. The bureaucracy must be knowing all this, but it is dreaming of crushing the ever-growing spirit of nationalism among Hindus with the help of uneducated and semi-educated Muslims. Referring to the same report the Abhyudaya remarks :—We fear that if the Swarajists form the majority in the newly-elected Bengal Legislative Council before which the Bill will come up for discussion, its passage is assured concurrently with the deprivation of the Hindus of one of their birth-rights for ever. If, however, the Responsivists form the majority, the Bill will never find a place on the Statute Book. Hindus should, therefore, see that the Swarajists are not returned to the legislatures.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

One Shiva Charan Lal Sharma writing to the Arya Mitra enumerates a number of instances of abduction of Hindu women by Muslim hooligans and remarks :—Although the Hindu community has for a long time been the target of Muslim and Christian attacks as a result of which about one-third of the Hindu population has been lost to it, yet the present mean and cowardly attacks of the Muslims make the blood boil not only of every Hindu but of every human being. Our political subjection has emasculated us to such an extent that we are now unable to defend ourselves effectively against miscreants. If we do not counteract these attacks the day will soon come when Hindu homes will become bereft of women. The Chand publishes a lengthy article under the heading "Hindu Sangathan and Muslim womankind" by Sri Beni Madhava Agarwala, M.A., in the course of which he remarks:—Licentiousness has a very alluring place in Islam. In the Islamic heaven youthful and handsome boys and delicate—bodied fairies are always ready to accord a reception. Religion permits four wives and other several mistresses to Muslims on the earth. In addition to this wives of other kafirs have been held to be mere objects of enjoyment for many Muslims . . . A Muslim is not held to be a sinner in the eyes of Islam by having immoral relations with a kafir woman. To rob a kafir, to convert him to Islam by force and to debauch his wife do not degrade a Muslim in the eyes of Islam. The Medina writes:—The Hamdard (Delhi) has published reports of two very shocking incidents, one of which shows how two Muslim women were not allowed to sit in a railway carriage by Hindu women and how the former were threatened by the latter with the power of twenty-one crores of Hindus. The second report shows how a few Hindu women tried to beat with shoes a Muslim male while he was seating his female relatives in a female compartment. These incidents are indicative of hatred, enmity and a universal aggressive movement and show that Malaviyan Sangathan, which wishes to see Hindu women armed with pistols and daggers, has begun to affect Hindu women also. May we ask our Muslim brethren what defensive measures they have adopted against this movement? It is altogether idle to expect that the railway officials or the Government would stop this danger. It is, therefore, necessary that Muslim women should be armed with defensive weapons during railway journeys and on other occasions, when there is a chance of their coming into contact or conflict with Hindu women.

Muslim affairs.

The Aligarh Mail quotes from the Hamdard of Delhi a letter said to have been written by Khwaja Hasan Nizami to an old friend in which the following lines occur:—"No wonder if the Government has written. I had explained in detail all the matters to the Chief Commissioner of Delhi and had formally given information about the lessons on Pan-Islamism which were being taught to the Nizam. And I know that he (the Chief Commissioner of Delhi) also acquainted the Punjab Government with this danger." Commenting on this the paper (Aligarh Mail) writes:—We cannot help observing that the letter exposes the Khwaja Saheb as a man disgracefully ungrateful to His Exalted Highness the Nizam who has been too generous to him. Mean ingratitude can go no further. Khwaja Hasan Nizami is guilty of having backbitten his own patron. The mask of his religiosity which has abundantly benefited him materially is torn off. The Medina has also written in a similar strain. The Medina takes strong exception to the remarks made by the Vice-Chancellor of the Muslim University in his convocation address against the use of the vernaculars as medium of instruction in the institutions having the status of universities and says:—Such a big demonstration of partiality for things western does not become a descendant of the Prophet and an able representative of Indian Muslims. What shall we say of an address based on English language a general education in which has not only bred the spirit of slavery in us, but has contrived on a big scale to keep our future generations deprived of real education.

Report of Currency Commission.

In the course of an article headed "Currency zoolum" the Indian Daily Telegraph vehemently protests against the acceptance by the Imperial Government of the majority of the recommendations of the Currency Commission without giving any adequate opportunity to the Legislative Assembly to discuss them and says:—Apart from the pernicious substance of the currency scheme the whole procedure of the Government of India involves a breach of faith with the public. What is it that actuates the Government in offering this deliberate affront to the country by going back upon their pledge and issuing a decree over the head of the legislature? It is the consciousness of guilty muddling and a determination to put in the Statute Book measures that will not bear scrutiny. Sir Basil Blackett or the Government have by sheer zoolum intervened and procured a decision by extra-legislative means to put down the surging opposition of the public; but they will not be able to evade the economic nemesis of their intemperate folly. The Government have under the evil genius of Sir Basil Blackett flinched from the duty of implementing their undertakings and thrown this bombshell of an executive decision to mock the legislature and to outrage public decency. It is as much a challenge to the people as a striking commentary on the utility of the reforms. The Bharat Dharma remarks :—It is the white members of the Imperial Service of the Home Department of the Government of India and the white companies who reap a harvest of gold by the exchange rate of India being made artificial. The Western nations are unrivalled adepts in the art of enriching the rich whites by squeezing the poor Indians. But can it be called humanitarianism or love of subjects?

Indian States.

The Najat points out that Kashmir is the only Hindu State in which though Muslims form 97 per cent. of the population, the Hindus monopolize the public services and the destitution and ruin of the Muslims is on the increase. A perusal of the Civil List of the state shows that there are very few Muslim gazetted officers in any department. This proves that the Hindu rulers of Kashmir deliberately neglect Muslim interests.

Indian textile industry.

The Aj remarks that even if the Textile Tariff Board recommends the imposition of a protective duty on foreign goods and the Government accepts it, it will not really protect the indigenous textile industry. This will only lead to the establishment of foreign factories in this country. If the indigenous industry is to be saved, not only the importation of foreign goods should be checked, but obstacles should also be placed in the way of the establishment of foreign mills in this country.

Indian Mercantile Marine.

Urging Government to take early steps to better the condition of the shipping industry the Aligarh Mail writes :—Government's tenderness of foreign vested interests has been a chronic cause of serious dissatisfaction that has lately been such a prominent feature of India's political life. Let them show for once that they put the interests of India above everything else, even above the British vested interests.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the reports in the European Press about the formation of an Asiatic League of Nations, the Hindustani says that the League of Nations at Geneva is only out to register the decrees of the greater Powers and cannot protect the rights of smaller nationalities. This has made it necessary to establish an Asiatic League of Nations to bring together all the weaker Powers of Asia and to free them from their sufferings and slavery. Calling attention to British efforts to keep away Ibn Saud from the reported alliance between Russia, Turkey, Persia and Afghanistan, the Hamdam says that though an ambitious and pleasure-seeking person like Ibn Saud can expect no material advantage from Russia or Turkey while the English can give him gold and throw the bait of sovereignty over East Jordan, yet he should take warning from the fate of his predecessor, Sheriff Hussain, before falling into the snare of British diplomacy. At least so long as he is responsible for the peace and administration of the holy Hedjaz he should not promote alliances with non-Muslims which may enable them to penetrate into that land. Commenting on Rushdi Bey's contradiction of the report about his seeing Timur Shah of Persia and conferring with M. Chicherin on the question of Asiatic federation the Medina writes:—While it is just possible that the Turks may be indifferent towards an Asiatic federation, self-defence against Italy, Greece and Bulgaria is forcing them into an alliance with Russia, Persia, Afghanistan and China which is only another name of Asiatic federation. The day is not far when the West will leave the East bag and baggage. The Khadim apprehends a war between Turkey and Italy and hopes that the former will be able to teach the latter a good lesson. Prudence would dictate that Britain should not take sides with Italy as this would be putting too severe a strain on the loyalty of Indian Muslims. Though the sympathies of Indian Muslims would surely be with Turkey, they should not allow their attention to be distracted from their antagonists nearer home who are always anxious to injure them whenever they can find them off their guard. The Hamdam observes that Jaffar Pasha's maiden speech as Premier of Iraq shows that he is a tool of British policy He ridiculed the putting forward of impossible demands, but did not specify them. There is no reason why Iraq should not have an independent policy like that of Egypt and should not become prepared to assert its right of freedom which has been recognized by the League of Nations. The sentiments given expression to by Jaffar Pasha have made us lose all hope of Iraq advancing any step towards independence during his ministry.

Elections.

The high hopes raised in the Swarajist circles by the Madras and Bengal election results have been greatly damped by those of the United Provinces and the Central Provinces and the tone of their organs is pitched in a very low key now. Muslim papers have not yet commented on the results of the elections in these provinces. The Pioneer writes:—Whatever may have happened to Madras, the Swarajists have little cause to look with favour on the verdict of the electorate in other parts of the country, and particularly in the United Provinces and the Punjab where their party has been hopelessly defeated. . . . The results constitute a triumph for the veteran Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and in a less degree for Lala Lajpat Rai. The Leader remarks: - The results of the elections show that on the whole the country is opposed to the futile Swarajist policy and is in favour of working the Reforms. If the Gauhati Congress fails to face this incontrovertible fact, the result will most likely be a further schism and more revolts. Many candidates who have been returned to the Legislatures on the Sawarajist ticket are responsivists or co-operators in disguise, and it is unlikely that they will continue faithful to the Congress unless its policy with regard to the acceptance of office is modified....No patriotic Indian can rejoice at the pass to which the Congress has been brought by short-sighted leadership. One of the essential conditions of its rehabilitation in public confidence is the dethronement of such leadership....The Sawarjists have been routed in the majority of provinces and we would not be surprised if, particularly in view of the opinions expressed by the no-changers in Madras, they are also routed at the next Congress. The Advocate writes:—On the whole, both in the new Assembly and in the Provincial Councils, the number of members having a broad national outlook will be larger than before and the Government will feel the force of public opinion for the acceleration of the pace of political progress. In the course of a letter to the Pioneer Mr. Muhammad Yakub, M.L.A., writes:—According to my information, of the correctness of which I have no doubt, corruption was rampant throughout, votes were openly sold and purchased and auctions were held in numerous places. Polling stations are said to have been converted into markets. I propose that the Government should immediately appoint a commission to institute a thorough investigation into the matter, and in the meanwhile the district officers be asked to hold local inquiries without any loss of time and submit their reports to the Government for action. Commenting on this the paper writes:—It is to be feared that Mr. Muhammad Yakub's information is substantively accurate but the suggestion he puts forward for dealing with the evil practices he so pungently describes is hardly practicable. A general investigation by a specially constituted Government commission for the purpose of bringing offenders to book could not be expected to produce results commensurate with the expense and trouble involved. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—Information which has reached us from independent sources confirms the allegations of Mr. Yakub that there has been open purchase of votes, especially in the provincial elections. They went to the highest bidders. It is said that the candidates paid as much as Rs. 5 for a vote in certain polling stations. In some places they could get it so cheap as 4 annas a vote . . . . This particular form of corrupt practice is difficult of detection and legal proof. It is, therefore, imperative for Government to move in the matter. Under the heading "The Lucknow Election Scandal" the paper denounces the "corrupt practices" resorted to by the party of Pandit Rash Behari Tewari in the election campaign against the Swarajist candidate Babu Ram Chandra Saheb, and advises the latter to challenge the election of the former. It says:—The last word has not yet been pronounced as to who is the victor and who the vanquished. In another article the paper says:—The news from Bombay that a sincere effort is being made there to bury the hatchet between the Swaraj Party and the Responsive Co-operation Party is very encouraging. The close of the election fight, it would appear, is opening in Bombay a new chapter in which propaganda against personalities has ceased to find a place. The supreme need of the present moment is a closing up of the ranks of all parties that are prepared to fight the bureaucracy. The Surya remarks that the secret of the Swarajist success in Madras lies in the immense unpopularity of the Justice or the non-Brahman Party. Both the contesting parties were undesirable and the people chose the lesser evil. The Vivek says that the results of the Council elections show that the country is not prepared either to follow communalism or old constitutionalism, and that the reaction against the non-cooperation movement has not been able to remove the hold of the Congress on the country which is still ready to follow its mandate in the struggle for liberty. The success of the Congress in the elections has been due to its programme being more forward than that of any other party and nearer the road to freedom. The Aj congratulates the Madras Swarajists on their decision not to accept ministerships, but remarks that if the Gauhati Congress decides in favour of the acceptance of office, Swarajists too should accept ministerships. It will be a bad day for the country if Swarajists too take advantage of the prestige of the Congress but trample upon its decisions. The paper says that whichever party may come out successful in the present elections, there is no doubt that the victory has been with the bureaucracy. The issue was not how to secure Swaraj, but how to secure favours from the bureaucracy by co-operating with it. Blinded by communal feeling people attacked the Congress in utter disregard of their permanent interests. The fulfilment of the hope for the attainment of Swaraj will be deferred at least for a centuryi f the advocates of communalism have their own way. The bureaucracy will continue to dance in this manner indefinitely on the bosom of the country by suppressing one community with the help of another. In another issue commenting on the results of the elections in the various provinces the paper points out that the revolt of the Independent Congress Party against the Congress will benefit nobody except the bureaucracy. In the proportion in which this revolt has weakened the power of the Congress it has increased that of the bureaucracy. Now there is left not one party in the legislatures which can effectively oppose the undesirable acts of the bureaucracy which will consequently be able to act most autocratically and yet give it the appearance of representative government. The paper refers to the treachery of Jai Chand and Jai Singh to the country's cause in the time of Muslim rulers and points out that the non-Swarajists are following a similar course at the present time. The Hindu interests will be protected this time by following the same path which was trodden by able leaders like Jai Chand, Man Singh, Jai Singh and Todar Mal. The Abhyudaya hails with delight the election of Mr. C. Y. Chintamani to the Provincial Legislative Council and remarks that it was necessary in the interests of the province and the country that he should have been returned. His presence in the legislature will considerably strengthen the opposition. The paper pays a tribute to the patriotism and self-sacrifice of Pandit Motilal Nehru and apologizes to him for the harsh things it said against him in the heat of the election propaganda. The Anand remarks that the Swarajist majority in the Bengal Legislative Council is an index of the success of Sir Abdur Rahim's tactics. With the refusal of the Swarajists to form the Ministry, which is but inevitable, there will be a Muslim Ministry in Bengal and Sir Abdul Rahim will have his own way. The Hamdam repudiates the Amrit Bazar Patrika's charge that the Muslim electors of Bengal betrayed a communal spirit in rejecting Congress candidates and asserts that the failure of Muslim Congressmen was due to the undesirable efforts made in Congress circles to annul the Bengal Pact. It is surprising, says the paper, that while the Patrika cannot tolerate the election of recognized Muslim leaders like Sir Abdur Rahim, Mr. Gaznavi and Maulvi Abdul Kasim, it approves of the election of such Sangathanist Hindus as Malaviyaji, Dr. Moonje and Messrs. Lajpat Rai, Jayakar and Kelkar. It is amazing that the Patrika dares to level the charge of communalism against Muslims after the display of their mentality by Lalaji and Malaviyaji during the Assembly elections in the capital city of Delhi.

Political propaganda.

The Aligarh Mail exhorts the elected members to compose their differences for the common interests of the country and to abandon the wrecking policy. It says:—It is a political blunder on the part of the Swarajists to keep on talking about obstruction and similar other things when they know full well the absolute futility of the obstructionist tactics. By resorting to obstruction they simply play in the hands of the reactionaries who wish to delay the appointment of the Royal Statutory Commission. They should adopt a courageous and statesmanlike attitude and categorically and openly declare in favour of discriminate co-operation with the Government. The Aj says that though talk for unity between the two wings of the Congress has been revived, there is little chance of unity being effected so long as there are left even a few patriots in the country whose ideal is self-government and not good government. These people will be satisfied and co-operate with the officials only when India gets the same right of self-government as is enjoyed by Britain and has already been granted to the Colonies. There can be no compromise between the non-cooperators and the advocates of the working of the reforms. There can be no co-operation between Swarajists and those who want the good administration of foreigners. We hold bad Swaraj better than good government by foreigners. Those who are eager to co-operate with the bureaucracy cannot co-operate with Swarajists. The Pratap publishes a communication from "Raja" Mahendra Pratap from Kabul in the course of which he says that in spite of the difference between his programme and that of the Indian National Congress he regards those who are anti-Congress to be sinners and mischief-makers. His programme aims at preparing Indians for a Jehad or holy war even though they may be defeated, for he sees victory even in defeat. He does not share the general apprehension that if the British left the country another foreign country would devour it. He wants the Congress to adopt a more advanced programme and wishes it to be the future Parliament of India. Referring to the tour of the Royal Commission on Agriculture the Matri Bhumi writes:—Every Indian should be on guard against the superficial help of the bureaucracy. By means of competition the foreigners have destroyed our arts and crafts and industries, and the result is that every commodity in our bazars from a needle to a motor car is of foreign make. Now is the turn of agriculture. The Industrial Commission did no good to the country, but with the help of the Lee Commission, which is also called Lee loot, the salaries of high officials were increased. The Bharat Dharma opines that the object of Earl Winterton's visit to India is to secure an extended market for British goods and remarks that the loss sustained by Britain on account of the coal strike cannot be made good without sucking India. By launching out the Sukkar barrage and Bombay reclamation schemes and by emphasizing the importance of modern machinery for the improvement of Indian agriculture the rulers of India want to help the British capitalists. Indeed, Earl Winterton's visit will injure India rather than benefit her. Discussing Lord Ronaldshay's speech on India the Oudh Akhbar says that the British Parliament should not have the last say in regard to constitutional changes and Indians who know themselves best should be consulted. Lord Ronaldshay's certificate of perfection to the British administration in India cannot be endorsed by Indians, the majority among whom are dissatisfied with it. India wants full responsible government and cannot be content with progressive stages proposed by His Lordship.

Imperial Conference.

Referring to the resolutions passed by the Imperial Conference the Leader writes :--The recognition by the British Government of an almost independent status of the Dominions in the Empire should quite naturally lead us in India to feel even most keenly than before the contrast between the position of the Dominions and that of India in the British Commonwealth. India after 150 years of British rule continues to be a mere dependency. How one wishes that the British Government would also show statesmanship in dealing with Indian aspirations for a larger measure of freedom. The Indian Daily Telegraph says :—The hollowness of Imperialist professions of love and goodwill towards India has been well illustrated by the report published by the Inter-Imperial relations Committee of the Imperial Conference. The self-governing Dominions are now admitted to a position of absolutely equal status. It is amazing that while this astounding constitutional advance is made in the case of the Dominions, the case for India is dismissed by the most casual of references to the Government of India Act of 1919. Our self-appointed trustees make no pretence about their intention to keep India as "a subordinate branch of the British Government." For the humiliating position in which India finds herself the country has to thank the Maharaja of Burdwan, who betrayed his position and honour as India's representative and proclaimed from housetops India's satisfaction with the grossly unjust decisions. India has to be ashamed of such spokesmen who taking their cue from Whitehall and Delhi compromise their country's vital interests. The report styles the Empire as an association for livelihood and defence, but Indians can think of the Empire only as an association for exploitation and aggression. The Aj writes :—While all the Colonies have been declared by the Imperial Conference to be completely free members of the British Commonwealth, India is the only country which will remain a slave as before. In spite of this a section of Indians is for pleasing Lord Birkenhead by working the Reforms. Our power of endurance of disgrace and our shamelessness are indeed extraordinary and unparalleled. The Vivek remarks that while the Colonies have become equal members of the Empire, India still occupies a helpless and subordinate position and her destinies are entirely in the hands of the British Parliament. There can be nothing more shameful than this for any country, and yet the Indian representatives in the Imperial Conference proudly claim that they sit side by side with the Dominion representatives and decide questions affecting the whole Empire. Commenting on the address presented to His Majesty the King-Emperor by the delegates of the Imperial Conference the Medina writes :—The existence of the British Crown is in fact the centre of the deception practised by imperialistic capitalists. From this centre radiate tentacles under the grip of which the lives of subject people are rendered inert. Though for Asiatic nations a monarch is still the centre of justice, the statesmen of Britain have utilized this jewelled crown which adorns the auspicious head of His Majesty the King-Emperor for furthering their cunning, selfish and high-handed designs, and since 1917 when they satisfied India with a bundle of promises which were really meant for robbing her, they have not given her even a broken shell which could carry any value in the bazars of the nations. India, which is the largest and the most precious pearl in the British crown, has been dimmed by the dust of despotic rule. The Hamdam regrets that the report of the Committee of the Imperial Conference makes no mention of poor India which has been asked to remain content with her old position in the Empire. No political party in India has now a kind word to say of the Government of India Act, and even the Liberals, in spite of their eagerness for office, have condemned diarchy.

Indian States.

Quoting facts and figures from the Civil List of the Kashmir State the Aligarh Mail complains that although the percentage of the Muslim population in Kashmir is 97, they are the least represented in the State service and the administration is practically a Hindu monopoly. In the course of a series of articles in the Vartman, complaining of gross mismanagement and tyranny in the Bharatpur State, a correspondent writes :—Where have the eighty or ninety lakhs of rupees taken on loan been spent? The balance in the State treasury sometimes is reduced to a few pies only. The credit of the State has fallen so low that it has become difficult even to get loans. The State and its people have reached the limit of ruin. The tyranny of the officials is so great that no one dares to open his mouth. The Anand supports the demand of the Hindu subjects of the Nizam for the appointment of a commission to inquire into their grievances as voiced by them at a conference at Bombay and remarks :—It is the foremost duty of the Government of India to prevent oppression in Indian States, and no delay should therefore be made in removing the evils in the Nizam's administration and in doing justice to Hindus. Maladministration in the Nizam's dominion cannot be remedied unless responsible government is established there, and the Government of India should pay attention to this question. The Aj publishes a contributed article in which the writer, Paripurnanand, welcomes the interference of the Government of India in Indian States as showing that they are subordinate to "the Indian constitution." Such interference will make the position of Indian chiefs clear under Swaraj whenever it is attained. The Mashriq recalls the traditional loyalty of the Nizam's family and urges the Government of India to adopt a milder attitude towards the Hyderabad State. The Nizam too should not resent the appointment of a few Europeans and every effort should be made to revive cordial relations. The Haqiqat is gratified to note that the Government of India has allowed the Nizam to select his own president and heartily congratulates Sir Kishen Prasad on his appointment to that office. It is hoped that his tenure will prove in every way auspicious for the State.

The Viceroy's tour.

The Aj approves of the decision of the Calcutta Corporation not to present an address to the Viceroy and remarks that His Excellency has so far done nothing which could benefit the country. On the contrary communal tension and disturbances have increased during his régime. When the people are not satisfied with the acts of an official they are justified in not presenting an address to him. It is to be deplored that the Allahabad and Benares Municipalities have decided otherwise and are going to present an address to the Viceroy. The Haqiqat says that Lord Irwin has done a great favour to the Taluqdars of Oudh by postponing his visit to Lucknow this year. The idlers of Lucknow have no doubt been deprived of the usual sights, but the "indebted gentlemen" of Oudh (you may call them Taluqdars or debtors—both words have become practically synonymous) have been saved the necessity of currying the favour of money-lenders. If unfortunately the new Charbagh Railway station had been completed in time, His Excellency the Viceroy would surely have visited Lucknow in this very December, and along with election expenses the entertainment of Lord Irwin would have broken the backs of many Taluqdars. In our opinion the British Indian Association should hold a meeting and thank those masons, mistris, labourers and contractors owing to whose laziness the station building was not completed in time.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Arya Mitra takes Mr. Mahomed Ali to task for condemning in his Hamdard the action of certain Hindu women who did not allow some Muslim women to sit in their compartment and says :—You have been able to find time to make a mountain of a mole hill and to fill the columns of the Hamdard over such a petty incident, but have you ever paid attention to those terrible happenings which are making the hearts of the Hindus palpitate with fear? Have you seen the black deeds of those co-religionists of yours who have committed brutal atrocities on Hindu women and tarnished their name for good? The Hamdam says that besides cow-killing the language question also has been made a basis of conflict between Hindus and Muslims. This mischief arose twenty-five or thirty years ago in the Central Provinces and spread throughout the United Provinces under the patronage of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. Till then the Hindus had no feeling that the Hindi language had anything to do with their nationality. Rather they regarded Sanskrit as their religious and Urdu as their national language, and this very Urdu and Persian were written in Nagri characters. There are even now lakhs of Hindus who are totally unacquainted with Nagri characters and speak ordinary Urdu or Hindustani. But since a political colour has been lent to the language question there has been a change in the mentality of most Hindus and they now not only try to develop Hindi but to injure Urdu as far as possible. Urdu has been the joint language of the united Indian nation for a long time. It is called Hindustani when written in the Persian script and Hindi when written in the Nagri script. The Medina publishes an article by Qazi Maqbul Husain who contends that if the Government and the people want that India should become an abode of civilization and get self-government, the principle of equality should at once be enforced in every department of administration. This would remove ill-will and dissatisfaction which are the outcome of the unsound principles regarding proportion in population and the lack of separate representation.

Indians in the Colonies.

Referring to the Viceroy's message to the South African deputation on the eve of its departure from Indian shores the Hamdam acknowledges that His Excellency's encouraging words will afford some satisfaction to Indians and the publication of the message and the reply to it in the South African press will exercise a beneficial influence on the white population and the Government of South Africa, but it says that it would have been much better if His Excellency had also made some reference to the anxiety which all Indians are at present feeling for the future of their fellow-countrymen. We hope the Viceroy will not rest content with this message but will also at the time of the round table conference impress upon the Union Government that the Government of India would support the demands of the deputation with all its power.

The Pratap defamation case.

Referring to the judgement in the Pratap defamation case the Arya Mitra says:—Those who have read the statements of the defence witnesses know well that a number of them definitely declared that the sub-inspector was bribed. The good faith of the editor cannot therefore be doubted. The Trishul remarks:- We have been simply amazed at this justice. Readers of newspapers are fully aware how completely Mr. Vidyarthi has established the charge that sub-inspector Shiva Dayal Singh extorted bribes several times. Even the complainant's own witnesses admitted that he (complainant) was guilty. What more wonderful justice can there be?

Rumours regarding His Majesty's visit to India.

Commenting on the rumour regarding His Majesty's visit to India published in the Bombay Chronicle the Hamdam says that as Indians undoubtedly cherish a sort of devotion to His Majesty and the Royal House they will welcome the visit, but in view of her present financial plight India seems unable to bear the burden of another visit of His Majesty.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to certain remarks in Dr. Ziauddin's convocation address the Medina deplores that the Government is showing obduracy and bigotry in its dealings with the Muslim University and wonders why Government refused to sanction the establishment of the chemistry department when the University had purchased the necessary apparatus and appointed professors. It adds:—We do not ask for the Government's help, but we certainly deplore its inequality of treatment and injustices. Will the Government make good the loss which the University has to undergo in this connexion? We do not see why the Muslim University should be deprived of higher education in science for two years. The authorities should reconsider their decision.

The Patuakhali satyagraha.

One Sbesh Narain Bhartia writing in the Abhyudaya appeals to the Hindu leaders to participate in the Patuakhali satyagraha and strive to make it a success. He says that it is the duty of the Hindu leaders to carry on propaganda in favour of this satyagraha and encourage the people to join it.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING DECEMBER 11, 1926.

Elections and after.

The results of the elections and the future policy of the Legislatures continue to be the main topic of the press. The Swarajist papers attribute their defeat in the United Provinces and the Punjab to communal propaganda carried on by promoters of the Sangathan movement and contend that had the voting been on political issues only the Swarajists would have been returned in an overwhelming majority. They continue stoutly to oppose the acceptance of office and the working of Reforms. The Leader writes:—The outstanding features of the elections to the United Provinces Legislative Council are the defeat of a large majority of Swarajist candidates and the return of a fairly large number of Liberals and other believers in constitutional action. The sweeping defeat of the Swarajists are the more notable as the party was the best organised in the province, had command of a large election fund and fully exploited the name of the Congress for winning votes. The new Council will contain a large number of progressives, larger than the two preceding Councils. Our estimate is that the bureaucratic and popular forces will be almost equally balanced with a preponderance in favour of the former. If we may without presumption give one word of advice to the non-official members of the new Council, it is that they should not make much of party labels, and that wherever they may agree in opinion members of all parties should make common cause and act together for the public good. The Indian Daily Telegraph says:—The results of the United Provinces elections will not come as a bewildering surprise to Congressmen who had to put up a game fight against the forces of communalism let loose in North India. The United Provinces and the Punjab were marked out as the field of communal rancour which leaders took care to exploit by all the arts of misrepresentation and panic. The country will be the better for getting through the phase early and discovering that religious interests cannot be protected, let alone augmented, under a system of Government that stunts and mutilates the self-expression of the people. The paper feels "that the country is so much disgusted with diarchy that there can be no prospect of ministries seriously functioning in any province. The paper is optimistic about the position of the Swaraj Party in the new Assembly. It says:—In the presentation of a national demand we may expect Responsivists and most Independents to join the Swarajists. In questions like exchange and trade we may expect a fuller rally . . . As disappointment spreads, the Swarajists will find fresh allies. Referring to the results of the elections by the British Indian Association the paper says:—All the four seats were seized by Hindus, although there were Muslim candidates to share the credit of their existence. Hindu Sabha champions are on the whole pleased at the monopoly they have obtained, but we anticipate much criticism and discontent. The Aligarh Mail writes:—The communalism exhibited by Hindus has been of such an aggressive nature as to force the Musalmans to organize their defence and seek election on communal lines. It is an incontrovertible fact that in this year's elections, as in the previous ones, disintegration and disorganization among the Musalmans have been in marked contrast to unity and cohesion among the Hindus. The Anand says that the results of the Council and Assembly elections in the United Provinces show that now the people have not the least faith in the Swarajist policy of obstruction. The Aj remarks that the evils of elections ventilated by Maulvi Mohammad Yakub of Moradabad in the Pioneer are real, but they by no means establish the unfitness of Indians for democratic institutions. It is certainly necessary to take early steps to remove these evils, but the Maulvi's appeal to the Government to stop them cannot but provoke laughter. The beauty of the Reforms lies in this that they are calculated to prevent the real representatives of the people from entering the Councils and to raise the basest passions of the human mind by communal and religious appeals. If this were not so the bureaucracy would not have encouraged separate representation. Its very object is to demonstrate the unfitness of Indians for democracy. The election machinery has been so fashioned as to attach importance to wealth. The paper remarks that the differences between the Responsivists and Swarajists have led to the entry of a large number of ji huzoors in the Legislatures. This shows that the bureaucracy has scored a victory against nationalism. It is incumbent on the Swarajists not to co-operate with the bureaucracy until the Congress permits them to do so. Owing to their small minority the Swarajists cannot offer obstruction, but they should keep their ideal alive and show that there is at least one party which condemns the existing system of administration and is by no means prepared to support it. Swarajists should not lower their ideals by effecting any compromise with other parties over the question of ministerships. In another article the paper suggests that the Congress should revive its organizations and agitate throughout the country. The Pratap expresses the conviction that the Liberal Party led by Mr. C. Y. Chintamani will constitute the strongest party in the United Provinces Council, and that a few taluqdars and zamindars will also follow him. The Independent Congress Party of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya is bound to merge itself in this party. The paper adds that the acceptance of ministerships is not only opposed to the present Congress programme, but is also fatal to the interests of the country as long as diarchy continues to exist. The Hindi Kesari claims that in almost all the provinces the Congress candidates form the largest single group in the Councils showing that the Congress still retains its hold on the people and that they are convinced that their political liberty will be attained only under the Congress flag. The work inside the Councils is, however, nothing as compared with what we have to do to prepare the people for satyagrah against the alien bureaucracy. Discussing the United Provinces elections the Medina says:—On account of Lala Lajpat Rai's treachery the prestige of the Congress has suffered in the Punjab and similarly Pandit Malaviya's hostile attitude has lowered it in the United Provinces. Messrs. Birla and Chintamani, the enemies of the Congress and the Muslims alike, owe their success to Pandit Malaviya alone. The danger now is that both the United Provinces and the Punjab will this time have purely communal Councils which instead of discussing questions affecting the country's good will devote more attention to those relating to music, cow sacrifice and the peepul tree. The Muslim Press has widely supported Mr. Mohammad Yakub's demand for an inquiry into corrupt practices during the elections in Rohilkhand. The Rahnuma complains that there was much objectionable in the propaganda and canvassing carried on behalf of candidates. Besides the bad blood created between individuals and communities and the colossal waste of money there was open buying and selling of votes. As the ignorance of the voters is mainly responsible for these corrupt practices, the qualification for franchise should be educational. If Government appoints a commission of inquiry, it should also look into inaccuracies in voters' lists. The Rohilkhand Gazette complains that in some places high officials openly sided with different candidates, and the result has been that incompetent candidates have got in and capable men have failed.

The Viceroy's tour.

In the course of a leading article according to Their Excellencies the Viceroy and Lady Irwin a cordial, respectful and expectant welcome the Leader writes:—Lord Irwin's reputation for goodness, righteousness and piety preceded his advent to India. His interest in our country may be said to be hereditary. His Excellency's public utterances have rung true and appealed to the popular imagination by their simplicity, straightness, sympathy and wisdom . . . His Excellency's visit to Allahabad so early in his lustrum is itself a notable departure from the regrettable precedents of the last quarter of a century. It can be no news to His Excellency that Allahabad feels that she has been ill-treated by successive heads of the Provincial Government and has in fact been both slighted and injured. De jure still the capital of the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, she has in fact been dethroned from her proud position and may be more correctly described as the widowed or divorced capital . . . It is not the Local Government who made Allahabad the capital; they have not the power to declare that the capital has been transferred, and therefore they resort to devices of sorts to execute their hostile purpose. Allahabad appeals to His Excellency Lord Irwin to assert himself to make the authority of the Government of India felt, to give practical effect to his sense of justice and to see that this great and growing injustice is redressed. In another issue referring to the remarks of His Excellency the Viceroy in his reply to the addresses of welcome by the district and municipal boards of Allahabad on the position of Allahabad as the capital of the United Provinces, the paper respectfully represents to His Excellency that his speech leaves the position very much where it was. Proceeding it says:—We will only invite Lord Irwin's attention to the assurance given by Lord Canning to the citizens of Allahabad when the capital was removed from Agra to this city, on the strength of which large sums of money were invested in buildings. For the same reason large sums of the tax-payers' money were also invested in official buildings . . . We would respectfully beg His Excellency the Viceroy to bring his sense of justice and sympathy to bear upon the consideration of this subject upon which Allahabad feels most keenly and to take such steps as to him may appear right and essential to remove this deep-seated grievance of the people of this "no mean city." The Aj writes:—Allahabad gave a splendid welcome to the Viceroy, and this was quite right. If not Allahabad, which other city can be grateful to the Viceroy? How nicely did the subordinate officials of Lord Irwin maintain peace at Allahabad at the time of Ramlila and what a fine reply they gave to the representations of the distinguished leader of the Hindus of that place! Now Allahabad can hope that the future prayers of the Hindus will be considered with greater courtesy. In the course of an open letter to the Viceroy published as an editorial article the Vartman says that the days are gone for ever when people were eager to welcome Viceroys and Governors. Now the receptions are arranged by a few toadies who are under the thumb of the Government. The fact is that Viceregal and gubernatorial visits mean a wanton waste of large amounts of public money. Had the Viceroy cared for the poor, the poor would have welcomed them. "You should see what sufferings the poor are undergoing in dirty lanes and to what tyrannies the peasants are subjected in villages." Referring to the triumphant progress of the Viceroy through various Indian cities the Sada-i-Muslim inquires whether His Excellency has given his attention to the extreme penury prevailing in the country. Lakhs of rupees of these poor sons of India have been spent over his reception, but has he devised any remedy for the ills of these people who would regard it as the happiest day of their lives if they can get a full meal. It is said that His Excellency is an agricultural expert and is bent on improving the agricultural condition of the country. This improvement may possibly help poor people, but we have two fears. The produce of India is more than enough for the needs of her sons, but it is all used by the barbarians of Manchester and Edinburgh and poor Indians starve. Agricultural produce may increase, but what guarantee is there that it would come into the use of Indians? Again, agricultural implements also would come from England and crores of rupees would go there from India for this purpose.

Imperial Conference.

The Aj says that as a result of the decision of the Imperial Conference all the colonies have been granted complete freedom, but India remains a slave as she was ever before. At such a time the number of such members has been increased in the Legislatures as are willing to co-operate with the bureaucracy. God only knows what more disgrace and sufferings born of subjection are still in store for this country. Our hope now centres only in the Congress, which should oppose the nomination of Indian representatives to the Imperial Conference by the Government of India and proclaim a boycott of that conference. The Indian Legislative Assembly also will be well advised to proclaim such a boycott. The Pratap remarks:—The decisions arrived at in the Imperial Conference are in no way new. The sum total of its achievements is that it has acknowledged in writing the completely autonomous position of the Colonies which had long before been recognized in practice. The days of "Rule Britannia" have gone by. Where is the wonder if tomorrow the cant of trusteeship is abandoned and the remorseless wheel of time registers still more adverse decrees? The Najat says that the Imperial Conference has practically conceded complete independence to the Colonies in order to check the disruption of the British Empire and to maintain its prestige. Favour had been shown only to those Colonies from which there were apprehensions. The Imperial Conference's decision is like the monkey's adjudication (between the two cats), all for the benefit of the white races alone and unfortunate India has nothing to expect. According to Mr.

Amery the British Colonies had reached the age of adolescence. This adolescence may have induced the British to put up with this calamity, but there is no doubt that it is the mailed fist of the Colonies which has convinced Britain of their maturity. The immature old man of India of a hundred and fifty years could not obtain the certificate of majority from Britain. The truth is that Indians lead their lives by sufferance of the Government and the collar of slavery has altogether bewitched them, otherwise they too would have got something in this monkey's adjudication and they would not have been deprived of the sweets that passed into the hands of the white races at the Imperial Conference. The truth is that Englishmen regard India as a wide field for plunder and rapine and consider it to be their birthright to profit from its raw products.

Communal representation.

The Muslim Press continues to emphasize the need for separate representation, especially in view of the results of the Delhi and the British Indian Association elections. In the course of an article headed "Designs of Monopolists" the Aligarh Mail writes:—Taking into consideration the existing conditions it would be suicidal not only to the interests of the minorities but also to the future development of democratic institutions in India if joint electorates are introduced in 1929. Instead of a democratic Government, abolition of separate electorates would give India an oligarchy mainly composed of Brahmins with a little sprinkling of Lalas and other caste Hindus. It is an eventuality that should be avoided at all costs, and therefore it is the duty of all patriotic and truly nationalist Indians, be they Hindus or Musalmans, to fight against the sinister propaganda that is being conducted in such a systematic way by Pandits and Swamis aided by a press which draws its inspiration from them. It is up to the minorities now to launch out an extensive programme to expose these so-called patriots and nationalists and to defend their own rights and privileges against their designs. We particularly wish to advise Musalmans to organize their scattered forces to fight against the danger that is threatening the very existence of their community. If separate electorates go, it would mean political death to the Muslim community. Musalmans would be reduced to the same level of serfdom which is occupied by sudras. The Haqiqat publishes a communication from a Muslim taluqdar in which he remarks that the action of the British Indian Association of Oudh in electing only Hindus for all their seats in the local Legislative Council and the Assembly following soon after the Asaf Ali incident at Delhi has buried even deeper the already half dead corpse of joint representation. The zamindars of Agra too have never sent any Muslim to the Assembly or the local Council. Does any Hindu leader or high-placed member of Government dare even after this open trampling of Muslim rights by educated Hindus to urge joint representation? If the Muslim taluqdars of Oudh take this slap of the British Indian Association lying down, they will surely forfeit the sympathy of the general Muslim public. Referring to the result of the election by the British Indian Association the Hamdam regrets that a gentleman of the culture and experience of Chaudhri Mujtaba Husain was defeated simply because of the poison of religious prejudice only recently introduced into the Association by certain well-known protagonists of Shuddhi and Sangathan. Others who would find it difficult even to follow the proceedings of the Council fully have been preferred to him simply because he is not a Hindu. The British Indian Association's choice coming after the Delhi elections shows how essential separate representation is for the safeguarding of Muslim rights.

Political propaganda.

The Pratap publishes a letter received by its editor from "Raja" Mahendra Pratap in the course of which he describes his activities in America and China and says:—When he was invited to California by his Indian brethren to make a political speech he spoke impressively on the present situation in India. One sad incident which occurred at a certain place shortly after his speech was that an Indian killed two whites. If such an incident had occurred in India he would have certainly been implicated in the case, but thanks to the judicial administration of America not a single question was put to him. When he reached China there was great agitation there against the British who were being vilified in all quarters. Some of the Chinese enthusiasts invited him to their meetings and made him address them. A communicated article which the Sainik publishes in its editorial columns says:—Wherever revolutions have taken place they have been brought about by young men. Today India is sorely in need of the services of these young men for her regeneration, for the establishment of Swaraj, for the protection of crores of human beings, for the peace of the world, for counteracting violence and bloodshed, for the emancipation of humanity and the suppression of brutality. Freedom can never be had for begging. It is the duty of our young men to use the bones of Mahatma Gandhi like those of Dadhichi as a bolt for killing the demon of subjection. The Desh Bhagat suggests that Earl Winterton's visit to India following close upon the heels of the elections has something to do with the political future of India. As 1929 is approaching the perplexity of British statesmen about the redemption of their promises for the grant of further reforms is increasing. In their hearts they never like to give Indians any powers which savour of genuine autonomy or which can bring about their prosperity . . . Earl Winterton is coming to study the political situation and either to confer with the officials about the satisfaction of the Congress demands or to come to an understanding with some political party so as to weaken the extremists in the Congress and to secure a majority in it of people pledged to work the present Reforms Act. Politically-minded Indians should, therefore, be on the alert and should not be led away by incidents and personalities, but should form opinions after the utmost deliberation. Earl Winterton's visit coinciding with the Gauhati Congress is a great political move.

Indian States.

The Leader refutes the charge brought forward by Muslim papers that the complaints about the maladministration in the Hyderabad State and the demand for reforms in it are the outcome of "bigoted and mischievous" tendencies on the part of Hindus and says :—They are very much mistaken who believe that it is only Hindus who will gain by a reform in the administration or that the Nizam will lose thereby. Both the ruler and the ruled and all the classes will gain in the end. It is a mistaken notion of patriotism to believe that because a state is governed by a Muslim ruler, any demand for reform in its administration should be opposed. The Medina says that M. Abdul Qadir's address at the Nizam Conference at Lahore shows that the bigoted narrow-mindedness of the Hindus and the imperialistic guiles of the present Government are the two factors which are at work against His Exalted Highness the Nizam. A perusal of the treaties given in this address will convince the reader how this loyal friend of Britain has helped her in the most trying circumstances, but today by an irony of fate an humble individual of the British Imperialistic group, whose fathers ate the salt of the ancestors of this monarch has been installed on an exalted position in the state and is practising despotism. Whatever may be the other causes of the present policy of the British Government, there is little doubt that the Hindus have a large hand in its formation. With the object of carrying out their capitalistic designs they sought the protection of the British Government and deprived the Muslims of their states and jagirs by practising treachery and bigoted guiles. Now "the worthy children of Aryawart" are carrying on this movement openly with the help of the British. We ask the Government of India how far these activities of the Hindu bigots against a monarch who is the friend and ally of the British Government are proper and constitutional? We urge the Viceroy to protect his friend from his cowardly enemies. Indian Muslims cannot even for a moment bear to see His Exalted Highness being attacked by these mean enemies. The Government of India should soon put down this mischief and protect the Nizam under the Princes Protection Act. The Sada-i-Muslim writes :—If the Government of India does not reconsider its decision it will have to face all the troubles that it had to endure during the Khilafat agitation and its power for high-handedness will be paralysed and destroyed for ever. The Hamdam also publishes a strong article in defence of the Nizam.

Muslim affairs.

The Hamdam says that the Sangathanist leaders have brought a change in the mentality of the Hindu public by raising the cry of the Hindu religion and the Hindu community in danger simply in order to reserve the loaves and fishes of state for Hindus and to exclude Muslims from the Ministry. This is evident from the fact that though Muslims form the largest single group in the newly-constituted Bombay Council, efforts are being made by the smaller Hindu groups to form a coalition which may enable them to exclude Muslims from the ministry. In another article the same paper regrets that since the inauguration of the reforms no Muslim has been appointed as a minister in Madras. Madras Muslims should now organize their strength in the Council and take such action that Government may have to regret the injustice done to them. The Medina invites the attention of the Frontier Government to what it calls the excesses of Hindu and Sikh officials over the Muslims of Rawalpindi and says :—The Hindus of Pindi made an impertinent display of kirpans on the death anniversary of Guru

Nanak. The reason for this was the increase in the number of Hindu and Sikh officials of the town after the previous disturbance. On account of there being the majority of non-Muslims among the officials, Muslims were greatly oppressed and arrested in large numbers. We request the Frontier Government to remedy these irregularities and to protect Muslims from these hot-headed people who want to strangulate others.

Rumours regarding His Majesty's visit to India.

The Desh Bhagat says that there is some political purpose behind His Majesty's proposed visit to Delhi which, though apparently for the advantage of Indians, will internally suck their blood. During the last visit of the King crores of rupees of poor Indians passed into the pockets of Englishmen, but Indians then trusted Englishmen and thought that they were sincere in their utterances. Thanks however to Sir Michael O'Dwyer and General Dyer, most educated Indians have become acquainted to some extent with the political manipulations of British politicians and realize that British statesmen really continue to take much more with the other hand than they give or pretend to give with one hand. We believe that the Royal visit is meant to give the quietus to the Swaraj Party and the movement for freedom and that British statesmen will get His Majesty to make some announcement which will satisfy the present leaders and make them lay down their arms gladly. We are however confident that as British statesmen are not in the present circumstances prepared to concede to Indians their natural right of self-government, it is impossible for Indians to sit quiet until they gain complete independence. It is the duty of Indian nationalists and patriots to protest loudly against the visit so that at least poor India may be saved the loss of crores of rupees.

The Patuakhali Satyagrah.

Exhorting the Hindu Sabhas and the Congress Committees all over India to help the Barisal Congress Committee with men and money to enable it to carry on the Patuakhali Satyagrah to a successful issue the Abhyudaya says that this Satyagrah is really a Satyagrah against the existing unbearable situation in the country as well as against the communal politics and the bureaucracy's policy of divide and rule.

Foreign affairs.

The Bharat holds Britain responsible for the present critical situation in China and remarks that her guilt has made a coward of her. It has become a fashion with the British to establish a connexion between the Soviet Government and that country which desires to get rid of Britain's atrocities and then calumniate the former. In India also the British are always in dread of the Russian bogey. In the British ethics the murder of thousands of inhabitants of a country passes by the name of "love" and not that of "strife". We are grieved at the unparalleled moral downfall of England. She would do well to give up calling herself Christian, consign the Bible to the Thames and instal Satan in place of Messiah as her deity. In the course of an article on Chinese affairs the Medina writes:—Realizing danger to herself from China and Russia on the one hand and America on the other Japan has begun to cast loving glances towards China. Seeing this change in the attitude of Japan Britain has become perturbed and has begun to perceive that the days of her domination in the East are numbered. China is actuated by extreme contempt and hatred for Britain. In these circumstances the formation of a league of Asiatic Nations is no longer impossible.

Elections and after.

The results of the elections and the question of working the reforms continue to be widely discussed on party lines. Swarajist papers contend that neither Hindu nor national interests can be served by accepting Ministries and working the reforms. The Muslim press generally is suspicious of the representatives of the Hindu Sabha and the Independent Congress Party and emphasises the need for extending the system of communal representation to Delhi. Discussing the election results the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—It is obvious that Swarajists have demonstrated their influence among the voters and proved the general discontent of the country with the reforms. The Swarajists compose the largest single group in the Central legislature. On the irresponsive obduracy of the Government we may rely for their further recruitment. Commenting on Lala Lajpat Rai and Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya's appeal for unity the paper writes:—The Swarajists are not likely to shake hands with people whose hands are stained with communalism. The latter class of people should be driven out of the Congress. Congress wants not unity but purge. The Aj publishes a number of articles on the elections and the future programme of the legislatures. It says:—Those who are at the present moment so carried away by the talk of Hindu interests will feel disappointed when they come to see that Hindu interests can by no means be protected by co-operators and that the clash of communal interests will only increase the strength of the bureaucracy which sets the two communities by the ears. The country requires a party which though in minority would continue to uphold the ideal of Swaraj and obstruct the existing irresponsible Government, and if this be impossible to practise non-cooperation. This will keep intact the purity of the ideal and may lead the constitutionalists some day to join the Swarajists in their struggle with the bureaucracy. . . . . The results of the elections in the United Provinces do not justify the working of the reforms. The majority of the members have been returned on the ticket of the Hindu interests, and if this means anything it is that the Hindu members should fight the Muslim members in season and out of season and should excite communal spirit. They have also been authorized by their electors to oust all Muslims from the offices in the gift of the Government and themselves fill them. The rout of the Swarajists in the United Provinces was not due to their political convictions but to the communal cry raised by the protectors of Hindu interests. It was not a defeat of Swarajism but that of nationalism. It was the triumph of the old tendency to allow the foreigners to rule over the country while the people fought among themselves. We re-affirm that if Swaraj is to be attained it will be secured only through the peaceful and legitimate efforts of the people themselves. We have to keep this ideal before the country. We have faith in the people and not in the bureaucracy. It is immaterial for us whether the statutory commission is appointed or not. We do not hold the reforms to be the first instalment of Swaraj. Neither do we hope to get another instalment by proving our fitness before it. The Birjbasi remarks that the result of the elections has indisputably proved that the country is not for communalism, that it does not want to follow the stereotyped path of constitutional agitation, and that even the reaction against the non-cooperation movement has not diminished the influence of the Congress in the country. The Sainik remarks that the result of the elections shows that the Congress has won the laurels. It has now become clear beyond the least shadow of doubt that even in the present spell of political lethargy if there is any powerful organization in the country next to the bureaucracy it is the Congress. The Haqiqat while admitting that the Congress has not advanced beyond its position in 1923, denies that the Hindu Sabha has been able to defeat it. Even in Northern India where the triple alliance of Mr. Malaviya, Lala Lajpat Rai and Mr. Birla possessed most strength the number of Swarajists far exceeds that of the Hindu Sabhaites in the new Councils. The Hamdam says that Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya who once used to call Lala Lajpat Rai an irresponsible extremist and to execrate his politics has now struck up an alliance with him in the common purpose of antagonism to Muslims and has been touring the country to weaken the foundations of the Congress. It is a blessing that his mischievous activities have not been much effective in Madras, Bengal and Bihar, but the United Provinces and the Punjab which are the centres of the Shuddhi and sangathan movements have been influenced by his poisonous propaganda and Swarajists have been defeated in the provinces. Commenting on the results of the elections the Medina writes :—If the various parties in the legislatures are at loggerheads with one another, none of them will be able to exert any influence and the Councils will again become the source of those very tyrannies which were witnessed from 1920 to 1923. On the other hand, we are sure that if all the three parties work harmoniously they will be able to protect Indian interests and also to ward off the evils of diarchy. We might rest assured that having fully enjoyed the fight for leadership Lala Lajpat Rai and Malaviya will refrain from disgracing India.

Political propaganda.

In the course of an article emphasising the need for the uplift of the depressed classes and enlisting their sympathy in the struggle for liberty the Vartman writes :—No one has forgotten the effects of the earthquake that was caused by Mahatma Gandhi in 1921-22 by creating unity between Hindus and Muslims. Though owing to religious quarrels and the mean tactics of the bureaucracy that unity is no longer so firm, yet thoughtful Hindus and Muslims still remain under the banner of the Congress. Now Mahatma Gandhi has chosen another field for his activity, namely, the uplift of seven crores of untouchables. There is no doubt that if we act wisely and take these brethren into our fold we shall have at our disposal seven crores of brave soldiers. Everyone knows that these untouchable brethren of ours are braver than ourselves and are ready to die for their cause. While we fear to go to jail these new soldiers are glad to undergo imprisonment in the name of the country and liberty. They do not love life so much as we do, and when necessary they are ready to move forward and sacrifice their lives recklessly. If these seven crores of our brethren join us we shall see what stands in our way of getting Swaraj, how dissensions continue, why Muslims do not consider India as their home and whom the bureaucracy dares to divide. Hindus! This is the last agitation inaugurated by Mahatma Gandhi. If in the name of religion you do not remove this sin of untouchableness you will become Muslims or Christians within a century. The Aj says that though resolutions are still passed in the Congress and in the conferences held under its auspices for the propagation of charkha and khaddar to please Mr. Gandhi, it is an undeniable fact that the people have lost faith in them. The Congress leaders should take note that it is because the bureaucracy has realized the danger of the Congress making its way into the huts and cottages of villagers through the charkha that astute politicians like Lords Reading and Birkenhead have hoisted the flag of agricultural improvements. This will strengthen the influence of the bureaucracy among the masses. The only means of counteracting it is to propagate the charkha most vigorously. The charkha can be utilized to bring about a general organization of the people throughout the country. The Bharat publishes the first instalment of an article communicated to it by Satyabhakta in the course of which he remarks :—The question of the freedom of India is a very important and intricate one. In no other part of the world can one come across such weak and slavery-loving people as in India. Besides, the present Government in this country is also so crafty and tyrannical that it does not allow any one an opportunity to raise his head. These tyrannies and injustices make our blood boil. Our hands lift up and we feel inclined to make the oppressor taste the fruit of his doings. But the thought of our helplessness makes us despair. It occurs to us that we have no arms, that we do not even know how to use a lathi and that our hands and feet are rigorously fettered. The question arises in what way we should try to attain our freedom. We are not disposed to admit even for a moment that we can shake off the foreign yoke from our shoulders by means of non-violent non-cooperation. It is also obvious that in the existing circumstances it is impossible for us to make preparations for war undetected by the vigilant eye of the Government and defeat the British army skilled in the art of warfare and armed with terrible weapons, aeroplanes and poisonous gas. The third way left is to secure the help of a foreign country for expelling the British from India, but this can only be accomplished when the world is engaged in a war in which Britain is also involved. Further, we, too, should have some strength, for it is no use substituting one foreign rule for another. The only means of the emancipation of India is the organization of her kisans and labourers. Al Khalil enquires of Indian Muslims whether they ever remember their brethren who gave proof of their spirit of sacrifice by performing Hijrat. Recently "Raja" Mahendra Pratap gave them a tea party at Kabul and one of the speakers at the function stated that the Muhajirs were all working for the freedom of India. The Muzaffarnagar News complains that the Government of India is extremely selfish and adopts every device to empty the pockets of Indians. The policy of Government has become specially severe since the mutiny. Stringent laws have been passed, stern officials have been sent to enforce them and fines are imposed at every step. There is an amazing multiplicity of taxes. Municipalities have been organized to plunder the public still further. In short every department of Government is bent on fleecing poor Indians. It is a pity that Government gives no attention to these things and does not realise that there is such a thing as pity and protection of the ruled in this world. It does not know how to give, but only knows how to take, and that is why more than 25 per cent. of Indians are beggars and about 75 to 90 per cent. are suffering from starvation. Indians are in a strange fix. If they speak out they get into trouble and are stigmatised as rebels, but if they keep silent they cannot get bread and clothes. Previously wheat used to sell at 40 seers for a rupee, but now, thanks to Government, it is selling at 6 or 7 seers a rupee and is getting dearer every day. That ghi which used to sell at 3 or 4 seers a rupee is now, owing to the kindness of Government, selling at 6 or 7 chhittaks a rupee. Today we cannot find even a cobbler in London who is not rich and prosperous, but on the contrary we cannot find even 5 men in India who are leading their lives in freedom from care. Is there any reason for this except the severity of Government? Surely Government can make Indians prosperous today if it so desires. But why should such a thought enter the head of the British Government? It wants not only the money of Indians, but also their skin. The Bharat Dharma remarks that it is the duty of the Congress to adopt responsive cooperation as its programme if it wants to make "Council entry" a success. The non-cooperators who swear by the names of Shivaji and Partap Singh should bear in mind that those personages did not practise non cooperation in words, but with arms. Their battle-fields were not Councils, but the mountain peaks of Aravali and Sahadri. If our non-cooperating friends were prepared like them, they would find a number of fellow soldiers in other parties as well.

The Congress.

Exhorting the party leaders to unite in the forthcoming Gauhati Congress the Mauji writes :—The performance of the juggler of diplomacy is over. The talk of elections is slowly subsiding. Now the indigent populace of the country and India's pitiable breast, devoid of flesh and blood, afflicted with epidemics, crushed by misfortunes and trampled under foot by the officials is before our eyes. Worthy children of the soil, if you are going to the legislatures of the Government, go, but do not be so carried away by the powers of officialdom and the crooked moves of cunning politics as to forget the pitiable condition of the country. If even after closest co-operation the situation in the country does not improve this time also and the country continues to groan under the mill of miseries and the Agricultural Commission floods the hamlets of the tenantry with European implements and engineers and epidemics, malaria, kala-azar and the dearth of food and clothing and the hard work of the poor continue to pulverize the labourers your representation would be an impotent one.

United Provinces Political Conference.

In an article headed "Scheme to Hinduise India" the Aligarh Mail strongly criticizes the speeches delivered at the Kashipur Political Conference by Kunwar Anand Singh, Chairman of the Reception Committee, and Babu Shiva Prasad Gupta, the President. It complains that the President read his address in a type of Hindi which was a Babylonish jargon for even many of the educated Hindus, and takes strong exception to his remark that Muslims should consider seriously "if it was possible for the civilization of Arabia to flourish on Indian soil." The paper goes on to say:—The speeches give us a true insight into the working of the cunning mind of Hindu communalists who masquerade as patriots and nationalists. These political hypocrites do not mean what they say, and do not say what they mean. We must bring home to all sensible Muslims that Swaraj as conceived by Hindus of the type of Kunwar Anand Singh and Babu Shiva Prasad is nothing but a scheme to Hinduise India. The Sainik agrees with the views expressed by Mr. Shiva Prasad Gupta in his presidential address, except those relating to the legislatures. It maintains that the Swarajists wrought miracles in the Councils. Their only fault was that they neglected the work outside the Councils. The paper pays a glowing tribute to Kunwar Anand Singh for the bold speech delivered by him as chairman of the Reception Committee and attaches special importance to his participation in the struggle for Swaraj, particularly when the majority of the landholders in this country are sowing the seeds of Bolshevism by placing obstacles in the path of Swaraj. The paper hopes that the ideal set up by him will serve as a beacon light to other landed magnates. The Pratap pays a tribute to Babu Shiva Prasad Gupta for the lucid and suggestive address delivered by him, and while fully endorsing his views on various questions it expresses its strong disagreement with his suggestion that Congressmen should leave the Councils and the Assembly if they fail to form a majority there and in more than half the provincial legislatures.

Indian States.

Referring to the grievances ventilated in Mr. Kale's presidential address at the conference of the Hindu subjects of the Nizam the Arya Mitra says:—It is highly discreditable for such a big ruling chief that he should flout the sentiments of the Hindus who form 90 per cent. of his subjects. Is the Nizam not aware of this? Can he maintain lasting peace in his state by disregarding such an important community? There is always a limit to partiality and injustice. The Nizam will be well advised to do his duty and remove the grievances of his subjects before the British Government intervenes. The Rohilkhand Gazette says that the condition of Muslims in Kashmir is much worse than that of Hindus in Hyderabad. They lead lives worse than those of savages. The state is responsible for not spreading education among them and it is the duty of Muslims all over India to see that their educational condition is bettered. In the course of an article vehemently denouncing British policy regarding Indian states the Desh Bhagat charges Lord Reading with having made an attempt to deprive a number of chiefs of their thrones and to bring their states under English rule in a way. It says:—During the Great War when the English were freely enlisting men in British India, they became afraid that the Ruling chiefs might go over to the enemy and might make British position in India untenable. They further feared that the Princes might join hands with the Indian nationalists, and after the war the English decided to remove this rankling thorn for ever from their side. They first cultivated very close relations with the chiefs and introduced, their Indian agents as officers in their states. When this move succeeded, they filled all high offices there with Englishmen. The British Indian officers acted as spies for the English and enabled the Government of India to gain possession of all the secrets of the chiefs. After having gained so much ground they started action against certain self-respecting chiefs. Today there are spies of the English Government in every state whose ruler is supposed to be enlightened and to understand politics, and these persons while drawing salaries from the state treasury are always prepared to stab the chiefs when occasions arise.

Gradually the English will occupy all Indian states. The Indian chiefs will be reduced to the position of English stipendiaries and they will have no legislative, financial or administrative powers left in their states. This policy of the Government of India has now become fully patent and it will, while injuring the chiefs personally, also add to the sufferings of their subjects. Just now the inhabitants of the states are somewhat more healthy and prosperous than their brethren in British India, but they also will become slaves and beg for crumbs like the latter. In our opinion the political and non-political leaders of the country, inhabitants of Indian states and the British Indian press should give serious thought to the matter; otherwise a time will come when like British India there will be destitution in the states also and their treasuries will be opened not for their inhabitants but for every Englishman.

Communal representation.

The Leader writes:—We warmly congratulate Lord Irwin on the admirable reply he gave to the address presented to him by the Central National Muhammadan Association. . . . The communal wail of the Muslims was responded to by a lecture on nationalism. Although His Excellency's reply was couched in sympathetic language, yet it was made clear that the Viceroy did not view with favour the claims for exceptional treatment and communal representation in the legislatures or the services which have been made by the Muslims in season and out of season. The paper, however, wishes that the principle of making appointments with due regard to fitness and of not preferring communal claims before those of efficiency of the public services was strictly acted upon. It says:—The reservation of a fairly large percentage of vacancies, particularly in cases where recruitment is made by open competitive examination, for securing the representation of minorities by means of a system of nomination, can hardly be reconciled with this principle. The Aligarh Mail expresses gratitude for His Excellency's assurance regarding communal representation in legislatures and also approves of the principle enunciated by him regarding representation in Government services, but complains that the principle has not been put in practice so as to remove the legitimate grievances of the Muslim community. It says:—We believe that the central Government would be better advised if it apportions its posts among the various communities according to their all-India numerical strength and fills them up with the most efficient and the best qualified men which each community can give. If this rule is enforced, the Muslims will have legitimate claims to at least one-fourth of the total posts under the Government of India. We maintain that no straighter way can be found to redress the inequalities between Hindus and Muslims in the departments of the central Government.

Muslim affairs.

The Aligarh Mail disapproves of the inauguration of the Motamar-i-Islam on the ground that multiplicity and duplication of Anjamans and societies would lead to disintegration instead of cohesion. It adds:—An examination of the aims and objects of the Motamar would show that there is nothing in them which is not incorporated in the aims and objects of one or other of the Muslim associations already in existence. The paper has published a series of articles suggesting a comprehensive scheme for Muslim organization throughout the country. Muslim papers are giving wide publicity and prominence to the report that in 1918 Khwaja Hasan Nizami complained to the then Chief Commissioner of Delhi that Maulana Zafar Ali Khan of the Zamindar, Lahore, was giving lessons in Pan-Islamism to the Nizam of Hyderabad, and that thereupon the Chief Commissioner reported that matter to the Punjab Government. The Khwaja is being vehemently denounced as a Government spy and traitor to his community. The Hamdam asserts that the recent Hedjaz meeting at Lucknow was representative of all classes of Muslims and that the sending of telegrams direct to His Majesty the King-Emperor showed that there was no desire for the British interference in the Hedjaz. The only object was that the British Ministers should warn Ibn Saud against further acts of desecration. Howsoever his supporters may protest, it is well-known that Ibn Saud has been in the receipt of subsidies from the British and is under their control. Commenting on the judgement in the case of Shanti Devi (formerly Asghari Begum) at Delhi the Medina writes:—It has now been fully established that the Arya Samajists regard it as their religious duty to kidnap children or women and to confine them in ashrams which are the sacred centres for kidnapping for proselytism. In these circumstances what is it if not a miracle of logic for the magistrate to hold the accused to be innocent? It is idle to expect that these courts will be able to suppress the artful designs of Sangathanists.

Patuakhali Satyagrah.

The Hindu press is watching the Patuakhali satyagrah with growing sympathy and is exhorting the Hindus to help in the campaign. The Sainik suggests that in every province Satyagrah committees should be formed and organized work should be carried on with a view to help the satyagrahis with men and money. One Govindji writing to the same paper remarks:—Patuakhali has indeed become the "Guru-ka-bagh" of Bengal. The Patuakhali satyagrah represents the fight for the protection of our rights. The bureaucracy has encroached upon the religious rights of the Hindus and is straining every nerve to crush their just opposition. We are out to protect our traditional right and we cannot deviate from the path of duty on account of threats or through fear of the sword or bullets or breach of peace or jail.

"Gita day."

The Vartman fervently supports the resolution passed by the Benares session of the Hindu Maha Sabha that the Hindus of every village and town should meet on every ekadashi and recite and discuss the Gita. It lays special emphasis on the need of celebrating the Gita day on December 15 as proposed by Gita Dharma Mandal of Poona and says:—This is a religious duty and an infallible means of Hindu Sangathan. The mere congregation on every ekadashi will greatly help Sangathan, and if we advance on the lines of the Gita Sangathan is assured. A number of other Hindu papers have also written in a similar strain.

The exchange ratio.

The Oudh Akhbar heartily approves of the programme of the Indian Currency League for the education of the public on the exchange question and hopes that every Indian will help it. India will clearly lose on the 18*d.* ratio and a vigorous agitation like that witnessed on the passing of the Rowlatt Act should be organized against it in every corner of the country. The Naiyar-i-azam, however, condemns the Currency League as a capitalistic organization and says that Sir Victor Sassoon and Sir Purshottam Das Thakur Das prefer the 1*s.* 4*d.* ratio because that would mean less expenditure for them on wages and a higher price for their commodities.

The Political Sufferers' Association.

Although the Pratap is of the opinion that the establishment of the "Political Sufferers' Association" has removed a long felt want, it repudiates its programme as idealistic and impracticable and urges that the first and foremost task before the association is to prepare a complete list of all the political prisoners in the country and of the political exiles abroad and find out their real sufferings. The paper expresses the hope that this will be done at the Gauhati session of the Political Sufferers' Conference.

Elections and after.

THE constitution of the Legislative Councils, unity among the various parties and the formation of Ministries are the main topics of discussion in the Press. Swarajist papers are opposed to unity with other parties at the sacrifice of principles. Reviewing the constitution of the United Provinces Council the Leader challenges the statement made in a "partisan and evidently inspired message" from Lucknow that the largest party was of landholders, and remarks that even a conservative estimate places the progressives in a clear majority "which only political blindness will fail to see." It goes on to say:—"We think we are not far wrong in anticipating that the new Council will press for a Ministry with corporate responsibility and undivided allegiance to a common policy. It cannot treat as friends any persons who will jump into office on the unconstitutional principle of each for himself. And it need not be expected to tolerate any reactionary or any man with no convictions, no policy, and no strength. Ministerships ought not to be the reward of incompetence or pusillanimity. For any Governor to make questionable selections of Ministers and then to utilize their failure as one of many similar arguments to establish the unfitness of Indians for responsible government is not to play the game. There is no doubt in any corner of our mind that the demand of constitutional propriety will be best satisfied if the leaders of the progressive party are consulted and any of them is asked to form a Ministry." Referring to the appeal for unity made by Lala Lajpat Rai and other leaders of the Responsive Party the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—We are amazed at the effrontery of Responsivists who with a virtuous air inculcate unity without admitting the obligation of loyalty to the Congress. They have attempted to shatter the authorized work of the Congress by setting up rebel organizations to ruin its credit. If the Congress is firm on its principles of consolidated action, it need not fear the loss of a few disgruntled politicians. In an article on the "Parties in the Assembly" the same paper writes:—The Swarajists who want to hasten swaraj cannot come to any understanding with the followers of the Lala and the Pandit so long as the latter do not furnish proofs that they are capable of thinking and acting nationally. Judging from Mr. Yakub's statement the Muslim members of the Assembly are in no hurry to shake hands with the "Hindupendent" Congress Party. There is a possibility however of reviving the old Nationalist Party consisting of the Swarajists and the Independents, both sides adopting the same old policy of "give and take." But there can be no unity with the "Hindupendents." The Hind-i-Jadid says that by fighting the elections on the pledge of defence of Hindu interests and cooperation with the Government the Hindu candidates in the United Provinces and the Punjab have shown that they are much more obsessed by communal narrow-mindedness than high class Muslims who have mostly selected candidates who will cooperate with Hindus in the fight for India's freedom. The Mashriq says that it would be really unfortunate if there is any truth in the political rumour from Allahabad that Mr. Chintamani's entry into the Council would create a commotion in it. However, the association of Mr. Muhammad Ismail's name with his dispels much of the apprehension as this gentleman is not an adept in political moves and the Agra Tenancy Bill has clearly convinced him that the zamindar party can depend upon no other party. Both the Swarajists and the Liberals are very clever in laying down their arms before Government when they are faced with trouble and when occasion demands they both unhesitatingly combine as was shown when they joined hands to defeat the Muslims over the Amended District Boards Act. Who knows that on account of their small numbers the Swarajists may not stoop to associate themselves with Mr. Chintamani? In reality the contest regarding Ministership is being designed by the Malaviya party to paralyse Muslims, but they will never falter and Mr. Ismail will not be a party to any action against the Ministers. We would appeal to all Hindu and Muslim members not to go against the present Ministers and President as their tenure has been in every way desirable. The Azad, on the other hand, while admitting that the present Ministers can continue in office on the strength of the clear zamindar majority in the elections, urges that in view of the forthcoming Royal Commission the transferred departments should be controlled by the best men available. Rai Rajeshwar Bali's claims cannot be easily overlooked as he has shown transparent sincerity and undoubted ability during his tenure of office, but it would be better if the remaining two Ministers were to be selected from among Mr. Chintamani, Rai Vikramajit Singh, Lala Sita Ram, Mr. Pant, Mr. Mohammad Ismail and Hafiz Hidayat Husain. The Medina regrets that the representatives thoughtlessly sent in by the electorate will be unable to break through the charm of deception with which the foreigners have designed to robe the promised democracy in eternal slavery. How can the morsel offered by the hand which is notoriously adept in snatching away morsels from the mouth prove sustaining for the weak soul? How can the fowler who is expert in forging bars for the cage be expected to desire the freedom of the nightingale? Besides, when the representatives of the people are hopelessly divided among themselves and aspire differently for Hindu Raj, Muslim Raj, etc., how can they prove their fitness and expect rewards from the creators of the Reforms? If the object of the Reforms is only to render the charm of deception of its rulers still more effective we can of course welcome all these squabblings among Indians for the sake of making money. But if there is a higher ideal before Indians, we have to see what party is going to be its standard-bearer. Apparently India is not fit for parliamentary government, and by the time it acquires that fitness in four or five centuries may be it may have to submit its prayers to some other ruling power than England. Then the period of tutelage would commence over again and a few more centuries may be required. The able nation which in spite of its humanitarian claims could remove neither the poverty nor the ignorance of India in two centuries and could not create general fitness in it can hardly be expected to accomplish anything in the next century. Again, how foolish it is to expect it to fulfil any of our aspirations? We really pity the Muslims of India most who even though they among all the races of India have been suffering from the vicissitudes of the times and are losing their wealth, learning, religion, nationality, unity and fraternity, still expect things from the Assembly and the Councils in which the soul is treated by a wound in the heart. The discord and selfishness being shown by Muslim leaders in Bengal proves that the condition of Muslims is the most critical, and God forbid they may not be like the Roman Catholics of England, the race whose extinction may in the course of centuries become inevitable for the establishment of constitutional government. If Muslims stand to gain it is by revolution and a grand revolution and not the Royal Commission of 1929.

The Congress.

The Aligarh Mail advises Muslims not to attend the Congress as it fears that it may pass a resolution against separate electorates. It says:—The Congress has now ceased to be national. It is simply a Hindu organization voicing Hindu sentiments and feelings and dominated by Hindu politicians. The presence of Muslims would only give complexion to the claim that the Congress always speaks for the entire nation. If this claim gains currency and is generally accepted it is likely to prove fatal to the interests of the minority communities in India. Our proper place for the present is in the Muslim League. We should rally round its banner and consolidate our forces to guard ourselves from the many-sided attacks that are being made upon our community. Referring to the Responsivists' appeal for the restoration of unity at the Gauhati Congress the Pratap remarks:—The cry for unity is laudable, but let us not be carried away by it to such an extent as to sacrifice the self-respect of the country for its sake. We can ill-afford to ignore the price at which this unity is to be purchased. If the Congress is not dead it will never accept the Responsivist counsel that the legislatures must be utilized. The Responsivists might think that statesmanship consists in our sucking this dry bone, but to us it is a suicidal step. The honour of the country demands the maintenance of the spirit of resistance. We are of opinion that the nation should in no circumstances accept the conditions proposed by the Responsivist leaders. The entire dispute is centred on the question of the acceptance or non-acceptance of Ministerships and in our opinion the Congress should give a mandate in favour of their acceptance subject to the fulfilment of certain conditions, the principal among them being the release of all political prisoners, the repeal of all repressive laws, the conversion of nominated to elective seats and the transfer of the expenditure in the transferred departments from the control of the Finance department to that of the Ministers. The Aj urges the Congress to condemn the promoters of the Independent Congress Party and to declare that it is not a Congress institution as it put forward candidates for election to legislature against the decision of the Congress. The Medina deplores that the Congress has ceased to be a representative body and fears that it will soon bid good-bye to its national ideals. Non-cooperation, civil disobedience and the freedom of India are no longer before it. It is now preoccupied with questions relating to the acceptance of office, unity among Responsivists and Swarajists, fear of Muslim ministries and unity among Hindus. We therefore, welcome the Gauhati Congress with trepidation for we fear that it will only lead to national retrogression, humiliation and death. The only reason is that the Hindu majority is bent on trampling upon the rights of Muslims. We are certain that a resolution permitting the acceptance of ministries will be passed by the Congress and then the Malaviya and Kelkar parties will, within the Councils, continue to trample upon the rights of Muslims and other minority communities. We would, therefore, urge the delegates of these communities not to allow this question to be taken up by the Congress. Nothing can be gained through peace. It is fight which makes a nation a slave or a ruler.

Communal representation.

While approving the principles of representation in Government service as enunciated by His Excellency the Viceroy in his reply to the address of the National Muhammadan Association, the Aligarh Mail writes:—What actually happens in practical life is that where there is no safeguard of a competitive examination or reservation of posts for minorities the Hindu superintendent of an office or the Hindu head of a department prefers his own co-religionist because Hinduism is the hall-mark of his efficiency. It is this injustice to the Musalmans, which is being perpetrated in the high-sounding and deceptive name of "efficiency," that the Government must destroy root and branch if it wants to allay the growing political discontent among the Musalmans. The second thing to which we would like to draw the kind attention of His Excellency Lord Irwin is that the Musalmans do not take the "devices of special representation" as an end in themselves. The Musalmans conscientiously believe that they are only a means to attain an end—the end of ending the Hindu monopoly of Government posts. The Hamdam is glad to note that the Viceroy was contemplating no change in communal representation. Prejudiced and mischievous Hindu leaders have repeatedly urged its abolition, but we are sure, says the paper, that the bias, narrow-mindedness and communalism of the lowest order betrayed by the Hindus in Mr. Asaf Ali's election have been sufficient to open the eyes of Government and it will urge no change in communal representation before the Royal Commission. We cannot wholly agree with His Excellency's remarks regarding communal representation in the services and would urge that in view of their superior administrative capacity half of all important posts should be reserved for Muslims. The Najat says that owing to the obstacles placed in their path by the majority community Muslims cannot take full advantage of the educational facilities provided for them by Government and urges that action should be taken to facilitate their admission into Government institutions. Although His Excellency's assurance about separate representation is satisfactory, Muslims should not slacken their agitation in its favour to counteract the Hindu propaganda against it. It is a pity that the Muslims cannot get their due share in the subordinate services owing to Hindu predominance and something should be done to facilitate their entry into them. While admitting that communal representation is injurious from the standpoint of a united nationality, the Rahnuma says that Muslims are constrained to press for it because Hindus always trample upon their rights in the joint electorates. It is, therefore, gratifying to note that Lord Irwin has assured Muslims that this right of theirs will remain safe. The Medina says:—We are sorry for the disappointment of those Muslim brethren of ours who went with great hopes but got nothing except advice on certain matters. Al Bashir points out that the joint electorates of Ajmer, Delhi, the British Indian Association, the United Provinces Chamber of Commerce and the Agra Zamindars' Association have not elected even a single Muslim. Worst of all, the registered graduates of the Allahabad University did not elect Dr. Ganesh Prasad simply because he was known to be free from communal bias. In these circumstances if a number of seats open to election from these bodies cannot be reserved for Muslims t hey should be deprived of the franchise. Clearly when zamindars, traders and graduates can vote in the general elections they have no right to special repres entation. The Hamdam regrets that certain politicians instead of trying to make amends for the losses suffered by Muslims at the hands of the Hindu majority, which have forced them to demand separate representation, close their eyes to the present situation and oppose separate electorates. The Leader has actually taken the support given by one Muslim to a resolution at the Kashipur Political Conference against separate representation to mean that Muslims are becoming opposed to it in growing numbers. As a matter of fact the treatment accorded to Muslim candidates by joint electorates has totally alienated Muslim sympathy from mixed electorates and Messrs. Malaviya and Lala Lajpat Rai's activities have convinced the overwhelming majority of Muslims of the necessity for separate representation notwithstanding what a Muslim or two might say who place the gratification of Hindu friends above the interests of the community.

India and Europeans.

The speech of Mr. Langford James at the European Association has evoked strong protests in the Indian Press. Referring to the reply given by Lord Irwin to the address presented to him by the Association, the Abhyudaya remarks :— May we hope that Mr. Langford James and his Association and other Europeans will profit by the wholesome advice given to them by His Excellency and realize that if they want to live with honour in a free India it is essential that they should abandon the air of superiority and merge themselves in the Indian public? Commenting on Mr. Langford James' speech, the Aj says that India cannot rest without attaining swaraj and those who stand in her way are bound to suffer discomfiture. Those who want to keep their position satisfactory under swaraj will do well to help her in securing self-government and not obstruct her. When prominent Indian leaders have openly proclaimed that they will treat Europeans as their honourable brethren under swaraj and will utilize their abilities, it is all the more objectionable to make false and reprehensible attacks on them. Prudence and wisdom demand that Europeans should give up love of the position of masters and teachers and be ready to live as brothers of Indians. In that case they will have nothing to fear from swaraj. Referring to Mr. Langford James' "boastful" statement that the British have made the modern India the paper writes :— Is the modern India happier or more miserable, more prosperous or more impoverished than before? Railways, telegraphs and post offices are no doubt great conveniences in British India, but she has had to make enormous sacrifices for them in the shape of the destruction of her old industries and the consequent impoverishment of her people, the increase of unemployment through a defective educational system and the establishment of costly law courts. The English have emasculated the Indians with the help of the Arms Act. All this goes to show that the British-made India is not happier than before. If there are achievements of which the Englishmen can be proud in India, there are by no means a smaller number of things of which they ought to be ashamed. The Hamdam remarks that if a few more speeches like that of Mr. Langford are delivered non-cooperation might be revived. It is queer that while Europeans complain of lack of cooperation on the part of Indians, the former themselves rain bombshells on the latter. How can Indians in these circumstances trust Europeans as it is only trust which begets trust? The paper protests against the action of the Karachi Port Trust in inserting an advertisement in a London paper at a cost of Rs. 75,000 and says that this is not a solitary instance of the patronage extended by Indian public bodies to English and Anglo-Indian papers. Even the summonses of Government law courts are published in Anglo-Indian and Indo-English papers, while as a matter of fact only vernacular newspapers and not the former reach the general public. If the Karachi Port Trust wants to reserve any post or contract for an Englishman, it has well served its purpose by advertising in a London journal; but as a Government department it was its duty to look first to India for the satisfaction of its needs.

Political propaganda.

The Gramvasi strongly urges the need for a party which may keep swaraj for its goal, always oppose the irresponsible Government and continue to assimilate other parties in the country with the help of a suitable programme. It goes on to say that as the Government is alien it is folly to hope that it would ever be so generous as to grant swaraj to the people to the detriment of its own interests. Those who entertain such hopes have either no confidence in their own strength or are afraid of sufferings. The foreigners rule by means of party divisions. One Ganeshji writing in the Abhyudaya contends that at present Britain is one of the most clever and tactful countries in the world. One of the special characteristics of the Britishers is that they make others their tools for achieving selfish ends. During the war India hoped that if Britain and her allies triumphed she would also gain something, but when the war was over she was given the Rowlatt Act which resulted in the Punjab episode. The history of Britain's relations with Russia, Japan, America and other countries also shows how she changes colour from time to time. Is there any limit to her selfishness?

The exchange ratio.

The Leader writes :—The opposition of the Indian manufacturers to the 1*s.* 6*d.* exchange ratio may be dismissed by the Finance Member as interested, but Sir Victor Sassoon's opposition cannot be so disposed of. His support of the lower rate shows that its supporters are not actuated by mere self-interest, but are convinced that the higher rate is injurious to the interests of the agriculturists and manufacturers alike. The question is of vital national importance and affects the economic well-being of the country. The weight of argument has been in favour of the lower rate and the Government ought not to ignore the consensus of weighty and well-informed Indian opinion. The Aj contends that the exchange ratio at 18*d.* represents a deliberate subsidy of 12½ per cent. to the Lancashire cotton industry at the cost of Indian agriculturists. On the one hand is enacted the farce of protecting Indian industries, and on the other a subsidy is being given surreptitiously to foreign industries. This is quite in keeping with the traditions of the bureaucracy. It is just the time when the well-wishers of India should reorganize the Congress and concentrate all their energy on the task of getting every Indian ply the charkha and the handloom. This can partially meet the crooked move of benefiting Britain at the expense of India. This constructive programme will again draw the Congress and the people into closer relations and thereby counteract the second move of the bureaucracy in the shape of agricultural improvements. The bureaucracy does not really desire to promote the interests of cultivators, otherwise it would not have raised the exchange ratio which would mean the loss of crores of rupees to them. The Surya remarks that the uneasiness of Sir Basil Blackett over the 18*d.* ratio is increasing with the approach of the next session of the Assembly and he is availing himself of the least opportunity of justifying his position through the press and the platform. But although a financial expert and a clever speaker, his cause is so weak that his arguments do not hold water before the counter-arguments of Sir Purshotam Das Thakur Das and Sir Victor Sassoon.

Music before mosques.

The Arya Mitra expresses satisfaction at the judgement delivered by Mr. Justice Wallace of the Madras High Court on the right of the Hindus of Nellore to play music before mosques and hopes that all the magistrates will take lesson from it. It goes on to say :—We think all the forces of the Government are meant for keeping the people contented and happy and not for being kept inactive for fear of the threats of a particular community. The Aj also warmly commends the judgement and remarks :—The authorities throughout the country should pay heed to this decision before depriving the Hindus of their just right of playing music on public roads owing to threat of violence on the part of lawless people. Such action of magistrates only serves to encourage hooligans and to impress upon the Hindus that their rights can be protected only if they follow their example. If the Government and the Muslims interfere with the just rights of the Hindus, they commit injustice and the Hindus should continue to agitate through all peaceful ways until their right is recognized.

Indian States.

Referring to the Viceroy's speech at the Chamber of Princes, the Bharat writes :—Except Baroda, Mysore and Travancore the subjects of almost all the Indian States complain of oppression and mal-administration. If Indian States had not existed and their subjects had been directly under the British rule they would have been more educated and much better off. Oppressive administration of Indian States goes a great deal towards justifying the atrocities of the British Government, and hence it is that the British have spared them so far, otherwise they would have annexed them long ago. If the British Government really acts in good faith, Indian States will have to keep at least to its level in administration. In an article headed "The Sanyasi Ruler of Dholpur—the ruin of the subjects and signs of decadence of the administration" the Farishta complains that the wild ravines and caverns cut by the Chambal in the Dholpur State harbour dacoits who commit depredations outside the State and no action is taken by the State to bring these unfrequented areas under cultivation so as to close these dens. It promises to bring out a series of articles exposing the terrible scandals in the management of the State.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Arya Mitra takes M. Mahomed Ali severely to task for his present communalistic activities and says:—The Aryasamajists have never spoken ill of any religious leader, and even if they may have ever done so their statements must have been based on authorities. But pray look at your own house. See what filthy and extremely shameless language your bigots have used against the chaste Sita and the great Rama. Pray go to Hyderabad and see how government is being carried on there and what hue and cry people are raising against the administration. Your talk of retaliation against those weaklings, the Hindus, who cannot even keep their heads safe from the lathi blows of Muslim rowdies and save their women and children from their mischief is ridiculous. It is the Muslims alone who do not see any harm in committing the most reprehensible deeds without even entertaining the thought of reprisals.

Agricultural Commission.

In the course of an editorial note on the Agricultural Commission the Medina writes:—After spending some lakhs of rupees the Commission will recommend the import of British agricultural implements, the appointment of about a dozen and a half of British agricultural experts on a monthly salary of rupees ten thousand each and the establishment of three or four agricultural colleges for Indian students, that is to say, that a few more crores of rupees may be presented to British capitalism. If, however, the Commission is really inspired by the desire for the development of Indian agriculture, it should recommend the adoption of the suggestions offered by Sir P. C. Roy in his evidence.

Legislation for reforming temples.

One Ganeshji writing in the Abhyudaya contends that the Madras Hindu Dharmada Bill is really an attempt at humiliating the priests and Brahmans and not at reforming the shrines and sacred places. The Hindus would be seriously imperilling their interests if they were to entrust the administration of their shrines to a Government or to the officials appointed by a Government which has no particular sympathy with their faith. The article concludes with an appeal to the Viceroy not to give his assent to the Bill.

The Congress.

Opinion concerning the proceedings of the Gauhati Congress is sharply divided on party lines. The session has so far received less than the usual editorial attention on account of the sensation caused by the murder of Swami Shraddhanand. The Leader says: The presidential address was a full-blooded nationalist utterance. It was eloquent, inspiring and pithy. But it was more emotional than thoughtful. It ignored realities, twisted facts, abounded in fallacies and soared in the cloud-land. In a subsequent issue the paper writes: It was not expected that the Gauhati Congress would face facts and adjust Congress policy to the changed situation. In laying increased emphasis on khaddar, in sticking to a policy of pseudo-non-cooperation inside the legislatures, in trying to hide Swarajist dissensions with regard to the working of the Reforms behind ambiguous formulas, in entrusting its judgment to the working committee on the currency question, and in shifting on the working committee the burden of unravelling the communal tangle, the Congress not only failed to give a right lead to the country but also proclaimed the bankruptcy of its policy. The sense of the country is not with it. It commands neither the confidence of the Hindus nor of the Muslims. Its dwindling funds proclaim its waning popularity. The process of disintegration that has set in will not be checked by the resolutions passed by the Gauhati Congress. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes: Mr. Srinivasa Iyengar has made an eminently successful effort to give a clear and authoritative lead to the country in his presidential address which is one of the most masterly of addresses delivered from the dignified rostrum of the Congress. The address on the whole is a remarkable performance and is a valuable contribution to the political literature of the country. It rings the death-knell of responsivism and all that it stands for. The Aligarh Mail strongly criticizes the President's remarks regarding communal representation and observes: The presidential address is a document of very little importance except as a vehement denunciation of the Reforms. Though full of glittering generalities, it is sadly lacking in the lead that it was expected to give to the country . . . It is being realized more and more as the days pass by that the Congress is losing its hold upon the people and that it is gradually deteriorating to a position of a mere debating society where fire-eaters and hot-heads find a good opportunity to display their oratorical talents. In a subsequent issue the paper says: Like the presidential address the Congress too failed to formulate a clear-cut programme for the coming year or to point the way to unity. The Congress has, in fact, accentuated differences and has made it more difficult for other parties to come to a settlement. The Sainik writes: In several respects the presidential address was unique. We never came across such a full, clear and well-reasoned exposition of the Congress programme. This should be recited every day by every nationalist. Considering all the circumstances the decisions of the Congress were most satisfactory. The Fratap says that the Congress has not only removed what little doubt was left regarding the nation's support of the Swarajist policy in respect of the legislatures but it has also made it abundantly clear that the influence of the Responsivists does not transcend the borders of Maharashtra. The passage of the resolution regarding the habitual wearing of khaddar by Congressmen marks a drift towards Gandhism. The Vartman is of opinion that the presidential address and the resolutions were both disappointing. In view of the critical situation the President was expected to make an epoch-making utterance and to deliver a new and life-giving message, but he only spoke as an able advocate and not as a national prophet. The Surya remarks that the presidential address was as disappointing as it was misleading. It was marked by the President's blind and indiscriminate devotion to the Swaraj party and has rendered the task of restoring unity in the ranks of the Congress doubly difficult. Never before has the Congress presidential address been such a huge failure. In the course of an editorial article under the heading "Be brave," suggesting that the Gauhati Congress should adopt a forward programme such as the boycott of foreign cloth, establishment of national schools and village panchayats, village organization, etc., the Bharat Jiwan wrote: We can to-day become free if we make an emphatic announcement at the Gauhati Congress that we do not want to remain within that oppressive Empire which designates itself "the British commonwealth of nations" but which in fact is an Empire that sucks the blood of the hearts of the poor. We do not say that we should to-day unsheathe our swords and shed rivers of blood. There is no need for it and this is also not the time for it but if ever it becomes necessary to do so we will not hesitate in saying that. All that we need at present is that we should display that heroism that we did four years and sixty-eight years ago. The Aj says that the presidential address was marked by constructive statesmanship and was an inspiring oration. It deserves to be read and pondered over by every patriotic and thoughtful Indian. All the important questions before the country have been thoroughly discussed in it. The President rightly laid great emphasis on the need for village organization and the Congress propaganda being carried to every nook and corner of the country. The paper expresses satisfaction at the decision of the Congress regarding ministries and remarks: It is proper and right that Congressmen should not cooperate with Government in works where responsibility would lie on their shoulders but all the power would be concentrated in the hands of the irresponsible Government. We welcome the further decision of the Congress that its members should oppose all the resolutions in the councils which are likely to consolidate the power of the bureaucracy. The Abhyudaya says that Mr. Srinivas Iyengar's address was quite in keeping with the high position of the president of the Congress. Mr. Iyengar began like a Swarajist, continued like a determined non-cooperator and ended like a man of action. In all the address there is only one point on which we differ. Although he felt the necessity of capturing legislatures and local bodies we fail to understand why he did not realize a similar need for accepting ministerships.—Very few Muslim papers have so far commented on the proceedings of the Congress. The Haq commends the remarks of Mr. Iyengar regarding communal unity and says that if even now Hindus and Muslims cannot see their way to unite and advance for the attainment of their common goal they should rest assured that their dreams of swaraj will not be realized at least for a century to come. The Haqiqat is of opinion that Mr. Iyengar has given the right lead to the country. The Hamdam writes: The resolutions regarding Council programme show that the Swarajists have not yet lost their influence in the Congress and have gained a complete victory on this important subject. The presidential address was closely reasoned and gave evidence of depth of thought in the discussion of certain questions like the present communal situation. The President did well in disallowing Mr. Tandon's resolution regarding the abolition of the system of separate representation and if the resolutions of the Unity Conference are carried into practice and the Congress leaves the question of separate representation untouched for the present Hindu-Muslim differences can be removed to a great extent.

The Muslim League.

The Leader writes: "The address of Sheikh Abdul Qadir as president of the last session of the All-India Muslim League was, unlike that of Sir Abdur Rahim in the preceding year, moderate in language and on the whole nationalist in outlook. While we are unable to agree with some of the views expressed by him, especially those which referred to the origin of the shuddhi and sangathan movements, and to the attitude of the two great leaders associated with it towards the Muslims, we recognize that the president put the Muslim case with fairness and moderation and showed that he is among the few Muslims who can approach the communal problem in a spirit of reasonableness and restraint . . . On the question of music before mosques and cow-sacrifice he expressed views with which no reasonable Hindu need differ." The paper criticizes his remarks regarding communal representation. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes: Khan Bahadur Sheikh Abdul Qadir has given a correct lead to the Muslim community. His constructive suggestion for the holding of a Round Table Conference of selected representatives of the Hindu and Muslim communities deserves the support of all leaders of public opinion. The Aligarh Mail says: The address delivered by Khan Bahadur Sheikh Abdul Qadir is a masterly exposition of the real situation in India. It comes as a refreshing contrast to the address of the president of the National Congress. Instead of vague generalities, it courageously deals with realities and actual facts and in the place of total absence of good and concrete suggestions it abounds in helpful and constructive proposals for the solution of some of the most important problems, including the rehabilitation of good relations between the various communities that inhabit our country. The Abhyudaya opines that the whole of the presidential address was devoted to supporting communal as opposed to national demands which is causing irretrievable injury to the country. The Hamdam commends Sheikh Abdul Qadir's views on the question of Muslim representation in the services and says: The Hindus accuse the Muslims of having joined the Congress simply for protecting the prestige of the Khilafat and of having abandoned it as soon as their object was realized. This is wrong. The Muslims neither abandoned the Congress nor broke their relations with the Hindus. They always remained firm on their position. The Hindus on the other hand themselves changed their attitude when against their expectations they found Turkey regaining her strength. The Haqiqat says that the waning popularity of the Khilafat committees and the communal activities of the Hindu Mahasabha have infused new life into the Muslim League and the session at Delhi was consequently very successful in every way. The proceedings showed no tinge of communal prejudice in spite of the Swami Shraddhanand incident. The presidential address dealt succinctly with all important topics and represented the Muslim point of view regarding them. Sheikh Abdul Qadir rightly regretted that Hindus were not courteous enough to stop music before mosques even at prayer time. His insistence on separate electorates was justified by the results of the elections from Delhi and the British Indian Association. Sheikh Abdul Qadir's proposal for a round table conference of Hindu and Muslim leaders to decide controversial matters is commendable as though it may not do away with inter-communal differences, it will enable Hindus and Muslims to prefer a joint demand before the Royal Commission.

The murder of Swami Shraddhanand.

The murder of Swami Shraddhanand is the chief topic of press comments and has thrown the Congress and the other annual functions into the background. The outrage is being condemned in the strongest language by newspapers of all communities and of all shades of opinion. Hindu papers make impassioned appeals to their co-religionists to close up their ranks and to carry on the shuddhi and sangathan movements with redoubled energy as a tribute to the memory of the deceased. Most of these papers hold the crime to be the outcome of an organized conspiracy of Muslims and in support of this contention refer to a poem entitled "Shuddhi ki Arthi" (the bier of shuddhi) published in Khwaja Hasan Nizami's paper on the eve of the murder, the sale of the photographs of the assassin as a "ghazi" and the illuminations in certain mosques. They also urge that the investigation should be conducted through an impartial agency. These remarks are strongly resented by Muslim papers which urge that after the strong, unanimous and unqualified condemnation of the outrage expressed by Muslim leaders there is absolutely no justification for stigmatizing the entire community for the misdeed of an individual. The Leader writes: The ghastly outrage at Delhi has stirred to the innermost depths the hearts of the Hindus and has caused widespread consternation and sorrow . . . The Hindus can best show their strength and superiority by exercising strict self-restraint. What appears to be the misdeed of an individual fanatic ought not to make them lose their balance of mind and resort to measures of retaliation. It is the duty of Government to make a sifting inquiry if the atrocity was inspired by any organization or whether the individual who perpetrated it was solely responsible for it. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes: Like the attack on Mussolini the murder of Swami Shraddhanand must be only the result of dementia on the part of his assassin. To read more into the situation will be to go beyond the evidence of fact as well as highly injudicious. The evil of raising the communal bogey and of calling into existence communal forces which cannot be kept in leash is made painfully obvious by this sad incident. The Aligarh Mail writes: We cannot say that we have been a great admirer of Swamiji but we unhesitatingly condemn the outrageous deed that was committed by a person who happens to be a Muslim . . . The man who shot Swamiji has undoutedly gone against the teachings of Islam. The paper strongly protests against the speech of Professor Ramdeo at Delhi and says: It is utterances like this that lead to quarrel and to such horrible deeds as the Delhi outrage. The Himalayan Times suspects that the crime was not merely an act of a frenzied lunatic and remarks: True, the work of a single Muslim should not be construed as the doing of the entire community, but when we reflect upon the course of events from the period of Muslim advent into this country up to now, we cannot help feeling that the aggressiveness of Islam has committed not one but innumerable depredations against the followers of the Hindu religion . . . How long will the Hindus afford to remain indifferent to the patent fact that every year nearly 500,000 of their co-religionists are converted to other religions. If we go on in this way, a day will come before very long when India will cease to be called Aryavarta or Hindustan, and its proper name shall have been changed to Islamistan. In our opinion the spot where Swami Shraddhanand was murdered so brutally ought to be acquired by national subscriptions and a building should be raised there to serve as the All-India head-quarters of the shuddhi and sangathan movements which must be carried on a million times more intensively and extensively than before. The Aj writes: The cowardly and demoniacal murder of Swami Shraddhanand on sick bed by a villainous Muslim will ever remain fresh in Indian history and among the Indian people. The shock which has been caused to the hearts of twenty crores of Hindus cannot but have a revolutionary effect. No words are too strong to denounce the reprehensible and devilish misdeed. Let the responsible Muslim leaders whose words go to inflame their ignorant co-religionists ponder over the outrage that has been inflicted upon the feelings of Hindus by the assassination of their popular and revered leader. The reprehensible object which inspired the murderer to perpetrate this cruel deed can never be achieved. On the contrary this will only go to redouble public efforts in the cause of shuddhi and sangathan. The Vartman writes: The holy blood of the Swamiji will serve as a miracle for the emancipation of the nation and the uplift of the Hindus. There will no longer be a place in the nation for those fanatics who regard this cruel murder as their triumph. Emphasizing the need for a searching and impartial inquiry into the murder the paper says: The police should not rest in peace till the abettors have been caught. The poison which has been showered by Muslim papers and pamphlets upon the shuddhi movement and the Swamiji proclaims that there are men behind Abdul Rashid. The Muslim papers of Delhi continue to emit poison. This throws sufficient light on the conspiracy behind the murder. Even fools can understand the mentality of the community which can openly sell the photograph of the perpetrator of such a dastardly crime as that of a martyr. The Pratap writes: The murder is fraught with terrible consequences and is calculated to kindle a fire throughout the whole country. It is not unlikely that the majority of the Hindus may entertain feelings of violence and may be inclined to regard the entire Muslim community as the very embodiment of treachery and wickedness. Indeed it is difficult to predict the dimensions which this fire may assume. Although the number of Muslims who might feel delighted over the Swamiji's murder will not be small yet it is imperative that the Hindus should restrain their feelings and refrain from implicating the entire Muslim community in this brutal crime. Swamiji's sacrifice is a message of hope and strength. The Bharat Dharma remarks: The statement of the assassin that the murder of a kafir would lead him to heaven shows what love of mankind is inculcated by Islam. If the eyes of those Hindus who expect good treatment at the hands of the Muslims are not opened even now then it should be understood that the Hindu community does not want to become self-reliant. The Abhyudaya fears that the murderer was not really a maniac but a member of a party of misguided Muslims who in the interests of Islam think it necessary to put out of the way Hindu leaders of the type of Swami Shraddhanand. It appeals to the Hindus not to get excited over the assassination but to cultivate the spirit of self-sacrifice which actuated Swami Shraddhanand. In another issue of the paper Pandit Krishna Kant Malaviya refutes the contention that the present communal tension and the press are really responsible for the murder of Swami Shraddhanand and asks: Did communal tension exist or did the press emit venom at the time when Pandit Lekh Ram was assassinated ?. The Swami's murder was in fact due to the belief, as expressed by the assassin, that by murdering a kafir he expected to go to heaven. Not only this, the Muslims have always relied on the knife and the sword. Surprise attacks, putting helpless pilgrims to death by stabbing them in the back and murdering old and crippled men and other acts like these are the characteristics of their mentality. Their action in stoning the Swami's funeral procession also shows that the murder was not merely the act of a maniac or fanatic but was an indication of the mentality of that community. It is, therefore, impossible to establish sincere relations between the two communities so long as this mentality is not got rid of. The writer also suggests the organization of a "Shraddha Dal" and the inauguration of the "Swami Week" for vigorously carrying on the work of shuddhi and sangathan in which the late Swami was engaged. The Bharat Jiwan writes: Nothing else can be expected from Islam which has its foundations in murder and bloodshed and according to which the highest virtue consists in killing a kafir and the greatest bliss in enjoying houris and youthful boys. Had we the requisite strength we would have, in the words of a wise man, "annihilated such a community" a mean and hellish member of which committed the murder of Swami Shraddhanand and whose religion engendered the mentality which made such a crime possible. But unfortunately we lack that strength to-day and have to repress our feelings. In these circumstances the best way in which we can avenge the Swamiji's murder is to take up his work. The shuddhi and sangathan movements were the cause of his murder and our mind can rest in peace only when we have brought about the extinction of the Muslim community through these movements. The Arya Mitra urges the Hindus not to mourn over the loss caused by the murder of Swami Shraddhanand but immediately to concentrate all their energy on the performance of their duty and blow the conch of shuddhi and sangathan to show that the movement which the Muslims expected to end with the death of Swami Shraddhanand is increasing by leaps and bounds with a thousandfold velocity. The Medina strongly denounces the murder of Swami Shraddhanand and appeals to Hindus to believe in the sincerity of the condemnation of the deed which has been unanimously expressed by Muslim leaders. It is the act of an individual and is against all Islamic injunctions. This incident makes it all the more incumbent on Hindus and Muslims to try to improve their relations. Protesting vehemently against the attitude of the Hindus in connexion with the murder the same paper writes in a subsequent issue: Muslim religious leaders and newspapers have loudly and unanimously condemned the murder and yet a large and extremely bigoted section of Hindu newspapers and leaders is throwing the responsibility for the deed on Islam, the Quran and Muslims as a community. This action, in our opinion, is more irresponsible, fanatical and abominable than the murder of the Swamiji . . . In spite of such clear denunciation of the murder by Muslims, Hindu newspapers are every day issuing most inflammatory literature, under bold headlines are inciting their co-religionists to create disturbance and are busy calumniating Islam. In condolence meetings, too, Hindu speakers are indulging in extremely aggressive and inflammatory speeches which are simply intolerable. This is a strong proof of the mischievousness and religious fanaticism of our fellow-countrymen. Who will be responsible if even a thousandth part of the inflammatory campaign of misrepresentations bears fruit and leads to riots and bloodshed throughout the country? The Hamdam has written four articles on the subject. It regrets that while every thoughtful Muslim is deploring the dastardly outrage, certain narrow-minded Arya Samajist organs are utilizing the incident to vent their spleen on Muslims and are inciting the Hindus. In view of the all-round condemnation of the deed by Muslim leaders and the declaration of the accused that he alone was reponsible for the act the efforts to weave a web of conspiracy round the affair are reprehensible . . . A particular body of the Hindus including Lala Lajpat Rai, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and the Arya Samajists is trying to further the cause of sangathan by giving undue importance to this deplorable incident and by impressing upon their co-religionists that the Swami's murder is the outcome of some deep-laid conspiracy which includes a number of eminent Muslims. The Haqiqat says that Muslims are not only grieved but also deeply ashamed at the insane murder of the Swamiji by a co-religionist of theirs. Neither does Islam tolerate such brutality nor can it benefit from it. A blow has been dealt at Hindu-Muslim unity and an opportunity has been given to non-Muslims to accuse Islam of intolerance. The Swami was not solely a communal worker, he showed his sterling patriotism during the days of non-cooperation. The Haq condemns the murder and says that the denunciation of this imprudent and mad action by the Muslim leaders and the press shows that Muslims are not prepared to countenance such cowardly and callous actions even for a minute. The Agra Akhbar observes that all Muslims will deplore the terrible crime. The situation demands that the causes of tension should be removed otherwise the national bark will founder in the whirlpool of sangathan and tanzim. The Mansur says that this unfortunate incident will always help the enemies of the country in aggravating its misfortune. The Aziz-Hind says that the assassin's cowardly and fanatical act is not only abominable in the eyes of the Hindus but has also grieved the Muslims all over the country. Islam never allows such an act as might give the enemies a pretext to harm the Muslims. The Anis says that the assassin has by his cowardly action put the entire Muslim community to shame and disgrace. The time has now come when the Muslim leaders should unitedly turn their misguided co-religionists against such abominable acts. The Desh Bhagat attributes the murder to the undesirable religious propaganda carried on by selfish communal leaders and newspapers on both sides and writes: Though Muslim leaders are now unanimously condemning the murder yet those among them who have either openly inflamed communal passions or have not raised their voice against communalism are morally responsible for it. We pray that this sacrifice of the Swami may cement the bonds of Hindu-Muslim unity and both communities may again co-operate as in 1921 and strive to free their country from foreign control.

Liberal Federation.

The Pioneer writes: While at Gauhati the heterogeneous collection of Congress orators are bickering and emitting much forensic steam designed to conceal the emptiness of their store of constructive ideas, Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer, in addressing the All-India National Liberal Federation, has been able to give a clear and comprehensive statement of the aims of men who, like himself, stand for the orderly development of national aspirations. With all his views it is not possible to agree. But his demand for an explicit statement of the Government's military policy deserves careful consideration. The Leader says: Those who believe in a policy guided by sound commonsense and are not afraid of facing facts will turn with pleasure to the speech of Sir Sivaswamy which is marked throughout by independence of judgment and a keen appreciation of the realities and the needs of the country though his observations on the questions of currency and exchange will not be acceptable to a large section of Indian public opinion. The Indian Daily Telegraph observes: Sir Sivaswamy's address marks no new advance in liberal thought. The same old abject mentality of preferring to wait upon crumbs from the bureaucratic table is in evidence throughout the address. We take the liberty to tell Sir Sivaswamy that the liberal debacle is entirely due to the lack of self-reliance and the desire to placate an alien and hostile bureaucracy at the expense of self-respect. The Aj says that the address of the President of the Liberal Federation is quite in keeping with him and the Liberal Federation. It cannot congratulate him on the address, " which only curses the Congressmen, praises every act of the Government and supports the liberal principles, which have been exposed times out of number." It says that if the country is to remain in perpetual bondage it cannot do better than follow the advice of Sir Sivaswamy Aiyer to depend entirely on the Government. If India is to attain Swaraj she will have to bid good-bye to liberal methods. There is no difference between Sir Sivaswamy's address and an official pronouncement. The Anand remarks that whereas the President of the Congress thought it proper to shut his eyes to the facts and realities of the country and indulge in building castles in the air the president of the Liberal Federation threw considerable light on every problem connected with the future of the country.

Re-appointment of Ministers in United Provinces.

Very few papers have so far commented on the re-appointment of the Ministers in these provinces. The Leader writes: We cannot congratulate the Governor on his decision nor the province, but we are not sorry for the way in which he has exercised his discretion. In the old Council the Ministers met with no effective opposition and had a happy time of it. But in the new they are not likely to find office a bed of roses. The Sainik writes: In our provinces the old Ministers will again serve as puppets in the hands of the Government. These appointments have frustrated the hopes of a large number of Independent candidates. We do not know whether to congratulate or to sympathize with Pandit Malaviya's team of the rich and the slaves which has got into the Council, for Rai Rajeshwar Bali and Thakur Rajendra Singh were both put forward as candidates of the Independent Congress Party. The Aj says that the Leader's editorial note on the re-appointment of old Ministers betrays the characteristic mentality of the Liberals, which has been causing unnecessary harm in public activities specially in the political field. It shows that the Liberals attach more importance to personalities than to principles. If the Leader cared for principles it ought not to have taken any objection to the re-appointment of Rai Rajeshwar Bali and Thakur Rajendra Singh as they belonged to its own party of progressives and it ought not to have insisted that the Governor should have consulted the leaders of progressives in appointing Ministers. If these progressives are wise enough and do not worship mere personality they should join forces with the Swarajists and render ministry impossible in these provinces. The Medina writes: We expect that the Hon'ble Ministers will do even better than they did before in the discharge of their duties and will endeavour to improve the educational and economic condition of the province. It is true that they have been nominated by Government and are not legally responsible to the nation. Still as they belong to the nation and are possessed of sincere solicitude for the improvement of the country, they will try not to be indifferent to the present political atmosphere. The Mashriq congratulates the United Provinces Government on the re-appointment of the old Ministers and says that it was difficult for it to make a better choice. The present cabinet in the United Provinces commands the confidence of the entire public.

Communal representation.

The Muslim press is apprehensive, owing to the Viceroy's speech at Calcutta and the attitude of Hindu leaders, that an attempt might be made to tamper with communal representation. The Hamdam complains that Lala Lajpat Rai has since last year been persistently opposing separate representation and has in his speeches at Bombay, and in Northern India been attributing the present tainted communal atmosphere and riots to it. Hindu communal leaders now want to annul the Lucknow pact and to get the Congress to vote against separate representation even though the Muslims may leave that body. The Hindus having got no arguments in support of these unjust demands of theirs most brazenly accuse Muslims of communalism while they themselves have shown this vice in its worst aspect in the latest incident in connexion with Mr. Asaf Ali. Muslims can be expected to forego their special demands only if the Hindus abandon their militant attitude and gain the confidence of Muslims. But on the one hand the rights of Muslims are openly trampled upon and they are sought to be overawed by wealth and numbers and on the other they are taunted for insisting on defensive measures. How paradoxical is this attitude? The Haqiqat writes in a similar strain. The Aziz-i-Hind fears that Lord Irwin does not agree with the Muslim point of view regarding separate representation and urges that Muslims should try to convince His Excelleney and the coming Royal Commission that the rights of minorities cannot be safeguarded without it. It is ridiculous to anticipate that communal separatism will disappear from India.

Gurkhas in British India.

Calling attention to the importance of the Gurkha community in India and pleading for the fulfilment of its legitimate aspirations the Himalayan Times writes: It is believed in certain quarters that there exist adverse restrictions in the matter of the appointment of Gurkhas to higher ranks in the army and in responsible civil positions in Government service or to the grant of land jagirs in India. It is also stated that right to acquire land has been proscribed for the Gurkhas in certain provinces, as for instance in the Punjab, where they are said to have been declared as a "non-agricultural" community. So far we have not received any specific complaints from any side, which leads us to presume that these reports are either groundless or of an exaggerated nature. We, however, hope that the Government will be pleased to throw due light on the matter so as to remove all misapprehensions which might be lurking in the minds of certain Gurkha settlers with regard to their political status in this country, their civic rights, and their future in India.

Foreign affairs.

The press is following the Chinese "nationalist" movement with keen and sympathetic interest and some vernacular papers are indulging in strong language in criticizing British policy in China. The Leader writes:—We think that as Britain is the most hated among foreign powers it should lose no time in putting itself right with the Chinese national sentiment without waiting for the views of other treaty powers. A free, peaceful, friendly and prosperous China is expected to be a more valuable customer than an impoverished, hostile and distracted China, and we think that time has come to face the issues squarely and courageously. In a subsequent article the paper writes:—The working of the nationalist ferment in China is both a portent and a warning. . . . . No intelligent man, whether he is Lord Birkenhead or any other responsible British statesman who is not obsessed with narrow ideas of self-interest and the spirit of racial arrogance and selfishness, can, on a broad survey of the internal and external situation, come to any other conclusion than that safety lies in bringing India into line with other self-governing portions of the British Empire as rapidly as possible and that the best way to overcome the feelings of hostility to British rule is to produce a conviction among the leaders of Indian thought that the British are in earnest in seeking to help India to reach the goal of self-government within a reasonable measure of time. In the course of two articles vehemently denouncing the attitude of European powers, specially of Britain, towards China the Aj writes:—The nationalism of China is on its trial. If it could protect itself from the bullets and gun-powder of imperialist Britain, if it did not get nervous at the diabolical deeds of Dyers, and if it saved itself from the snares of extremely diplomatic ambassadors, this would mean not only the salvation of China but the dawning of the good day for the whole of Asia. China with its forty crores of inhabitants is being trampled upon by thirteen foreign powers. The nationalist Chinese hold that it is the British who are practising the greatest oppression upon them. The Chinese statesmen are not unaware that the British imperialists are trying to tighten the bonds of subjection on the Eastern countries by the establishment of the Singapore naval base, and it is for this reason that they are first of all exerting pressure on the British. They know that the imperialist Britain will never do justice to Eastern countries of her own accord. Englishmen make a show of generosity when they find that they cannot resist a demand. China knows this, and this is why she is compelling Englishmen to show their generosity first. The Anand writes:—There is no doubt that the Asiatic nations will be pleased with the Chinese awakening because a well-organized China will enable Asia to raise its head high. The Abhyudaya says:—The independence of China will emancipate the whole of Asia from the domination of foreigners. It is for this reason that all the suffering nations of the world wish that China may emerge triumphant from this struggle. The Desh Bhagat says that the Chinese danger added to the Russian and Afganistan peril has made the authorities uneasy and this explains the visit of Lord Irwin and Lord Winterton to the Frontier. A conflict may be precipitated either by an attempt to introduce into other parts of the Frontier the methods applied in Waziristan or over the delimitation dispute with Afghanistan. No one can therefore say that the horizon on the Frontier is free from war-clouds. The Hamdam says that by the Italo-Albanian treaty Italy has obtained a virtual protectorate over Albania. The French and American press has exposed Britain's complicity in the conclusion of this alliance, and it is a pity that Britain in spite of her claim to be the greatest Muslim power in the world, does not care to protect Muslim states. Some Muslim states have been deprived of their liberty by Britain herself and now she is being accused of responsibility for Italian aggression over the small Islamic state on the Adriatic. The British press is no doubt denying the charge, but the outside world which has seen many feats of British diplomacy in the past can hardly be expected to credit these denials.

The Congress.

Referring to the " murmurs of revolt " among young men on the occasion of the Gauhati Congress the Aj remarks that the youths are almost mad after political liberty . . . . The message of the Gauhati Congress is that the enthusiasm of the youths cannot subside without freeing the country, but if it is not rightly directed it is likely to be misused. The Sada-i-Muslim commends the decision of the Congress regarding the non-acceptance of Ministerships and opposition of Government measures and says :—The truth is that India is so helpless that she can do nothing more than this and those who are not prepared to do even this much for the attainment of freedom and the maintenance ot national respect should have no place in the country. The decision of the Congress has been welcomed by all except those gentlemen who regard it as no degradation and insult to go about with the beggar's bowl. Lala Lajpat Rai's contention that the Congress should have thrashed out the question of Hindu-Muslim unity in the open session only betrays his wickedness of heart. It is not a child's play to decide such momentous issues and the Congress has acted rightly in referring the subject to the All-India Congress Committee. The Congress resolutions about charkha and khaddar are also similarly commendable. The Congress session was in every way successful and was able to maintain Indian nationalism in spite of severe and dangerous attacks. The Haqiqat regrets that the Gauhati Congress has failed to tackle the Hindu-Muslim question and says that the refusal of Mr. Gandhi to resume the leadership of the country augers ill for the nation. The Najat holds the session to be eminently successful and remarks:—No doubt the presidential address contained nothing new, but it infused a new life by representing the national point of view on all important questions in a capable manner. It aptly justified the Swarajist attitude and rightly declared that the political centre of gravity had shifted from the bureaucratic Government and its supporters to the National Congress. The president most pertinently declared that diarchy was doomed and that any scheme of self-government which did not provide for popular control of the army, navy and relations with Indian states would prove futile. Mr. Iyengar's address is the united voice of India and it is up to Indians to respond sincerely to it during 1927. The Medina deplores that the president did not place any stimulating programme before the country and says :—The session came and passed off like a flood leaving only signs of destruction and devastation behind. There was nothing in the proceedings of the Congress likely to raise its prestige and the country has again been left in despair. It is extremely surprising that the Swarajists have not profited by their experience of the last three years.

The Muslim League.

The Najat says that Shaikh Abdul Qadir's presidential address at the Muslim League was a comprehensive and dignified utterance and faithfully echoed Muslim aspirations. He gave an example of Muslim tolerance by his references to the services of Hindu leaders like Mahatma Gandhi and Mr. C. R. Das to the cause of Hindu-Muslim unity. His views on the reforms were not much advanced, but his observations regarding questions affecting the relations between Muslims and other communities left nothing to be desired. He showed the height of reasonableness when he came to the question of representation of minorities and majorities. He rightly said that custom and law should not be quoted in regard to the right of music before mosques, but regard should be paid to the demands of humanity and courtesy. The Haq says that the learned and thoughtful address of Shaikh Abdul Qadir deserves the careful attention of every Muslim national worker. He has justified every expectation and has studiously eschewed sensationalism and idealism. The Muslims are grateful for his views as a whole, though his observations on the Hedjaz question are one-sided. The Oudh Akhbar congratulates the League on conducting its proceedings in such a restrained fashion in spite of the excitement caused by the Swamiji's murder. The League has not stinted in passing progressive resolutions and has not lagged behind the Congress in this respect. The Nizam Alam deplores that the attendance at the sessions of the Muslim League and the Educational Conference was very low and says:—The formal resolutions passed at the League hardly deserve any notice. When Muslims do not attend meetings over which so much money is spent it is clear that they are not interested in the progress of their community.

The Murder of Swami Shraddhanand.

The murder of Swami Shraddhanand remains the chief topic of press comments. The Muslim papers continue to condemn the outrage and to deprecate the tendency of the Hindu press to create bad blood between the two communities by attributing it to a Muslim conspiracy and by trying to further the shuddhi and sangathan movements. The Aligarh Mail deplores that the murder of Swami Shraddhanand has been seized upon as a God-send opportunity by the sangathanist press to excite communal ill-will and to play the Hindus against the Muslims. It adds:—We hope the Hindu press and public men will give up their policy of exciting communal hatred and would concentrate their attention, in conjunction with the best brains amongst the Muslims, to devise ways and means to bridge the gulf that exists between the two great communities in the land and thus make Swaraj for India possible. The Day-Light is of opinion that although the murder was the act of a single individual, the Hindus have a just cause of resentment against the Muslims as the atmosphere for the outrage was created by the Muslims in general through their insane and irresponsible propaganda against the sangathan and shuddhi movements. The paper regards the murder as a challenge to Hindus and says:—"The Hindus realize the responsibility of taking up the gauntlet. It is nothing else but to become ready for many sacrifices of this nature and consequently to carry on the work of shuddhi with greater intensity and thoroughness. This is the message which the closed eyes and the wounded chest of the martyr have only too plainly given to the Hindus." The Anand regrets that the Delhi police has not yet been able to detect the conspiracy behind the murder of Swami Shraddhanand and remarks that if it is not soon unearthed there is the danger of other Hindu leaders also losing their lives. It is the duty of Lord Irwin, says the paper, to depute high officials of the C. I. D. to trace the conspiracy. The Pratap refers to the illuminations in certain mosques at Delhi, Meerut and Cawnpore on the occasion of the assassination of Swami Shraddhanand and to the meetings held by the Muslims to rejoice at the murder and remarks that a religion which can exult over such a murder does not deserve to be called a good religion and those who rejoice in this manner betray the darkness of their hearts and will yet take a long time to attain humanity. The Haqiqat regrets that Swamiji's deplorable murder has given bigoted Hindu papers an opportunity for exciting the whole Hindu public against the Muslims. The inflammatory writings of these journals show that they want to get some Muslim leaders into trouble by raising the false cry of a "deep laid conspiracy." Khwaja Hasan Nizami has been marked out for revenge. The Hindu representative of the Associated Press at Delhi did not publish the Khwaja's message on the outrage. Does this mean that there is a "deep laid conspiracy" of Delhi Hindus to injure the Khwaja? The honesty of the Muslim police officials of Delhi is being impugned and Muslim leaders are being howled down probably to coerce them into giving up tabligh work. If Hindus can scent a conspiracy in spite of the accused's denial, Muslims also can retort and say that there is a conspiracy to defame Muslim leaders. The Najat writes:—After the unanimous condemnation of the deplorable outrage by all responsible leaders it was hoped that the Hindus would not attribute it to any conspiracy, and it is a pity that so soon after the Gauhati Congress many sober-minded Hindu leaders are losing their sense of responsibility and are letting go their tongues in order to reinforce the lamentable shuddhi and sangathan movements. The feelings of ignorant Hindus are being inflamed without any thought of the undesirable consequences. Mr. Malaviya also held the Muslim papers responsible for the murder on the ground that they used to style the Swami as an enemy of Islam. This allegation is not based on facts and it would be so good if Hindu leaders were, in view of the critical situation, to refrain from accusing all sober-minded Muslims of sympathy with the act of a single individual and thus rousing the passions of ignorant Hindus to an uncontrollable pitch. The Medina says:—It may be established in course of the trial that Abdul Rashid was a lunatic. Is it then just that you should hold the entire Muslim community responsible for the murder committed by a lunatic, although not a single Muslim has commended the deed? Is this not dishonest and immoral on your part?

Speech of the Maharaja of Benares.

The speech of the Maharaja of Benares at the state banquet given in honour of the Viceroy has evoked strong criticism. Under the heading "A hopeless reactionary" the Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—We have not in recent years come across a more reactionary pronouncement. The Maharaja, it would appear, has lost all sense of proportion and perspective in his desire to please his guest. . . . We have rarely witnessed a more disgraceful and less excusable display of petty-minded selfishness. The Aj says that every thinking Indian cannot but feel grieved at the speech of the Maharaja of Benares. The sentiments given vent to in the speech do not accord with the position of a ruler of an Indian state inasmuch as it embodies a whole-sale condemnation of India and its inhabitants, past and present, and praises only Englishmen and their administration of India. Lord Irwin must have laughed in his sleeves at this speech which was full of wrong, contradictory and reactionary statements. It is statements like these which cause estrangement between the rulers and the ruled and make sensible politicians regard Indian states as obstacles in the progress of the country. The Abhyudaya writes: Being a lover of truth Lord Irwin himself must have pitied the want of self-respect in the Maharaja. The Surya remarks that the speech of the Maharaja surpasses even the most reactionary utterances of the British die-hards. The Oudh Akhbar says that the antiquated, reactionary and unacceptable views aired by the Maharaja of Benares were altogether novel. It appears that His Highness is not an inhabitant of India and has no knowledge of the aspirations of his fellow-countrymen. His Highness should not have thoughtlessly given expression to views which would not only displease British Indians but would also dishearten his own subjects.

Political propaganda.

The Pratap publishes extracts from a letter sent to it by Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru from Switzerland in the course of which he takes Lala Lajpat Rai to task for his view that the Afghans would capture India if the British left her, and remarks that it is impossible for a backward nation like the Afghans to capture India in the present times, and even assuming that that was possible, it would be better to face that danger rather than to accept the slavery of the British out of fear. Proceeding he says that the Congress must have complete Swaraj as its goal which among other things means the withdrawal of British forces from India and the transfer of the Indian Army to the control of the nation. It should also be emphatically declared that the Indian Army cannot join in any war in which Britain is involved without the sanction of the nation. The British are making preparations for a big war, and when the need for it comes they will again resort to those tactics which they had adopted on the occasion of the last great war. We should from now prepare our people to frustrate those tactics. The Vir Sandesh publishes an article under the heading "At the altar of sacrifice" contributed to it by Devi Prasad Saksena, Sahityalankar, in the course of which he refers to the sacrifices made by Mazzini, Washington, McSwiney, Joan of Arc and Maharana Pratap and Shivaji for the freedom of their countries and remarks:—If you also want freedom you should follow this path and embracing all hardships advance towards the altar of sacrifice. Drinking the wine of love of freedom you should become so inebriated that the world may be frightened at the sight of your terrible form, and in the words of poet Bhadra let not the sword go thirsty for want of the enemy's blood, let us fight like lions in the battlefield and O God! let us again be intoxicated with the wine of patriotism. Let us destroy the very existence of unrighteousness, oppression, injustice and irreligion. Let us once again manifest our terrible form to the world at the sight of which Alexandar could not dare to cross the Ganges and Seleucus had to lay his sceptre at the feet of Chandragupta and to whom the world-conquering British lion was about to surrender only as far back as 1920-21. Discussing Lord Irwin's speech at the Saturday Club, Calcutta, the Desh Bhagat says that His Excellency's words show that the reforms are meant only to delude Indians and to put them off for a time and not to lead them to self-government. His Excellency thus wanted to assure European capitalists in India that they were not at all endangered by the reforms. It is good that Lord Irwin has admitted that the Reforms have not given any powers to Indians, but were only a device to meet the changed times. His Lordship's speech also makes it clear that the Royal Commission will not add to the powers of Indians. We are grateful to His Lordship for his frankness in saying that the attainment of Swaraj lay in the hands of Indians. They should demonstrate their strength to Parliament if they want Swaraj from it. Lord Irwin and Mr. Langford James have opened the eyes of Indians to the fact that the British are ruling India for their own benefit and not to fit Indians for Swaraj. We hope our moderate friends will now be convinced that Swaraj cannot be had as a gift from Parliament, but will have to be obtained by the united strength of Indians. In another article the paper says that English politicians have begun to fear that India may soon pass out of their possession and Mr. Bertrand Russell has recently contributed an article to the Hindu giving expression to that apprehension. Undoubtedly the Indian people are tired of British policy and are always seeking means of deliverance from it. If they get a golden opportunity for their deliverance they may avail themselves of it and then the golden bird of India may pass out for ever from British possession. Even now there is time for British statesmen to hearken to Mr. Russell's advice and to mete out brotherly and equal treatment to India so that there may be no danger of separation left and India may sincerely help England if she becomes involved in some great war.

Muslim affairs.

The Hamdam lends its support to the resolution of the All-India Shia Conference for the appointment of a Muslim judge in the Patna High Court and ridicules the contention of the Milap of Lahore that efficiency and not creed should be the criterion of selection. It inquires why the predominance of European officials in the public services is objected to by Hindus when Government regards them as more efficient. Matters relating to Islamic law and custom can best be decided by a Muslim judge and there is greater need for a Muslim judge in the Patna High Court because Muslims own a considerable portion of zamindari property in Bihar. There is also no dearth of capable Muslim lawyers suited for that office. One Mohd. Yahya writing in Al Adl says that while registration of Muslim marriages is desirable, something should be done to decrease the large amount of Mehr fixed on most occasions. Arrangements should also be made so that qaziz or registrars may be easily available and may not charge high fees. The Hamdam strongly opposes Dr. Chokse's proposal for stopping cow-slaughter in the Bombay Corporation and says that the sad economic plight of the country is due not to dearth of animals but to their abundance and the scarcity of fodder. Any proposal to place legal restrictions on cow-slaughter which would deprive Muslims of a popular article of diet will be greatly resented by them.

The Exchange ratio.

The Haqiqat publishes a communicated article in which the writer regrets that some Bombay capitalists are setting up an agitation against the 18*d*. ratio, though as a matter of fact only 20 or 25 per cent. of Indian farmers export their produce. While the 16*d*. ratio would decrease the income of the general public by 12½ per cent., the price of necessaries of life would rise in the same proportion. Economists who have studied the question from the purely economic point of view are of opinion that the 18*d*. ratio will benefit farmers, labourers and wage earners and also make for stability of trade. It is, therefore, to be hoped that the popular representatives in the Assembly will not be influenced by the baneful agitation of a few capitalists, but will serve their constituents by voting for the Currency Bill. One Hasan Aziz writing in the Rahnuma says that the Bombay mill-owners have shown by their insistence on an export duty on cotton that they are the enemies of the agriculturists and have some hidden motive in opposing the 18*d*. ratio. The members of the Assembly who should have the interests of the agriculturists at heart should not vote with the capitalists in the matter of the exchange ratio.

The United Provinces Council.

The Oudh Akhbar welcomes the unanimous re-election of Rai Sita Ram Bahadur as President of the Council as he enjoys the confidence of all parties. The suggestion of Raja Shambhu Dayal that the proceedings of the Council should be published in Urdu and Hindi so as to give political education to the masses is highly commendable and we hope that the Oudh Akhbar will be selected for the publication of the proceedings in extenso. It is a pity that the liberals who have gained their seats through the help of the taluqdars of Oudh and Agra are trying to injure them and to wreck the present Ministry. There is a great difference between non-acceptance of Ministries and wrecking them. If any party cannot on account of its principles accept Ministries it can be excused, but it is the liberals alone who would unnecessarily wreck an established Ministry even though they denounce the Swarajists as wreckers. We might remind the liberal leaders that the Swarajists did not try to wreck the Ministry even though they were in large numbers in the last Council. We strongly condemn this attitude of the liberals and hope that all other parties will denounce it and refuse to associate with them in this undesirable activity.

The Patuakhali satyagrah.

The Patuakhali satyagrah campaign is receiving increasing attention and sympathy in the Hindu Press. In the course of an impassioned appeal to the residents of Cawnpore to enrol themselves as volunteers to take part in the Patuakhali satyagrah campaign the Vartman writes:—Patuakhali is the battle-field for the protection of the civic rights of Indians. The brave people of Cawnpore wish to die for their honour. The Cawnpore Congress Volunteers Association has decided to send a batch of 60 volunteers. We appeal to the people of Cawnpore to take part in this religious war. The Abhyudaya notes with satisfaction that the country is now paying greater attention to the Patuakhali satyagrah and that enthusiam among people is increasing. It extols the action of the three satyagrahis from the United Provinces who courted imprisonment on January 5, and observes that if volunteers from all parts of India rally in Patuakhali along with the innumerable volunteers of Bengal victory is assured, and this victory would be a victory over the policy of divide and rule and communal politics.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

Referring to the present communal tension and to the possibility of the British Empire undergoing "a change when the destined hour may come" the Himalayan Times writes:—Our eyes turn to the historical Khyber Pass when we think of that eventuality. History is bound to repeat itself. To our mind the task of any Muslim invader from across the Hindu Kush will be rendered doubly easier by the whole-hearted and active co-operation with them of their co-religionists themselves. How many among us have looked ahead to survey the entire range of possibilities with which the blissful indefiniteness of tomorrow is full? The Bharat Dharma says that it is no use trying to bring about Hindu-Muslim unity as all efforts in this direction are doomed to failure. Hindu leaders will, therefore, do well not to attempt this impossible task, but to pay special attention to the organization of Hindus without which all efforts for the progress of the country will prove fruitless.

Re-appointment of Ministers in United Provinces.

The Sewak regrets that there has been no change in the ministry owing to the mistaken notion that the zamindar party is in a majority in the Council. There is no regular party of zamindars and they have not entered the Council with any particular programme. It is a question whether, unlike the past, there will now be joint responsibility among the Ministers. The progressives are in a majority and the Ministers will meet with a stiff opposition handicapped as they will be for want of capable speakers on their side. The present Council will not be a bed of roses for the ministry. We are of opinion that if the Ministers are not there for any particular gain they should either join some party or resign.

The Viceroy at Benares.

The Aj strongly protests against the traffic restrictions during the Viceroy's visit to Benares and says:—Neither could the general public of Benares see the Viceroy nor could the latter see the city. What was done was a mere show and had not the least relation to reality. The Viceregal visit only made the gulf between the rulers and the ruled more clearly evident. The Viceroy was accorded welcome not by the public or its representatives, but by the officials. When all the power is concentrated in the hands of the bureaucracy it is impossible for the people to extend a real welcome to the King's representative or for the latter to redress their grievances. The Bharat Jiwan remarks:—Whatever might have been the rejoicings of the local officials and raises at the Viceregal visit, the general public of Benares was indifferent to it.

Anniversary of Guru Govind Singh.

Protesting against the "novel restrictions" imposed by the district magistrate of Allahabad on the proposed Sikh procession the Leader writes:—Such repeated concession to the truculence of a community cannot make for peace nor enhance respect for authority in the eyes of the general public, while it cannot but cause resentment among those whose exercise of lawful rights is curtailed.

Foreign affairs.

The Chinese situation is the chief topic of press comments. A number of extremist papers are indulging in very strong language in criticizing British policy in China. The Aj writes:—Britain's Dyerism runs its course in China also. The British are undertaking the brutal scheme of enchaining China and other Eastern countries in bonds of permanent subjection and of humiliating Japan by establishing their biggest naval base at Singapore. There is no doubt that China will be utterly ruined unless she extricates herself from British domination before the completion of that scheme. We hope that the unity born of the burning passion for liberty in China will save her from the terrible naval forces of Britain and pave the way for the salvation of the whole of Asia. The Abhyudaya apprehends a world war in China in the near future and says that the peace-loving people of India want peace and complete success to nationalism in China and India and pray for the restoration of the power of Asiatics in Asia. The paper refutes the contention that the British have exercised self-restraint in China and says that British history does not record a single instance of British benevolence not actuated by self-interest. The British have always practised diplomacy and deceit whenever they found a chance of doing so. How then has this Britain turned a Mahatma today? Why is this wolf posing as a sheep today? We assert that the British self-restraint was dictated by diplomacy and not by generosity, by cowardliness and not by chivalry. In a subsequent article the paper agrees with the Manchester Guardian's remark that unless the Indian constitution is changed to the satisfaction of the people, the same scenes may be repeated in India as are being witnessed in China. It adds that the Chinese independence is bringing swaraj nearer to India. The Pratap writes:—What was it that Great Britain left undone to crush China? Unarmed Chinese women and children were fired upon, cities were burnt, property worth millions was destroyed, China was regarded as a hereditary property of the British and the Chinese Government was destroyed at several places; attempts were made to weaken the central Government and the cruel and plundering generals were encouraged to fan the fire of domestic war. In short Great Britain did everything to swallow up China. But what does the soul of China say today? Let foolish rulers see that such is the result of oppression. Will they commit the same mistake in India also which they first committed in Ireland and are now committing in China? The eyes of all Asia are at present focussed on China and all the subject nations of the Asiatic continent are praying to God for her emancipation. The Shankar says:—It is strange that the prudence displayed by the British in China and the lesson learnt by them from Ireland are all forgotten in the case of India. Statesmanship consists in making India free before the Chinese or the Irish history repeats itself in this country. The Hitaishi writes:—If China is able to defend herself against the bullets of imperialistic Britain, if she is not frightened by the Dyerian brutalities, and if she does not fall a victim to the snares of crooked diplomats, she will not only be able to effect her own emancipation but will also bring good days to the whole of Asia. The Desh Bhagat says that the Chinese nationalists are right in their demand for the evacuation of the Chinese towns by the British, and if British capitalists and imperialists persist in their wrong course it would be the duty of the members of the Assembly and the various Councils to advise them that they should not ask for help in men and money from India in the event of war. They should also appeal to their countrymen as their accredited representatives not to help Government with men and money in case of war. This would not be in a spirit of opposition to Government, but would be a really loyal service to it as a true friend is one who does not flatter but gives sound advice in times of difficulty. If even after this open avowal the British try to use Indian troops and money, they should be opposed by all means as a war would be injurious not only to the British Empire but also to Indian peace as well.

The murder of Swami Shraddhanand.

Communal recriminations in connexion with the murder of Swami Shraddhanand are growing in bitterness. The Aligarh Mail complains that the Hindu papers have started a regular campaign of villification against the Mussalmans and have been indulging in the most filthy and disgraceful remarks about Islam, its prophet and heroes in connexion with the murder of Swami Shraddhanand. It is the duty of the Government, adds the paper, to see that everything that endangers public peace and order is stopped at once. The present campaign which is being conducted in the Sangathanist Press seriously threatens public tranquillity and yet the Government takes no steps to prevent it. The Anand remarks that the efforts which are being made by a large number of responsible Muslims to secure the release of Abdul Rashid show that despite the professions of Muslim leaders to the contrary, the majority of the Muslims feel gratified at the assassination of Swami Shraddhanand. Is Hindu-Muslim unity possible when such a mentality exists? The Gyan Shakti remarks :—It is such teachings of the Quran as enjoin the plundering, torturing and slaying of the kafirs which are mostly responsible for the murder of Swami Shraddhanand and such other crimes. Such a religious book does not deserve to exist in any civilised country and the Government should certainly proscribe it. If the whole book is not proscribed, at least the portions inculcating violence should be proscribed. It is the duty of the entire Hindu community to suspend the khaddar propaganda and the agitation for swaraj for a short time and devote itself wholly to the shuddhi movement until seven crores of Muslims have been reclaimed. The Arya Mitra writes :—Some Muslims are extolling Abdul Rashid's action and are honouring him with the high titles of Ghazi and Syed. Some of these are so evil-natured that they cannot even bear to see the condolence meetings held to mourn the loss of the Swami and offer threats to those who organize them. This shows that a fire of hostility is kindling in the hearts of some staunch followers of Islam. The Government ought to put down this hidden fire at once. The paper publishes a poem on the murder of Swami Shraddhanand by one Tika Ram Bhatta in the course of which he says :—O Abdul Rashid ; if followers of this faith are like thee we will surely uproot it. If this is the true peace and true Islam, the murder of Shraddhanand is the message of its destruction. The Pratap writes :—It is true that Muslim leaders condemned the murder, but what efforts are they making to exorcise that fanaticism to which the Swamiji's murder is attributable? If the Muslims do not change their views and if they do not give up their antiquated notions they will be destroyed. In an editorial note under the heading "Arya manners and sense of propriety" the Medina remarks :—The murder of Swami Shraddhanand has made the Samajists break all bounds of propriety, and these inveterate enemies of the country and peace are, on the pretext of expressing sorrow at the Swami's murder, disturbing the peace of the country. A correspondent from Jamshedpur says that at a meeting of the Aryas held there, an Arya Samajist delivered himself of the following :—"These unworthy men killed Swami Dayanand, but we kept silent. They then killed Lekh Ram and we still kept silent. They have now killed Swami Shraddhanand. We taught these dogs and savages. Today they are opposing us. Unite and you will see that these seven crores will also unite with the 22 crores of Hindus." In this short speech the foul-mouthed and lying Samajist has, besides speaking three white lies, used words likely to cause a commotion. The claim of Arya Samajists that they taught the Muslims is a downright falsehood, for it was Islam which taught manners and civilisation to the savage Hindus given to the practice of idolatry and mean conduct. Is it not speeches like this that are responsible for the disturbance of peace in this country? Will our rulers be awakened to the need of setting the affairs of this country right only when the land of India becomes red with blood? The Hamdam writes :—Only recently speaking as president of the Hindu Conference at Dacca Dr. Moonje, the famous danda baz leader of the Central Provinces, tried his best to incite the Hindus by conjuring up an imaginary picture of danger to Hindu religion. Turning to shuddhi and sangathan he said that Swamiji had worked for swaraj in "Hindu India." This phrase "Hindu India" has not been coined by Dr. Moonje. As a matter of fact a respectable body of Hindus is running after this chimera and believes that India belongs to Hindus alone and Muslims and others have no claim over it. Dr. Moonje also has betrayed his mentality by using the phrase "Hindu India." He has got into the habit of delivering such speeches and has been further encouraged in his course by the failure of the Bengal and the Punjab Governments to take action against him. Anyway the existence of such leaders is an evil augury for India and until they mend their ways the atmosphere in the country cannot be improved. The Haqiqat complains that the Hindu Press has been altogether silent regarding the murder of Mufti Mahbub Ali which took place in the riot that followed the assassination of Swami Shraddhanand. This silence of the Hindu Press and Hindu leaders cannot be justified by any canon of humanity and tolerance. The Najat regrets that the masses misled by irresponsible leaders are widening the gulf between the two communities ignorant of the fact that they cannot thus serve any useful purpose but only strengthen the fetters of their serfdom. To take only one of Mr. Malaviya's speeches out of many, he has recently said at Gorakhpur that Hindus should establish akharas, listen to the Mahabharat and Ramayana and develop Hindi. This means that Hindus should learn to be fighters and should subdue the Muslims. Mr. Malaviya's speeches are full of sentiments which make for discord and antagonism to Muslims. The result is that both communities are at war with each other, though as compared with the Hindus, the Muslims are showing tolerance and are always striving for unity. Baffled in their peace-making efforts the Muslims also are losing heart and Hindus should utilize this moment for deliberation and strive for unity. They should not take the act of Abdul Rashid to be the act of the community and should utilize Swamiji's death to promote Hindu-Muslim union which he had most at heart.

Council politics.

The Anand remarks that the defeat of the Swarajist candidates in the election of the Council president in the Bengal and Bihar Legislative Councils has conclusively proved that the Swarajists do not form a majority even in Bengal and Bihar in spite of the boastings of Messrs. Nehru and Iyengar to the contrary. It is time, therefore, that the Swarajists should cease to pose as the true representatives of the nation. The Aj bitterly condemns the passage of the motion regarding the ministers' salaries in the Bengal Council and remarks :—Bengal too has bowed down to the bureaucracy. The self-respect of Bengal has been dragged to the dust and the obduracy of the bureaucracy has come out triumphant ultimately. One has to hang down one's head in shame and grief over such a fall of proud Bengal. The disciples of the late Mr. Tilak in Bombay, Berar and the Central Provinces hold it to be statesmanship to kneel down before the bureaucracy unconditionally and the proud Bengalis, quite oblivious of the self-sacrifice of the late Mr. C. R. Das, are following the same anti-national policy. This shows that India's bad days are not yet over. In these circumstances it is impossible for the national agitation to be fruitful and lasting unless villages are made the centre of nationalist activities this time.

Ministers in United Provinces.

Commenting on the report that efforts are being made in some quarters for the overthrow of the present ministry in the United Provinces, the Aj urges Congress members of the Council to remain neutral in case a vote of non-confidence in the ministers is moved so that the liberals may be defeated and says :—We wish that the bureaucracy may get only incapable ministers who may not be able to do more lasting injury to the country. It should be the chief aim of the Congress members to frustrate the hopes of those who strengthen the hands of the bureaucracy in the name of communal interests and want to become ministers themselves. The Haqiqat accuses Mr. Chintamani of intriguing against the present ministry in the United Provinces to further his own ambitions. It is confident that Muslim members will not be influenced by him and the tenure of the Hon'ble Nawab Muhammad Yusuf will be secure. It however fears that Mr. Chintamani might be able to wean a considerable number of Hindu members by throwing out political baits to the Swarajists and playing upon the personal prejudices and selfishness of certain zamindar members, but hopes that the two Hindu ministers will also put up a stiff fight.

Political propaganda.

Referring to Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru's recent contribution to the Pratap, the Hamdam attributes the decline of non-cooperation to the Bardoli retreat and the birth of the shuddhi and sangathan movements, and urges that nothing can be gained by merely believing in non-cooperation in theory when it cannot be translated into practice owing to communal differences. The need of the moment therefore is to compose Hindu-Muslim differences and then non-cooperation can be revived and the nation as a whole can be prepared for passive resistance to the bureaucratic administration. The Haqiqat publishes a letter from Mr. Muzzaffar Hasan, Secretary, Congress Committee, Kabul, in reply to Lala Lajpat Rai's charges in which the writer says that the committee has the complete independence of India as its ideal and wants to see a federal republican government established there. It consists of Hindus, Sikhs and Muslims and never wants to establish Afghan rule in India. The Najat complains that the average income per head of Indians has been decreasing during the last 150 years of British rule and attributes this to the deliberate indifference of the Government towards forces which are retarding progress. Proceeding it says:—The Indian peasant who forms the backbone of the Indian population is a picture of living death. The writings of Englishmen themselves go to show how prosperous India was in the past and how far England had profited from her. They have also exposed the fact that in return for these benefits the English have introduced the policy of divide and rule. Several Viceroys and Governors and other officials and English publicists have supported this policy and that of keeping Indians ignorant. Indians should realize that subjection is at the root of all their ills.

The Muslim League.

In the course of a leading article on the presidential address of the Muslim League the Medina writes:—The president of the League seems fully aware that there is a general feeling among the Hindus that India belongs to Hindus only and they alone are entitled to its blessings. It is this feeling which is responsible for the opposition of almost all Hindu leaders to separate representation of minorities and the maintenance of communal rights. Muslims should henceforth give up all tall talk of peace with Hindus and earnestly endeavour to improve their own condition. If this is done the time will soon come when their Hindu friends will be found willing to accept any pact that may be considered necessary. The president has truly voiced the feelings of Muslims on the subject of communal representation. If the coming Royal Commission on the Reforms does not provide for the protection of Muslim rights, then Muslims will not only refuse to accept the Reforms, but will also be obliged for the sake of self-preservation to establish direct relations with foreign powers.

The Back Bay Committee Report.

The Leader commends the Back Bay Committee Report and writes:—The restrained and dignified language in which they have drawn up their indictment may appear to be too mild to those who feel strongly on the subject, but the lucidity with which they have traced the history of the inception of the scheme, the care with which they have apportioned blame for the disastrous failure, and the effectiveness with which they have marshalled the facts lend weight and authority to the document. If such grave mismanagement and loss had occurred in a department under the control and direction of Indians, what political capital would not have been made as to the efficiency and capacity of Indians. But we dare say that if the development department had been placed in charge of a minister things would not have been so discreditably managed. Bureaucratic "efficiency," which we are asked to admire so much, has led to disastrous financial results and the country wants to be saved from such costly and ruinous "efficiency." The Indian Daily Telegraph charaterises the report as a white-washing document and says that it was a miserable failure. The net result of the inquiry, says the paper, is that further public money was uselessly spent on a committee which has brought out nothing by its investigations which was not already known. The public will not be satisfied with the publication of a report which fails to give satisfaction on essential points.

Indian States.

The Haq condemns the campaign of calumny being conducted by certain Hindu papers against the Nizam and says that it is inspired by sinister motives. The initiative was taken by St. Nihal Singh, but the flame was really fanned by those selfish persons who found their illicit sources of income drying up under the enlightened policy of the Nizam. It is now the duty of the responsible officials of the Nizam's Government to establish a publicity bureau which would not only contradict the lies that are being assiduously disseminated against the State, but would also serve as a channel through which the Government of India could be kept acquainted with the true facts. The Hamdam and the Haqiqat also protest against the attitude of the Government and the Hindus towards the Nizam.

Anniversary of Guru Govind Singh.

The Abhyudaya strongly protests against the restrictions imposed on the Sikh procession at Allahabad as a result of which it had to be given up and remarks :—The only courses open to a self-respecting community which has been wronged are either to pocket such insults and observe mourning instead of rejoicing on its festive occasions if it is weak or to practise satyagrah if it is strong and organized. If the Government's attitude in this matter does not change there is no doubt that there will be repetitions of the Patuakhali spectacle everywhere. The Surya and the Anand also protest against the restriction.

Currency Bill.

The Indian Daily Telegraph writes :—The mulish obstinacy of the Government in refusing to budge from a position which they have taken up receives further illustration in the three important Bills embodying the recommendations of the Currency Commission. We are not going to launch forth into a discussion of the arguments for and against the 18*d.* ratio . . . Our point is rather to emphasize the responsibility and irresponsiveness of a Government which has embarked upon a ircurrency policy without paying the least attention to the organized and informed opposition of the sons of the soil.

Gurkhas in British India.

In the course of the second instalment of an article on the position of Gurkhas in British India the Himalayan Times writes :—"We have received information from a reliable source that directions have been issued by the Political and Foreign department of the Indian Government that Nepalese subjects should not be employed in any capacity in the civil administration of this country . . . To retain the Gurkhas in the army or the police and to declare them ineligible for service in other departments is indeed a very inexplicable and indefensible line of policy which Indians as well as Gurkhas must protest against with equal force." The paper suspects that this order was inspired from Nepal and writes :—Will the British and the Nepal Governments be pleased to throw sufficient light on the subject with a view to disarm public suspicion.

Foreign affairs.

The Chinese situation continues to absorb the attention of the Press. A number of papers vehemently protest against the despatch of Indian troops for the "suppression of a nation struggling for freedom from the tyranny of Western capitalists and imperialists." The Leader writes:—The working committee of the Congress has voiced Indian opinion in calling upon the Government in India not to allow Indian troops or resources to be used against China, but our Government will have to carry out the orders of its masters who are not the Indian people. Indian troops have been before this employed for imperial purposes abroad. Government should, however, know that the employment of Indian troops against the Chinese nationalists will be strongly disapproved in this country. Referring to the disallowance of the adjournment motion in the Legislative Assembly regarding the despatch of Indian troops to China the paper says:—In spite of the disallowance it is abundantly clear that Indian opinion is strongly opposed to the employment of Indian troops against the Chinese nationalists who are fighting for freedom and justice and are in revolt against the policy of foreign exploitation. But the attitude of the people of this country is not reflected in the action of the Government. The Indian Daily Telegraph writes:—The efforts of China to shake off the foreign yoke have the fullest and the most enthusiastic support of Indians, but such is our helplessness that while we are on the side of China, Indian soldiers must fight against the Chinese. This humiliation is unbearable. We never felt before that we were a nation of slaves until now when we are asked to war with a people striving to come to their own. The Pratap interprets the despatch of British forces as a preparation for war against China and remarks that Britain is expert in the art of discrediting her enemy in war by carrying on a mendacious propaganda against him. There is no guarantee, therefore, that China will not be subjected to the same misrepresentation as was organized against Germany during the great war. The barbarity of the British traders and their maltreatment of the Chinese is too well-known and Sir Douglas Haig cannot throw dust into the eyes of the world by claiming the legitimacy of the British trade operations in China. The Aj writes:—Troops are being despatched from India too to deprive China of her remaining independence by suppressing her nationalism. Every patriotic Indian will be grieved to hear that the troops maintained at his cost are being employed to deprive an Asiatic country of its independence. This terrible injustice should be opposed in the Legislative Assembly and throughout the country. We do not like that a single pice or single drop of blood of India should be utilized in destroying China. In a subsequent article under the heading "British justice in China" the paper refers to British preparations against China and to the statements of members of the British Cabinet that these preparations were intended for the safety of British nationals in China and for the preservation of world peace and says:—We all know full well the hollowness of these statements. Who does not know what the preservation of law and order signifies? We know very well the British political meanings of the words justice, self-defence, law and order and the like. Today the same justice is being done to China as was done to India through the lawless laws. The move behind the British justice as embodied in the British memorandum of December 18 is to benefit Britain by squandering the money of China and by setting her own generals against one another. The Bharat Jiwan remarks:—As long as China continued to be an opium-eater and as long as she remained weak and servile there was no limit to the empty threats administered to her, and her provinces were interfered with but when she summoned courage and was determined to kill and be killed the mentality of the British changed. Indians can derive a lesson from this new awakening in China which has brought about a change in the treatment of the British towards her as the situation in both the countries is similar. The past and present conditions of China teach us that India cannot become free until she becomes strong. The Shakti publishes in its editorial columns a signed article by one Manohar Pant in the course of which he remarks that Indians should rejoice that China is trying heart and soul to extricate herself from the clutches of the foreigners. The Najat justifies the opposition of the Chinese nationalists to foreign aggression and says that the Government which was most forward in its blood-thirstiness and hard-heartedness is now most in danger. British prestige is at a very low ebb now in China and their soldiers are being driven like sheep towards the sea from Hankow. This punishment of British pride is not confined to Hankow alone but has extended to other British colonies. But in spite of these reverses the British are pursuing their diplomatic propaganda of preserving a calm exterior by asserting that they do not avenge themselves on the Chinese and expect other powers to help them in upholding civilization. This is done to satisfy subject races and to sacrifice them in this war. But the real fact is that the British are as nervous as they were when they apprehended air raids on London during the last war. This war is fraught with great dangers. There is no dearth of enemies of Britain in Central Asia and the neighbouring countries of China are fully prepared to give a reply to British designs against China. British prestige in Asia depends on peace in China and if this Eastern powder magazine is ignited the backbone of Britain will be prematurely broken. In another article the paper says :— If the assertion that the Bolsheviks are behind the Chinese is true the Chinese movement will scorch Western capitalism in its rapid sweep and India, Japan, Russia, Afghanistan, Persia, Turkey and Turkestan will not escape its influence. A time will surely come when except India almost all the Asiatic countries will be arrayed against Western capitalism and imperialism and then just as the great war overturned Governments in Europe, these Western votaries of avarice will meet a similar fate in Asia. Mutual jealousies will hardly permit the powers to unite against Asia and Britain alone will scarcely be able to combat this world-wide Asiatic combination and the issue will go against her. Anyway this will lead to a decisive struggle between the East and the West which will uproot the foundations of materialistic governments. The Sada-i-Muslim says that for the last 75 years not only Britain but other powers also have been busy pecking at the flesh of China to satiate their greed and avarice. As, however, Britain has taken the leading part, she has become the special target of resentment and is being deprived of all the privileges she has gained owing to her superior strength and the weakness of the Chinese. Indians should particularly take lesson from the Chinese boycott of British goods. If Indians want freedom they also should free themselves from dependence on foreign manufactures before thinking of the evacuation of British troops. Of course the boycott should not be limited to British goods, but should extend to all foreign wares. This will not only secure freedom to India from the subjection of foreign governments but also provide employment for the poor and unemployed. The Chinese are bound to regain their freedom this time. Will Indians also now give serious thought to freeing themselves from subjection? The Medina says :—After all the evil nature of Britain has found an excuse for sending naval forces to China. Those who are acquainted with the affairs of the East will regard this aggressive policy of Britain as most impolitic. Bolshevism has for long been impatient for a sanguinary conflict with Britain. If the British Navy takes any action in China its effect will be far-reaching.

The murder of Swami Shraddhanand.

One Shyam Sundar Lal writing in the Arya Mitra refutes the Muslim contention that the murder of Swami Shraddhanand can only be the act of a lunatic and that Islam never inculcates such murders and says :—The fact is that whatever Islam may be in theory, in practice, it surely maintains some machines which from time to time produce some such lunatics. Islam literally means peace, but the world's history tells us that a peace which is only another name for religious fanaticism and superstition has never allowed the world to live in peace and has always encouraged violence. One Babu Parmeshwari Sahai writing in the same paper quotes three verses from the Quran to show that Islam inculcates the assassination of heretics and non-believers and says that it is due to the influence of such teachings that the assassin Abdul Rashid made Swami Shraddhanand the target of his pistol—The Muslim Press continues to complain that Hindu publicists are fanning the flames of discord by attributing the Swami's murder to a Muslim conspiracy and by ill-considered attacks on the community. Failure to express regret for Mufti Mahbub Ali's death is being widely quoted as an evidence of the insincerity of Hindus. Al Bashir complains that the Hindus have been embittering inter-communal relations by attributing the murder of Swami Shraddhanand to a conspiracy without any shred of evidence in support of their theory. Besides during processions and meetings in memory of the Swami the Hindus have constantly used language exciting hatred against Muslims. They have also missed an opportunity for giving evidence of humanitarianism, love of peace and absence of bias by failing to condemn the murder of an innocent person like Mufti Mahbub Ali. Hindu leaders even of the status of Mahatma Gandhi are collecting subscriptions for the shuddhi and sangathan movements even though they have acknowledged them to be prejudicial to national unity. In these circumstances it is the duty of the Muslims to ponder over their future attitude. The Najat says that the murder of Mufti Mahbub Ali was an act of vengeance and the failure of Hindu leaders and journals to express regret at his death shows that these protagonists of unity attach much more value to a Hindu than to a Muslim life. This means that the murder of Mufti Mahbub Ali is not regarded as of any importance by the Hindus. Why then are appeals made in the name of humanity and civilization to Muslims to deplore the death of Swamiji? Will this attitude of the Hindu leaders not serve as a potent warning to the Muslim masses? We find that this biased attitude is influencing the Muslims as a community and Hindu-Muslim relations are being imperilled. The Hamdam complains that in a recent speech at Lahore Swami Satya Deo urged Hindu youths to die fighting and to uproot Urdu from the Punjab and to replace it by Hindi. It appears, says the paper, that in appealing to youths to die fighting Swamiji is trying to foment a great civil war in the country and wants to wreak vengeance on the entire Muslim community for the act of a single individual by extirpating Urdu. In anticipating an onslaught on India during the next decade to work up Hindu sentiment, Swamiji has diplomatically clothed his aggressive propaganda in a defensive garb. The Medina writes:—The assassination of Swami Shraddhanand cannot cause so much mischief and disturbance as the provoking speeches and writings of Hindus on this subject. The murder was the act of an individual lunatic, but the speeches and writings are inspired by the characteristic mentality and organized efforts of an entire community.

The Viceroy's speech.

The Leader writes:—There was nothing unusual or striking in the inaugural address of His Excellency the Viceroy to the third Assembly. If there were people who expected any important announcement they must have been disappointed. His advice to Indian politicians was only a paraphrase of what Lord Birkenhead has been saying and what Lord Reading used to say . . . Lord Irwin argued as if the violent manifestations of revolutionary tendencies had nothing to do with the constitutional issue. But they are intimately connected with it. His defence of the detention without trial of a large number of political suspects was not that of a statesman but of a typical bureaucrat and showed lack of sympathy and imagination. The Indian Daily Telegraph strongly criticizes the speech in an article headed "Lord Irwin insults India." It says:—We must assure His Excellency that India does not share an Englishman's good opinion of British character....We are not prepared to beg as alms what we demand as our lawful claim . . . We have sufficient experience of British character to know that they never give anything gracefully: things have to be wrung from them. When the wave of non-cooperation darkened the sky, Lord Irwin's predecessor went down on his knees before Gandhi. He found us strong. Lord Irwin today spurns us for he finds us disunited and wavering. We are respected only when we can give trouble. We are ignored and humiliated when we are conciliatory. The Vartman says:—The speech reveals the mentality of the bureaucracy which is matchless in its crooked policy and cleverness. The Viceroy has now appeared in his true colours. He holds out the threat that unless the people are subservient to Government they will not get anything. Such minatory speeches can only be checked by the force which manifested itself during 1921.

Political propaganda.

The Saraswati publishes a poem under the heading "Message" by one Devi Prasad Gupta Kusumakar in which the following lines among others occur:—India having starved day and night has become a wreath of bones. In addition selfish men have also sucked up (her) blood. They have put fetters on her in her own home. They have nailed her mouth so that she may not make the least protest. Commenting on the opening of the new council chamber at Delhi by the Viceroy the Aj says that more than fifteen crores of rupees have already been spent on New Delhi and God only knows how many more crores it will swallow up in future. The policy of the Government of India to squander poor India's money on buildings is being fearfully followed by provincial governments too. Not only new capitals but even departmental buildings are sucking the very life-blood of the poor people. Surely these palatial buildings do not reflect the true condition of the country which is suffering from chronic starvation, appalling infantile mortality and ever-growing unemployment. There is no doubt that these buildings only go to proclaim the stability of the irresponsible foreign Government. The Oudh Akhbar says that money is being lavishly spent on the ponder, new capital as if India was a very rich country. Does Government even inquires the paper, whether crores of the inhabitants of the country for the temporary and permanent residences of whose councillors and officials such palatial buildings are being erected, do not get even a full meal a day. Lakhs of Indians are without employment and unable to support their families but still stupendous sums are to be spent on mere amenities and that only for the winter season as resort to the hills would be inevitable during the summer. However, there is one thing that the British period will leave on Delhi as magnificient a mark as the Hindu and Mughal periods did. The Desh Bhagat characterizes Mr. Saklatwala's message of communism at Bombay as a heart-gladdening message of freedom at the place where Indian slavery commenced and goes on to say :—Though Mr. Saklatwala has laid down no regular programme, his message that "communism alone can put an end to India's slavery" is by itself calculated to produce a magical effect on the minds of Indians, for it was communism that liberated the oppressed labourers and cultivators from the clutches of the Tsar of Russia. It was communism that abolished the Khilafat in Turkey and put an end to autocracy. It is the worship of this communism that has enabled China to have a trial of strength with the British lion. It is this very communism which is the hope and stay of the labourers of England as well as other countries. The very name communism makes the British lion tremble like a wet cat. Mr. Saklatwala is, therefore, quite right in saying that the day is not far distant when communism will enable India also to shake off her yoke of slavery, and obtain that freedom for the sake of which many dear sons of mother India have already been hanged on the gallows and many others are being subjected to extreme hardships in the Andamans and in the Indian jails, for the battle of communism soon compels the capitalist to surrender all his power and authority to cultivators and labourers and run away quietly like a thief. The paper also publishes a contributed article elucidating and commending communistic principles.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Punch holds the Lucknow and the Bengal pacts responsible for all the communal riots which have taken place in this country and for the Muslim demand regarding the stoppage of music before mosques and complains that new schemes are framed every day to efface the Hindus, so much so that proselytization has now been entrusted to prostitutes. It remarks that Hindu-Muslim unity is impossible until the Lucknow and Bengal pacts are sacrificed at the altar of the Congress. The Hamdam hopes that after the authoritative denial by the Afghan Foreign Minister at Bombay of his country having any designs upon India, Hindus will remove all fears of Afghanistan's aggression from their hearts. It is a pity that Hindus are so nervous by temperament that they are affected by imaginary perils and the Indian Daily Telegraph in ignorance of the fact that the Afghans can declare jehad on India only if she endangers her liberty, still apprehends an invasion from that quarter. Discussing Dr. Moonje's address as president of the District Hindu Conference, Dacca, Al Khalil remarks that his observation that Hindus should not think of Swaraj as their religion was in danger and that they would get Swaraj through Suddhi and Sangathan is pregnant with meaning. It means that Swaraj for him is Hindu raj and cannot be gained without ridding the country of Muslims and Muslims, should beware of this dangerous attitude of the Hindus.

The Legislative Assembly.

The Leader writes :—The Government suffered a well-deserved defeat on the adjournment motion of Pandit Motilal Nehru censuring the Government for preventing Mr. C. S. Mitra from attending the Assembly . . . The Assembly has done well in asserting in an emphatic manner the privileges of the members of the House and exposing the weakness of the position of Government in the matter. Its policy with regard to the detenus deserves to be revised. It has been repeatedly condemned by popular opinion of almost all shades and has been a fruitful source of irritation. The Indian Daily Telegraph also criticizes the "callous" attitude of the Government. The Aj is gratified that all the non-official members by unanimously supporting Pandit Motilal Nehru's motion have once more exposed the hollowness of "India's Parliament." Entry into councils has only this use and it is to be hoped that all elected members will continue to discharge this duty unanimously. The Haqiqat holds that as no Muslim has as yet become Deputy President of the Assembly the office ought now to go to a Muslim, but fears that owing to the predominance of sangathan the election will be contested on communal lines. Emphasizing the need for the formation of a Muslim party in the Legislative Assembly the Aligarh Mail writes:—We expect the Muslim M. L. Cs. will before long feel the degradation of walking into the lobbies of the Assembly like weaklings with the members of this party or that party and will not fight shy of forming their own separate party so that from a smaller unity resulting from their hearty cooperation among themselves may spring up the larger unity which is urgently required in the Assembly in the best interests of the nation.

Council politics.

The Pratap remarks:—Those who regard the defeat of the Congress as the victory of liberal principles are elated at the revival of dyarchy in Bengal and the Central Provinces. Does statesmanship consist in rejoicing over what is a matter for grief? Shall we call that mentality rational or slavish which actuates the Indian legislators to compete in the race for cooperation although they are insulted at every turn? That party which wants to defeat the Congress warriors by allying itself with the bureaucracy should not forget that the bureaucracy is the friend of none. The Hamdam supports Sir Abdul Rahim's views about the holding of a Round Table Conference to conclude a Hindu-Muslim pact before the formation of a combined Ministry in Bengal and says that a strong and united ministerial party can be organized in the Bengal Council only if Hindus are prepared to concede the just claims of Muslims for adequate and separate representation on all bodies.

Muslim affairs.

Referring to the rumour that Sir Atul Chatterji would be appointed Governor of Assam the Mashriq wonders why Muslim claims are being overlooked. It was hoped that Sir Ali Imam would be the first Indian Governor as in learning, ability and work in the Government of India he was superior to Lord Sinha. Besides him there are also Sir Abdul Rahim, Sir Muhammad Shafi, Sir Ibrahim Rahmatullah and others. The Hamdam urges that in view of the fact that Muslims form the majority in the Punjab and intricate questions of Islamic law come up before the Lahore High Court some one from among Agha Muhammad Haider, Sheikh Abdul Qadir and Dr. Sir Muhammad Iqbal should have been appointed a Judge in the recent vacancy there.

Communal representation.

In the course of two leading articles on the question of separate representation the Medina strongly deprecates the introduction of Western civilization and institutions in this country and says:—If progress and civilization are to be introduced on these lines in this country our successors will become an instrument of that very tyranny and militarism which has sucked our blood. The Legislatures have, however, come to stay and separate representation has become inevitable for the following reasons:—(1) The presence of a foreign Government, whose very existence depends upon communal tension and absence of united nationalism. (2) The instinct of self-preservation among minority communities. The system of separate representation is based on that political deceit which seeks to rob in the guise of a friend. We, however, think that the solution of India's present difficulties lies not in the abolition of separate representation, but in placing it on a sound basis. The immediate need is to prescribe the just rights and responsibilities of every community.

The Patuakhali satyagrah.

The Aj publishes an appeal by Swami Nirjananand exhorting youths and sanyasis to proceed to Patuakhali to participate in the satyagrah there. He says:—We are already fettered with the chains of political subjection. Encroachments are now being repeatedly made on our religious liberty too. We are being compelled by the authorities to take out licenses for our religious and social processions on the pretext that they are likely to bring us into conflict with the Muslims. We should not forget that religious organization is the only means for a subject nation to secure its regeneration. All of us, especially sadhus and sanyasis, should take part in the Patuakhali satyagrah to vindicate our religious liberty. A number of other Hindi papers also publish impassioned appeals and poems exhorting Hindu youths to participate in the Patuakhali satyagrah campaign.

The Maharaja of Nabha.

The Indian Daily Telegraph, which has of late been giving special prominence to the case of the Maharaja of Nabha, strongly criticizes the order of His Excellency the Governor of the United Provinces on the election petition of the Maharaja and remarks that "with calculated carelessness the Governor of these provinces brushes aside a representation based on clearly defined and unambiguous election rules."

The Chinese situation continues to engage the closest attention of the Press.

Foreign affairs.

Referring to the proposed British concessions to China the Leader says:—We have no doubt that the statesmanlike policy which the British Government have decided to pursue will, if firmly adhered to, raise British prestige in the East, will change a sullen and angry China into a grateful one and will be found to be a paying policy. As a natural consequence Soviet diplomacy and intrigue will receive a serious set-back. The Aj writes:—The British Government is acting on the proverb, "Rosary in hand, scissors in the armpit." It is making professions of generosity but is simultaneously engaged in making preparations for war on the pretext of self-defence. When forty crores of the Chinese are inspired by nationalistic ideas it will not be possible for Britain, even with the help of India, to deprive them of their national rights in their own country. On the contrary Indian soldiers will return to India with a new message of nationalism. Irresponsible rulers may well misuse Indian men and money to extend their empire, but this will ultimately result in good both to India and China. In another issue the paper says that India can never be a party to the subjugation of China, specially as she cannot then hope for her own salvation for centuries. Self-interest therefore demands that we should check the efforts made to utilize Indian men and money in this sinful task. The Pratap writes:—As if the sins committed against Egypt and Turkey are not enough Indian troops will now proceed to China to crush the nationalism of the Chinese. How can diplomacy rest content until mutual bitterness has been engendered by making one Asiatic country fight against another? If we had the power we would never have sent the Indian troops to China. Protesting against the despatch of Indian troops to China the Sainik says:—We have a sacred religious tie with the Chinese. They have not done any harm to India, they only want to protect their lives and property from white wolves and robbers. We cannot, therefore, characterize as anything but mean the action of our Government in despatching Indian troops to China. What is it if not mean to make us fight with our neighbours and to get us killed? The Abhyudaya writes:—Indians should make it clear that they cannot have any sympathy with a war the object of which is to subjugate another nation and that although they cannot avert this unrighteous war, they do not want to commit sin by taking part in it. China only wants to protect her home from the loot of foreign traders. The interests not only of Indians but of all the Asiatic peoples can be served only when China becomes independent and strong. What justice is this that the army maintained at our cost should be sent against our own brethren and we should not be allowed even to express our views in this connexion? Can the Viceroy in these circumstances expect anything from Indians whom he has ignored in this way? Will he or his Government be able to get any help from us? The Anand disapproves of the opposition against the despatch of Indian troops to China and remarks that in order to prove that they are the well-wishers of the British Empire, Indians should help the British in the event of a war with China. As long as India is a part of the British Empire it will be improper for her to act against the interests of the Empire. There are only two courses open to Indians. Either they should sever their connexion with the British Empire or they should obey the decision of the British Government. The Medina says: The Indian army is meant for the benefit of India and not to satisfy the growing ambitions of militarism. We fail to understand why the blood of Indians is considered to be so cheap that it must be shed for the sake of every true or false claim of Britain. We hope the whole country will protest against this and will save the sons of India from being sacrificed in the interests of militarism.

The Haqiqat says that Mr. Srinivas Iyenger was quite justified in opposing the despatch of Indian troops to China as Indians have no cause of grievance against their Chinese neighbours. Now that the Indian national protest has been voiced the Chinese will have no cause for complaint that Indians as a people were opposed to them in their struggle for freedom. The Desh Bhagat writes:—British officials are attaching little value to the united protest of the Indian nationalist press against the despatch of Indian troops to China and have by gagging the Assembly even grossly insulted the Indian nation. The Indian nationalist press should reply to this by refusing to publish news received from British agencies as they are meant to further British interests and should not help in securing the sympathy of the Indian masses for the British nation. The Indian press is just now strong and can deal a fatal blow to the British nation. It should also publish news of Chinese successes so that Indian youths who are fighting for their country's freedom may be encouraged. The Congress also should be urged to organize an agitation regarding China on the same scale as that organized against the Rowlatt Act so that the British nation may have the greatest difficulty in enlisting soldiers and securing other military aid in India. It is to be hoped that the press will give serious thought to these suggestions and will at least taboo all news received from Reuter's Agency. In reproducing from the Egyptian paper Al Ahram the draft of a treaty said to have been concluded recently between Ibn Sa'ud and Britain the Medina wonders how the Sultan could be guilty of contracting such an unholy treaty as would make the whole of Arabia a slave to Britain. We do not know, adds the paper, how the sense of self-respect of the Nejdian patriots can acquiesce in such a humiliating treaty.

The Viceroy's speech.

The Aligarh Mail writes:—The Viceroy's inaugural address to the Legislative Assembly was marked with a sympathy and sincerity which constitute the outstanding characteristic of His Excellency's utterances . . . There is no denying the fact that Lord Irwin is one of the galaxy of the representatives of the King-Emperor who have associated themselves with the aspirations of our people. His task should not be made difficult by perversity of the obstructionist brand. The Aj is disappointed at the Viceroy's address and says that it does not contain even a good review of the existing situation in the country. Proceeding it writes:—The Viceroy's remarks on the political situation only provoke laughter, as they contain nothing original but only repeat in nice language commonplaces known to every ordinary student of history and the readers of newspapers. His Excellency laid great emphasis on our attaining Swaraj gradually by pleasing the Parliament. But this is impossible, as many interests intervene between it and India. This wall cannot be demolished by co-operation. It is through non-cooperation that the groups with vested interests can be made to advise Parliament to do justice to India. The Sainik writes:—The speech ought to dispel most of the groundless hopes of our countrymen . . . We wish to proclaim by beat of drum that India does not at all believe that British Parliament sincerely wants to establish Swaraj in India. Our experience tells us that Parliament will never be prepared to appreciate our point of view unless it is coerced. We are, therefore, obliged to create a spirit of opposition among our brethren so as to coerce Parliament to understand our position. The Medina says:—The Viceroy has most politely brandished the mailed fist before the rising aspirations of Indian patriots and has bluntly warned them that if they do not abandon their obstructive policy the motherly Government will snatch away even that toy from the hand of the refractory child which has been presented to it in the shape of reforms. The speech will accentuate the tension between the Government and the people. It has once more brought home to Indians that it would be extremely foolish on their part to depend upon the favours of the Government. The Najat says that the Viceroy's address has proved that he also is going the way of previous Viceroys and is casting off the pious promises with which he had heralded his advent. His defiance of public opinion regarding the despatch of Indian troops has shown that the Reforms are a sham and that Anglo-Indian bureaucrats are as unbridled as ever. This autocratic attitude of Government has produced a wave of pro-Chinese feeling in India and it had better revise it. The Desh Bhagat recounts how Lord Curzon's autocratic policy led to the introduction of terrorist methods into Indian political life and how Indian public opinion became triumphant in the end and his partition of Bengal had to be rescinded. The spirit of freedom infused by Lord Curzon still persists and the cult of the pistol and bomb continues to thrive in spite of the Herculean efforts of the authorities. Lord Irwin to-day has adopted a similarly autocratic and provocative attitude in his inaugural address to the Assembly. His Lordship's minatory and proud words about the Reforms are a direct insult to young India and are not at all wise in view of the impending trouble with China. We warn Lord Irwin and the British press that these words will add fuel to the fire of patriotism that is burning in the hearts of lovers of Indian freedom . . . . As Indian nationalists, however, we welcome his speech like that of Lord Curzon as the harbinger of the birth of a new life in the nation. We wonder how a saint and statesman like Lord Irwin could think of making such a speech. India knows full well that the British people will not grant Swaraj in response to supplications but that it will be conceded only when they realize that British interests are as much in danger in India as they are in China. The time is coming when British statesmen will not have even to take the trouble of granting Swaraj to India for she will obtain Swaraj through the strength of her own arms. It is a pity that British statesmen have wrongly gauged Indian strength otherwise Lord Irwin could not have given expression to such minatory sentiments on such an occasion. We believe that Lord Irwin's speech at a time when the Chinese are striving to free their country from British domination will remind Indians of their important duty and will leave as prominent a landmark on Indian history as the deliverance of Lord Curzon.

The Patuakhali satyagraha.

A number of Hindu papers are publishing impassioned articles and poems exhorting young men to take part in the Patuakhali satyagraha campaign. The Vartman, which is taking the lead in the matter, publishes a poem by Shiva Pyare Lal Avasthi in which the following lines, among others, occur :—The time has come for filling up the bowl of Kali and for offering sacrifice. Come, come, brave men, march forward ; the Goddess of War calls you ; she has put on a garland of human heads and is sounding the war trumpet. The Abhyudaya says :—The Bengal Government's communique regarding the Patuakhali satyagraha shows that the Government considers the Hindu demand as inspired by religious fanaticism. All that we have to say in this connexion is this that as soon as the Hindus become organized and strong the Government will think the allowing of music before mosques advantageous to itself. The Mauji remarks :—If the Hindus have heard the trumpet call that they should live like men or prefer death, if their stupor has ended, if they want to continue to exist in the world and if they want to see their descendants thrive they should proceed straight to Patuakhali. Of what use will be the existence of that nation in this world which cannot spare for the protection of its religion even twenty-two thousand persons out of a total population of twenty-two crores for a few months ?

Muslim affairs.

The propaganda against Shab-i-barat fire works has started in the Muslim press. The Hamdam publishes an appeal to Muslims by M. Shaukat Ali, general secretary, Khilafat Committee, in which he says that the situation both inside and outside India is a critical one for them and demands that they should close up their ranks, frame a practical programme and produce a body of earnest workers. Means must be devised to improve the economic condition of Muslims, a settlement should be sought which might make for enduring peace in the Hedjaz and something should be done to remove the apathy which is paralysing all Muslim public bodies. Added importance attaches to this year's Khilafat Conference and Moatmir Islamia at Lucknow owing to the harm that might be caused to India if hostilities break out with China. It is, therefore, the duty of Muslims to help these momentous gatherings with every means in their power. In another article the same paper asserts that Muslims never take exception to peaceful and moral methods of conversion by Arya Samajists and object only when people are forced to accept a change of faith under show of physical force or under economic pressure and minor Muslim children are abducted for this purpose. In yet another article, the paper cites the example of the Azamgarh district board the Hindu members of which are trying to stop the sale of cattle from pounds to butchers and says that there are other district boards in these provinces which are trying to enforce the use of Hindi. This means that the Hindus are abusing their predominance in local bodies to propagate their religious beliefs and to place obstacles in the way of Muslims pursuing their religious practices.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Gyan Shakti dissuades Hindus from contributing to the khaddar fund raised by Mr. Gandhi as it is the Muslim weavers who are benefited by it and exhorts them to send their subscriptions to the Shuddhi Sabhas instead. It remarks that this is not the time for carrying out the Congress programme or for raising funds for the propagation of khaddar. The exigencies of the situation demand that the entire Hindu population should concentrate its energy on the shuddhi movement for Swaraj is associated with it. In another article the paper refers to the dissemination of anonymous notices threatening Hindus with death if they do not give up their shuddhi and sangathan activities and remarks: Do the Muslims consider the Hindus to be sacrificial goats? Hindus have proved that they are not goats but lions. It is the disseminators of such anonymous literature who are cowards. Hindus cannot be frightened by such cowardly and impotent threats. On the other hand they will be awakened to their sense of duty and work with redoubled energy.

Rai Bahadur A. C. Mukerji's case.

Commenting on the Government's notification cancelling Rai Bahadur A. C. Mukerji's appointment in the junior selection grade of the I. E. S. the Abhyudaya refers to Mr. Chintamani's resolution in the Council on the subject and says that the local Government's reply that it acted in this matter in accordance with the instructions from the Government of India constitutes no answer but only adds insult to injury. Lord Irwin should look at the dark deeds of his lieutenants and say what effect they produce on the hearts of Indians. Are these the ways to inspire confidence in the good intentions of Britain? The Aj says that the case of Rai Bahadur A. C. Mukerji casts a lurid light on the desire of the bureaucracy for co-operation, the real responsibility of the ministers and the powers of the legislatures. It shows that the reforms are a mere sham, that neither the ministers nor the legislatures have any powers and that the "heavenly officials" alone carry things all their own way. Let sensible men judge for themselves how it is possible to secure swaraj by pleasing Parliament which makes such appallingly unjust regulations.

The Back Bay Scheme.

Commenting on the report of the Back Bay Inquiry Committee the Aj says that it is an unpardonable crime that the work in connexion with the Back Bay Scheme was not stopped even two years after it had become apparent that the actual expenditure was to be almost double of the estimated one. It is a misuse of public money by deluding the people. Had such an offence been committed by officials in any other country, they would have been tried in an open court and duly punished. But in India the officials are in the first place infallible and even if they happen to commit a mistake it is classed only as an error of judgement. It was such error of judgement which led to the killing of hundreds of Indians like dogs in Jallianwalabagh and to the waste of crores of rupees of poor India in Bombay. The Surya remarks that if there had been self-government in India the officials, who have been held responsible by the committee for the failure of the reclamation scheme would have been severely dealt with because the wasting of public money is a great crime for the authorities. But it is idle to hope that any such punishment will be given to the officials concerned. Until the system of administration in India is made fully responsible to the people public money will continue to be wasted in projects like the Back Bay reclamation scheme.

Lord Birkenhead's visit to India.

Referring to the rumour regarding Lord Birkenhead's visit to India next cold weather the Aj says that his Lordship can learn nothing by his visit to India which he cannot ascertain while in England, seeing that high officials, who visit this country only hear and see what the bureaucracy wants them to. This being the case, his Lordship's visit to India can only mean a pleasure trip at her expense and nothing more. The Oudh Akhbar says that Indians should expect as little from Lord Birkenhead as from Earl Winterton. These uninvited guests can be welcome only if they concede the national demands and allay the agitation in the country.

United Provinces Council.

The Indian Daily Telegraph strongly criticizes the official attitude regarding the resolution of Pandit Govind Ballabh Pant on "village reconstruction" and remarks:—We consider it criminal irresponsibility to have offered uncompromising opposition to a resolution of the kind. Self-respect demands that non-officials, who are met with such callous disregard when engaged in problems of life and death affecting a nation, should resolve on some demonstration to indicate their displeasure. The Hamdam is unable to appreciate the attitude of the local Government in the Council towards the question of prohibition and says that the best way to put a stop to the use of wine would be to close down all distilleries, interdict trade in the article and to abolish the Excise department. Government can do all this if it is sincere and is prepared to sacrifice a portion of its income. It is pursuing a mirage if it thinks that people would practise abstinence of their own volition.

Council Politics.

The Aligarh Mail strongly disapproves of the action of Mr. Ghuznavi in accepting Ministership in the Bengal Government and remarks :—If now Mr. B. Chakravarti has accepted Ministership which he was reluctant to accept when Sir Abdur Rahim was appointed Minister, does it behove a self-respecting Muslim to co-operate with him in spite of his Responsivist, i.e., Sangathanist, antecedents ? That is the question we put to Mr. Ghuznavi which he should solve if he has any sense of communal respect and honour. In a subsequent article the paper writes :—The correspondence which passed between Sir Abdur Rahim and Sir Provash Mittra prior to the former's resignation of his office as Minister is a key-note to the conspiracy against Sir Abdur Rahim hatched by Sir Provash and Mr. B. Chakravarti and so skilfully consumated by them with the crafty, cunning and conspiring genius of Hindu Bengal. . . . . The duty of the Muslim members of the Bengal Legislative Council is obvious. They should wreck the Chakravarti Ministry by means of an obstruction from which even the Swarajists may draw a lesson. For by that means alone, we believe, can the Muslim members of the Bengal Legislative Council uphold their prestige so ignominiously lowered down by Mr. Ghuznavi's acceptance of Mr. Chakravarti's colleagueship and demonstrate the power that they can wield in their Province.

Indians in the Colonies.

The Arya Mitra publishes a letter from one Pandit Gopendra Narain Pathak who complains that in spite of repeated requests the Fiji Government is not making adequate arrangements for the education of Indian boys and girls in that island and wonders whether it is not the duty of the Indian Government to compel the Fiji Government to do so. The letter concludes with an appeal to the members of the legislatures to move a resolution making it obligatory for the Fiji Government to introduce compulsory education and thereby save 24,000 boys and girls from the darkness of ignorance.

The Indian Academy.

The Urdu press has generally acclaimed the Academy. The Hamdam is glad to note that the Hon'ble Rai Rajeshwar Bali's commendable career of patronage of fine arts has culminated in the establishment of the Indian Academy and says that if the institution is nurtured with fostering care the Hon'ble Minister of Education and His Excellency Sir William Marris will earn the lasting gratitude of coming generations for their service to Urdu and Hindi. Government could have got no better person than Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru for the presidentship of the Academy.

Military training for students.

In welcoming Mr. Dube's resolution in the local Council about military and physical training of students the Desh Bhagat says that if the scheme is given a practical shape and martial spirit is infused among Indian youths it will prove highly beneficial to enslaved India and open a new chapter in her history.

Foreign affairs.

The Chinese situation remains the chief topic of comments in the Press. The Aj writes:—In view of the concentration of British troops near Shanghai Mr. Eugene Chen is justified in breaking off negotiations with Britain. Every impartial observer will infer from the British attitude that Britain is seeking a pretext to attack China. The British move in concentrating forces at Shanghai is intended to cause trouble there and thereby provoke the Japanese and the American Governments to side with Britain. British imperialists want to fight with China but have not the courage to do so single-handed, and this is why efforts are being made to embroil other great powers too into the quarrel. India may not be able to prevent the despatch of her armies to China, but her moral sympathy will always be with the latter and her heart will quietly but devoutly pray for Chinese success. We hope that the British public which is naturally generous will assert itself even now and frustrate the sinful designs of its imperialistic authorities. The Shankar contends that a handful of Englishmen could never have dared to deprive China of her liberty if they had not been confident of the help of their Indian slaves. So long as there exists the blood of these slaves to water the roots of Britain and Indian capitalists suffer from the plethora of devotion to the whites Britain has nothing to fear. Indians would die, India's money would be spent and the victory would go to Britain. Why, then, should one who can achieve such cheap victories miss any chance of appropriating others' territories? If Indians had possessed patriotism today they would have blown the conch of non-cooperation throughout the length and breadth of the country and told the bureaucracy that so long as they are not free they will not shed their blood or spend a single pice of theirs for the sake of Britain. The Shakti says that the Government will have to perform severe expiation for its disregard of public opposition to the despatch of Indian troops to China. The Haqiqat has a contributed article in which the writer condemns the anti-foreign attitude of the Chinese nationalists and their disregard of treaty obligations and says that the Cantonese are mistaking British forbearance for cowardice. As Indians also have a considerable stake in Shanghai, the Government has acted rightly in sending Indian troops there. The Congress party in the Assembly had no justification for endangering foreign relations by raising an imperial question which is exclusively within the purview of British Parliament. The Medina says that the decision of Mr. Chen not to sign any agreement so long as British troops are not removed will enable the whole of Asia to hold its head high. It is the old game of Britain to supplement its cunning tactics at the conferences by demonstrations of dreadful military power so as to dictate her own terms. But with the march of times these tactics have lost their terrors for Asiatics.

Hindu-Muslim relations.

The Aligarh Mail strongly criticizes the action of the Calcutta Corporation in re-naming the Mirzapur Park as the Shraddhanand Park and says:—We fear the Calcutta Corporation is fast developing into a sangathanist Corporation, for it has begun to perpetuate practically the memory of the late Swami Shraddhanandji. We are really surprised to find that the Hindu members of the Calcutta Corporation have run amuck with communalism. They appear to be so enamoured of the cult of Sangathan and Shuddhi that they have begun to change the names of places in their city in order to associate them with one who will go down in our national history as the opener of a new page of disunity and discord . . . The paper vehemently criticizes the "highly aggressive and provocative" address of Dr. Moonje at the Seva Samiti conference at Gujranwala and quoting passages from it says that every line in them is a challenge to Muslims which requires their due consideration. Proceeding, the paper says:—"And if the gravity of this challenge is minimised by some unthinking and harebrained people, what would they think of Dr. Moonje's declaration that 'if Muslims think that their mosques are disrespected by playing music before them, why should they build mosques on King's highways?' The putting of such a grossly provocative question can be expected only of a ruffian that heads a mob of rioters." The Arya Mitra reproduces from the Nizami, a Gujrati journal, a poem by one Muhammad Ibrahim Khan "Shad", attacking Arya Samajists and wonders why the attention of the Government is not drawn to such inflammatory literature published by Muslims and says that it is the duty of the Government at the present juncture to draw to the Penal Code the attention of those who want to vent their spleen by reminding the Arya Samajists of Babar and Ghori. The paper next reproduces a poem which appeared in Khwaja Hasan Nizami's Gharibon ka Akhbar a day before Swami Shraddhanand's murder and says:—The Government's duty is not to hunt for and take legal steps against the books written by Arya Samajists alone: it should take similar action against those of the foul-mouthed Muslims also. In a subsequent issue the paper reproduces passages from the speeches delivered by Maulanas Zafar Ali Khan, Sadruddin and Muhammad Amin at a meeting of the Muslims of Lahore to the effect that if there had been Muslim government in India today people would have kissed Abdul Rashid's sword, that if the Hindus continued to behave in this way there would be lakhs of murders and that Muslims ought to bring their enemies to their senses by force. It wonders whether the C. I. D. has brought these speeches to the notice of the Government and says:—We invite the attention of the Punjab Government to this. Can Muslim fanatics deliver such speeches under the protection of the British Government? Are they at liberty to shower poison in this way? Quoting "venomous" poems against the Hindus from the Nizami and Garibon ka Akhbar the Sainik writes:—Every day poison is being spread which leads people to believe that by killing others they will go to heaven. Swami Shraddhanand has been a victim of this very poison. The leader of the Patuakhali Satyagraha is being threatened with a similar fate. The Government has taken no action in any of the cases cited by us. We do not expect anything better from the present satanic system of administration, but what shall we say of those Muslim leaders who are not only keeping silent, but in order to maintain their leadership are helping in spreading the poison. The fire with which they are playing is about to consume their own houses along with those of their neighbours (the Hindus). Under the heading "Swami Shraddhanand's murder and the teaching of Islam" the Abhyudaya publishes a series of articles by Sri Deseshwar Siddhantalankar of Gurukul, Kangri, who contends that the responsibility for the murder of Swami Shraddhanand really lies on the religious teachings which actuated this murder, that this murder is a sign of the bursting of the volcano of Islamic intolerance and that so long as Islam exists in its present form the peace of the world will be in danger. Muslim atrocities on the Hindus, beginning with the Moplah rebellion and ending with the murder of Swami Shraddhanand, indicate the existence of a grave malady. If the Swami's murder had been the outcome merely of the diseased brain of an individual Muslim stones would not have been pelted on his coffin nor would Abdul Rashid have been hailed as a Ghazi and his pictures sold in the bazars of Delhi, Allahabad and Madras. The writer next quotes a large number of verses from the Quran to show that Islam enjoins the assassination of those who do not believe in Allah and Mahomed and refuse to embrace it and also of those who turn apostates and that Jehad is merely the persecution of the non-believers. The writer next quotes an incident from the Kitabul Jihad to show that Mahomed used to make surprise attacks and massacre those belonging to other religions and says that in this respect the Prophet by no means fell short of General Dyer. He had also issued strict orders to murder even old men. He wanted that no kafir should exist in the world and hence he enjoined killing irrespective of considerations of age and sex. Referring to the resolution passed by the All-India Arya League at Delhi for agitation in favour of freedom for Arya Nagarkirtan processions, the Hamdam says that the Aryas have already created an unpleasant situation by making offensive speeches and reciting objectionable verses and insisting on music before mosques and they want to make it worse by engineering an agitation in support of their attitude. Arya processions would never be objected to if they did not wound the feelings of other communities.

Political propaganda.

The Vartman takes the leaders to task for frequently changing their programme and wasting their energies over Councils. We regret to note, continues the paper, that efforts are being made to convert our politics into a foppish woman of the west. This is against our civilization and traditions. These delusive Councils can do no real good to the country. It is time that the leaders worked among the people and devoted themselves to the task of village organization. Criticizing Mr. Saklatwala's advice that Indians should not boycott British goods as it would cause starvation among British labourers the Pratap says that Indians never took upon themselves the responsibility for providing livelihood to British labourers and thereby strengthen their own fetters of subjection. The object of the boycott movement is not to starve foreign labourers. Foreign labourers are as dear to us as our own brothers. But if the boycott movement leads to the starvation of British labourers, we are not to blame. The blame lies on those imperialistic British capitalists who have fostered inequalities at the point of the bayonet. Mohan Joshi writing in the Shakti says that it is only through Satyagraha that the Kumaunese can get their grievances relating to the Forest department redressed and urges them to cultivate qualities of self-restraint and self-sacrifice and wear khaddar so as to fit them for satyagraha. The Bharat Dharma asks Indians to ponder over the waste of money and land on tea plantations, the harmful effect of tea on health and the drain of their money to foreign countries over its consumption and urges them to boycott tea as one of the easy and peaceful ways of the service of the country.

Council politics.

Muslim papers generally are characterizing Mr. Ghaznavi's acceptance of office as treachery to Islam and playing the game of the Hindus. Referring to the "wave of indignant opposition which is spreading all over Bengal against the disgraceful acceptance by Mr. Ghaznavi of the colleagueship of Mr. B. Chakravarty in the Bengal Ministry" the Aligarh Mail writes:—The only way in which Mr. Ghaznavi can be punished for riding roughshod over the best interests of his community is to wreck the present Bengal Ministry. Will the Muslim members of the Bengal Legislative Council rise to the occasion and deal a death-blow to the unholy Chakravarti-Ghaznavi alliance? Al Bashir admires the courage and honesty of Sir Abdur Rahim in resigning his ministership rather than agree to the conditions of co-operation laid down by Mr. Chakravarti and says that Muslims should make it impossible for Mr. Ghaznavi to continue in office as otherwise no honest and patriotic Muslim can ever become a Minister and the post would be reserved for traitors. The Najat attributes the failure of Sir Abdur Rahim to find a Hindu colleague for his ministry to Sangathan as it was only latterly as a result of Hindu agitation that Mr. B. Chakravarti refused to co-operate with Sir Abdur Rahim. The discomfiture of Sir Abdur Rahim is in reality the discomfiture of Muslims and Mr Ghaznavi ought to have refused the ministership. By his action he has humiliated Islam. The Medina takes Mr. Ghaznavi severely to task for accepting ministership with Mr. Chakravarti as his colleague and says:—The Hindus have made Mr. Ghaznavi their tool for serving their selfish ends. We are sorry for the Muslims of Bengal the protection of whose interests has been confided to those who are actuated by selfishness. The only remedy is that all the Muslim councillors should join hands with the Hindu Swarajists to wreck the diarchy.

Indians in the Colonies.

The Aligarh Mail strongly supports the appeal of the Natal Indian Association to the Viceroy not to ratify the agreement which is understood to have been arrived at at the Capetown Conference and remarks:—"Our heart goes out with the Natal Indians, who are our flesh and blood, in their distress of white tutelage which is threatening to overtake them." The Oudh Akhbar is dissatisfied with Sir Muhammad Habibullah's vague statement to the press and asks for a communique detailing what his deputation has actually achieved as Indians have too often been deluded with false hopes regarding South Africa.

United Provinces Council.

The Haq says that the crushing defeat of Mr. Chintamani during the debate on Justice Sir Cecil Walsh's remarks on the Indian judiciary in a book should serve as an eye-opener to him and hopes that he would not invite odium and ridicule on himself in future by raising such futile discussions. The Hamdam ridicules the arguments advanced by Syed Habib Ullah in opposing B. Uma Shanker's resolution regarding the abolition of Commissionerships and inquires why young and hot-headed men are appointed as collectors that staid and old comissioners are needed to guide them and keep them in check. Should not Government refuse to permit its "pet children" to land in India until they have learnt to shake off their puerile ways and hot-headedness? It is the unsympathetic and arrogant attitude of the junior members of the Civil Service which is really responsible for the undesirable relations between Europeans and Indians and it is up to Government to adopt a sterner attitude towards them.

The Patuakhali satyagraha.

Appealing for the help of the Hindus of Patuakhali the Anand says that the report about the beating of the satyagrahis in jail by Muslim officers and prisoners shows that the Government and the Muslim public are both coercing the Hindus of that place. In another article the paper says that when the Government cannot protect Hindus even in jail they cannot possibly have faith in Government justice. The sympathy of the entire Hindu community is with the Hindus of Patuakhali in their present trouble. We trust that Hindus will now come forward firmly to help in this religious satyagraha and will sacrifice their all for the protection of the honour and culture of the Hindu community.

Indian states.

The Aj remarks:—Though the King of England is a constitutional monarch, yet the Indian princes under him seek to be absolute autocrats in their states, and instead of helping the progress of the country are proving obstacles in its advancement. It is to be regretted that under the influence of self-interest the Government of India too indirectly encourages these princes in this attitude of theirs. Many Indian patriots do not like the absorption of Indian states into British India, but in view of the conduct of their rulers, their illiberality and their serving as obstacles to the progress of the country they too despair of the future of the Indian states. They wish that these princes realized that the era of absolute despotism had gone by for ever and that they could best serve themselves and their subjects by educating the latter and granting their due rights to them. The Aziz-i-Hind appeals to the Maharana of Dholpur to stop the lottery of Jolly Brothers which is absorbing a lot of public money. No doubt His Highness derives a handsome revenue from it, but the reputation of his state is suffering. In another article the paper urges Government to take action in time to stop the extravagance of the Maharaja of Bharatpur which was recently brought into the lime-light by the theft of the state jewels which he had sent to Calcutta to be sold and to depute forthwith a British officer to retrieve the financial position of the state. The Haqiqat publishes a letter from a correspondent from Udaipur. Mewar, in which he complains that the British authorities have taken permanent possession of 3,000 bighas of land which was leased by the state rent free to provide grass for a regiment of British irregular force stationed at Deoli Cantt, Ajmere district, and refuse to return the land even though the regiment left the place during the second Afghan war and has never returned since.

Legislation against "Goondas."

The Chand refers to the frequency of offences against women for some time past and urges Government to legislate for more drastic punishment of such crimes. The misdeeds of goondas, says the magazine, not only cast a reflection on the morality of the British Government but also show its carelessness, apathy and irresponsibility in the matter. If the Government of India had been earnestly interested in relieving the country of the outrages and atrocities of goondas their race would have become extinct long ago. The Government of India should so strengthen the Indian Penal Code as to make offences against women punishable with transportation for life or even death.

Bengal detenus.

The papers are strongly critisizing the attitude of the Government regarding the Bengal detenus and are urging their release. Referring to the demand for the release or regular trial of the Bengal detenus the Abhyudaya says that the Government's contention that arms are still seized in Bengal is the strongest argument in favour of the immediate release of all of them inasmuch as it shows that those who are in jail have no hand in bomb-throwing business and that if they had been revolutionaries conspiracies would have ceased with their imprisonment. The Government would have done justice if it had love for justice.

The Hindu University.

The Aj wonders why the United Provinces Government does not grant monetary aid to the Hindu University when the representatives of the tax-payers have decided by a majority that such an aid should be given. The provincial Government's argument against the grant of monetary aid to the University does not hold water. Is not any portion of the provincial revenues devoted to objects of all-India importance? Do not the officials themselves who refuse the grant belong to the Imperial Service and are they not paid from the provincial exchequer? When the University belongs to these provinces and most of its students come from them and when the provincial Governor exercises some rights in it as one of its authorities, it is nothing short of petty-mindedness to refuse grant-in-aid to it.

United Provinces jails.

The Desh Bhagat invites attention to the bribery and tyranny rampant in United Provinces jails and urges that prisoners should be provided with all amenities that they enjoy when free and every effort should be made to reform them. It wants a committee of enquiry consisting of 3 official and 8 non-official members of the Council to be constituted to suggest necessary reforms.

Muslim affairs.

The Medina writes:—The Government which acts upon the proverb of beating a dead man has added to the troubles of the Haj pilgrimage by the tyrannical and insulting methods of disinfection to which the pilgrims are subjected at the quarantine at Kamran. They are moreover made to pay Rs. 10 out of their slender purse and there are scores of other troubles which they have to undergo in the ship in connexion with medical aid and necessaries of life. The Government should pay attention to all these matters if it really wants to improve the conditions of pilgrimage.

The exchange ratio.

Referring to the adjournment motion in the Legislative Assembly and criticizing the attitude of the Government in the matter of exchange ratio the Leader writes:—The Government have by the course they have decided to adopt placed their opponents in a stronger position. As a piece of fighting tactics their decision lacks the quality of soundness.

Foreign affairs.

Extremist papers continue to inveigh against the British attitude towards China. In the course of a series of articles on the subject the Aj writes:—The nationalist Chinese Government may at present save itself from the open hostility of the British by signing the Hankow agreement, but this agreement will not be a final one. The British memorandum to the League of Nations regarding this agreement only provokes laughter. It may well satisfy the conscience of those who want to conceal their misdeeds under the cloak of goodwill and justify their worst deeds in the name of self-defence and law and order, but it cannot delude thinking men. The League of Nations, which does not know the truth nor wants to know it, may well believe this memorandum, but no Eastern country can do so . . . The official reply to Mr. Lansbury's question in Parliament regarding the Government's undertaking not to employ Indian troops outside India except in certain special circumstances shows what trickery is being played with India and how the men and money of this country are being utilized to protect and extend the Empire. It is on account of such things that India now has absolutely no faith in the words and pledges of British authorities . . . Britain's Asiatic policy is opposed to the interests of India. The subjection of India is a misfortune for the whole of Asia. It is through the unlimited resources in men and money of this country that Britain has ensnared Asia in her net. We are a subject people ourselves and we are used as instruments in depriving others of their liberty. Britain does not grant even ordinary rights of government to India and suppresses even her peaceful agitation for freedom, because she apprehends that the emancipation of India would mean the end of her dream of an Eastern empire. What can be a greater misfortune than this that the army maintained at our cost should be used to ruin us and our neighbours. If Britain wants to extend her Empire in the East she should do so with her own men and money and not misuse Indian men and money in it. Our self-interest demands that Britain's domination in the East may decrease so that there may be left little temptation for her to keep India in perpetual subjection. Commenting on the King's address to Parliament the Abhyudaya refers to His Majesty's anxiety for the restoration of peaceful relations with China and says that the conditions offered by the British Government to China are not so much calculated to establish peace as to maintain British prestige in that country. There was no need to send troops for the protection of Indians as this duty could be safely entrusted to Japan which is an ally of Britain. If Britain really desires to resume peaceful relations with China her first duty is to recall her forces from Shanghai and then to offer such conditions as may be just. One Raja Ram Shastri of the "Tilak school of politics" writing in the paper observes that His Excellency the Viceroy's recent speech in connexion with the despatch of troops to China has added fuel to the fire of indignation burning in the heart of India. It shows that His Excellency has tried to throw dust in the eyes of Indians. The Viceroy's plea for sending Indian troops to China for the protection of Indians in that country is untenable, inasmuch as the British Government has never cared in the least for the protection of Indians in Kenya and South Africa. The most ridiculous argument is the one about the sending of troops in self-defence. It was Britain which thrust opium into the mouths of the Chinese, threw open the doors of China for plunder by foreigners and opened fire on students at Shanghai. After performing such wicked deeds and dyeing her hands with the blood of the Chinese she is shamelessly proclaiming to the world that she is acting in self-defence. She has deceived the world so many times that no one trusts her now. Indians being a subject people cannot help the Chinese in any way, but they can at least pray to God to make the Chinese victorious in this struggle between the forces of good and evil (lit. gods and demons). They should not do anything which may do any harm to the Chinese and bear in mind that they have sufficiently tarnished their reputation by helping Britain in plundering the world. The Bharat Jiwan says that the despatch of Indian troops to China means that attempts are being made to use a slave country to deprive another country of its freedom. What can be a more sorrowful spectacle than this that an Asiatic nation which is struggling for its independence is being subjugated with the help of the armies of another Asiatic country, of course, a subject one. It is a gross injustice to India that she should maintain forces for helping Britain in her wars in other countries. The Haqiqat publishes a contributed article in which the writer ridicules the contention that Indian troops have been despatched to China to deprive the Chinese of their liberty and asserts that Indian troops are meant only to protect the lives of Indians and Englishmen residing in China.
